FEAR NEW CHINA OUTBREAKS

CARMEN CHEER DEVER RECORD; RAP THOMPSON

Charge Bill Brought Their Pay Cut.

Campaign in Brief

DEVER—The mayor is cheered by 4,000 union labor members in the Ashland auditorium. Carmen's chief lashes Thompson.

THOMPSON—The Republican candidate receives another holdout back in his organization when Oscar Wolff, the coroner, makes the last of his political somersaults.

ROBERTSON—The doctor says, "Big Bill's harmony means spoils."

BY PARKE BROWN.

Union labor in many of its most important branches threw itself behind Mayor Dever last night with a shout that rattled the chandeliers of Car Men's hall.

The big auditorium was not filled—it will seat 6,000—but there were fully 4,000 present and Dever leaders present said that if there was anything lacking in attendance it was made up in demonstrative spirit displayed every time there was an opportunity. There were cheers for Dever and yells of indignation against William Hale Thompson.

Say Labor Backs Dever.

The street car and elevated railroad men formed the bulk of the crowd, but on the platform, it was announced, were representatives of "over 100 unions that are solidly behind Dever." The meeting was called by the traction employés who still are intensely angry over their grievances against Thompson, but the Dever trades organization sent its leaders to add to the fun.

The mayor, having had two earlier meetings, arrived after most of the speaking was over, coming in just as John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, was telling why he was against Thompson—naming specifically the old fight against the Teachers' federation, but Dever was given a reception that had been warmed up for him by the oratory that had gone earlier.

Big Bill's Labor Record.

William F. Quinlan, president of the surface lines union, opened the program with an attack on two points: first, Thompson's treatment of the union, and second, the Republican nominee's attitude on the color question. He charged that Thompson spent $800,000 of the taxpayers' money in his 5 cent fare campaign and that the net result of it was a reduction in wages for platform employés.

"I asked Thompson," he said, "to show me some figures proving that a 5 cent fare was possible. I told him it couldn't be done. 'What the hell do you care,' said Thompson, 'I'll take care of you.'

"Well, he did take care of some people. He took care of the real estate experts. They made thousands. He took care of the school board and nearly all of them got into jail.

Calls Dever on the Square.

"Dever has been on the square with me and everybody else. It's up to us to stand by him."

"I have known Dever since 1902," said William D. Tabor, financial secretary of the same organization, "and I never knew a more honest man. You struck against the Thompson wage cut in 1922 and now you can strike against Thompson on April 5."

"I seldom take a part in a campaign," said Joseph Kehoe, recording secretary of the union, "but this one affects not only the street car men but organized labor throughout the city.

"Big Bill the Builder is one of the biggest destroyers of labor Chicago ever had as mayor. We wouldn't have a union at all if he had his way. It's time to have somebody point out the single thing he ever did for any labor organization.

Hardin Labor Backs Thompson.

"They say Thompson has elements of labor representing 300,000 members. I know that's a lie. I know that 85 per cent of organized labor is supporting Big Bill Dever.

"Big Bill the Builder did build some things. He built tin schools where children roasted in summer and froze in winter. And I'll give him credit for building one more thing. He built a beautiful Black belt. Those are his two major accomplishments as a builder."

E. E. Bland, international treasurer, said:

"We are responding to the call to

DEVER BACKERS STAR BIG BILL IN CITY 'MOVIE'

"Lest We Forget" Is Scenario Title.

An eight page movie scenario entitled "Lest We Forget" was issued yesterday by the "People's Dever for Mayor Committee," a nonpartisan organization with headquarters in the Hartford building.

The text of the booklet consists of a recital of the eight years of William Hale Thompson's administration as mayor, each item being written in the form used for the subtitles on the screen.

"We want the public to see the whole picture of those eight years again in tabloid form," Charles E. Merriam, one of the leaders of the committee, said. "At the end of those eight years Thompson was afraid to run again, because the abuses under his administration still were fresh in the mind of the voter. Now he thinks the elapsing of four years has led the voter to forget."

Minus some of the lesser subtitles, the scenario follows:

YEAR NO. 1—1915

Thompson's board of education proposes a 7½ per cent cut in teachers' salaries.

The efficiency staff of civil service commission dismissed.

Sixty-eight public school teachers discharged without a hearing by Thompson's board of education.

Civil service in city hall practically suspended.

Corporation Counsel Ettelson rules that city departments cannot be investigated by city council.

YEAR NO. 2—1916

Department of public welfare blows up as it is shown that employés' salaries must be split with outsiders. Mazie says, "You've got to come across."

Thompson attempts to overthrow non-partisan organization of city council.

Dr. Theodore Sachs, eminent Jewish physician, founder and head of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, was driven to suicide, according to his friends, by unjustifiable criticism by Thompson.

Mayor Harrison declares that Thompson has a brainstorm.

Corruption begins to develop in the police department.

YEAR NO. 3—1917

State's Attorney Hoyne begins police quiz and uncovers wholesale graft in the police department.

Mass meeting of citizens called to protest against intolerable conditions in the public schools.

Thompson becomes drunk with power and aldermen demand his resignation because of tyrannical rulings by the chair.

YEAR NO. 4—1918

Supreme court of Illinois unseats Thompson's Sordid Six, who disgraced the board of education.

Under cover of the general war excitement the real estate experts begin their gigantic steal of funds voted by the people for the City Beautiful.

The grand jury again assails the police department for permitting reign of vice and crime.

The Sordid Six on the board of education are reappointed by Thompson. School children are housed in portable schools or stay at home.

Thompson's chief of police abolishes the vice squad.

Race riots between blacks and whites in Chicago. Two hundred persons killed and injured.

State's Attorney Hoyne charges the race riots caused by Thompson's city hall politics.

Thompson's real estate experts receive $1,200,000.

City of Chicago bankrupt and banks unwilling to make further loans. City hall employés get I. O. U.'s instead of cash.

City hall employés go on strike for a living wage while the real estate ex-

GUN SHY—A GOOD DOG TILL THE SHOOTING STARTS

Turns Gun on Self; Blames Love Quarrel

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, March 26.—Swirling crowds of Saturday afternoon shoppers, in the Gare du Nord, homeward bound to the suburbs of Paris, were thrown into panic late this afternoon when Countess de Janze, formerly Alice Silverthorn, a cousin of J. Ogden Armour and prominent for several years in Chicago society, shot her companion, Raymond Vincent de Trafford, youngest son of a wealthy and prominent British family, near the heart. She then turned the revolver on herself and sent a bullet through her abdomen.

Station police discovered the couple in a dying condition in a first class compartment of a train ready to leave for Boulogne. Beside the woman crouched her German police dog frantically guarding the person of his mistress and defying the police to approach, while the semi-conscious man gasped:

"It was she who fired."

Both Close to Death.

Only after throwing a rock over the head of the menacing dog were police able to approach the American countess and rush her and her victim to Lariboisiere hospital, where operations were performed to remove the bullets.

Police reported late tonight that the condition of both is desperate and they probably would not live through the night.

The Dowager Countess de Janze when told of the shooting became hysterical.

Man Blames Jealousy.

The countess, who is 27 years of age, and Mr. de Trafford were bound for London when a quarrel due to jealousy arose, and resulted in the shooting, according to Mr. de Trafford's statement before he lost consciousness. The countess spoke only five words before lapsing into unconsciousness. They were: "Take care of my dog."

Countess de Janze was married five years ago in Lake Forest, Ill., following the announcement here of her engagement to the count. The young Frenchman and his bride travelled much, and two years ago they visited the British African colony of Kenya, leaving their two children with their grandmother in Paris.

While there, the countess met the dashing young Mr. de Trafford, youngest son of the distinguished baronet, Sir Humphrey Francis de Trafford, and one of the most eligible bachelors in Paris society. Sir Humphrey is well known in British sporting circles.

Affair Causes Divorce Suit.

A flirtation between the young wife and the British youth developed into an ardent amour and her ultimate estrangement from Count de Janze, who recently sued for divorce. The two daughters of the couple were left in charge of the count.

The countess and Mr. de Trafford are said to have made many trips together to and from Paris before Mr. de Trafford's affections began to cool and he decided the liaison must be broken. He returned to Paris Friday, followed by the countess, who opposed his plans to depart immediately for London.

U. S. SENDS 1,500 MORE MARINES TO WAR ZONE

Nanking Americans Safe on Ships.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—Fifteen hundred marines were today ordered to China by the Coolidge administration at the request of Admiral Clarence S. Williams, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet. The force will include an artillery detachment and an aviation unit.

This development came simultaneously with the receipt by President Coolidge of official reports that all Americans known to be in Nanking had been safely evacuated to American war vessels lying in the Yangtze river. The reports disclosed only one American killed and two injured.

Fear that sparks from the anti-foreign outbreak at Nanking, where a massacre of Americans was narrowly averted, might set undisciplined and radical elements in other sections of China aflame prompted American officials to order reinforcements to the troubled area.

Situation in Ports Tense.

It was said that Admiral Williams requested the additional marines as a precautionary measure in the event that lawlessness should spread through the area controlled by the Cantonese forces. Reports received by the state department and the navy from other Yangtze ports, including Hankow, the Cantonese capital, and Shanghai itself, indicate that the situation is tense. American destroyers are now en route to three different ports where trouble is feared.

Another cause of concern to the President and his cabinet is the certainty that the Chinese radicals will deliberately misrepresent the Nanking incident and make inflammatory capital of its shelling by allied forces. While Shanghai is quiet on the surface, there is a strong undercurrent of unrest, and apprehension is apparent in all official dispatches received here. The presence there of Chiang Kai Shek, the Cantonese commander-in-chief, tends to ease the situation, but even his arrival has not convinced Admiral Williams that foreigners there are now safe.

Fear Disorders Will Continue.

According to naval officials, Admiral Williams asked for the marines after consulting with the other allied commanders and after reaching the decision that sporadic disorders at least will continue in China for a lengthy period. The official view here is that even if the Cantonese authorities have the best of intentions, there is always the possibility of unruly elements getting out of hand.

The final decision to send the marines was made at a secret conference participated in by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Secretary of State Kellogg, Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff, and Admiral Eberle, naval chief of operations. Following this meeting it was stated unofficially that army forces would probably not be sent to China at this time.

The question of dispatching them was considered, but fear that such a move might be misinterpreted as meaning that the United States intended to occupy Chinese territory resulted in a decision against it. Should further disorders occur with addition al loss of American life, it is understood that the army will be called upon.

Regulars Are Available.

Regular army troops from the Philippines and Hawaii could reach Shanghai long before the new force of marines could get there. At least 1,500 are available in the Philippines for Chinese service and 4,000 in Hawaii. Attention was also called to the fact that the employment of regular troops is normally on a different footing than the use of marines and blue jackets in an emergency.

Immediately after the conference Secretary Wilbur called at the White House and notified President Coolidge of the decision reached to send more marines. The President approved the decision.

Bring Force to 4,750 Men.

Secretary Wilbur told newspaper men that the arrival of the 1,500 marines will bring American landing forces in Shanghai up to 4,750 men. Col. Harold C. Snyder, commanding the marine barracks at the Philadelphia navy yard, was designated to command the additional force of marines. It was decided to call the new outfit the Sixth regiment, after the unit which distinguished itself in the world war.

The troops will be taken from Quantico, Va., Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Portsmouth, Norfolk, and Women Angry; Cook Book Sets Norway on Ear

OSLO, Norway, March 26.—(AP)—All Norway is in a ferment over a cook book. It is a little book of recipes written by Mrs. Ester Meidell, who lives in the inland town of Kongsberg. It contains menus for a family of four at a total cost of 100 kroner (about $25) monthly.

The good housewives of Norway challenged that this could be done and so the author came to Oslo and gave public demonstrations. Police had to clear the streets of eager husbands and housewives who clamored to hear those secrets about cheap and wholesome food.

Four Doctors Eye Experiment.

Four doctors were appointed to supervise the experiment and ascertain the nutritive value of Mrs. Meidell's dishes. The verdict was in her favor.

Believing the Norwegians eat too much meat, Mrs. Meidell's menus cut down on the animal foods and substitute vegetables.

Throughout Norway husbands are citing this cook book as a reason for reducing their wives' allowances and demanding economy in the kitchen. Mrs. Meidell is said to have received many anonymous letters from women threatening her with violence.

Enrages Socialist Leaders.

Socialist and communist leaders are incensed by Mrs. Meidell's declarations. They are negotiating with employers for higher wages and are citing high costs of living. The new cook book has embarrased them, but the cook book author is standing pat.

Sacrifices Own Life to Save His Companion

Herbert Clift, 20, 7119 Euclid avenue, a laborer, sacrificed his chances of leaping to safety from in front of a freight train yesterday by shoving his friend, Julius Polanti, 10633 Calhoun avenue, from the path of the train. Clift was struck by a coupling bar of a freight car and died shortly afterward at Jackson Park hospital. The accident occurred at the Wisconsin Steel company plant, 2701 East 106th street.

Slain at Birthday Party Trying to Bar Intruder

Alexander Monski, 2220 Elston avenue, was shot and killed early this morning while attending a birthday party at the home of Joseph Schlasky, 4435 South Wood street. Several uninvited guests tried to get into the house, and Monski held the door against them. One of them fired through the door and killed him.

BOMB SHATTERS WINDOWS IN REAL ESTATE OFFICE

Windows of the real estate office of M. E. Daly & Co., at 7905 Evans avenue, were shattered late last night by the explosion of a black powder bomb. Residents in flats above the office were alarmed and fled to the street. Daly, head of the firm, denied a rumor that he had incurred the enmity of residents by selling property to Negroes. He said he believed the bomb was intended for a cleaning and dyeing shop near by.

Seven plate glass windows of the Lincoln Furniture company, 2637 Lincoln avenue, were shattered early this morning by bullets fired from a passing automobile. The police believe that a machine gun was used by the marauders. D. Eisenberg, owner of the store, attributed the attack to the displeasure of a Furniture Dealers' association. He said he had declined to close his store on certain evenings, as demanded by the association.

GIRL LOOKS ON AS ROBBER PAL SHOOTS VICTIM

Morris Malitz, 30 years old, 3602 Douglas boulevard, a Yellow taxicab chauffeur, was shot through the head this morning as he attempted to flee from a girl and her companion who had just held him up. He was taken to the German Deaconess hospital, where his attendants said he probably would die.

The girl, who was described as about 20 years and comely, hailed Malitz's cab at 47th and Western avenue and directed him to drive to a drug store at 63rd street and Western avenue. The drug store was closed when they arrived there, and Malitz was told to drive west on 65th street. At 65th street and Maplewood avenue the man produced a gun and ordered Malitz to give up his money. He surrendered $3, then started to run and was shot.

Prince George of England Wins Charleston Contest

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 26.—Prince George, third son of the British sovereigns, won first prize in a Charleston contest at the exclusive Golda club at Cannes last night. The prince, who is vacationing in France and is a guest here of the Duke and Duchess de Vendome, had as his partner the Duchess of Milfordhaven. He won the Charleston laurels on the sheer merits of his royal footwork.

Cahokia, Ill., 227 Years Old, Votes to Incorporate

Cahokia, Ill., March 26.—(AP)—The population of Cahokia, numbering 300, today voted to incorporate as a village after an existence of 227 years. The town was founded in 1669 by a Quebec missionary and was the first center of white civilization west of the Allegheny mountains.

50 at Dinner Terrorized by Cafe Robbers

Fifty patrons of Wagtayle's restaurant at 1205 Loyola avenue, threatened by an armed robber with death if they made an outcry, sat quietly at their tables last evening and watched a second bandit compel the cashier to surrender $400.

The pair ran out with the money, on the way scattering a dozen customers who were entering to eat dinner. They escaped, supposedly in an automobile parked in a nearby street. Many of the diners were students of Loyola university.

Robbers were busy in other parts of the city and in the suburbs. At 1366 South Halsted street, where the Star meat market was opened for business yesterday morning, a battling butcher hurled a ham at one of two robbers and was shot through the jaw. The bandits escaped with $480. Nine robbers went into the soft drink parlor of Laurenz Murman, 7201 Franklin street, Forest Park, and forced the proprietor and six customers to give up a total of $300.

Walk in with Guns Hidden.

The Wagtayle restaurant robbers walked in with their weapons concealed under their coats and were led to a table by a waitress. Suddenly they whipped out their revolvers and confronted the diners.

"This is a stickup," said the taller one in a loud voice. "I won't have any monkey business. Everybody keep quiet and leave your hands above the table. Quit eating."

Then, to enforce his orders, he began walking up and down between the tables, turning the revolver from patran to patron. Soup grew cold and steak and potatoes were neglected. Nobody ate. Nobody yelled.

Meanwhile the second man had dashed into the kitchen. Four waitresses were behind the swinging doors: Alice Krueger, 917 Wilson avenue; Anna Roth, 1048 Lawrence avenue; Jean Waddell, 1005 Loyola avenue, and Anna Henhoff, 4529 Winthrop avenue.

Warns Waitresses; Takes Cash.

They were warned not to raise an alarm. Then, satisfied that there was no danger of attack from the kitchen, the bandit went to the cashier, Anna Smith, and took the money.

The girls who were in the kitchen ran out a side door and screamed. Apparently this caused the pair to give up their idea of robbing the entire clientele and started their flight.

Jerry Slovak, 38 years old, of 2238 South Lincoln street, was the man shot in the meat store holdup. Miss Margaret Farley, 4737 Walden street, the cashier, surrendered the money.

Charleston navy yards. An aviation unit of 12 planes, six of them of the fast pursuit type and six observation planes, will go along under the command of Maj. Francis T. Evans, now at San Diego, Cal. There will also be a battery of 75 M. M. guns from the Tenth regiment of artillery, now at Quantico.

The marines will be transported by train from Philadelphia and Quantico to San Diego, where they will board the naval transport Henderson, ordered today to proceed to that point from Corinto, Nicaragua. It is now planned to have the expedition leave San Diego on April 5. With good weather the Henderson should arrive at Shanghai by April 25.

Three Cruisers on Way.

"The scout cruisers Richmond and Marblehead are due to arrive at Shanghai April 3. The Cincinnati will get in about 36 hours later. The bluejackets available for land service from these ships will further increase Admiral Williams' forces.

Such relief as was shown by cabinet officials and the President today was prompted almost entirely by the receipt of the dispatch from Admiral Williams stating that, with the exception of Dr. Williams, vice president of Nanking university, who was killed, all Americans imperiled at Nanking have been taken to points of safety. This dispatch, which was taken to the White House by Secretary Wilbur shortly before noon, read as follows:

"The present check shows that all Americans have been evacuated from Nanking to war ships. No one is reported dead except Dr. Williams. The injured are Miss Anna E. Moffet, of the Northern Presbyterian mission, and Mr. Hobart. A final check will be reported later.

Japanese Consulate Looted.

"The Japanese casualties are one sailor killed, one member of the consular staff wounded and one civilian wounded. The Japanese consulate was rushed by Cantonese soldiers and looted."

While the state department announced that Minister MacMurray at Peking has protested against the Nanking disorders to Eugene Chen, the nationalist foreign minister, it was stated that, for the present, the principal object of American diplomacy will be to afford all possible protection to American and foreign citizens. All other considerations, it was said, are being subordinated to this.

Urge All Americans to Get Out.

Minister MacMurray reported that, in view of the demonstrated inability or unwillingness on the part of nationalist authorities to protect American lives, he has instructed all American consuls in the nationalist regions to attempt to have all Americans withdrawn immediately from their respective districts.

Consul General Gauss reported in a message dated today that the situation in Shanghai is very tense and that the greatest precautions are being taken.

Consul General Lockhart reported conditions tense at Hankow, with Amercans leaving rapidly. He stated that about 200 women and children were being placed aboard the Suiwo, which would sail for Shanghai shortly.

Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho], chairman of the foreign relations committee, called at the White House, but did not discuss the Chinese situation with the President. Later he said the sending of additional troops is unnecessary and that the safe evacuation of foreigners from Nanking shows that the Cantonese are doing their best to control the situation.

BRITAIN, FRANCE CLASH ON BASIS FOR DISARMING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Switzerland, March 26.—Great Britain and France clashed today in the disarmament conference when M. Paul-Boncour, the French delegate, sought to include the effectives of the navy and aviation with the army personnel in considering what force is available immediately on the outbreak of war.

Lord Robert Cecil, the British representative, insisted on discussing naval effectives separately later, pointing out that fleets are limited by number and tonnage of ships, not by size of crews.

M. Boncour emphasized that marines were used in land warfare and pointed out that every seafaring man is a potential naval reservist because of his sea training, and merchant ships are transferable as auxiliary cruisers, mine layers and sweepers, with fishermen and merchant marine crews to man them.

France Again Delays Reply to Coolidge's Parley Bid

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 26.—The French cabinet for the third time today postponed its reply to President Coolidge's invitation to send observers to the tripartite naval disarmament conference at Geneva. "There is no hurry, and besides we are not sure what the Italians are going to do," a semi-official source informed THE TRIBUNE correspondent. Meanwhile it is understood the Italians are waiting to see what the French are going to do.

HOW AMERICANS RAN GANTLET OF CHINESE BULLETS

U. S. Consul's Wife Tells Story of Nanking Terror

BY MRS. J. K. DAVIS.

[Wife of the U. S. Consul at Nanking.]

SHANGHAI, China, March 26.—[U. P.]—Our first intimation of trouble in Nanking came last Thursday when word of looting in the city reached the American consulate. My husband, the consul, advised us to remain calm and not to worry. He ordered the consulate relief guard to disarm, explaining he did not want the Cantonese to find us armod or aggressive.

Then we learned the natives had looted the British consulate and shot the consul general.

"Get Your Guns, Men!"

"Get your guns, men—we're in for it," my husband ordered.

He decided to evacuate the consulate, although we did not have any idea even the Cantonese would desecrate such places.

Our party of twenty-four started for Socony Hill with a small guard of marines.

In the first group were a party of Seventh Day Adventists, my husband, myself, and our two children with a large American flag.

We set out towards Socony Hill, but had scarcely gone two blocks when a group of uniformed Cantonese soldiers started firing at us.

They continued firing all along the two miles to Socony Hill. Snipers continued to shoot at us from alleys while the main body of attackers kept about 100 yards away.

We alternately dodged, walked and ran the entire distance. The children, Spencer, a boy of 6, and Shannon, a girl of 11, were very brave. They did not complain at walking the whole way under fire. I was nearly dead, being unfit physically for such torment.

Marine, Hit, Kills 2 Foes.

Finally Cantonese troops almost surrounded us and we feared the worst. Just then we reached a bamboo grove. Marine Plumley, one of the guard, fell wounded on the edge of the grove. He then did one of the most heroic things I have ever seen. Badly hurt and lying on the ground, he started firing at the Nationalist soldiers, killing two and keeping the rest at bay.

Almost exhausted, we made our way for the mile more to Socony house. I could scarcely climb the steep hill to the house itself, but the others helped me. We found many there ahead of us.

All the women and children were sent upstairs in the house, guarded by two men. The other men stayed below. Parties continued arriving all day until there were more than fifty of us.

All during the day a group of Cantonese stayed at the base of the hill, constantly demanding entrance to Socony house, and firing at us intermittently.

Face Death to Barter.

My husband and E. T. Hobart of the Standard Oil company faced death a dozen times to go out and speak to the Chinese. They were bartering against fate.

Finally, the soldiers demanded money, which we gave them. They left, but soon a mob of Chinese arrived. They were in an ugly mood. Mr. Davis offered them money, but they replied:

"We don't want money. We want to kill."

My husband told them he was the American consul and we were all Americans.

"It makes no difference whether you are Americans or French or British or any other foreigners," they replied.

Still Mr. Davis and Mr. Hobart parleyed with the men, who suddenly started firing at the house.

Then acting Vice Consul Paxton, who had been left at the consulate, arrived with two friends he had found among the Cantonese. They waved a nationalist flag and sought to intercede, but the mob tore the nationalist flag and again demanded entrance and started to force their way up the hill and into the house.

My husband had signaled the destroyers in the river not to fire unless he signaled with a rocket. When the Cantonese started rushing the house, he shouted:

"Men, get your guns. Guard the women. Fire a rocket."

Bullets started flying. All the women and children were sent into a bathroom. Bullets kept zipping through the window, knocking plaster off the walls. But none of us was hit.

Constantly we prayed for aid. Our men were firing as fast as they could, barely keeping the attackers from entering the house.

"Where are the destroyers?" I heard my husband cry.

"If they don't fire we are lost."

Just at that moment we heard the whine of a shell, and then another and another. They began falling thickly all around the hill. The Chinese stopped firing and withdrew.

In the bathroom upstairs, we fell on our knees and thanked God.

Then the men decided the time had come to attempt a dash for the dock. First our men picked off the Chinese snipers who had resumed popping at us from a nearby ridge. We were afraid we would be shot if we went out the door, so the women and children all were lowered from windows on ropes and sheets, torn and tied together in strips.

We ran toward the nearby city wall with shells falling behind us constantly.

It took half an hour to get across the wall and the moat on the other side. Then we had two miles of open plains to cross before reaching a creek. We saw parties of Chinese in the distance, but they did not fire at us.

We reached the creek and commandeered sampans to carry us across. Then we saw a British landing party and signaled to it. The Britishers escorted us to the cruiser Wolsey and later we went aboard the Kungwo Wenchow, which took us to Shanghai.

We had no baggage—only the clothes we wore.

MEXICO RUSHES AID TO WOUNDED WAR MINISTER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, March 26.—Three specialists left Mexico City today on a special train for Irapuato to attend Minister of War Joaquin Amaro, who was wounded in the retreat from Aranda, in the state of Jalisco.

Additional reinforcements, to make a federal army of 12,000, will be sent into Jalisco to check the rising tide of rebellion there. A column of 400 under Gen. Garza in Cuzfila, called is reported to have been annihilated. A decisive battle is momentarily expected at Los Altos, in Jalisco. An army officer arriving today from Jalisco reported that his troop train was attacked at a small station by townsfolk armed with sticks and stones. A machine gun was turned loose on them. Many women were killed.

At the Catholic episcopate today it was announced that overtures from the government for a settlement of the church and state conflict had been refused.

CANTON CHIEF DEFIES WORLD TO CURB CHINA

Demands Powers Give Up Special Rights.

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, March 27.—(AP)—(Sunday.)—The mouth of the Yangtze river was the scene early this morning of a Chinese naval engagement. A number of vessels of the Shantung fleet arrived from Tsingtao and opened a bombardment upon the Woosung fortress, later engaging in a spirited fire with ships of the former northern fleet which recently went over to the southern cause.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HONOLULU, March 26.—It is understood unofficially that the 35th infantry here has been ordered to be ready for service in China. Army officials, however, declared: "So far as we know" no preparations are being made contemplating service in China.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, China, March 26.—Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, commander in chief of the nationalist military forces, arrived in Shanghai at 1 o'clock this afternoon. He immediately motored from the jetty to the bureau of foreign affairs. His chauffeur took the wrong road and drove through the barriers into the French concession, where the car was stopped, but he finally managed to reach the office, where Gen. Chiang immediately went into conference with the local Cantonese officials, including Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, the local Cantonese commander.

Gen. Chang then sent for the British and French police chiefs and the chairman of the local consular body.

Immediately following the conference, Gen. Chiang told the press that he had come to Shanghai to investigate the situation. He said he stopped a few hours at Nanking to confer with Gen. Chen Chien, the Nanking commander, regarding the incident precipitated by the anti-foreign outbreak, resulting in the bombardment of Nanking by American and British gunboats.

Tells Cantonese Aims.

Gen. Chiang then referred the correspondents to Gen. Pai, through whom he made a statement.

Speaking in behalf of Gen. Chiang, Gen. Pai declared the nationalists had no intention of using forceful measures in Shanghai and that the problems must be settled by diplomatic means. He declared the unequal treaties with the foreign powers must be canceled. Gen. Chiang particularly was critical of the British press, which, he said, distorted the nationalist aims by dubbing them Bolshevik and communistic.

With reference to the Nanking bombardment, Gen. Chiang said he harbored no animosities against the Americans, since he believed the Americans were led by the British and were purposely involved. He said America and China had republican instincts and it was unwise for America to follow the British lead, since it was certain to involve America in the same predicament as the British respecting Chinese relations.

"Must Cancel Treaties."

He said the nationalist troops, after about a week in the Shanghai area, had cleaned up the lawless elements and stopped the general strike, hence there was no danger of violence to the foreigners. He declared Chinese public opinion was firmly backing up the nationalist army.

"The powers," Gen. Chiang said, "must be prepared to deal with China in a proper diplomatic spirit, for as long as the unequal treaty status exists the relations between China and the powers are bound to continue disturbed and unsatisfactory. So long as the Chinese people are not satisfied with their unequal status and are discontented they will continue the struggle for equality."

Can't Subdue China, He Says.

He declared it was impossible for the powers to send sufficient battleships to China to suppress the nationalistic aspirations of the Chinese people, and China would always be ready to invoke the boycott against any nation which may attempt to keep China in bondage under the old treaties.

At the conclusion of his interview, Gen. Chiang gave a detailed explanation of the Nanking incident, based on the report of Gen. Chen Chien, the Cantonese commander at Nanking, declaring the Chinese firing on the foreigners marooned on Socony hill was due to the fact that the section around the hill was defended by White Russian mercenaries attached to the Fengtien army and that when the battle developed between the Cantonese and the northerners Socony hill was in the center of the fire from three directions. He declared the Nanking looting and burning was done by White Russians, rowdies and bandits attached to the northern forces.

Shanghai Quiet Again.

Following a day of hectic excitement, with the newspapers filled with stories of harrowing experiences of the Nanking refugees, Shanghai tonight is quiet as a graveyard, due to the enforcement of stringent martial law. All amusement places are closed and the streets are patrolled by army volunteers and military forces and nobody is permitted to cross street intersections without submitting to search and questioning.

The French concession authorities today circulated confidential instructions to the foreign residents outlining a scheme for concentration in the downtown district in event the residence area of the concession was invaded by radical mobs.

Marines to Danger Zone.

A United States marine machine gun company of the command of Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler has been moved from the eastern section of the international settlement to the Avenue Foch, which is on the border of the French concession. There are many reports here that a Chinese attack on the French settlement was planned for tonight.

A serious fire, supposedly of incendiary origin, broke out in the French concession tonight, completely destroying the "great world," a Chinese amusement resort. Police and military threw a cordon around the burning property and prevented violence or looting.

A number of unarmed Cantonese soldiers who were seen in the streets of the French concession lent credence to the reports of a nationalist invasion, causing the householders to pack up their belongings in readiness for instant departure somewhere.

Two hundred refugees, mostly British and Americans, have arrived. Among the refugees who have reached Shanghai from Nanking is Mrs. John K. Davis, wife of the American consul at Nanking.

Destroyer Leaves Nanking.

The United States destroyer Preston departed from Nanking today bound for Shanghai, carrying sixty-six missionaries evacuated from Nanking university, and according to a British official wireless tonight all foreigners in Nanking are now accounted for excepting two Indian Sikh watchmen.

An unconfirmed report says two French priests were killed in the Nanking fighting.

In addition to the refugees on the Preston, the American consulate is in receipt of a wireless message that further refugees are being dispatched from Nanking on two Chinese steamers, which will probably arrive here tomorrow. The U. S. S. Preble is on the way to rescue Americans in the vicinity of Kiukiang.

The naval authorities are dispatching gunboats and a small cargo steamer to Chinkiang, Kiangyin, Nantungchow and Chiaoto Chen, all containing small groups of American missionaries.

About fifty missionaries stationed at Soochow arrived by launch today after a roundabout but uneventful trip.

According to Clarence Gauss, American consul general here, urgent instructions have been sent to all upper Yangtze ports from Nanking to Chungking telling isolated groups of missionaries to come to Shanghai in order to avoid further troubles.

A British Devonshire battalion arrived from Hongkong today and also the aircraft carrier Hermes with thirty airplanes and 150 horses for cavalry and scouting parties. A battalion from the British border regiment is on the way from Hongkong.

Persistent reports from reliable Chinese sources, the dispatch says, indicate that an attack by Chinese forces from the French side was due during the night.

Foreign Death Toll Seven.

SHANGHAI, March 27 [10:40 a. m.]—[U. P.]—The foreign death toll in the Nanking rioting was set at seven today as the arrival of all remaining refugees here made a final check-up possible. The dead were: Dr. J. E. Williams, American, vice president of Nanking university; Dr. L. F. Smith, British, port doctor; F. Huber, British, harbor master; Fathers Vanara and Tugoul, French priests; an unnamed British sailor from the Emerald, and an unnamed Japanese stoker.

Asks for U. S. Warship.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, China, March 26.—Owing to the dissentions at Chefoo, in Shantung province, between the police and military over the martial law, Consul Leroy Webber has asked that an American warship be sent there. Consul Ernest B. Price reports anti-foreign and anti-Christian outbreaks at Foochow in Fukien province, where American property is being raided. The authorities are indifferent to this vandalism. A destroyer is en route to the spot. At Chinkiang the Americans are concentrated on the property of the Standard Oil company of New York and the British Asiatic Petroleum company awaiting rescuers.

Consul John K. Davis at Nanking reports that the consular records were destroyed by uniformed soldiers.

On orders from American Minister MacMurray here, Consul General Frank P. Lockhart at Hankow presented a protest to Foreign Minister Eugene Chen against the "outrageous, unprovoked attacks at Nanking and the killing and wounding of Americans by nationalist soldiers," demanding that every possible measure be taken for the relief of the Americans remaining at Nanking.

JAPAN'S MOVES IN CHINESE WAR WORRY BRITAIN

London Plans to Send More Troops to Orient.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 26.—Alarmed over the Nanking clash and the possibilities that advantage will be taken of the present situation in China, Great Britain is contemplating the dispatch of an additional brigade of white troops from India to Hongkong, THE TRIBUNE learns.

The concentration of 2,000 troops, mostly Gurkha battalions, with mountain artillery, on the Sino-Burmese border near the town of Meitkyna, where the Cantonese have started new propaganda centers and where serious trouble is feared, has also begun.

Fear Japanese Move.

It is generally feared grave danger lurks in the orient. Official opinion was greatly disturbed today over information from Japan that a complete Japanese division, with artillery, has embarked and is already somewhere on the sea for an unknown destination in China, which is supposed to be the Nanking area, with two more divisions ready to be dispatched at a day's notice.

It is supposed here that the Japanese are planning military operations which would place them in control of the key position in the Yangtze valley between the northern and southern forces, making them the arbiters in the situation. It is pointed out that the present developments make impossible a protest against Japanese encroachment, because Tokio could point out that the events and murders at Nanking are demonstrating the need for forceful action.

British military leaders in Shanghai reported to London today that the situation is pregnant with peril for the future, as the policy of the Cantonese is to create around the settlement areas panic and discontent. The danger is growing hourly.

Report Russian Guns on Way.

Renewed warnings also were given by the Shanghai military against the danger of the bolsheviks supplying the Cantonese with heavy guns which, according to some reports, are already in transports on the Yellow sea, waiting an opportunity to be unloaded.

Military experts here say that the best way out of the trouble, if it occurs, is to remain passive in Shanghai and throw the Cantonese out of Canton, which operation would be easier because of the proximity of the powerful Hongkong base. Experts say that a smash at Canton would be more fatal to Cantonese than a defeat in the Shanghai area.

Japan Sends More Ships.

TOKIO, Japan, March 26.—[U. P.]—The Japanese government today decided to dispatch a part of the first squadron to Tsingtao and eight additional destroyers to Shanghai to assist in the protection of Japanese nationals. Other naval units were ordered to prepare for instant departure to the threatened points along the Chinese coast.

"ARMED CHRISTIANITY" IN CHINA PROTESTED BY STUDENTS HERE

"Missionaries ought to go to China at their own risk."

"It's wrong to send warships to enforce Christianity on the Chinese."

"Christianity has no more rights than any other religion."

These sentiments, shouted by Chinese college students attending the conference on Pan-Pacific relations at the University of Chicago, threatened for a time yesterday to break up the meeting. The Chinese, their anger stirred by a discussion of the present crisis in their native country, leaped on chairs and disregarded the chairman's gavel to make known their opinions. The disturbance was finally quieted by students of other races.

One Chinese delegate declared that missionaries should go to foreign countries only with the consent of local governments and should return home when they became unacceptable to the ruling powers. About 100 students from all parts of the country are attending the conference.

ANGLERS URGED TO AID WILD LIFE CONSERVATION

Fish stories by the score were the order of the evening last night at the twentieth annual gathering of the Fisherman's Club of Chicago at the Morrison hotel. Five hundred anglers attended the dinner, at which Douglas Malloch, poet and humorist, presided. Speakers included former Gov. A. O. Eberhardt of Minnesota, the Rev. John Timothy Stone of the Fourth Presbyterian church, and Fred W. Luening, editor of the Milwaukee Journal.

The speakers stressed the necessity for the conservation of wild life and the need for popular support of the legislation designed to protect it. Dr. Stone said the natural resources and scenery of America is unequaled. There are scores of lakes and miles of country here unknown to man and not indicated on any map, in which wild life abounds, he asserted.

DIES AS HE BOARDS TRAIN.

William H. Smith, 35 years old, a traveling salesman of Catskill, N. Y., dropped dead, supposedly of heart disease, as he was boarding a train at the La Salle street station yesterady.

MT. GREENWOOD NOW HAS TWO SETS OF POLICE

Residents of Mount Greenwood, a southwest suburb recently annexed to Chicago, were watching a situation unique in their village yesterday. Two sets of police, one from Chicago's Gresham station, and the other the former village police, were patrolling the streets.

Chief of Police John Hraha refused to turn over his records and his station house on demand of Gresham police. The chief continues to patrol the streets by day and his one assistant continues to make the rounds by night. Meanwhile Policeman Robert Fletcher, sent out from the Gresham station, has selected a beat in the village and is walking it.

A faction in the village which fought bitterly against the annexation is planning an appeal to the higher courts. For this reason, it is understood, former officials of the village decline to relinquish their authority.

Chief Hraha and Ferdinand M. Moore, trustee and chairman of Mount Greenwood's police committee, were questioned yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney H. M. Sharpe about alleged vice conditions in the district. They denied charges of wide open vice made in affidavits by several residents.

WOMAN FEARING HOLDUP SHOOTS YOUTH BY ERROR

Fires as He and 2 Pals Approach Her Auto.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Walter Brezzulowski, confidence game, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell by Judge Emanuel Eller.

Elin Lyons, murder, sentenced to be hanged by Judge William V. Brothers.

Anthony Alberts, confidence game, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell; Arthur Jorgenson, Lester Murdock, and Earl Murdock, rape, sentenced to 1 year each in the Bridewell; Robert Butvilas, confidence game, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory, by Judge William J. Lindsay.

Since she was held up and robbed of her jewelry four years ago, Mrs. Dorothy Davies of 1402 North Austin boulevard has carried a pistol. Last night, believing she was going to be robbed again, she fired into a group of three youths at Warren and Albany avenues, seriously wounding one.

He is Morris Waskow, 22 years old, of 1318 South Millard avenue. A bullet struck him in the left side, under the heart. Physicians at the county hospital said he probably would recover.

Mrs. Davies was with her husband, Herbert Davies, when the shooting occurred. Davies is owner of an automobile sales agency at 3854 West Madison street.

Fires as Youths Approach.

The couple were seated in their large sedan when Waskow, with his companions, Sam Frost, 1230 South Avers avenue, and Ray Krawitz, 6110 South Sacramento avenue, left the small car in which they had started to the Senate theater and walked across the street. Their line of march carried them directly to the Davies sedan. They were still a few feet distant, according to the story told the police, when Mrs. Davies fired.

"I've been very nervous about holdup men ever since my last experience," she said at the Warren avenue station later. "When I saw these men coming toward us I was sure they were going to try to rob us. I may have been a little quick, but I was so frightened I hardly knew what to do."

Held Under $1,000 Bond.

Mrs. Davies was charged with assault with intent to kill and was released on bonds of $1,000, signed by her husband and approved by Municipal Judge Jonas.

Waskow declined to talk about the shooting at the county hospital. At his home it was said he and his friends left at about 10 p. m. with the announced intention of attending the Senate performance. The police were satisfied of their innocence and wrote it down as a case of mistaken identity.

Mrs. Davies, who then lived at 3043 Warren avenue, was robbed of jewelry valued at $10,000 in front of her home in October, 1922.

GIRL SENT TO PRISON AS BAD CHECK PASSER

Mae Kirch, 18 years old, failed to gain sympathy from Judge William J. Lindsay yesterday when she was arraigned with two young men on charges of passing worthless checks. She was sent to the Bridewell for six months.

Efforts were made by attorneys to obtain probation for the young woman because of her age, but Judge Lindsay insisted that inasmuch as he was to mete out punishment to her two men companions, she must receive a penalty in accordance with the part she took in the scheme. Anthony Albert, 19 years old, who helped pass the checks, was sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell, and Robert Butvilas, 19, was sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory.

PARIS, March 26.—Charles Nungesser, one of the most notable aviators of the world war, whose acrobatics in the air have thrilled hundreds of thousands, announced today that he would attempt a New York-Paris flight this summer for the $25,000 prize offered by Raymond Ortieg. He is working on plans with Lieut. Coli, famous one eyed airman. Nungesser is the divorced husband of Consuelo Hatmaker, prominent in Paris and New York society.

Theories on Fading Solar Powers to Be Expounded

Theories on the slowly fading solar power and the possibility of an eventual wearing away of the solar system will be outlined by Dr. Arthur Haas, professor of theoretical physics at the University of Vienna, in two lectures at Northwestern university Tuesday morning and evening. Dr. Haas will speak on "The Atom as a Source of Energy" and on "Objective and Human Physics." Dr. Haas is a scientist of international reputation, who is particularly well known in Europe.

EX-CHICAGO GIRL, WIFE OF COUNT, SHOOTS BRITON

comte Frederic de Janze of Paris on Sept. 21, 1921. The bridal party and the guest list for the reception that followed was representative of the cream of the city's elite and of New York visitors.

Mrs. John J. Mitchell, who was Lolita Ogden Armour, a cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Miss Mary Landon Baker was one of the bridesmaids, and Allister McCormick, then her fiancée, served as an usher. Miss Elizabeth Chapin of New York was the second bridesmaid.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, Miss Louise Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. A. Watson Armour, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Laurance Armour, Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy Jr., Mrs. Lawrence Whiting and others.

Mrs. Francis E. May of 3330 Sheridan road, aunt of the countess, with whom she had made her home since leaving school, was the social sponsor for the bride, announced her engagement.

Mrs. May has been in Paris for the last two years, where she had frequently visited with her niece, according to her housekeeper.

At the J. Ogden Armour home surprise was expressed over the news contained in the dispatches.

"We have not seen my cousin since she was here in Chicago a few years ago," Mr. Armour said, "and we had not corresponded with her since. This is a complete surprise. We can shed no light on the occurrence and have nothing further to say."

The countess' mother is dead, but her stepmother, Mrs. William E. Silverthorne of New York, was a guest at her wedding here.

NEVERS AND WIFE IDENTIFIED AS MURDER VICTIMS

Hunt Missing Boarder in Miami Killing.

Miami, Fla., March 26.—[Special.]—R. C. Collins, once a detective employed by the Pinkerton agency in Chicago, was named as the slayer of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nevers, formerly of Chicago, tonight by Deputy Sheriff J. B. Cone in charge of the investigation. The Nevers were found dead in their home here last night.

Collins has had eight days' start in which to make his escape, according to Cone. He left Miami in Nevers' automobile.

Cone says he is convinced that Collins killed Mr. and Mrs. Nevers to obtain about $700 which they had in the house.

Authorities have established by three witnesses that Collins remained in the Nevers bungalow for at least two days with the bodies of his victims. Two carpenters did repair work under his direction on March 17 and 18. The murder was committed, it is concluded, on March 16.

Chats with Carpenters.

The two men told the sheriff that Collins sat with them in the room while they replaced some burned flooring, smoking cigarets and chatting while they worked.

Piecing together the information obtained from acquaintances of the Nevers family, the authorities have constructed a story of misfortunes which followed Nevers since he came to Florida four years ago. It was found that Mr. Nevers is the beneficiary of a trust fund of $27,000 left by his father in the hands of Henry James of Marshall Field & Co. Nevers owned a residence in Miami and several scattered pieces of property or equities.

After the boom collapsed, although he had been operating as a broker, his real estate affairs became involved and early in January he leased his home on Northwest 2d street and rented some cottages with the idea of making an income by renting rooms. Collins occupied a room in one of the cottages. He was without funds, but became friendly with Mr. and Mrs. Nevers. He finally induced Mr. Nevers, as a last hope for recuperation of funds, to finance a business enterprise. The venture of the Nevers with the cottages was unsuccessful and the three moved to the 95th street house to carry on the new enterprise.

Failed to Raise Funds.

In the meantime Nevers had been endeavoring to raise money in Chicago to meet payments upon his properties, but without success. The enterprise conducted by Collins was a failure. During the week of March 6 Nevers and Collins pawned for $400 jewelry belonging to Nevers. Nevers also cashed a check for $300, and the money was in the home at the time of the murder. The money represented the last of a fortune of $40,000 or $50,000 Nevers had acquired on paper during his activities here.

Deputy Sheriff Cone believes that Collins killed Nevers on the back porch of the house and then went inside and killed Mrs. Nevers. The crime was committed with a hatchet.

The slayer removed the body of Mr. Nevers to a closet and placed it in a chair, a rope about the neck holding the body in position. The body of Mrs. Nevers was placed on a chair in her bedroom. The closet and bedroom doors were locked. A neighbor called at the Nevers home yesterday but could not arouse any one and the police were summoned.

The car in which Collins drove to Florida was found in the garage and the Nevers machine was missing.

Identification of the bodies was difficult as the faces of the victims had been mutilated. It was at first believed the dead man was Collins. Two workmen viewed the bodies this afternoon and, with other acquaintances, made identification absolute as to Mr. Nevers.

CHICAGO POLICE HUNT COLLINS.

Chicago police took up an active search last night for trace of C. H. Collins, former Chicagoan, sought in connection with the hatchet murders at Miami, Fla., of Edward Nevers and of Nevers' wife, Mrs. Anna Nevers.

Mrs. George W. Macauley, 2745 Garrison avenue, Evanston, a sister of Nevers, and her husband left last night for Miami to take charge of the bodies and assist Miami authorities in their search for the slayers.

Mrs. W. M. Holly, 2302 Wabash avenue, a sister of Mrs. Nevers, received the first word in Chicago of the tragedy. She immediately telephoned Mrs. Macauley. Neither the Macauleys nor Mrs. Holly were able to throw any light on the possible motive for the murders.

Express Fear of Robbers.

Letters received from Mrs. Nevers by Mrs. Macauley expressed a fear of robbers and footpads in the new Miami subdivision into which the Nevers family recently moved.

Nevers' father, for many years a trusted employé of Marshall Field & Co. here, left a small trust fund for his son when he died in 1921.

John A. Sands of Miami, a friend of the Macauleys, was wired by Mr. Macauley to take charge of the bodies until the Macauleys reach there.

SLAIN IN HOME AT MIAMI

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nevers of Chicago, who were found murdered in their home at Miami, Fla. Police are searching for C. H. Collins, who lived with the Neverses, as the killer.

BEER ONLY NEAR, SO THAT'S AS FAR AS ARREST GETS

Our narrative herewith deals with a varnish truck, and as all good stories end, it has a fine finish.

"Your captain, meaning none other than myself, commands that you sight your bearings," Officer George Barker, pilot of the Desplaines street police flivver, instructed his partner, Policeman James Ivers.

"Your excellency, we are near beer," Ivers replied as he felt to see if his rubber heels were on straight.

"Hold fast," Barker commanded, "we are coming to a stop."

And stop the two policemen did alongside a truck bearing a sign of the Varnish Company of America. Louis Brown, the driver, and seven barrels containing fluid, were rushed to prohibition headquarters, where an analysis of the contents of the barrels was made.

"We crave knowledge, was it beer?" the two policemen queried.

"As varnish it is the bunk," the chemist replied. "For it sudded up and almost ruined my Saturday afternoon. But as for it being beer," and here the policemen and Brown sat up straight in their chairs—"it was near."

Therefore, Mr. Brown was reprimanded for near—ly causing himself to be arrested.

YOU see here a dining room group of walnut and gumwood that has many very attractive features.

It is Elizabethan in period; there was a hearty, substantial mode of life in those days; they liked their food and plenty of it. And that sturdy spirit of the Times expressed itself in the furniture they used.

You can see it in the solid, strong looking design of this group; we suspect that the makers have added a touch of embellishment here and there to relieve the stern lines a little; but altogether it's very attractive; and very substantial. Better have a look at it; and while you're here we'll show you some other choice things; all "Scholle-quality." And all very low priced.

We add a list of special bargains, one of a kind; they may be gone before you come

BIG BILL SWEEPS COLORED SECTION IN TRIBUNE POLL

West Side Straws Show Better for Dever.

PRE-ELECTION POLL.

Candidate	Prev. Results.	Today's Results.	Totals To date.	Per cent.
Dever	34,809	1,858	36,667	41.61
Thompson	30,620	3,881	34,501	53.54
Robertson	2,699	211	2,910	4.54
Totals	58,128	5,950	64,078	99.99

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

On the face of THE TRIBUNE straw vote, without the required readjustments, former Mayor William Hale Thompson is running ahead of the present mayor the equivalent of 109,000 votes. This is comparable with a Thompson lead a week ago of around 140,000.

In the figures presented today, Thompson obtained more than twice as many straws as Mayor Dever. The poll consists of west side movie theaters and certain street intersections in the heart of the south side colored area, which accounts in large measure for the poor showing of the present mayor.

Colored Belt for Thompson.

The colored citizens are normally heavily Republican. The poll indicates they are overwhelmingly for Thompson. This places Mayor Dever at a distinct disadvantage. Four years ago when he won by a plurality of more than 105,000, Mayor Dever had a majority of the colored people with him. Illustrative of this fact, the Second and Third wards in 1923 cast 29,086 votes for mayor. Of these Mr. Dever received 17,352, Mr. Lueder 10,761, and Mr. Cunnea 972.

THE TRIBUNE poll ten days before the end of the 1923 campaign showed clearly that Dever would get a large part of the colored votes. A later 1923 poll indicated he would carry the colored districts. The poll this year, in the same part of the campaign, indicates that Dever will lose heavily.

Comparison of Two Polls.

A comparison of the two straw votes in the south side colored area puts the situation out in the broad daylight.

POLL OF 1923.

Candidate—	Straws.	Pct.
Dever [Dem.]	810	40.56
Lueder [Rep.]	1,099	55.03
Cunnea [Soc.]	88	4.40
Totals	1,997	99.99

POLL OF 1927.

Candidate—	Straws.	Pct.
Dever [Dem.]	126	11.32
Thompson [Rep.]	966	86.79
Robertson [Ind.]	21	1.88
Totals	1,113	99.99

The straws collected this year were not so many as four years ago because the colored people, until yesterday, declined to cast straws. Sundry statements were made to the vote collectors by colored people early last week, indicating that they were afraid to participate in the straw voting. A story was given wide circulation that many colored persons would not go to the polls, April 5, but the alleged fear appears to have worn away. It therefore appears that the mayoralty election will feel the full force of the colored citizens with Thompson as the conceded favorite.

Can't Figure Number Closely.

Estimates vary widely on the number of colored voters and because thousands of them have come to Chicago since the last federal census was taken it is impossible to check with certainty any of the estimates. But assume, only for the purpose of graphing the present situation, there will be 80,000 colored votes cast on the south side April 5, the straw vote indicates that Thompson starts now with a trifle more than 60,000 votes in his vest pocket in excess of what the percentage column allots to Dever; while four years ago at this time Lueder's advantage over Dever was less than 12,000 votes by the same method of reckoning.

It is perfectly apparent that the Dever supporters have not made the progress with the colored people to date which they made four years ago up to the same point in that campaign.

On the other hand, the other part of the poll presented today—the totals for a large majority of the west side theaters—should be encouraging to Mayor Dever. These same theaters were polled a week ago. In the interim the two polls indicate that Dever gained in favor about one and one-half per cent of the straws.

FIRST POLL OF THEATERS, WEST.

Candidate.	Straws.	Per Cent.
Dever [Dem.]	1,686	33.16
Thompson [Rep.]	3,147	61.90
Robertson [Ind.]	251	4.93
Totals	5,084	99.99

SECOND POLL OF THEATERS, WEST.

Dever [Dem.]	1,732	35.80
Thompson [Rep.]	2,915	60.26
Robertson [Ind.]	190	3.92
Totals	4,837	99.98

In the total of 5,950 interviews with Chicago residents on the mayoralty candidates, printed today, 1,858 or 31.22 per cent were for Dever, 3,881 or 65.22 per cent were for Thompson and 211 or 3.54 per cent were for Robertson.

Rival Party Strongholds.

As heretofore pointed out, it is hard for a Democrat to get a plurality of the votes in Chicago without carrying the west side as it is for a Republican to win without the north side. It is claimed, and with justification, that a theater straw vote during lent fails to register thousands of regular voters. This in part explains the poor showing made by the Democrats on the west side. It does not explain, however, why the Democrats in the present straw vote are not making as good a showing as they made in THE TRIBUNE straw vote four years ago. That, too, was taken during lent, when many persons do not attend the theater or other places of amusement.

Previous Straw Vote.

That poll—one of 1923—in comparison with the vote for mayor at that time, supplies a basis for weighing the percentages in straw votes during lent. After applying that ratio, the west side support of Mayor Dever this year is not as large as four years ago, although the straw vote for the west side should not be interpreted as discouraging to the Deverites as it appears on its face.

LIFE'S WORRIES, BIG AND LITTLE, LOOSEN TEETH, DENTIST SAYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 26.—Jolts of life and worries loosen teeth and are the real cause for pyorrhea, according to one of Germany's most eminent dentists, Dr. Hans Sachs of Berlin. Through the wireless station at Koenigswusterhausen he is extending advice to radio fans to seek harmony of the soul as the best preventative against pyorrhea. Dr. Sachs studied in Chicago under Dr. Robert Good.

"I have established through a series of tests that under strain of emotions and worries tartar settles on teeth much more rapidly than under normal conditions," he said. "Another cause for pyorrhea is gnashing of teeth, especially when asleep. Psychoanalysts know that gnashing of teeth is only a reaction of the subconscious mind trying to free itself of burdensome impressions of daily life.

"Most pyorrhea patients belong to the 'depressive type' discovered by Freud. Take the depression away and the pyorrhea will improve. It may sound foolish to laymen, but there is no doubt that a broken heart may cause pyorrhea and the subsequent loss of teeth."

ARGENTINA WILL RE-ENTER LEAGUE, PARIS IS TOLD

[Copyright: 1927: By The New York Times.]

PARIS, March 26.—It is understood in Paris that Argentina will rejoin the league of nations at the September meeting of the assembly. Negotiations in this direction have been going on and in May the Argentine government will ask parliament to take action to permit the sending of a full delegation to Geneva next fall. There also are reports that the Brazilian government is considering rescinding its withdrawal of last year, due to a dispute attending the entrance of Germany.

MEXICO COURT PUTS EMBARGO ON U. S. OIL FIRM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, March 26.—The embargo on 51,000,000 pesos (about $25,500,000) worth of property and products, which was placed on the Transcontinental Oil company by the district judge at Tampico, has worried oil men here. They see in the treatment of the Transcontinental company an indication of the moves that may be made against other oil companies. C. H. Buckley, who was expelled from Mexico some time ago, had a large interest in the Transcontinental company. Mr. Buckley also has three large land companies in the valley of Mexico, near Mexico City.

Wife Drowns When Auto Skids Off Road Into Creek

Harrisburg, Ill., March 26.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Frank Henderson, 45, Eldorado, was drowned late yesterday when the automobile in which she was riding with her husband skidded into a small creek. Mrs. Henderson was pinned under the car.

MAYORAL BATTLE RIVALED BY EIGHT COUNCIL SEEKERS

Albert-Haffa Fight Most Bitter in City.

Clashing chiefly on local issues, eight city council aspirants in north side wards this week are staging an aldermanic campaign windup second in bitterness only to the Dever-Thompson battle.

Nearly every battle is being fought every inch of the way, and, with one exception, to predict the outcomes would be sheer guessing. This exception is in Ward 45, where Ald. Leo M. Briske, a Dever Democrat, apparently has an easy victory over his Thompson opponent, William H. Fiegenbutz.

Albert-Haffa Battle.

By far the hottest aldermanic fight, not only on the north side, but in the entire city, rages in the Forty-third ward, where Ald. A. F. Albert and Titus Haffa are settling a personal feud in a sensational throat cutting mêlée. This battle will be reported by THE TRIBUNE in a separate story later in the week.

The other two wards on the north side, where runoff elections will be held April 5, are the Fortieth and Fiftieth. In the Fortieth, Ald. Christ A. Jensen, after seven years in the council, is fighting for his political life against John C. Chapman, a vigorous young attorney, who came within 425 votes of beating him in 1925 and polled 5,231 votes to his 5,563 in the preliminary election.

Ald. Jensen is backed by a strong Democratic organization while Chapman has built up an equally strong independent following. Although he is nominally a Republican, Chapman has refused to go along with Thompson.

Classed "Poor" by M. V. L.

Ald. Jensen is 37 years old and lives at 4226 North Sawyer avenue. His record is classed as "poor" by the M. V. L., partly on the ground that he voted against the tile ordinance and refused to vote on water meters. The tell-tale factor in this contest will probably be the 10,000 odd votes garnered by three other candidates Feb. 22.

Upholding the G. O. P. banner in the 50th ward is another Republican who balks at backing Thompson. He is Aron K. Mose, a real estate man who is battling Carl Hjalmar Lundquist, an assistant corporation counsel under Mayor Dever, for the seat left vacant by Ald. William H. Pontow, who is retiring.

Mose has been aligned with Lundin and Brundage in years past, as precinct committeeman in the old 25th ward. He now claims to be an independent Republican. He is 33 years old and lives at 4884 North Hermitage avenue.

Lundquist, living at 1615 Rascher avenue, according to the M. V. L. has been "honest, capable, and forceful" in the city's legal department for the last seven years.

Two Mandamus Suits.

The spotlight of attention in the aldermanic situation will swing tomorrow to the county courts where Aldermen Charles Eaton [5th] and Robert Barbee [17th] are battling for the right to runoff elections on the grounds that their opponents failed to receive a majority of all votes cast Feb. 22. Both have filed writs of mandamus to compel the election board to revise their figures. Should they be victorious, there will be a total of thirteen council seats in the April 5 election.

WOLFF DESERTS ROBERTSON FOR THOMPSON FOLD

Coroner Rallies to Bill's Political Standard.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Fresh diversions were staged at William Hale Thompson headquarters yesterday as the factions which had been walloping each other a few short weeks ago bent their heads together for close harmony and a few barber shop chords.

One pulsating question had to do with the King of England and Senator Deneen. The senator, whose ward committeemen indorsed the Thompson ticket Friday, said at that time he would make a Thompson utterance—next week.

Theories Enough for All.

Onlookers were wondering whether the entry of Deneen would not tend to crab Bill's Punch and Judy show with King George, for the reason that the senator voted for the world court.

Opinion was divided. One school of theory held that Thompson's daily crack about world courters who voted "to make seven Yanks equal one Englishman" might injure the susceptibilities of the harmonized Deneenites. Another line of reasoning was that Senator Deneen will work out a straddle that will ignore Buckingham palace and will be a resonant declaration on the greatness of the Republican party and the pure delights of party regularity.

Another flipflop by the world's greatest trapese artist, Coroner Oscar Wolff, gave the Thompson camp a forenoon thrill. It was the fourth double back somersault the coroner has thrown from the aerial heights of the main top in less than a year. Yesterday, he withdrew his candidacy for city treasurer on the Dr. Robertson-Fred Lundin ticket, and marched over to Thompson's boudoir in the Sherman and had his picture taken with Big Bill. His withdrawal, however, came too late for his name to be removed from the ballot.

Heartburnings in the Robertson camp! Doc Dill in his night speeches told the public to keep tab on the jumps of politicians, and asked if fear of State's Attorney Crowe was the cause for some of the harmonizing.

Meanwhile some of the South Chicago leaders gazing with wonder on the coroner's acrobatic virtuosity, enumerated the jumps he has made in a twelvemonth.

The Nimble Mr. Wolff.

They said he has made switches enough to become president of the switchmen's union. Early last year he was with Crowe-Barrett-Galpin; in the springtime he was with the Deneenites on the county fight; last fall he flipflopped back to Crowe-Thompson-Barrett; after the November election he took a high dive into the Lundin-Robertson net and got on the Lundin ticket, and yesterday he completed his loop the loop by landing back in the Thompson-Crowe camp.

Mr. Wolff, whose attainments have won him the title of "The Kangaroo Kid," has left the politicians so dizzy with his jumping that when he went in to patch things up with State's Attorney Crowe yesterday, Chairman Homer K. Galpin had to start them off at a point three years back, when Crowe put Wolff on for coroner—all the acrobatics since then were to be forgotten.

Same Junior Partner.

South Chicago battlers likewise rushed in with news that Pat Moynihan, state commerce commissioner, again has changed the sign over his 10th ward Republican headquarters. Instead of painting a new sign, the decorator has merely slashed out names and put in new ones, of the favorites for mayor and alderman. A couple of months ago Moynihan's sign read "Robertson and Cross," then it was transformed into "Litsinger and Cross," now it has been revised into "Thompson and Cross." The junior member in this firm name is Ald. E. M. Cross, a Deneen committeeman.

The Thompson managers put out a long statement last night on the school building record of the Dever administration, largely a reiteration of what Ald. Oscar Nelson has been saying in his speeches for Thompson.

Calls Dever Schools Inferior.

"Although they have been in existence only a few months," it says, "none of them more than three years, some of the Dever schoolhouses have had to be repaired extensively already to prevent them from collapsing. Inferior material, far below that called for in the specifications, has been the rule rather than the exception in the construction of these buildings.

"In this specialized age of building construction, with reinforced concrete playing an important part, contracts have been awarded to inexperienced contractors and the work of constructing the building has been supervised by political henchmen of the Brennan-Dever-O'Brien-Igoe oligarchy, with no knowledge whatever of building construction and who could not recognize a piece of incompetent work if it were performed before their very eyes.

"There is not a private or public building in Chicago or the United States that represents such a scandalous picture of unsubstantial construction as some of the public schools erected under Dever."

CAR MEN CHEER DEVER'S RECORD; RAP THOMPSON

Charge Bill Brought Them Pay Cut.

support Dever, because he always has been square, not only in all matters of trade unionism, but in everything that has come before him. We are making this fight not only to maintain the standards of the home but to stop Thompson from putting in the African standards."

"I've known Bill Dever for thirty years," said Edward McMorrow, a member of the international board, "and if he ever has made any mistakes they were not of the heart."

Several other speakers followed and the meeting ran until an unusually late hour.

E. H. Burke, son of the late Robert Emmet Burke, made public a letter he had written to Mayor Dever, denying that the old Cook County Democracy, of which his father for years was the head, had gone over to Thompson.

"Certain doublecrossing Democrats and political leeches led by Miles J. Devine," read the letter in part, "are trying to deceive the public into believing that the old county democracy is out to help elect Thompson for mayor.

"They falsely represent a new, cheap, improvised club as the old county organization. They have further tried to deceive the public by using my father's name in that connection.

"Every real member of the old county democracy, past and present, resents these lying, crooked methods. I particularly resent them and it is my hope and plea that every friend of my father's and every friend of the old county democracy vote for William E. Dever for mayor and for the honor of Chicago."

REVEAL ATTEMPT OF MRS. SNYDER'S LOVER AT SUICIDE

New York, March 26.—[Special.]—Henry Judd Gray, who is charged with having joined with his mistress, Mrs. Ruth Snyder, in beating to death her husband, Albert Snyder, attempted to poison himself while being brought to New York from Syracuse last Monday, it was learned today. He tried to drink the contents of a bottle of whisky, since analyzed and found to contain so much bichloride of mercury that one drink of it would have meant certain death.

Police Lieutenant John McDermott said that after they had boarded the train which brought them here Gray was seized with a violent coughing spell. He asked permission to take some of his "cough medicine." McDermott consented. Gray reached into his suitcase, took from one corner of it a sock and from the wrapping of the sock drew out the bottle.

These elaborate proceedings aroused McDermott's suspicions and he seized the bottle just as Gray was uncorking it.

Child at Bath Killed by Fumes from Heater

Fumes from a gas heater were fatal to Eleanor Pokarz, 12 years old, and almost caused the death of her half-sister, Helen Scaranuzzi, 11, while they were taking a bath in their home at 2653 North Mulligan street last night. The children were found unconscious in the bath tub by their father, Angelo Scaranuzzi, who has eight other children. A pulmotor squad revived the younger girl.

Electrotype Firm Head Robbed of $863 Pay Roll

Three armed bandits snatched a satchel containing an $863 pay roll yesterday from Mark Harrison, president of the A. B. C. Electrotype company, 522 South Clinton street, and escaped in an automobile. Mr. Harrison had just drawn the money from a bank and had returned with it to the Clinton street building. While he waited for an elevator, the bandits walked in, grabbed the money, and fled.

FIND BODY OF SUICIDE.

The body of Harry Harmstrom, 40, of 2952 North California avenue, who leaped into the north branch of the river from the Belmont avenue bridge on March 7, was recovered Friday near Fullerton avenue.

EARLY FURNITURE CASE RETRIAL IS SOUGHT BY U. S.

An early retrial of the [illegible] against 129 individuals and [illegible] manufacturing concerns charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law has been ordered by the department of justice in Washington, it was learned here yesterday.

"The substantial character of the evidence submitted in support of the indictment demands that these important cases be prosecuted to a definite conclusion at the earliest possible date," said a statement issued by the department.

The jury in the case disagreed after 96 hours of deliberation and was discharged by United States Judge George A. Carpenter.

The Super-Six Principle freed to the limit

Fast Get-away

and performance so smooth that only a stop watch shows how swift

The smoothness with which the Super-Six glides from standing start to high speed is totally different from the violent lunge with which high powered cars usually get under way.

And so in all it does there is such effortless ease that driver and passengers hardly realize how great is their performance supremacy.

The smooth, silent and elastic flow of power from the released Super-Six principle has set a new standard of unusual performance. At any speed and for any distance you demand you will never feel the slightest effort is exerted by motor or chassis.

You may never require such speed or power. But it is important that this ability results from absolute smoothness and freedom from vibration. The over-capacity means reserve ability for any task. It means minimum wear and repair need. It means easy riding without fatigue.

Until you ride in the Hudson Super-Six there is a motoring thrill you never can know.

APPROVE RIVER STRAIGHTENING, SPRAGUE PLEADS

Ten Other Civic Projects Are on Ballot.

Unkinking of the Chicago river, a dream of city planners for half a century, and ten other vital civic projects will be at stake in the April 5 election, as well as control of the mayor's chair for the next four years.

Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, declared yesterday that these improvements, which are provided for in the $21,390,000 bond issue propositions to be submitted, must go forward if the city is to progress physically.

"Tragedy If Lost."

"It would be an irreparable tragedy if the river straightening work, in particular, should be balked," the commissioner asserted. "Everything is ready to go ahead but should the voters fail us, years of effort would prove in vain.

"All of the other bond issues are important, but those for the river are an immediate necessity. The railroads and the city agreed, plans are drawn, and if the bonds are voted, the job can be completed within three years, making way for a great $200,000 railway terminal and the opening of loop streets on the south by the time of the world's fair in 1933."

For the digging of the channel itself, $2,500,000 is provided, and for new bridges at Roosevelt road and Taylor street, $1,700,000 each. These bridges will span the new channel and must be constructed simultaneously with diversion of the channel.

Two other bridges, five street widening projects, new street and traffic signal lights, playground and bathing beach facilities, and a new nurses home at the contagious disease hospital are also included in the bond list on the ballots.

For Traffic Relief.

The bridges are both over the main river channel at Clark street and Wabash avenue. They are to cost $1,-625,000 and $3,700,000 respectively. The Clark street bridge will replace the old swing structure which has been condemned while that at Wabash avenue is planned as a beautiful bascule span, diverting the congested traffic on Michigan avenue and State street.

All of the street bonds, with one exception, are to complete projects now underway. They are as follows:

Ashland avenue from Wisconsin avenue to 60th street	$2,500,000
Western avenue from Belmont avenue to 31st street	2,000,000
Indiana avenue and 22d street	1,600,000
Kimball avenue from Wellington to Peterson avenues	250,000
103d street from Cottage Grove avenue east	100,000

Each of these proposals has been studied, approved and mapped out by the Chicago plan commission and "are of prime importance as steps in hewing Chicago out of the traffic jungle that has grown out of the automobile era." Each of them means broader, better paved through streets and boulevards.

For street and traffic light bond issues of $1,700,000 and $200,000 are to be submitted. Chicago will illuminate its last dark areas in the outlying districts if the street lamp bonds are voted.

An even $1,000,000 of the proposed issues will go to improve bathing beaches and to turn vacant lots into playgrounds for children.

Young Actress Swallows Poison in Lincoln Park

Norma Wasser, 20 years old, an actress, swallowed poison yesterday as she stood on the bridge at the outer drive opposite Webster avenue. Capt. Charles E. Show and Patrolman Edward Graf of Lincoln park police found her a few minutes later as she lay by the driveway. She was taken to the Columbus hospital, where it was said she probably would recover. Until recently she lived at the North Park hotel, 1936 North Clark street. She refused to tell her motive for attempting to kill herself.

Artist's Suicide in Lake Is Laid to Despondency

A nervous breakdown, brought on by overwork, was given by police last night as the explanation for the supposed suicide of Maxwell D. Johnson, 35 years old, an artist, of 1650 East 70th street, whose body was taken from the Chicago river at 18th street early yesterday. Mrs. Frances Johnson, the widow, said she was convinced Johnson killed himself while in a fit of despondency after overwork.

Assessment "Reducer" Is Jailed by Woman

Samuel Grant of 3417 West 16th street was arrested yesterday on complaint of Mrs. Rose Zadny, who said he posed as an assessor, telling her that he would reduce her assessment on her bakery at 2758 Turner avenue from $300 to $60 if paid immediately. He was locked up in the Lawndale police station.

RADICALISM AND YOUNG CHINA.

There is an interesting aspect of Chinese nationalism that is not getting the notice it deserves. The leaders of the movement for the overthrow of the Manchu empire and the establishment of a modern state were not radicals in the western sense. Many of them were educated in American universities and, with the exception of Sun Yat Sen, in his later stage of development, they were and are conservative in their economic and political beliefs, speaking from the viewpoint of western radicalism. Upon the fall of the Manchus they sought advice from a distinguished American political scientist, who discussed for them the principles of modern government and its chief forms, the constitutional monarchy and the republic. The merit of the former for a people without experience in self-government was not ignored, and there was among the abler Chinese an inclination to adopt it. But there was a lack of material and also a strong party for republican government, so the republic was adopted.

The constitutions thereupon proposed are not radical in our sense, and in the first days of the republican movement the objective was the establishment of a republican régime with which American and liberal European opinion could actively sympathize. The subsequent rise of the various war lords has thrown this development into a tragic confusion, and in the meantime there has grown up at Canton a radical régime, at first under the influence of the late Sun Yat Sen, who had developed into a radical doctrinaire, and later under bolshevik diplomacy. In this evolution we find student groups conspicuous, and it is significant to note that socialist economic and social doctrines are introduced not merely under Russian influence but from European and even American universities. Missionary sympathy for these ideas has appeared also. The usual talk against capitalism is general not only in China but among Chinese students who are supposed to be getting knowledge of occidental societies in this country and Europe. If we are to judge from much of the student theorizing among the young Chinese, the American example of private liberty and initiative is one to be avoided, not imitated.

We are less interested in the bearing this may have upon developments in China than upon its explanation. How is it that the youth who are going back to China are taking ideas which imply the failure of democracy in this country rather than a determination to establish American conditions in their own country? What are our universities teaching their students? How is it that among the missionaries and Y. M. C. A. workers in China, supported as they are by our sinister capitalists out of the evil profits of capitalism, we find so much sympathy for at least a half baked socialism? Are our political and economic professors convinced that the American system of individualism and republican government is a dismal failure and that young China ought to strike out for the socialist utopia by the shortest route? How many of our missionaries and Y. M. C. A. workers are sentimental socialists? It might pay to find out.

We think the American scheme, being a fabric of fallible humanity, has its faults, but we do not see that it deserves the scorn which the Chinese student of today seems to have for it. It has given a well being to the common man which no socialistic experiment, past or present, has produced, and among the highly altruistic friends of China we do not think the future is going to list either the adroit diplomats from Moscow who are just now having their day in the nationalist movement nor yet the sentimental socialists of our own breed who are giving a sort of shamefaced encouragement to inexperienced and misguided youth in China.

If young China is studying in American schools the sources and history of American institutions, with American teachers who are fit to teach the lessons of American life, where is it getting its new hostility to America and its liking for socialism?

NOW WE'RE FOR GAS.

Our government, which at the Washington conference insisted upon a provision outlawing gas warfare, seems now to have changed its mind. In a memorandum submitted to the secretariat of the league of nations at Geneva the United States is reported to have refused to indorse the recommendation of the preliminary disarmament commission in the matter, although the recommendation was little more than a repetition of the Washington decision.

What we have lost in consistency we have gained in good sense. Chemical warfare is no more cruel though fully as effective as any other kind of fighting, and gas happens to be a weapon which we are eminently well equipped to manufacture. We have the raw materials and the chemical industries. Of all the other countries in the world, Germany alone can hope to rival us.

The part this country has played in recent international negotiations looking toward disarmament adds nothing to our prestige. We do not speak of our inconsistency. That might be forgiven, but not our meddlesome self-righteousness. Our attitude has been that we alone, of all the nations, are sincerely desirous of preventing war. We have scolded Europeans who dared disagree with us. We have scarcely veiled our assumptions that Europeans were incompetent to adjust their own conflicts and that any nation which rejected our formulas did so from base motives. The truth is that without special equipment for the task, we are interfering in a situation which has taxed the intelligence and ingenuity of European statesmen for a century or more. We would do better to mind our own business.

THE UNPOPULAR U. S. A.

Americans of the liberal mind say that the United States, in trying to protect its interests in Nicaragua and keep the natives from being killed in a useless civil war, is making itself disliked everywhere in Latin America.

That would be unfortunate. Where a desire to dislike exists occasion can be found for it. Latin America could support the United States in such an enterprise as the Nicaraguan. Disorder does not benefit the continent. North and South American civilization does not gain by it. The jungle isn't an asset.

The United States has tried for good relations with its American neighbors, but it cannot base all its actions on speculation as to whether they will make this country popular or unpopular. The rescue of Cuba from Spain and the subsequent treatment of the island ought to have counted as an instance of fair American intentions. The rescue of Mexico from France ought to have counted as another instance. These were real liberations, delivery from foreign oppression and from bloodshed. A grouch is more natural in international relations than gratitude. It is easier to carry and it suits the egotism better.

The United States is supposed to be earning the ill wishes of its neighbors by trying to maintain agreements in Mexico. Presumably the alternative is to knuckle under. The good will gained by surrenders everywhere there is a point in controversy would be really contempt.

The United States is supposed to be irritating France by not wiping out the debt; Italy and Japan, by not repealing the immigration restriction law; China, by sending ships and marines; Europe generally, by not taking down the tariff wall, joining the league of nations, and adhering to the world court on other nations' terms. Uncle Sam is not loved. What of it? By self-respect the country can make itself respected. Nations are not bothered with affection for each other.

A MAN CAN STAND UP.

The Pullman company announces that a new kind of sleeping car is to be tried out soon on a number of railroads. Each passenger will have a room equipped with single bed and toilet accommodations. The cars will be used only on overnight runs, as from Chicago to Detroit. Accordingly, the bed will never be anything but a bed; it will not be convertible into a chair during the day and will have a real mattress. There will be no upper berth upon which to crack the skull, and the passenger will have privacy and comfort for washing and dressing. The room will be smaller than a compartment, but far more comfortable than a berth.

The cost of the new accommodations will be somewhere between the cost of a lower berth and a compartment. To go from New York to Washington the first class fare is $3.14 and a lower berth costs $3.75, a total of $11.89. A passenger occupying a compartment alone must pay two fares and a Pullman charge of $10.50, a total of $26.78. The occupant of the new single rooms will pay a fare and a quarter and his Pullman ticket will cost double the charge for a lower, a total of $17.68.

The single room will not be cheap, but there will be plenty of travelers who will be only too glad to pay the additional cost. The success of extra fare trains shows that the American people are willing and even anxious to pay for speed and comfort on the railroads. Nevertheless, the Pullman company has not been quick to profit from the American public's fondness for novelty, mechanical improvement, and creature comfort. The standard sleeping car today is not much different in layout from the grandfather of sleeping cars. You still lie on a shelf, with only a curtain for privacy. The company of recent years has provided each berth with a hanger for coat and pants, but it has made it no easier to get inside either garment. The occupant of a berth must choose between acute discomfort to himself and alarm to his fellow travelers. European travelers have had individual toilet facilities in their sleeping cars for generations, but the standard sleeping car in this country is back in the town pump era. Here snoring is not a private vice but a public calamity, and children are the black plague.

It is comforting to find the Pullman company experimenting with new designs and devices to make travel less of a chore. The company, in designing cars for special purposes, is attacking the problem from the right direction. There is no reason why a sleeping car for one night's travel should be identical with one designed for a transcontinental journey.

Editorial of the Day

THE TRIUMPHANT OYSTER.

[New York Evening Post.]

It is a relief to turn aside from the contemplation of changes in fashion, crime and punishment, wars and rumors of wars to something in which we can become interested, with the prospect of continued happiness. What could be more pleasing than to learn that our oyster crop is growing rapidly and that there is no danger of this bivalve becoming as scarce as shad or terrapin? In thirty years we have increased our output of oysters 70 per cent and there is a prospect of still further increase, owing to improvements in our methods of cultivation.

And not only have we learned how to increase the number of these bivalves, but we have also found ways of protecting them from contamination. It is no longer necessary for fastidious diners carefully to cut off the tails with an apology to their hosts that it is in that part of an oyster that typhoid lurks. Our modern oyster is pedigreed, with a guarantee of ancestry on his shell, so that we can swallow him raw with impunity.

Thirty-five countries are able to produce oysters, but no oysters are superior to ours. And our oysters are patriotic. Visiting Englishmen, delighted with their size and taste, time and again have attempted to transplant them to British shores without success. Our American oysters simply refuse to reproduce in that environment, but when they are taken to the Pacific coast they multiply as rapidly as they do on their native shores.

WHAT IS A RELIGIOUS BOOK—AND WHY?

BY WINFRED ERNEST GARRISON, PH. D.,
Dean of the Disciples Divinity House of the University of Chicago and literary editor of the Christian Century.

While there are only fifty-two weeks in the year, there must be several times that many weeks specially designated for the observance of some interest, uplift, or reform—better speech week, music week, children's book week, Red Cross week, and the like. Some years ago publishers who are interested in selling books and certain organizations that are interested in religion joined in recommending the keeping of religious book week.

In spite of the competition of all the other weeks, philanthropic, cultural, political, and hygienic, this one gained rather wide recognition. The time chosen was in the spring when, with the approach of Easter, the minds even of people who are only moderately religious are sensitized to religious impressions more than at other seasons, and when, as at Christmas time, many who do not consider themselves religious at all are conscious of a dim, half wistful wish that they were.

But a week was too short a time. What was needed was not a mere annual staccato note of religion, but opportunity to develop an attitude and a mood. So religious book week was developed into religious book season—the period before Easter when, of all seasons in the year, the hearts and minds of most people are most accessible to religious ideas. So this is not only Lent; it is also religious book season.

But what is a religious book? The answer is not easy. If religion had to do only with doctrines and with the history and workings of the church, it would be easy to form a clear-cut idea of what constitutes a religious book. But religion is not a separate technical subject, like thermo-dynamics or physiological chemistry?

The publishers' announcements list certain books as religious, and the libraries classify certain books under the head of religion. The book trade journals print statistics month by month and annual summaries showing the number of books published of the various classes. Naturally, fiction nearly always heads the list. In fact, it has failed to do so for only three years out of the last forty-seven. Religious books oftener than not occupy the second place. During the last twenty years, a period which is sometimes spoken of cynically as the age of irreligion, there has been a notable increase both in the number of religious titles and in the total number of volumes of religious literature sold. Since the beginning of this century the number of religious books published annually in the United States has averaged 715 titles. For the last year the number was 933.

Viewing the figures for the last twenty years, it appears that in thirteen of those years the number of religious books has been second only to the number of books of fiction. In six years religion has occupied third place. In only one year, 1916, fallen as low as fourth place.

These figures are, I think, rather surprising. They surprised me, although I am dealing constantly with religious books and with the kind of people who read them. What does it all mean? Obviously it means that people are interested in religion. It means also that religious books are being produced which meet the specific needs and tastes of the time. People may be weary of the theological controversies of bygone ages, and impatient of the tweedledum and tweedledee type of religious disputations on topics about which writers know little and readers care less, but they are tremendously and perennially interested in the problems which those old theologies undertook to solve, for they represent the most vital and universal concerns of men. When John Citizen finds a book that is theological, in the sense of dealing with the eternal questions in which he is deeply concerned but which he does not know how to talk about, and is also human in its style and concrete in its treatment, and that pays him the compliment of appealing to his own reason and experience, he buys that book and tells his friends about it.

The most important and numerous groups of specifically religious books are books about Jesus, books about the Bible, books which aim to present a general view of religion in terms which are consistent with a modern world view, and books about conduct. Every one of these is a live topic, and each of these groups contains books which have attained wide popularity.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the stream of new religious books is the number of them that deal directly with the personality and teaching of Jesus. It is literally true that there is never a week without a new one, and a dozen a month would be a fair average. Say what you will about the insoluble mystery of that commanding personality, or say that there is no mystery at all, the fact is that it continues to be the most interesting as well as the most commanding figure in history. Many of these books are written by persons who have little or no technical training in theology and make their appeal to those who are not ecclesiastically minded. Some of them exhibit the ignorance as well as the enthusiasm of the amateur. But even so, it will be a sorry day when the experts get a corner on religion.

Books about the Bible are scarcely less numerous. They run the gamut from homiletical commentaries designed to give first aid to lazy preachers or scholarly assistance to industrious ones to popular summaries designed to dispell some fraction of the too common ignorance of that volume which, whatever else it may be, is more nearly the basis of our common culture than any other single body of literature.

Books intended to present a religious view of the world in terms consistent with contemporary thought present a wide variety. Some of them attempt to prove that there is no conflict between the new science and the old faith. Some try to prove that the new science is all wrong because it conflicts with the old faith. More undertake a reconstruction of belief by separating the kernel of Christianity from its husk of traditional theology and restating it in modern terms. Naturally, what some consider the husk others consider part of the kernel, so what is to some a restatement is to others an abandonment of Christianity.

Books about conduct deal, for the most part, with social problems, insist that Christian righteousness does not exhaust itself in abstinence from the traditional individual sins, and stress the fact that practical Christianity consists largely in intelligent goodwill expressing itself in social attitudes and activities.

These last two groups merge into the still wider one of books which are not specifically or technically religious, but are religious in spirit and effect. They are religious books, but not books about religion. If it is a valid saying that "By their fruits shall you know them," then the test of the religious quality of a book is how one feels and acts after reading it. If it arouses hatred and strife, encourages selfish complacency, teaches small views of God and mean estimates of men, it is an irreligious book, no matter what its subject matter. A book may deal with stars or star fish, with international or domestic relations, with politics or poetry, but if it warms the heart to generous impulses, stimulates the will to brave deeds, promotes intelligent goodwill, clarifies thinking about man as a citizen of God's world and about men as comrades in the great task of making it a better world, it is a religious book. That is the kind of books to read in this Lenten religious book season.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

WHAT REALLY CAUSED WASHINGTON'S DEATH.

GEORGE WASHINGTON died of œdema of the larynx. He was not bled to death. He did not have diphtheria or pneumonia. His physicians had a very good idea of what his trouble was. The name which they gave his disease was that by which œdema of the larynx was known in that day. The treatment they gave him was the treatment which was accepted as right in that day.

If a man of Washington's age were to be suddenly and violently attacked with this same disorder today—were to be within twenty-four hours of death if treatment did not avert that termination—there is more than an even chance that present day treatment would not save him. All of the above opinions except the last are taken from a scholarly report on the illness and death of Washington made to the Virginia Medical society at Norfolk.

The Washingtons were a short lived family. His mother lived to be 83, but his father died at 49. The average age at death of his brothers and sisters was 35.

George was 6 feet 3½ inches tall, broad shouldered and well developed, especially as to limbs. His chest development was not good. It is thought that he had had measles in childhood. At 19 he had smallpox. Among the illnesses of his mature life are pleurisy, pneumonia, dysentery, malaria, and carbuncle. His minor disorders were cavities in the teeth, bad teeth generally, and deafness. He appears to have been especially prone to colds and other infections of his respiratory apparatus. Had he not lived the outdoor life of a farmer, fox hunter, surveyor, and soldier in the field, he might have followed his brother into consumption.

In the last year of his life he had lost vigor in a marked degree. On Dec. 12 he spent the day riding around the farm, in spite of the snow, hail, and rain. When he came in his neck was wet and snow hung upon his hair. He came to dinner without drying his neck or changing his clothing. On Dec. 13 he had a cold and sore throat, but in the afternoon he again went out on the farm. That night he was hoarse and his throat was sore, but he read, and sometimes read aloud. At 3 o'clock in the morning he had a chill and fever, could scarcely speak, and breathed with difficulty. He would not send for a physician. The overseer bled him about breakfast time. The first physician arrived about 9 in the morning.

He died about 10:30 that night, a little less than twenty hours after the serious onset of the illness.

Dr. Wells considers all of the symptoms as given by the attending physicians and as found in lay writings dealing with Washington's death. He rules out both consumption and pneumonia with ease. The symptoms were not those of diphtheria, and there is no history of that disease in the vicinity just before or just after Washington's death. Quinsy was ruled out because the symptoms did not fit. Ordinary acute laryngitis was excluded.

Inflammatory œdema of the larynx, an infection which resulted from a bad cold caused by exposure, was the cause of death. The physicians gave cynanche trachealis as the cause of death. That term, now obsolete, was used in that day for inflammatory œdema of the larynx. The authorities of that day were the great Edinburgh leaders of medicine. These men wrote of the diagnosis and treatment of cynanche trachealis, and their text was plainly followed by Washington's physicians.

Were Washington being treated today for this disorder he would have had a tube put into his throat, through which he might breathe while he was fighting his infection down. But maybe not even that would suffice. The record shows that in less than eight hours after he became violently sick he was satisfied he would die and made his will and otherwise prepared for the end.

Perhaps the outstanding lesson for us is that George Washington died from the indirect effects of a bad cold due to exposure to snow, hail, and rain.

YOU CAN OPERATE RAY MACHINE.

D. R. J. writes: 1. There are no ultra-violet light machines in this village. Is it practical for a layman to operate one?

2. Where can we get it?

3. What is your opinion about the drinking of artificially softened water for babies? For their elders?

REPLY:

1. Yes.

2. Call on the several dealers and agents in nearby cities.

3. It is all right for both. However, there is no great advantage to the consumer. The great advantage of soft water accrues to the ladies who wash their hair, those who wash clothing, and to the engineers who operate steam plants.

ON THE WING.

Chicago, March 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a lease on an apartment which reads from May 1, 1927, to April 30, 1928. Would my wages be garnisheed if I should move before May 1, 1927? I moved into the apartment on Feb. 1. L. M.

Not as far as this lease is concerned but it seems probable that additional facts such as your being now in possession are involved. If you are in possession, we cannot advise as to the terms without knowing the circumstances under which you are in possession.

WHEN BANKS FAIL.

Elgin, Ill., March 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Please advise me to what extent a depositor is protected in a state bank. 2. Should the bank be closed, what can depositors do to get their money? R. C.

1. A complete answer to so general a question would be of undue length. One of the forms of protection not enjoyed by creditors of ordinary debtors is that the stockholders of the bank are liable not only to complete the paying up of their original stock subscriptions but to pay an additional equal amount.

2. Ordinarily, all that is required is to file a claim with the receiver.

SIGNS ON MARQUETTE ROAD.

Chicago, March 13. — [Friend of the People.]—I live near Marquette road and every day and night motorists stop here and ask what street they are on, as there are no street signs on Marquette road west of Ashland avenue. There are many strangers from highway travel come along this road and it should be labeled. MRS. O.

Report is made by our sign division that street signs have been erected along Marquette road at the following streets:

Oakley, Hamilton, Winchester, Lincoln, Honore, Wood, Hermitage, Paulina, Marshfield, Ashland, Western, Washtenaw, and Fairfield avenues.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 27, 1862.

WINCHESTER.—We have buried all the rebel dead that have been brought to town from the battlefield of last Sunday. Eighty-five were buried on the battlefield and 123 on the roadside between here and Strasburg. It is learned that Gen. Joseph E. Johnston was to have joined Gen. Jackson at Winchester and their combined forces would have been between 25,000 and 30,000. However, Johnston sent word he could not arrive until later, and Gen. Jackson, believing that nearly all Gen. Banks' troops had left, hazarded an attack alone, with the result that he met disaster. Gen. Banks is pressing on after the retreating rebels.

WASHINGTON.—Carl Schurz was nominated to be a brigadier general. No list of the casualties at the battle of Winchester has yet been received.

EDITORIAL.—The siege of Island No. 10 has now continued thirteen days, and yet the victory is not ours, nor can we see that it draws nearer. The rebels have not abandoned any other portion of their works than what lay within our long range, and the firing almost ceases from the conviction that it is powder thrown away. Our fleet have found a worse enemy than rebel batteries in the ugly current of the river. But for this they might, as at Fort Henry, come to close quarters and a quick result. It is given out, therefore, that the experience of the last two weeks has demonstrated the necessity of new tactics, and with the adoption of these the work will soon be over.

NEW YORK.—The steamer Columbia from Havana arrived. It brought a report that Porter's mortar fleet had passed the southwest pass and entered the Mississippi river from the gulf.

WASHINGTON.—The rebel steamer Nashville ran the blockade at Beaufort, N. C. It came out of a channel which the pilots had pronounced too shallow, in a very dark night, showing no lights.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 27, 1902.

NEW YORK. — Lawyer Albert T. Patrick, after a trial lasting nine weeks, was found guilty by a jury of the murder of Millionaire William Marsh Rice on Sept. 23, 1900. The jury was out less than two hours.

CAPE TOWN.—Cecil Rhodes died after a long illness. His death is considered a calamity for South Africa. He was born in 1853 and came to South Africa thirty years ago in search of health, after English doctors had given him up. He secured a diamond claim which he dug himself. With his savings he bought others until gradually he became the wealthiest and most powerful man in the country. He engineered movements for land acquisitions by Great Britain and their development which gave him the title of "Empire Builder." His dream was British control of a line from Cairo to the Cape.

CHICAGO.—The Splan horse sale at the Coliseum closed after a banner session in which the trotter Roy M., record 2:14½ over a half mile track, was sold to G. H. Ketcham for $6,250.

CHICAGO.—Miss Madge Emery of Monon, Ind., and William Lane, son of Cornelius Lane, owner of a large apartment building at 61st street and Princeton avenue, eloped to Wheaton. They found the Rev. F. W. Farnum was the only minister in town, and he was at the station to take a train to Chicago. He married them in the waiting room of the station, and caught the rear coach as his train was pulling out.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 27, 1917.

WAR STEPS.—President Wilson authorized an increase in the enlisted strength of the marine corps to 17,400 men. The navy department began a campaign for 25,000 men to raise the enlisted strength to a war basis of 87,000. The President called more militia into the federal service from eighteen central states. Secretary of State Lansing told Democratic leaders of the house in a conference that it is the wish of the President that congress pass a resolution declaring a state of war exists with Germany, in preference to making a straightout declaration of war, because it will place the responsibility for aggression on Germany.

NEW YORK.—Pacifists plan to bombard Washington with protests against war when congress convenes on April 2, the Emergency Peace federation announced.

CHICAGO.—This city was stirred by the marching of troops as the First regiment, Illinois National Guard, commanded by Col. Joseph B. Sanborn, hurried to its armory in Michigan avenue in response to the call of the President. When he greeted his hardened men of the border service Col. Sanborn told them he had wound up his business and was ready for a three years' campaign.

LONDON.—Spirited and successful French attacks near Coucy and above Soissons and the repulse of German counter attacks on the new French positions between Essigney and Bensy, south of St. Quentin, marked the day in the battle which has become general along the "Hindenburg line."

THE COMMUTER'S VOTE.

Lake Forest, Ill., March 18.—Why may not business residents of Chicago, or any large city, vote in the city elections? Why is the business property owner in the city, who happens to live in one of its suburbs, but who maintains no city residence, entitled to no representation in the governing bodies of the city? How many thousands of suburbanites are not resident during the greater part of their active existence in the offices and stores of the city? Are their destinies not controlled by the governing bodies of the city? Do they not own or pay rent for housings for their business enterprises just as others own or pay rent for housings for their domestic establishments? And to which of these ownership and rental classifications (business or residential) must go the distinction of representing the greater taxable valuation?

Having pondered these questions diligently, the conclusion presents itself: That strict justice and adherence to the principle voiced and fought for by our revolutionary forbears demands the business addresses as well as home or residence addresses be deemed admissible (except where duplication of votes would result) in qualifying for the privilege of suffrage in the city elections.

FILM BEHAVIOR.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 9.—The strange antics of grown up people on the screen has always been somewhat of a mystery to me. I confess my inability to understand how they get that way. The pictures are supposed to represent life, we are told, yet I have never seen any one act like that unless he were on his way to an insane asylum. Frequently you will see country people shown on a visit to the city. Not having the slightest notion of how to conduct themselves, they certainly get into some very embarrassing predicaments. For one thing, they know nothing whatever about table manners. To them a fork is a strange instrument which no member of the party has ever seen before. They pass the thing around and stare at it in wonder and awe.

Now, I've lived in the country quite a bit, and I can truthfully say that there are people living out in the rural districts who actually know how to eat with a fork. What's more, country people do not tie napkins around their necks, nor do they habitually pour coffee into a saucer and blow at it like an animated pair of bellows. Farmers and ranchmen do not wear chin whiskers to any noticeable extent, yet no movie farmer would think of appearing before the camera minus his chin whiskers and without a couple of straws in his mouth.

If movie directors would permit their people to act more like normal human beings, and less like lunatics, I believe the public would appreciate it. Isn't the success of children on the screen due to the fact that they insist on acting in a natural manner? Anyway, they are the only real people in movieland, according to my notion. JAS. SHINE.

GRATITUDE.

Chicago, March 15.—I wish to sing a paean of praise to a member of the great TRIBUNE aggregation, who, I think deserves recognition as a bright and shining example of business acumen and courtesy. He did me a great service recently in helping me get back some papers I had had sent through a blind ad. He—I do not know his name—is the manager of the classified and sits at a desk inside the counter at Dearborn and Madison, catty-corner from the big good natured policeman.

ALFRED GORDON.

WOMAN'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE ARTS AND SCIENCES.

Chicago, March 12.—Benito Mussolini, the duce of Italy, is credited with recently having made the statement in an interview that "no woman has done anything worth while in the arts, that the fair sex should not be taken seriously and after all what was a woman but a pleasant parenthesis in life?"

This is not at all according to fact and shows a lack of knowledge of the creative genius of women in the arts. In ancient Greece, Sapho proved the power of her poetry. In the annals of Roman art, Laya, who lived about a century before the Christian era, is important. She is honored as the original painter of miniatures. In Rome, Florence, Bologna, Venice and other Italian cities there were in the seventeenth century many women who made enviable reputation as artists, some of whom were also known for their literary and musical attainments.

At later periods in the fine arts in Europe are the names of Rosa Bonheur and Madam Le Brun. Science has contributed Madam Curie. The stage added a notable galaxy of stars with Sarah Bernhardt, Ellen Terry, and Eleonora Duse, the Italian actress. Music had as world famous women composers Clara Schumann, Fanny Hensel, Cecile Chaminade. England furnished celebrated women writers with Fanny Burney, Jane Austen, Charlotte Bronte and George Eliot, known as the "great four." In the United States the list of women artists, women composers, women musicians, and women writers who have achieved reputation and fame is formidable evidence of woman's talent in the arts. HARRY EDWARD FERTIG,

SUBWAYS IN POLITICS.

Chicago, Ill., March 18.—In the political campaign that is now in progress there is a remarkable absence of promises for the construction of a system of subways. The memory of the writer runs back some fifteen or sixteen years when he first came to Chicago. The city was then in the midst of another campaign for the election of a mayor. In that contest the foremost pledge of both candidates if elected, was the immediate commencement and early completion of a subway system. And every succeeding election has given the subject more or less attention. Can it be possible that Chicago has finally outgrown the need of subways? LEO BENJAMIN.

THOMPSON'S RECEPTION.

Chicago, March 17.—The mild applause given Thompson at Arcadia hall Wednesday evening showed, according to you, a lack of the enthusiasm of former years. I wish to state that you are entirely wrong. If the enthusiastic ovation given patriotic William Hale Thompson at his entrance in the hall for five minutes duration does not show enough appreciative spirit for his candidacy, it is only that we came to hear what he had to tell us, and not ourselves with prolonged unnecessary useless howling.

If 6,000 within the hall and 2,000 or more without, blocking street car traffic, show any lack of enthusiasm, I fail to see it. ELMER F. SMITH.

SPANISH DINING ROOM GROUP

Buffet, Table, 1 Armchair and 5 Side Chairs—$335

Here is a striking example of a Spanish design. The stretchers and the hand carved chair backs are decidedly individual and unlike furniture of any other period. The decorative doors of the buffet, like the chairs, are carved in a characteristic motif. Considerable features of convenience are the two patented folding leaves, concealed in the 42x60-inch top (7 ft. extension) and the velour lined silver tray in top buffet drawer. The oversized tapestry covered chair seats, trimmed with brass nails, give a smartness in this group so much wanted in furniture of today.

Massmeeting of 5,000 indignant citizens protests against the spoils system in the public schools under Thompson's rule.

The shortage of seats for public school children increases at the rate of 5,000 a year under Thompson.

The president, vice president, and business manager of Thompson's board of education, and others, indicted for corrupt dealing with school funds.

The head of Thompson's department of gas and electricity indicted for wholesale thieving in his department.

Bither, attorney for Thompson's board of education, indicted for corrupt dealing in school lands.

Resignation of all members of Thompson's board of education demanded June 6, 1922. [End.]

The back cover of the pamphlet carries the appeal: "Help roll up one million votes on election day, Tuesday, April 5!"

ROBERTSON RAPS THOMPSON NOTE "HARMONY FIRST"

Dr. John Dill Robertson, the "smash crime rings" independent candidate for mayor, whose running mate for city treasurer, Coroner O. Wolff, shied off the ticket and bolted to Thompson, in speeches last night blistered the harmony movement which has taken Brundageites, Litsingerites, Deneenites and the coroner into the Thompson camp. At four meetings, the doctor said:

"William Hale Thompson the 'straw' candidate of the notorious Bob Crowe has pledged himself to open 15,000 vice dens if elected mayor. To make the situation all the more horrible he has pledged himself to fire any policeman crossing the threshold of any place of business thereby pledging immunity to the dive keepers.

"Is it fear of State's Attorney Bob Crowe, Thompson's political boss, which leads them to thus debase themselves?

"Mr. Thompson has said that the more political harmony there is 'the more there is to divide.'

"Is it the greed for a division by Mr. Thompson of whatever he has reference to that causes these tin horns to crawl in bed with the man who called them liars and skunks?"

1,000,000 New South Wales Citizens Greet Son of King

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 26.—The duke and duchess of York arrived at Sydney today. The royal party was received by the governor general, state governor and federal and state ministers. The procession through four and a half miles of the city's streets was marked by enthusiastic displays of loyalty. Ten thousand soldiers and 5,000 Boy Scouts lined the route. It is estimated that the royal procession was viewed by 1,000,000 people.

JERITZA, GARDEN AND MISS PINCHOT SAIL FOR EUROPEAN ROLES

New York, March 26.—[Special.]—Sailing on the Olympia this morning were Marie Jeritza, Metropolitan opera soprano; Mary Garden of the Chicago Opera company, Maxine Elliott, and Rosamond Pinchot, niece of the former governor of Pennsylvania, who played the rôle of the nun in "The Miracle."

Mme. Jeritza explained that after a rest in Italy she would fill a summer engagement in London. She will attend the Salsburg festival in Germany before returning to America for the beginning of the next opera season.

While abroad Mary Garden will appear in a production of "The Resurrection" in Paris. She will be back in time for the opening of the fall season of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

Miss Pinchot will appear in a production of "The Miracle" in Germany in the same rôle which she portrayed here, it was learned.

EVOLUTION OF U.S. DANCE GIVEN AT ARMY, NAVY BALL

Several hundred uniformed members of the Army and Navy club and their ladies danced at the club's seventeenth annual Army and Navy ball last night in the Congress hotel. The grand march and reception began at 9 o'clock and was followed at midnight by a buffet supper and a pageant of dances.

The pageant represented the evolution of the American dance. Miss Virginian Richey began the program with an Indian dance of 1620. Miss Margaret Quan, Miss Corinne McVoy, Miss Mary Gardner, Houston Gray, Geoffrey Garstin, and Howard Wolff danced a Virginia reel for 1776, and Miss Dorothy Reay and Bonner Miller danced a polka. Miss Edna Shepard and Gilmer Black did a Merry Widow waltz, and Miss Eileen McGuire and Bonner Miller did a Black Bottom for modern times.

The ballroom was decked in many flags and drapes of red, white and blue.

Two Chicagoans Hurt in Indianapolis Trolley Crash

Indianapolis, Ind., March 26.—(AP)—The Rev. E. S. Sites, faculty member of the University of Chicago, and William M. Nekum, 47, also of Chicago, were among twenty-four passengers slightly hurt in an interurban accident near here tonight. The interurban car, running between Indianapolis and Cincinnati, was on a siding when the northbound car lost its trolley. The southbound car struck it.

Mrs. Charles Peach, Mother of Rep. Fred Britten, Dead

San Francisco, Cal., March 26.—(AP)—Mrs. Charles Peach, mother of Congressman Fred Britten of Illinois, died here tonight. She has resided here since 1876. She is survived by her second husband, Charles Peach, her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Britten and Congressman Britten, who resides in Chicago.

JAMES REA, FOUR TIMES ALDERMAN, IS FOUND DEAD

James Rea, former Republican alderman from the old 32d ward, and a Robertson committeeman of the 18th ward in the present mayoralty contest, was found dead yesterday in his apartment at the Norwood hotel, 6400 Normal avenue. Mr. Rea was 67 years old, a native of Ireland, who came to Chicago from Canada in 1879.

JAMES REA.

The body of Rea was found slumped in a chair by his wife, who has been absent from the apartment for a short time. Mr. Rea had been in ill health for about a year.

Mr. Rea served four terms in the city council from the old 32d ward, which embraced a considerable section of the Englewood district. He was first elected in 1909, defeating J. J. Kelly. For ten years he served as a clerk for the board of review and in the office of the Superior court clerk.

In addition, Mr. Rae was assistant director of labor of Illinois.

Besides his widow, Mr. Rea is survived by a son, Edward J. Rea. Funeral arrangements were not completed last night.

File $332,880 Flood Suits Against Sanitary District

Rushville, Ill., May 26.—(AP)—Twenty-nine new suits asking a total of $332,880 damages against the Chicago sanitary district, resulting from the flood of April, 1922, had been filed in Circuit court here today. The district's possible liability for damages from the flood expires April 16, when the statute of limitations becomes effective, and many new cases are expected before that date. In two cases substantial damages have been awarded.

Wm. E. Lewis, Pioneer, Taken by Death at 67

William E. Lewis, Illinois and Iowa pioneer, died yesterday in his home at 3826 Greenview avenue. Mr. Lewis was 67 years old, and was for a number of years associated in business with his son, Harold C. Lewis, president of the Coyne Electrical school, 1300 West Harrison street. Besides his son he is survived by a widow, Mrs. Hattie V. Lewis, and two daughters, Mrs. Marion Pslugel and Mrs. Ernest Jacobson.

Many Have Tried It, and Failed—

Why is it that "Hursen" funerals have successfully defied competition through these many years? Why is it that "Hursen's" is the largest and greatest funeral organization in America today? Why is it that its growth continues so persistently as time passes?

There are good reasons for the continued success of any business. Many have tried to fathom these reasons. They set about to imitate them—and failed!

They have seen "Hursen" massiveness without. They have seen "Hursen" elegance within. They have seen art exposed in exquisite taste. They have seen manner and method carried to the sublime. They have seen equipment unmatched in America for beauty and comfort. They have seen, from day to day, the great heart of Chicago, in homage, at "Hursen" funerals.

But there is something beyond these things that they have not seen, because it cannot be seen. It can only be felt. Only the heart can feel it. The thousands of mourning families who have attended "Hursen" funerals have felt this invisible thing. Go to them and learn what it is that makes "Hursen" funerals the sweetest final tribute possible!

ARMOUR GRAIN HEAD DENIES FRAUD CHARGES

State Solons Find Record of Deals Missing.

Emphatic denial was made yesterday that the Armour Grain company had used bootleg and bucketshop methods in its grain transactions at elevator "C" during 1923.

At the same time state officials charged with the duty of investigating grain marketing conditions in Chicago were given what was regarded as corroboration of the charges against that company made on Friday by Harry C. Mallory during a hearing at the Fort Dearborn Athletic club.

Can't Find 1923 Records.

Representatives of the state's legislature's commission called at elevator "C" yesterday and a search was made for the records of 1923 transactions. A little later Superintendent Ike Weeks called the downtown office of the Armour Grain company and said:

"We have all the records from 1909 to 1926 except the shipping records of 1923 which are missing."

Mallory, in his testimony, said he had seen George Thompson, then general superintendent of the Armour Grain company, throw those records into a stove.

Other former employés of that company are said to have corroborated other parts of Mallory's testimony.

Denies Mallory Testimony.

John Kellogg, president of the Armour Grain company, yesterday, however, issued a statement saying:

"I have read the testimony of Harry C. Mallory before the Illinois legislative investigating committee and I brand the charges he makes as absolutely false and state the Armour Grain company has not committed any illegal or improper practices in the operations of its elevators.

"I am going to ask of the Board of Trade of the city of Chicago to make a full investigation of the charges and I will also appear before the legislative committee at its next meeting and ask to be heard and present conclusive evidence in contradiction of his statements.

"Mallory, about three years ago, came in and tried to intimidate us by threats of making these charges public through the newspapers. We denounced his accusations as being, to his knowledge, false at the time they were made and told him to proceed as he saw fit and ordered him out of the office.

"Subsequently we did not hear anything from Mallory until about August, 1926, when he attempted by a renewal of these charges and threats to compel us to reëmploy him, but his overtures were declined."

This is the first statement to come from any one now connected with the Armour Grain company since publication of the decision of Edward Eagle Brown as arbitrator. Mr. Brown, a vice president of the First National bank, held that the Armour Grain company had, by a system of cheating, defrauded the Grain Marketing company, a combination of farmers and other elevators, to such an extent that Mr. Brown ordered the Armour concern to make restitution of nearly $3,000,000. George E. Marcy, chairman of the board and former president of the Armour Grain company, resigned subsequent to the Brown report.

Mr. Kellogg's reference to an investigation he will ask the Board of Trade to make, drew this comment from Attorney Benjamin F. Goldstein, special counsel for the legislative committee:

"The board of trade already is conducting a private hearing of all the charges made against the Armour Grain company, as well as complaints against operators of other public warehouses. Mallory's testimony will give it a new inquiry to follow.

Says Board Failed to Act.

"When complaint was made to the Board of Trade against the Armour Grain company a few years ago, nothing was done about it. It was common knowledge at that time that Mr. Marcy, chairman of the board of directors of the Armour Grain company had considerable influence in the choosing of directors of the Board of Trade and that several of them were executing commissions for the Armours."

In the report of Mr. Brown as arbitrator of the Armour-Grain Marketing dispute, he said:

"The stock book of the Santa Fe elevator mysteriously disappeared before the beginning of this arbitration, although it was a permanent record and supposed to be kept a number of years, and stock books preceding it and following it were on hand in their proper places."

Other Records Missing.

It was also asserted that due to a fire, there were no available books showing records of incoming and outgoing Armour grain at the Northwestern elevator.

The discovery that—as Mallory had said— the 1923 records of the Armour elevator "C" were missing was regarded as more than a coincidence last night by the state investigators.

President John A. Bunnell of the Chicago Board of Trade declared that the statements made by Mallory should not be taken seriously by grain or business men.

"We expect to have a hearing later, and I feel sure that we can place the position that the grain trade is in before the public in a manner that will be thoroughly understood, and that the showing will be entirely different from what has appeared so far."

Elaborates His Charges.

Mallory had testified that fifty per cent of the grain transaction at elevator "C" in 1923 were paper—that is that where the Armour Grain company had made a sale of grain on the Board of Trade it entered a fake transaction on its books and issued a warehouse receipt to the purchaser.

The Board of Trade weighmasters and the state grain inspectors were parties to those deceptions, Mallory said, those Board of Trade men actually permitting them and the state inspector allowing himself to be handed samples of grain that came from a prearranged sample box instead of from the cars or boats supposed to have contained the grain.

Power of Warehouse Receipts.

"If proved the seriousness of these paper transactions is even greater than the fraud charged in the Rosenbaum Grain company vs. Armour Grain company case, heard by Edward E. Brown as arbitrator," Attorney Goldstein, for the legislative committee, said, "because where warehouse receipts are issued for a higher grade of grain than is actually deposited the warehouse receipts are fraudulent when used as collateral or sold on the market.

"The extent to which warehouse receipts are used as collateral in the banks of Chicago is seen in the fact that at the time the Armour Grain company went into the Grain Marketing company it owed banks on warehouse receipts $37,000,000, and the Rosenbaum company owed $20,000,000 to banks on warehouse receipts.

"In finding that the Armour company had defrauded the Grain Marketing company to the extent of nearly $3,000,000, Edward E. Brown mentioned that the Grain Marketing company at one time owed more than $50,000,000.

Would Have Wide Effect.

"The disclosures of Friday are more important than the private dispute between the Armour company and the Rosenbaum company, because banks and credit and the Board of Trade are involved.

"Every day there is posted the amount of visible supply of grain in the United States, taken from the records of class "A" warehouses like the Armour Grain company's.

"If fake grades of grain are listed and the totals compiled it gives a fraudulent picture of the visible grain supply by grades so that the price, as far as farmers and buyers are concerned, is affected.

"The present warehouse laws for the storing and handling of grain were passed soon after the constitution of 1870. Since 1895 abuses have arisen from time to time which have indicated that the legislative machinery is inadequate. Persistent efforts have been made to force the Board of Trade to revise its rules, but it has required such an exposé as this to make the Board of Trade wake up."

Figures were cited showing the magnitude of the business under investigation by the committee, which is expected to recommend changes in the laws pertaining to the grain industry. The following is quoted from the last report of the federal trade commission:

"The more adequate recent statistics confirm the correctness of the estimate published in volume 5, which indicated 20,000,000,000 bushels a year as a high figure sometime reached by the Chicago Board of Trade and shows that about 56 per cent of all the grain future trading in the United States is done on this one exchange [the Chicago Board of Trade]."

And from the same authority this is cited:

"The direct cost of future trading by way of commissions and other expenses incurred by those who use the market [the Board of Trade] has amounted recently, it is estimated, to from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 a year. The amount varies with the volume of trading."

Has Double Function.

In a further analysis of the import of the testimony given by Mallory, the following statement was issued:

"These abuses [referring to those enumerated by Mallory] arise from the fact that the owner of the warehouse storing public grain, at the same time stores his own grain under the same roof and controls the distribution and handling of said grain in the warehouse.

"The fraud disclosed not only is in direct violation of the criminal code, with reference to the issuance of fraudulent warehouse receipts, but shows the wisdom of the Supreme court which said:

"'It would be idle to expect a warehouseman to perform his duty to the public as an impartial holder of grain of the different proprietors if he is permitted to occupy a position where his self interest is at variance with his duty,' and 'That public policy required that a trustee may not put himself in a place in which to be honest must be a strain on him.'"

Touches Banks and Credit.

The statement then discusses the subject of the effect of false warehouse receipts on banks and upon credit, and the effect on prices of untrue listing of the amount of visible grain. Then it adds as "evils and dangers" the following:

"Section 25 of the Warehouse act provides that any warehouseman issuing a receipt fraudulent in its character either as to the quantity, quality or inspected grade of grain, is guilty of a crime punishable in the penitentiary by a sentence of from one to ten years. The issuing of a warehouse receipt after a paper transfer is in direct violation of this section.

"Section 6 provides that all grain received in the regular bin shall be inspected by a duly authorized grain inspector. The paper transfer violates that provision.

"Section 17 provides that it shall be unlawful for any warehouseman to tamper with grain with a view to securing a profit to himself or any other person. The paper transaction violates that provision.

"Section 124 of the criminal code provides that the issuing of a fraudulent receipt shall be a crime. A warehouse receipt issued pursuant to a paper transfer is in direct violation of this provision of the criminal code."

ESTIMATES WEALTH OF AMERICA IN 1925 AT $355,300,000,000

New York, March 26.—(AP)—The national wealth of the United States amounted to $355,300,000,000 in 1925, according to the estimate of the national industrial conference board, made public today. The last estimate made was the census estimate of 1922, when it was calculated at $320,080,000,000. In 1912 the census estimate of the national wealth was $186,030,000,000.

In terms of 1913 purchasing power of the dollar, the board estimates the national wealth at $188,000,000,000 in 1912 and at $223,090,000,000 in 1925. The board pointed out that the nominal increase in wealth of 90.7 per cent during the thirteen year period thus becomes a real increase of 19.1 per cent, or almost one-fifth.

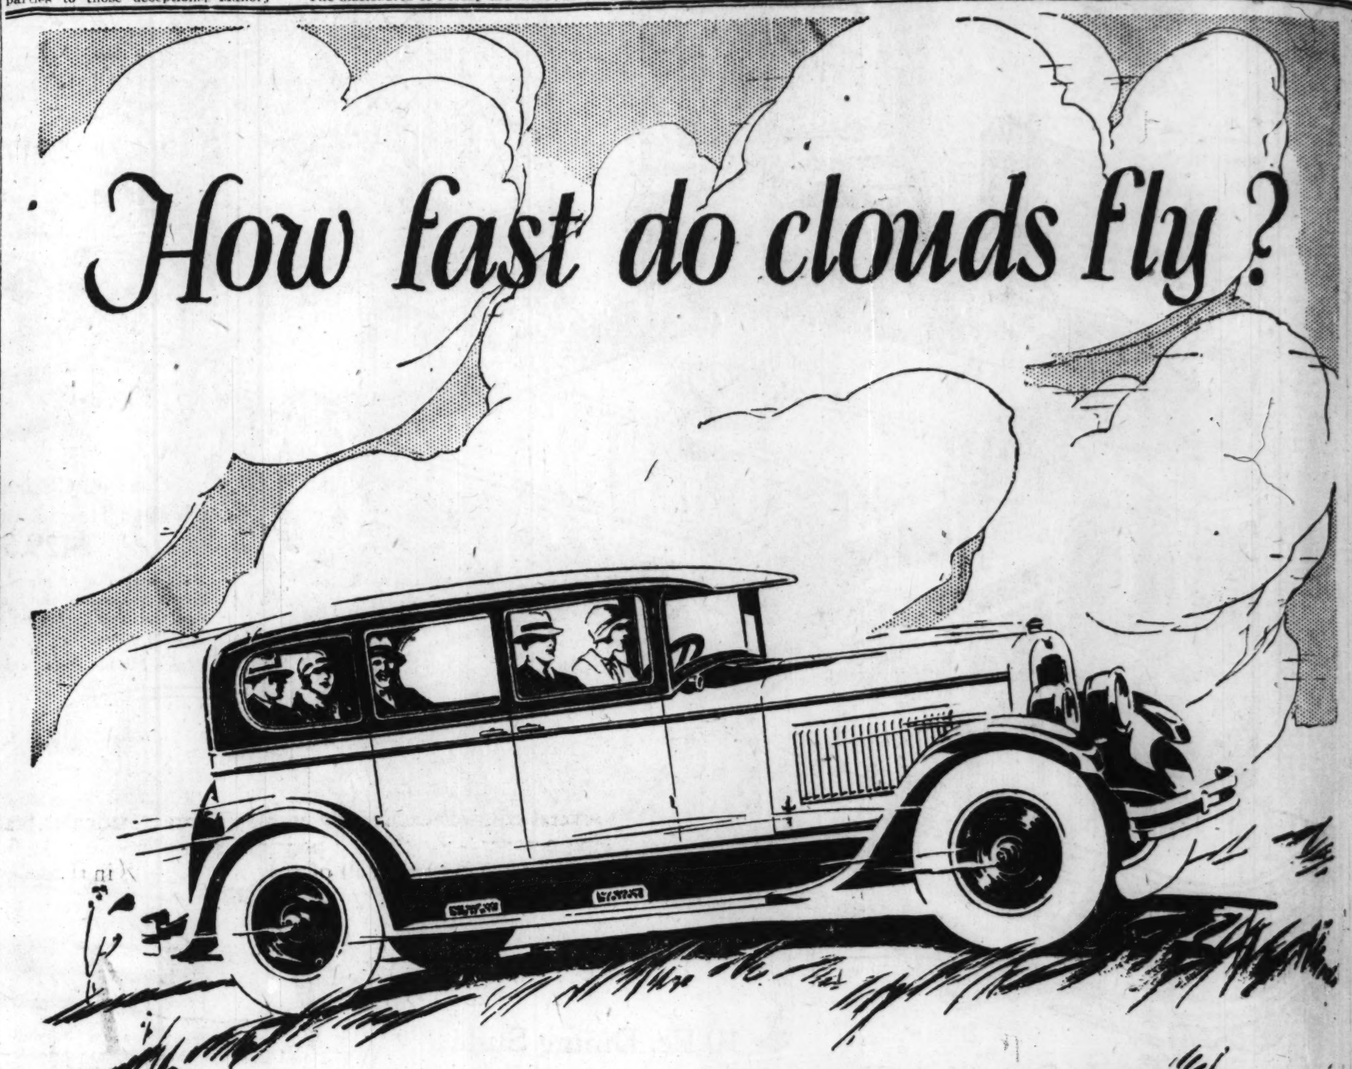
How fast do clouds fly?



CLOUDS fly as fast as 150 miles per hour. Of course the Reo Flying Cloud won't fly that fast—nor will all clouds.

But as an editor of Motor says, in the January issue:

"There is enough gravel on these roads (in Michigan) to give them a sort of 'ball-bearing surface' and the writer being somewhat conservative believes that forty miles per hour is about right for such roads.

"But to the writer's surprise it was really an effort to hold this car below fifty miles per hour, so smoothly and quietly did it run. Several times he slowed it down to forty, but invariably he was soon back up to fifty or sixty. Certainly there could be no more convincing commentary on the sweetness with which this car runs.

"There was no convenient opportunity to test its maximum speed, but considering the ease with which it reaches sixty or sixty-five its top speed must be all that could be desired."

We know what Reo Flying Clouds have done in many hands. But what its top speed will be in your hands on your roads, only you can prove by trying one out. Then the honest speedometer of the Flying Cloud will translate into miles per hour the speed at which you are traveling. And you'll be surprised, not only at how very fast you are going, but how very comfortably you are riding at that great speed.

Be sure to try one out

Delicious Foods
served in the Dining Cars of the World's Greatest Railroads are made with the world's greatest baking powder—and how tempting they are! How you enjoy them!

There would be nothing unusual in a statement that one or even several railroads exclusively employed some particular brand of baking powder—but there is positive proof of merit and of superiority in the fact that nearly all of the great railroads in this country [many of them listed in this announcement] use

CALUMET
THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

Leading railroads, like all discriminating housewives, find Calumet absolutely reliable. It can always be depended upon to produce the best results. That's why Calumet is always used where utmost skill and care are exercised in preparing the finest and most palatable of foods.

Ask for Calumet. Eliminate failure. Stop waste. Save time and money.

Contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by U. S. Food Authorities.

Costs less than one cent per baking, and makes baking easier because it is double acting. Contains two leavening units—one begins to work when the dough is mixed, the other waits for the heat of the oven, then both units work together.

Try This Famous Calumet Muffin Recipe

2 cups sifted flour
2 level teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder
½ tablespoon sugar
½ level teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 cup sweet milk
2 tablespoons shortening

Sift together thoroughly flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add gradually egg, well beaten, milk and shortening. Beat well. Bake in hot greased gem pans twenty-five minutes in moderately hot oven, at 350°-400°F. This recipe will make muffins for a family of five. Double the ingredients for larger family.

BOXER STABBED THROUGH HEART IN HOLLYWOOD CLUB

Killed in Dark in Free for All Fight.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 26.—(AP)—Tragedy slipped into the seat of gayety at the Crescent club in Hollywood early today when Eddie Diggins, 29, lightweight boxer, was stabbed to death in a free-for-all fight in the dark.

None of the throng of men and women in the club, which is nothing more than a café, could tell police who stabbed the boxer. Few could give similar accounts of what happened after some one tore a leg from a table and battered out the lights.

Charles Meehan, 24, described as a motion picture worker, and Joseph Sempello, chef, were held for further police questioning after they and five others had been in custody for a time. Meehan was under guard at the hospital, where he was taken for treatment for a gash in his head. He was found crumpled in a corner, where he apparently had been felled by a heavy blow.

Film Comedian Freed.

Lloyd Hamilton, film comedian, was at the side of the dying boxer trying to administer first aid when the lights came on again. Hamilton told police he had been in the barroom of the café when the fight started and had gone to see what was happening. He was released with Meehan's wife, Irene; James Sinclair, director; Jack Waggoner, also a director, and Joe Karagachi, Japanese kitchen boy, after they had given their versions of the affair.

According to the police, Meehan and his wife met Hamilton, Sinclair and Billy Jones, a film stunt man, and Diggins at the café. Liquor flowed freely, the officers said. Conflicting stories were told of an alleged insult to Meehan's wife and Diggins' part in the fight that followed. Employés of the café were said to have grouped together and started menacingly toward Meehan's table.

Women Rush for Exits.

Then darkness, hardly pierced by the early daylight, obscured events. Women guests of the club screamed and crowded for exits while men fought. Six unidentified men seen to leave the cafe together and speed away in an automobile were being sought by police.

Diggins died before he could be moved to a hospital. No trace could be found of the knife which caused his death. The wound was directly over his heart. The boxer was prominent about three years ago in San Francisco ring affairs. He recently had been working in motion pictures as a stunt man.

MINERS WIN WAGE DEMANDS IN TWO SMALL DISTRICTS

May Use This Wedge to Pinch Others.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 26.—(AP)—The policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America will at least have developments favorable to the miners in two isolated districts, Iowa and central Pennsylvania, to consider when it meets here Monday to determine the union's progress upon expiration of the present wage agreement March 31.

The situation surrounding negotiation of a new wage agreement for the central competitive field of the bituminous industry, comprising Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania, was given a more favorable tinge from the miners' viewpoint today with announcement at Des Moines that thirty independent operators have agreed to continue the present wage scale after March 31.

Ohio and Virginia Hold Out.

On March 11 executives of the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania announced that proposals of the mine workers to continue operations at the present scale after expiration of the Jacksonville agreement had been accepted.

On the other hand the policy committee will have to consider collapse of efforts to negotiate similar temporary settlements recently in Ohio and again today in northern West Virginia.

In the present situation, the miners wish continued the present scale of $7.50 a day for day men and $1.08 for tonnage men, negotiated at Jacksonville in 1924. The central field operators of union mines wish wage reductions in the form of a scale on a competitive basis with nonunion mines of Kentucky, West Virginia and Tennessee.

Plan to "Pinch Out" Operators.

The Iowa and central Pennsylvania advices indicated that tactics employed successfully by the union to terminate the 1922 strike in the bituminous fields may be a factor this year. The 1922 strike ended when miners "pinched out" the operators in the central competitive field through negotiations of temporary settlements in outlying fields with operators producing sixty million tons. The miners left the operators in the central field in the position of choosing between meeting the miners' demands or losing their business to their competitors.

Army Men Fight Over Gun; Both Are Shot to Death

San Francisco, Cal., March 26.—(AP)—A fight over possesion of a pistol at Fort Scott today resulted in the death of two enlisted men. Private Perry Holmes of Indianapolis, Ind., died of wounds shortly after the encounter, and William O. Escue, 21, of Lynneville, Tenn., private in the 63d coast artillery, died later. Army investigators were of the opinion that the fatal shooting was caused by "bad blood" between the two men over a love affair.

One Sentenced, Two Bound Over in Dope Raid on 14

Miss Nellie Roberts and Daniel Mosier, each 46 years old, arrested in a raid on an apartment at 435 Oakwood boulevard by narcotic agents yesterday were held in bonds of $3,000 to the grand jury by United States Commissioner Henry C. Beitler. The raid was in the same building in which Kitty Gilhooley, "dope queen" was arrested two years ago. Agents seized drugs valued at $500. Eleven others arrested in the raid were released and the fourteenth, Arthur Lowman, 20, of 116 East 60th street, was sentenced to 30 days in the De Kalb county jail.

"What do I have to pay for a really good Bed Spring?"

"ONE that will give real comfort. One that will last. One that I will not have to replace . . ."

The type of the spring that best meets these requirements is the "open-box," built like a box spring but without the box. Being open instead of boxed, you pay far less for it. The Simmons Company, largest makers of beds, mattresses and springs in the world, have perfected this type in their Ace Spring. The best steel goes into its strong, resilient springs. The open construction is easy to keep clean.

Best of all, its absolute springiness is assured you for a lifetime by the tiny sensitive coils that tie the heavy spirals at the centers—a feature exclusive with Simmons—as well as at the top.

A real investment for lifetime wear; luxurious comfort! See it in any store. The name is on each. Our local branch serves your dealer promptly. The Simmons Company.

NOTE the quivering, sensitive, elastic little coils that link spirals at center as well as at top. Only the Simmons Ace has these. What buoyant ease they give! What luxurious comfort!

Altho consumer demand forced Auburn to more than double its production in 1926, every indication points to a demand in the first five months of 1927 alone that will exceed all of last year's sales.

Many who thought the automobile business had "settled down" are impressed by Auburn's rapid rise.

To outsell larger competitors in the most competitive period—to introduce more modernized cars—to give bigger VALUE for less cost—and to win an unprecedented owner enthusiasm in these blasé times, is such an outstanding achievement that people ask: "HOW is Auburn doing it?"

The answer is so simple, it prompts wonder why some one had not done it before.

Auburn decided, after exhaustive investigations, that the public was getting ahead of the industry . . . that the tastes, standards and requirements of EXPERIENCED BUYERS were outgrowing the EFFORTS OF BUILDERS.

Instead then, of limiting itself by what competition was doing, Auburn measured the GROWTH of public demand and built new cars to FIT it.

This required new designs, new engineering, and BETTER built automobiles in every respect. Ordinary methods could not achieve it. New factories, new production capacity, new machinery, new equipment, new engineering and production methods were necessary.

Auburn went to extremes never before approached in experimenting and testing; in study of materials; in weight in relation to power; in balance; in elimination of vibration; in increasing both volume and smoothness of power; in reducing effort to steer; in increasing the car's inherent roadability so that it would almost drive itself; and in Speedway trials of most gruelling severity in order to abundantly and conclusively verify and prove every engineering claim.

The result is a new Straight Eight of unalloyed value—of uniform value in every part, therefore a whole car of unequalled value . . . a new car of long wheelbase, more powerful motor, heavier frames, surpassingly better balance, unexcelled roadability, and greater ruggedness and endurance . . . a new car of more roominess, of lavish provisions for comfort, of ease, convenience and safety in handling that far and away exceed previous attainments . . . a new car so advanced and superior in both kind and degree of performance that IT SELLS ITSELF.

Proof that the new Auburn does sell itself is found in the constantly increasing sales, because Auburn says: "DRIVE the new Auburn, compare it, and if it does not do all things you want a car to do, and meet all of your requirements better than any other, you will not be asked to buy."

Today's Style-Trend in Body Design

A Nash Contribution to Body Artistry

From all aspects this new Nash body design portrayed by the Special Sedan pictured above constitutes a history-making forward step in creative body artistry.

Greeted with overwhelming enthusiasm at the great Motor Shows it will unquestionably be the most sincerely imitated new development in the automobile industry.

And it will inevitably be the choice of that great group of buyers who demand the latest and the very smartest in motor car style.

This striking new design, with its French-type roof, and arrestingly attractive rear body contour, is offered by Nash on both the Special Six and Advanced Six chassis.

The Special Sedan on the Special Six chassis, displayed herewith, is superbly finished in a lustrous blue.

And the interior, luxuriously tailored and appointed throughout, reveals a well-defined air of cultured taste.

Here you will find such compelling attractions as heavily tufted mohair velvet upholstery in a warm gray hue, enlivened by fittings of chaste design. A dignified Circassian Walnut finish graces the inside window mouldings, the instrument panel and the crowned panel above it, while the steering wheel is of genuine walnut.

And, like all Nash models, it is powered with the ultra-smooth and ultra-modern 7-bearing crankshaft motor.

Cars with the older 3 or 4-bearing types fall far short of achieving the delightful evenness and silence of power flow that so admirably characterizes 7-bearing motor performance.

Prominent among its many mechanical features and engineering advancements are: insulation of the motor from the frame by rubber motor supports; oil screen "agitator"; thermostatic motor heat control; crankcase breather; double-beam headlights; hydrostatic gasoline gauge; 4-wheel brakes of special Nash design; and five disc wheels; included as standard equipment at no additional cost.

The larger Special Sedan on the Advanced Six chassis is colored in a rich gray-green and enjoys the same extreme quality in fittings and appointments.

YOUNG AND OLD SEEK PRIZES IN GARDEN CONTEST

It's Outdoor Sport for All; 425 Now in Game.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Five thousand dollars offered by THE TRIBUNE for the best home gardens in the city and surrounding suburbs has brought about a new interest in flower gardening for miles around. Children not yet in their teens and adults over the seventy mark are among the flower gardeners who are competing for the $1,000 grand prize, twelve $100 district prizes, and more than one hundred other cash prizes ranging from $15 down.

Four hundred and twenty-five amateur gardeners were entered in the contest when the postoffice in Tribune Tower closed last night. The contest editor's count for the first week shows the number of entries from the six districts in the contest zone as follows:

District 1, 64; district 2, 188; district 3, 98; district 4, 26; district 5, 31, and district 6, 18.

An Outdoor Sport for All.

It is an outdoor sport that can be played by persons of all ages, trades and professions.

Mrs. Mary Barney, 70 years old, of 1036 South Highland avenue, Oak Park, is among the contestants registered in district 2. Along with her entry coupon came a letter from her daughter, Miss Marian V. Barney. "My mother," writes Miss Barney, "has always been a great lover of flowers, and some years ago was very successful with them. She is now 70 years old and not very well, but she has set her heart on entering this contest. I am grateful to THE TRIBUNE for giving her a new interest in life."

Offers to Aid Amateurs.

John J. Heintz of 702 North State street, is so interested in the contest that he sent this note to THE TRIBUNE:

"Having been an amateur gardener for over 30 years and being a lover of flowers, I will gladly assist any one with a real garden and my pleasure in their progress will be my compensation."

So the ideas John A. Servas and his co-workers planted at the recent Chicago Garden and Flower show seem to be taking root and thriving. In a letter to THE TRIBUNE yesterday Mr. Servas, who managed the exposition, said: "We hope the Chicago Garden and Flower show has in some measure created interest enough so that THE TRIBUNE contest will carry on the good work. The contest will undoubtedly prove a great incentive to beautifying garden plots throughout the city."

Some gardeners are growing both flowers and vegetables. Combination flower and vegetable gardens are not eligible to enter THE TRIBUNE'S contest, but a flower garden may be grown in the same lot where vegetables are grown and still be eligible for the contest, provided there is a partition, a hedge, fence, or lattice work separating the two gardens.

Gardeners may not consider themselves entered in the contest unless they have properly filled out and sent their coupon to THE TRIBUNE Garden Contest editor. A letter indicating that you wish to enter the contest is not sufficient, it is pointed out.

In addition to the cash prizes amounting to $5,020, THE TRIBUNE will issue certificates to each winner.

Total late garden prizes		$2,010
Grand total		$5,020

RULES

1. The Tribune will pay $5,000 in cash for the best flower gardens in Chicago area. A grand prize of $1,000 is offered. Separate cash prizes will be awarded on both late and early gardens.
2. The contest will be limited to gardens located on land on which the contesting gardener lives and in the territory within a radius of approximately 40 miles from the Tribune Tower. The garden may be any size, shape, style, or type if it covers at least 200 square feet or the equivalent of a plot 20 by 10 feet.
3. The Tribune flower garden contest area is divided into six districts. Each contestant must indicate on the coupon the district in which he lives. Copies of the contest district map will be sent free if request is accompanied by stamped, addressed envelope. In the inner Chicago zone districts 1 and 2 are divided by the north branch of the Chicago river, while Nos. 2 and 3 are divided by south branch of the river.
4. You need not be an experienced gardener to compete.
5. Estate gardens, commercial gardens, and all other forms of gardening professionally conducted or maintained by paid professional gardeners or landscape architects are barred: the contest is open only to home gardens.
6. Every gardener in the prescribed area who complies with the above requirements may compete for the cash prizes, excepting employes of The Tribune and their families. Vegetable gardens or combination flower and vegetable gardens are not eligible to compete in this contest.
7. All entries must be in The Tribune office not later than May 10.
8. The exact judging dates, which will be announced later in The Tribune, will depend upon the season. The early gardens probably will be judged in June and the late ones in September.
9. Each garden will be judged upon its merits as a whole—not upon any particular plant or flower or other outstanding feature. Design, color harmony, balance, appropriateness of plants, and neatness are all points to be taken into consideration by the judges.
10. District judging committees will visit each garden and make the district awards on both the early and late gardens. Winners of the first prize in each district will compete for the grand prize, which will be awarded by three expert judges. The three final judges will visit in person the six first prize early gardens and the six first prize late gardens.
11. To compete for the grand prize of $1,000 the contestant must have both early and late gardens. The contestant is eligible to compete for the grand prize if he is a winner of a first district award in either the early or the late garden. A contestant may win prizes on both the early and late gardens and then compete for the grand prize.
12. The only requirement in entering the contest is to properly fill out the coupon, mail it direct to the Garden Contest Editor, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill., and your garden will be visited at the proper time by the judges. The coupon must show the contestant's name in full, address, and the number of the district. The publishers of The Tribune will not be responsible for loss, delay, or nondelivery of coupons.
13. Watch The Tribune from day to day for further details and contest news. Helpful suggestions on flower gardening will be published in the paper from time to time.

DETERMINES RACE BY HAIR WEIGHT, SCIENTIST SAYS

Tells Anthropologists of U. of C. Experiments.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

How to tell sex and race by the weight of the hair of the head; how to make grammar musical in a language with sixteen distinct tone variations; how to recognize that music is not the universal language, but a number of different languages—these were only three of the chapters in the history of man discussed at the sixth annual meeting of the American Anthropological association, which yesterday closed its sessions at the Field museum.

In spite of the title of his address, "Recent Investigations on Hair," Mr. Bernstein, a graduate student working under Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole at the University of Chicago, proved himself much more the sincere scientist than the casual cosmetician.

For his theory of hair value has to do with its weight, not with its length or beauty.

Starts Weighing Hair.

Diligently, and Dr. Cole pointed out, as a pioneer in his field, Mr. Bernstein went about the business of weighing hairs; ten strands of hair, each five centimeters long. Five centimeters was chosen, by the way, as about the maximum likely to be obtained from the shortly shorn women. Hundreds of these specimens, Negroid hair, Mongoloid hair and Caucasoid hair, all numbered, but with the sex of their possessor unknown to Mr. Bernstein, were given to him. He weighed them carefully, checking his results three times.

His results, when checked back to the racial groups, and the sex divisions, were so universal that it is almost possible, he feels, to determine race and sex from the weight of a unit of hair.

For instance, using always ten strands of five centimeters each, he got the following table of weight. The average weight of 50 centimeters of Mongoloid hair was .00495 grams; for Caucasoid hair, .0031 grams, and for Negroid hair, .0027 grams. In each of these cases the hair was from males. Similar quantities of hair from the women consistently averaged lower.

Nordic Weights the Least.

Dividing the Caucasoid group into Nordics, Alpines, and Mediterraneans (grouped together) and an indeterminate group, Mr. Bernstein found the Nordic hair weighed the least; the Alpinese came next, and the Mediterranean hair was the heaviest. In the indeterminate group were those weights which didn't tally with their original classification.

For instance, light hair might be too heavy for the norm of light hair; black hair too light for its norm. In checking by the number of the specimen, it was invariably found, the investigator reported, that the eye color was the factor which seemed to have caused the variation. A Nordic with dark eyes would have a hair weight in excess of his group; a Mediterranean with blue eyes would have a light hair weight.

These three factors are operative in causing hair weight; the presence of pigmentation [Meditteraneans, with their black hair lead the Caucasoid group]; the absence of air bubble [Negroid hair has so many air bubbles that the pigmentation is counter balanced] and the cross section area [the cross section area of a strand of female hair is less than that of a male]. two or three weeks, to the Coghill golf Woman's Hair Is Longer.

One of the more popular deductions made by Mr. Bernstein is that a white woman's hair grows from 25 to 30 inches; that it takes about 4 years to achieve this growth as against the average growth of from 12 to 16 inches for a white man. This difference is not found among the other races.

Charles J. Blooah, son of a famous Liberian prince, and expert in Grebo, that complex West African language that runs a scale to say good morning, actively demonstrated the theories of the tone system which was discussed by Dr. E. Spair of the University of Chicago. There are four different tones in Grebo, and sixteen different combinations of tone. That's bad enough. But there are also possible five different weights of words. Some words stay on the same tone level. Some have a giddy fashion of osillating, according to their grammatical use.

Plan to Open Mounds.

While these scientists were reporting their investigations in far-flung zones of the world, graduate students at the University of Chicago were yesterday making plans to remove, in two or three years, to the Coghill golf course, at 111th street and Archer road, there to excavate Indian mounds. The work will be under the direction of Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, who says of the projected work:

"We may not find a single skeleton, or we may find many. We hope enough will be forthcoming to show what Indian tribe used the local mounds and to furnish an index of their habits."

In 3 lb. can, Hop Flavored, also plain Malt Syrup with 2½ oz. pkg. Bohemian Hops. Either of the above, per can, 75c—6 cans for $4.00—dozen, $7.75.

Rent a Radio—or

Combination Phonograph-Radiola

No Outside Aerial Needed

No need to wait longer—enjoy the world of music and entertainment in your own home. If you are not ready to own one of these instruments, if you expect to move soon or on short notice—rent one. We will be glad to place any radio, phonograph, or combination instrument with you for a very reasonable monthly charge.

Up to 6 months rental charge can be applied on the purchase of an instrument, if desired.

Panatrope Radiola Combination

Rent One

As the highest development of the phonograph, it reproduces recorded music electrically. As a Radio its 6-tube Radiola Super-Heterodyne circuit is especially adapted to Chicago conditions. Operates completely from the house current, and self-contained aerial.

Orthophonic Victrola

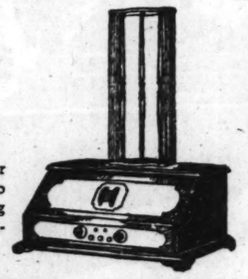
or the New Brunswick

Rent One

These new instruments—new and radical in every sense—are nothing like the old phonograph. Built on entirely new principles you will be amazed. The model illustrated is particularly suited to the apartment or small home. With or without electric winding motor.

RCA Radiola 25

Rent One



The famous RCA 6-tube Super-Heterodyne. Famous for its quality of tone, its sensitivity and selectivity! Built to operate successfully in the most crowded broadcasting areas, it is ideal for Chicago. Runs from dry batteries contained in the cabinet.

ONLY 4 MORE DAYS—$50 allowed for your old radio or phonograph—on the purchase of a new Orthophonic Victrola-Radiola Combination No. 7-3 or a Brunswick Panatrope-Radiola Combination No. 6. This offer ends March 31st.

CAPTURE THREE TONG GENERALS AT LOOP HOTEL

Gunman Also Seized; Two Identified as Killers.

Guns of Chinese tong men were silent last night. In the east a temporary truce had been declared and in Chicago police last night discovered the headquarters of three Hip Sing tong leaders in the Morrison hotel as they were said to have been plotting a renewal of the warfare which began last Wednesday night and has since resulted in twelve deaths.

Huie Sing and Chin Foy, identified as high officials in the Hip Sing faction, were dictating letters to allies in various cities in the country when detectives broke in on them. They denied they were implicated in the tong war and said they had fled to a loop hotel because they were in danger of their lives in Chicago's Chinatown.

Taken with them was Wong Lee Woo, 1316 East 62d street, a law student, who was later pointed out at the detective bureau by two witnesses as one of four Chinese gunmen who shot and killed Sam Sing in his shop at 3208 West Lake street last Thursday.

Acting on a tip from Frank Moy, unofficial mayor of Chinatown, police arrested Moy Get, 3856 West Madison street, who was carrying two revolvers. Get was also identified as one of the slayers of Sam Sing and the authorities were congratulating themselves on an unusual accomplishment —the clearing up of a tong murder.

In New York a peace manifesto was issued by tong leaders and posted in the Chinese quarter. Large groups of Chinese gathered all day long to read the notice and it is believed that hostilities in the east are temporarily at a standstill. However, the government's threat of deportation for large numbers of Chinese had a greater effect than the manifesto, it was said.

IDENTIFIED AS TONG SLAYER

MASSMEETING TO PURGE STATE OF CRIME CALLED

Hope to Stir Sentiment in War on Lawbreakers.

A massmeeting to arouse public sentiment against crime in Illinois will be held Wednesday night in Orchestra hall under the auspices of the Illinois Manufacturers' association. Thirty judges, most of the state's attorney's staff, and representatives of more than 50 civic organizations will be present in addition to the general public which is invited.

"Crime in Illinois has a marvelous organization," said John M. Glenn, secretary of the Manufacturers' association. "The leaders of the underworld have unlimited funds. Nearly everything else has been done in an effort to prevent crimes. The situation has been analyzed. A strong public sentiment is all that is needed to make the criminals hunt their holes."

Mayor Hoan to Talk.

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee will be one of the speakers. He will explain how justice has been made so swift in his city that insurance rates on theft and robbery in Milwaukee have been reduced 20 per cent there, while rates have been increased in other large cities.

Edward E. Gore, president of the Chicago crime commission; Judge Marcus Kavanagh, and State Senator Andrew S. Cuthbertson, chairman of the special senate committee on criminal legislation, will also speak.

Year's Study of Cure.

Preparatory to presenting a report of the Social Science Research council at its annual meeting in August at Hanover, N. H., detailing what conditions and causes in crime in the United States need study, the council's advisory committee met yesterday at the Hotel La Salle. The committee has been working nearly a year, but it will not have its report ready until August, according to Prof. J. L. Gillin of the University of Wisconsin, chairman.

Urges Law Adjustment.

Dr. William Searle Holdworth, successor as Vineraian professor of law at Oxford university of Sir William Blackstone, in his first lectures in the United States, at Northwestern university, yesterday said he felt the laws in this country should be readjusted.

"England is ahead of the United States in the administration of both the civil and criminal law because it has adjusted itself to changing conditions," he said. "Over there we have changed the statutes while in your own country you keep on under the old common law."

Harris Named Director of General Contractors

John W. Harris, treasurer of the Hegeman-Harris company, Inc., builders of The Tribune Tower, has been elected a director of the Associated General Contractors of America. His firm has headquarters in New York, but has built many large structures in Chicago, including the Elks' Memorial and the Bismarck hotel. Recently it completed the Brooklyn plant of the New York Daily News, one of the most complete in the world.

YOUTH IS HELD AS ONE OF CAN CO. PAYROLL BANDITS

Ralph Orlando, 24 years old, of 1222 Oregon street, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $40,000 by Judge Phillip J. Finnegan yesterday. He is charged with intent to commit murder and robbery as a result of the holdup of the Continental Can company on March 12.

Orlando was identified by three girl employés of the can company as one of the five bandits who stole a $12,500 payroll after beating several of the employés with their revolvers. William Cavanaugh, 24, of 1509 Polk street, arrested as a suspect, was released when witnesses failed to identify him.

Vito Pelleteri, who is now under police guard at the Robert Burns hospital where he applied for treatment for a gunshot wound the day following the holdup, also has been identified as one of the bandits.

KILLS HIMSELF OVER ILLNESS.

Informed by his physician that he had not much longer to live, John McCall, 50 years old, a carpenter boarding at 6241 Woodlawn avenue, shot and killed himself in his room yesterday afternoon. He had been in ill-health for a long time.

GIRL, FOR WHOSE "DEATH" MAN WAS IN PRISON, WEDS

Harlan, Ky., March 26.—[AP]—Mary Vickery, 16, and C. E. Dempsey, 23, were married at a lawyer's office here today.

The courtship and marriage of the girl came swiftly after her unexpected return last week. Previous to her return she had been believed dead and Conda Dabney, already had served one year of a life sentence in prison for her "murder."

Dempsey has been living at the home of the girl's father, E. C. Vickery, by whom he was employed as a painter. He had known her when they both lived at Lafayette, Tenn., before he had gone to the navy and she had left home. He was discharged from the navy at the expiration of his enlistment on July 31, last year, and came here.

The marriage was solemnized by the Rev. H. C. Davis, pastor of the Baptist Church of God, who also is a magistrate, in the office of J. G. Jarvis, who had prosecuted Dabney for the "murder."

They will make their home with the girl's father.

VATICAN MAKES UP WITH CZECHS; SENDS A NUNCIO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, March 26.—A new era of relations between the Vatican and Czecho-Slovakia began today, the pope having named Msgr. Ciriaci extraordinary nuncio to Prague.

The papal nuncio was recalled two years ago owing to serious differences with the Prague government. A few days ago the pope addressed a letter to the Czecho-Slovak clergy containing a sentence seemingly quite severe for the government. The letter dealt with the situation which arose through the government's participation in the Huss celebration at Prague in 1925. Owing to the great impression created by the letter, the pontiff determined to show at once his affection toward Czecho-Slovakia.

Msgr. Ciriaci will leave tomorrow accompanied by Msgr. Ritter. Both belong to the papal state department.

Moose Lodge to Induct 500 New Members Today

More than 1,000 are expected to attend ceremonies of the Loyal Order of Moose, Greater Chicago lodge No. 3, when 500 candidates will be inducted into membership this afternoon at the Hotel Sherman.

Youngsters need this purifying toilet soap

[—it removes germs, as well as dirt]

TRY as you will—you can't keep children from touching germ-laden things!

Those active little fingers simply must handle books and pencils—must fondle pets —must touch desks, chairs, toys—and countless other things on which germs may lurk.

And your own hands—your husband's hands—touching money, telephones, dust pan, mop—they can't escape germs, either. Health authorities say hands are among the chief carriers of sickness. See 27 germ diseases, above, which hands may spread.

To guard against this menace—let every member of your family wash at all times with the purifying toilet soap that removes germs, as well as dirt.

A habit in 63,000 schools

In over 63,000 schools, children have learned to wash regularly with Lifebuoy—before meals, before bed, after using the toilet—simply because its antiseptic lather helps protect against sickness.

Children love this bubbly lather that washes away dirt in a jiffy. Millions of men will use nothing but Lifebuoy for toilet and bath. Women, too, say it benefits their skin amazingly—makes it clear and satin-smooth.

And finally, Lifebuoy gives all-day freedom from perspiration odor—every Lifebuoy user testifies to that.

Greater protection—its hygienic scent tells you why

Lifebuoy is so different from other toilet soaps that even its scent is different. Not a perfume, but a clean, pleasantly hygienic scent which proves Lifebuoy gives greater protection. Even before you've finished your first cake, you'll learn to love this cleanest of all soap scents, which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

Without its antiseptic, Lifebuoy would still be a wonderful toilet soap—but you wouldn't get the same protection.

Like millions of others, once you form the Lifebuoy habit, you'll wonder how any other soap ever satisfied you.

Nothing extra to buy

Lifebuoy costs no more—probably less—than the soap you are now using—so the protection it gives you is actually free!

You can get Lifebuoy wherever soap is sold. You will know it by the red box and the cake—orange-red, the color of its pure palm-fruit oils. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Dr. Bundesen, Chicago Health Commissioner, says:

"The hands of the ordinary citizen are literally teeming with microbes... Probably the commonest way in which diseases are implanted within our bodies is by conveyance from hand to mouth. It is of prime importance, therefore, that everyone should, as far as possible, wash his hands with scrupulous care ...and no one should think of handling food, either for his own use or for others, without carefully washing the hands."

Drive The Commander

We will lend you this new Big Six Brougham to test for yourself. Prove it will out-speed, out-climb and out-live any car within a thousand dollars of its new reduced price

Reduced $200 to $1585 f. o. b. factory. Including bumpers, front and rear, snubbers, and equipment for which others charge extra

LAST week scores of motorists accepted our invitation to take command of a Commander. We are advertising to the pubic through its hands and feet—hands on the wheel—feet on the throttle, clutch and brakes.

There are no strings to this simple test-it-yourself plan. You take a Commander. You drive it—choose your own time, your own route. You judge this Big Six Brougham by the way it performs in your own hands. No obligation except to tell your friends. You can't help talking about your experience, for The Commander does all that we claim.

It's a "Ball of Fire"

Slip behind the wheel of The Commander. Prove for yourself, as we have time and again on Studebaker's 800-acre Proving Ground, the astonishing margin of Big Six superiority. Idle along smoothly in high at 3 miles an hour. Feel it take the gas as smooth as silk—from 5 to 40 miles in 18.4 seconds. Spirited speed on the straightaway—The Commander will do 70 actual miles per hour with ease!

Most power at its price

Such performance is startling until you remember that only seven American cars equal The Commander in rated horsepower—and they cost from $4,000 to $10,000.

That's the thrill of commanding this Big Six motor—first to beat the fastest schedules of the crack Limiteds from New York to San Francisco.

Steel-built for safety

The Commander's clear vision all-steel body is swung close to the road. Positive mechanical four-wheel brakes give you instant control. Special Studebaker steering mechanism insures effortless mastery at the wheel. No wonder women find new pleasure in driving this high-spirited motor car.

Operate the exclusive Studebaker windshield, which ventilates without drafts or drenching during the hardest rainstorms.

Pullman comfort at any speed

Drive The Commander over rough roads or railroad crossings. Feel how balloon tires, snubbers, extra length springs and deep cushions give Pullman comfort. Go as fast or as far as you like—across town or across the Continent with comfort and confidence.

Greater One-Profit value

Come in today—your Commander is waiting for you! Note its distinctive custom beauty, its $100 worth of extra equipment without extra cost, and ask yourself what other car can offer so much for so little. Only Studebaker One-Profit manufacture and new records of production make possible such fine-car value at $1585!

The Commander is waiting for you. Try it out—no obligation!

U. S. PROSPERITY WILL CONTINUE, COOLIDGE BELIEF

Survey Shows Business on Sound Basis.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—While public attention is being diverted to Mexico, Nicaragua, China and other distant places, the matter of greatest concern to the administration, it was learned tonight, is one much nearer home, in fact, right at home—the economic condition of the country.

Whether our general prosperity is to continue unabated or is to give way to the period of business recession, if not depression, is the question that has been uppermost in the minds of the President and his advisers for some time. It has been the subject of searching discussion at cabinet meetings, of conferences with leaders of the business life of the country and of reports on current developments in agriculture, industry, commerce and finance in every quarter of the republic.

After a careful survey of the situation, the President has decided that the business structure is fundamentally sound. He has detected no alarming symptoms. It is too early to tell whether the recession in volume of business in some lines noticeable at the beginning of the year is to continue and to spread, but there are no indications that it will be serious if it should continue and 1927 may yet turn out as prosperous for the country as 1926. A business depression was predicted for 1926, but did not materialize.

Fear Business Recession.

In the current business situation there are certain important underlying forces which, over a long period of time, are working toward stability and growth, but at present there are some factors of current significance which are likely to interrupt this steady increase for a short time and may bring about a pronounced recession in business. The soundness of the basic structure of industry, however, may prevent this recession from developing and at least will lessen its severity.

The underlying factors are the large current income of the American people, the volume of national savings, the improved technique of industrial operation, the efficient operation of railroads, the hand to mouth buying policy, the absence of commodity speculation which has prevented excessive accumulation of inventories as well as inflationary advances in commodity prices and, finally, the abundance and cheapness of credit, which has encouraged the flotation of bond issues for new buildings, improvements, and public works, and of foreign loans, which may be used to purchase goods in this country.

The factors of current significance which are working toward recession in business may be summarized as follows:

The decline in rural purchasing power in some communities resulting from decreases in prices of certain crops, the likelihood that residential building will be in smaller volume than in recent years, the possibility of a curtailment in automobile production, and the cumulative effect of these unfavorable developments upon other industries.

Industries Fairly Active.

At present industries are fairly active and business has shown definite improvement since December. This does not mean, however, that recession may not follow. The year is yet too young to provide definite knowledge as to how building and automobile production will compare in volume with last year and the full effects of the reduction in farm income will not be felt until the spring buying season is well under way.

It is entirely possible that the influence of increased income from live stock, winter wheat, and certain other crops may offset that of the decreases in cotton, corn, and spring wheat, that increased building of public works may continue in excess of the decrease in residences, that the automobile industry may be able by special efforts to stimulate a large demand for cars, and that railroads may take advantage of their large earnings and of the lower price level to build up plant and equipment.

These constructive developments will be added by the soundness of the underlying elements.

N. Y. Central Freight Handlers Win Pay Boost

New York, March 26.—(AP)—An increase of 6 per cent over present wage schedules for all railway freight handlers and station employes of the New York Central railroad was handed down tonight by the United States board of arbitration, according to an announcement by J. A. Robertson for the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. The decision will result in an annual increase of $2,000,000 in wages.

One Cent a Day Brings $100 a Month

Thousands Taking Advantage of Liberal Insurance Offer. Policy Sent Free for Inspection.

Kansas City, Mo.—Accident insurance at a cost of one cent a day is being featured in a policy issued by the National Protective Insurance Association.

The benefits are $100 a month for 12 months—$1,200 to $1,800 at death. The premium is only $3.65 a year or exactly one cent a day. Of the thousands of applications received many have come from the agents and executives of other insurance companies. The offer is limited to 100,000 policies.

Women, as well as men, are eligible for this remarkable policy. It also applies to children who are ten years of age or over. No medical examination is required.

Send No Money

To secure 10 days' free inspection of policy send no money. Mail to the National Protective Insurance Association, 1011 Scarritt Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., the following information: Name, age, address, beneficiary's name and relationship.

After reading the policy you may either return it without obligation or send $3.65 to put policy in force.

MELLON EMBARKS FOR PARIS; SEES U. S. PROSPERITY KEEP UP

New York, March 26.—[Special.]—"All signs and indications at the moment point to the country enjoying a successful business year," Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, said today as he sailed on the White Star liner Olympic.

The cause of Mr. Mellon's trip abroad is purely personal. He is going direct to Paris to see his daughter, Mrs. David K. Este Bruce, who is recovering from an operation there.

He will be there only about ten days, he said, and during that time he does not expect to talk over any debt funding proposals. Nor has he any appointments to meet banking officials or representatives of foreign governments while he is in Europe.

"I see nothing to indicate that business will not continue to be good throughout the country," Mr. Mellon repeated.

CARLSTROM WILL PASS ON SCHOLES JUDGESHIP FIGHT

Springfield, Ill., March 26.—[Special.]—The duty of deciding the course of the contest between Justice Clyde E. Stone and Speaker Robert Scholes of the Illinois house of respresentatives now rests in the hands of Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom. He must determine what tribunal shall hear the claims of the two candidates for the Republican nomination for supreme court justice from the Fifth supreme judicial district.

In the absence of Mr. Carlstrom Assistant Attorney General M. S. Winning declared the necessary perusal of the law and legal precedents and the preparation of an opinion would take at least four or five days.

The question to be decided is whether the contest must come before the state canvassing board, composed of secretary of state Louis L. Emmerson, State Auditor Oscar Nelson, and the attorney general, or before the county judge of the ten counties in the district. The law requires a contest in the case of a state officer be heard by the canvassing board and a contest in the case of an officer elected by the voters of a division of the state greater than a county to be heard by the county judges of the counties in that division.

Speaker Scholes, who is the candidate of Gov. Small, is understood to be willing to have his case heard by the county judges. His legal advisers have expressed satisfaction that the judges constitute the proper tribunal. Judge Stone, having filed his certificate of nomination first, technically is the accepted candidate. Scholes is the petitioner to get in.

Judge Stone's partisans, on the other hand, are reported to have altered their first belief somewhat and would now like to have the contest heard by the canvassing board.

WINDOW WASHER DIES IN FALL.

Falling three floors to the ground, John Morris, 53 years old, a window washer, was fatally injured yesterday. He suffered a fractured skull and died while being taken to a hospital.

DRY AGENTS NAB 2 SALTIS AIDS IN RAIDS AT LEMONT

Prohibition agents yesterday raided two wildcat breweries near Lemont, Ill., and arrested G. J. Dillman and Joseph Koller, said to be members of the Saltis gang. The farm on which the brewery was found was recently purchased for $10,000 and is believed to be one of the spots from which Saltis obtained his beer.

In a barn in the rear of the Capital café at Lemont the agents seized a brewery capable of producing thirty barrels of beer daily. Frank Melcher, alias Arthur Johnson, of Joliet, was arrested. According to agents, he admitted ownership of the brewery. The two Lemont breweries were completely equipped and their cost was estimated at $100,000.

Al Tearney's Town club, a famous night resort at 619 South Wabash avenue, was again the target of the dry agents last night. They arrested Tearney and William C. Mossman, a waiter, and confiscated a gallon case of whisky and a quantity of gin. An injunction closing the place for a year was upheld in the United States Court of Appeals last Wednesday, but it was announced an appeal would be taken to the United States Supreme court.

The Roma café, 9247 Commercial avenue, said by dry agents t be a payoff place, was also raided yesterday. The raiders arrested S. F. Miller, a waiter, and seized a quantity of liquor. Miss Beatrice Wilson, owner, and Louis Lew, Chinese cook, were arrested when agents seized beer and whisky at the Cadillac inn, 145th street and Western avenue.

Raiders confiscated eleven barrels of beer in a raid on the M. & K. café at 1025 East 75th street. Joseph Dobson, alleged owner, was arrested.

New Lovett School Is Ready for Occupancy

The Lovett school, Bloomingdale and Mobile avenues, will be ready for occupancy tomorrow morning and will provide seats for 720 pupils now housed in portable buildings. It is the last of the two story typical elementary schools to be constructed. Negotiations have been started by the board of education for the acquisition of sites for new elementary schools at Barry and Melvina avenues, and at Christiana and Carmen avenues.

TELLS ILLINOIS BOYS TO PROSPER IN THIS STATE

Illinois was hailed as the state of opportunities for youth in an address yesterday by Harvey T. Hill, general secretary of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, before the annual Y. M. C. A. conference of younger men and employed boys in commerce and industry.

"You can achieve business success quicker, easier, and more certainly in Illinois than anywhere else in the world," he declared. "This state is the crossroads of the nation's commerce.

"The center of population and the center of the number of farms is here. The center of industry is moving towards Illinois, and it is the center of the grain production and market of the United States. It does not matter much of what kind of business you want to become a part, you will find an opportunity ahead of you for success in Illinois which cannot be developed elsewhere in the world."

JEFFERSON DAY OBSERVANCE IS SHAVER'S PLAN

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—A proposition that Democrats throughout the country hold public meetings on the occasion of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, April 13, for the discussion of basic principles of the Democratic party was made in a letter sent today by Clem Shaver, chairman of the Democratic national committee, to the members of that body.

"When Americans become so obsessed with the notion that getting and spending is the be-all and end-all," said Mr. Shaver, "when they find excuses for enormous funds supplied by tariff industry barons and public utility bosses to elect United States senators, when they are heard in praise of European dictatorships and other forms of absolutism, it is high time for believers in democracy to warn the people against tendencies similar in their nature to those which Jefferson fought."

SALES

Now that "the sales" are in full swing, we want to extend a word of admonition.

"Sales times" are responsible for a tremendous lot of poor goods cheap, as well as good goods cheap.

These "sales" are in most instances excellent opportunities for people who know what they want. Many buyers think that, whether or not they actually need it, any article is a bargain if it does not cost much.

It is wise to consider and decide what is essential to your needs and comforts before you set out. Then if you "stand pat" you will not find yourself, by any chance, loaded with goods which neither suit your person nor your highest and better plans for home life.

SAPIRO COUNSEL PLAN FORD CASE CLIMAX TUESDAY

Foes May Both Be Called to Testify Same Day.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., March 26.—[Special.]—Likelihood that Henry Ford and Aaron Sapiro, foes in the $1,000,000 drama of race and libel being enacted in the federal court, may take the witness stand on the same day loomed this afternoon as the lawyers prepared to plunge into the third week of the trial.

The best guess of the attorneys is that both will testify on Tuesday. They say, however, it may be sooner, depending on the examination of Fred L. Black, business manager of the Dearborn Independent, who will continue testifying Monday.

Sapiro, the little black-haired, soft voiced Chicagoan who claims the motor magnate has damaged him a million dollars' worth through the Dearborn Independent articles, probably will go on the stand before Ford does.

Sapiro to Rest Case Soon.

Attorney William Henry Gallagher wants Sapiro's story before the jury first; then in contrast, he will set up that of the billionaire who is charged with attacking Jews in general and in particular a prominent group, calling them members of a band of international Jews and saying they were associated to sack the American farmer.

Following the testimony of Sapiro and of Ford, Attorney Gallagher will soon rest his case against the manufacturer.

Ford to Call 100 Witnesses.

But with the plaintiff's case resting the end of the trial is nowhere in sight, for the defense has a bulky fabric to produce.

More than 100 witnesses will be called by the automobile king from all over the country, farmers from north, south, east, and west, members of cooperative marketing associations organized under the so-called Sapiro plan. And the defense says that these farmers, and in some cases officers of associations or defunct associations, will testify that the Sapiro plan was not what it was set up to be.

In addition to the actual witnesses, the defense has 254 long depositions, testimony taken from 254 other witnesses scattered over the country from Canada to the gulf and the Atlantic to the Pacific, over a perod of more than a year. And each one of those must be read to the court and jury and wrangled and contested over by the lawyers.

Again, Mr. Gallagher several days ago amended his original complaint of libel, and that may cause a delay. The original complaint or declaration charged 141 specific libels. The amended one dropped 54 of these.

BORAH TAKES IN IDAHO BID FOR VACATION OF THE CAL COOLIDGES

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—President Coolidge today was invited by Senator Borah to spend his summer vacation in Idaho.

According to Senator Borah, his proposal contemplates the turning over to the President and his staff during their stay in the west an estate known as Honeysuckle hills on Hayden lake. The estate, which comprises 785 acres of land, offers a wide diversity of entertainment in walks, drives, games, and water sports. A fine golf course also is available, he said.

"In the lake," Senator Borah said, "is superb bass and trout fishing, while in the innumerable streams thereabouts are many fine trout pools."

4 to Die on Guillotine for Killing German Soldier

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 26.—Four ring leaders of the German black reichswehr, a secret royalist military organization, which is blamed for more than a score of murders in the days of chaos in Germany in 1923, today were sentenced to die on the guillotine. The officers, Fuhrman, Klapproth, Unmhofer, and Schultz, were held guilty of the murder of Sergt. Maj. Walter Wilms, whom they suspected of betraying their organization.

26,841 MILES OF ROAD TO BE BUILT IN U. S. THIS YEAR

Total Cost Will Be More than $1,120,000,000.

Washington, D. C., March 26.—(AP)—More than $1,120,000,000 will be spent this year in the United States on highway construction, maintenance, and bridge building, reports to the bureau of public roads indicate.

The state highway programs call for construction of 26,841 miles of road, maintenance of 239,847 miles, and construction of a number of large bridges, the states expending $648,483,000 and counties and lesser subdivisions $475,000,000.

New state highway construction contemplated this year is estimated as follows:

Alabama, 406 miles; Arizona, 100; Arkansas, 580; California, 80; Colorado, 124; Connecticut, [not determined on account of pending legislation]; Delaware, 75; Florida, 775; Georgia, 506; Idaho, 145; Illinois, 1,255; Indiana, 415; Iowa, 1,090; Kansas, 1,598; Kentucky, 900; Louisiana, 500; Maine, 414; Maryland, 124; Massachusetts, 240; Michigan, 415; Minnesota, 1,007; Mississippi, 524; Missouri, 992; Montana, 251; Nebraska, 1,310; Nevada, 149; New Hampshire, 100; New Jersey, 120; New Mexico, 179; New York, 1,006; North Carolina, 650; North Dakota, 1,042; Ohio, 850; Oklahoma, 850; Oregon, 252; Pennsylvania, 1,300; Rhode Island, 44; South Carolina, 600; South Dakota, 450; Tennessee, 529; Texas, 1,800; Utah, 100, Vermont, 110; Virginia, 225; Washington, 385; West Virginia, 425; Wisconsin, 1,569, and Wyoming, 350.

Of the 26,841 miles of new construction, 6,957 are to be earth improved roads, 12,395 miles sand clay, gravel and macadam, and 7,489 miles asphalt, concrete and brick.

County Asked to Create Cemetery for War Vets

A military cemetery, owned and maintained by Cook county, is proposed in a petition to the county board filed by the United Spanish War veterans. It asks that the proposition be placed on the June ballot. President Anton J. Cermak of the board said he favored dedicating a portion of the forest preserve for the graves of war veterans.

Two Boys Suffocated in Play Cave of Own Digging

Childress, Texas., March 26.—(AP)—Suffocated in a cave of their own digging, Calvin Kent, 15, and Harvey King, 11, were found dead by their grandmother, Mrs. James Woodward, on a farm near here today. The boys had dug back under the ground several feet when the top of the little cave in the side of a canyon fell in.

LAST OF PICTURE THEFT CHARGES ARE DISMISSED

Maurice H. Goldblatt, living at the Auditorium hotel, was cleared yesterday of charges preferred against him two years ago by Bernard Devine, an artist, that he had stolen seven paintings valued at $20,000. In view of Devine's statement in open court that his charges against Goldblatt were "a mistake," perjury indictments against Devine were dismissed before Judge Harry B. Miller.

The original charge against Goldblatt was dismissed by Judge Francis Borrelli in the South Clark street court some months ago and Devine was subsequently indicted on perjury charges because of his testimony in that case.

In view of the fact that the men, who have preferred charges and counter charges against each other, were willing to drop the prosecutions, Assistant State's Attorney Harold Levy entered a nolle prosse.

Sees Pair Trying to Steal Auto; Calls Police; Catch 1

Thomas F. Flannery, 1100 Montana street, came out of a house at 114 East Superior street yesterday and saw two men attempting to steal his car. He quietly returned to the house and called the Chicago avenue police. A squad answered the call and captured James Gallagher, 4237 Kenmore avenue. The other thief ran down an alley and escaped.

BONDS SET AT $350,000.

Two alleged holdup men, Ernest Mobley, 27, and Melvin Brownell, 28, of Milwaukee, were held to the grand jury under bonds totaling $350,000 yesterday by Municipal Judge Joseph Schulman, in Des Plaines street court. Twenty-two complainants identified the two, who were also charged with carrying concealed weapons.

It's the fastest most thorough cleaner in the world

2 cleaners in 1. Changed from floor cleaner to portable cleaner in a wink!

THOUSANDS of women will tell you that the Vacuette Electric is far and away the fastest cleaner they have ever tried. And, they'll add, that it's wonderfully thorough, too.

Speedy—because it's light, and easily handled—and because one "going over" completes the work.

Thorough—because its exceptionally powerful suction removes all dirt and dust—even the hidden particles embedded in your rugs and carpets, leaving your floor coverings spick and span—glistening like the day they were new.

But, remember—cleaning your floors is but an incidental part of the work this amazing cleaner does. Snap off the long handle and snap on the small one. This gives you a little, light, portable hand cleaner as easy to carry as a purse—as simple to handle as an electric iron.

Nothing could be more ideal for your upholstered chairs and davenports—your mattresses, stair coverings. Even closed car interiors become immaculately clean once the Vacuette Electric has gotten in its work.

12 famous attachments come absolutely FREE with this speedy cleaner

Yes, these revolutionary labor saving attachments are included in the remarkably low price of this high grade cleaner. Time payments, too, if more convenient for you.

Stop at one of the stores listed on this page and see the Vacuette Electric for yourself. If it is not convenient to call, a post card or phone call will bring a Vacuette Electric to your home for you to try at your convenience.

3 POLICE, CITED BY TRIBUNE, GET TREE MEDALS

Win Highest Awards for Acts of Bravery.

Three Chicago policemen, each of whom was awarded $100 by THE TRIBUNE for exceptional bravery, won additional honors yesterday when they were picked as winners of the Lambert Tree medals for the years 1924, 1925, and 1926.

They are Patrolmen John J. Kennedy, Demitry Cal, and Benjamin J. McCarthy, all assigned to the Shakespeare avenue station under command of Capt. Patrick Harding. They were chosen by the civil service committee, the police efficiency board, and Chief Morgan A. Collins. Mayor Dever will present them with the medals.

Highest Honor for Police.

"The Lambert Tree award is the highest honor that a policeman can receive," explained the chief. "All three of these men were severely wounded while executing their duty and typify the best in the department."

Chief Collins said that the choice of the three heroes was based largely upon their deeds of valor as reported in THE TRIBUNE.

Patrolman Kennedy, the Tree medal winner for 1925, rescued a 4 year old boy in a fire at 3211 Fulton street, and was burned when he rushed back into the building in an attempt to save a 9 months old baby which perished in the flames. Capt. Harding, as quoted in THE TRIBUNE report of Aug. 10, 1924, declared that "no recompense could repay Officer Kennedy for the heroic act he performed."

Cal won distinction by advancing upon an ambushed gunman in the face of fire and, after being wounded, killing the bandit who had a long criminal record. After the shooting he staggered to a patrol box, reported the shooting, and collapsed.

Shot It Out with Two.

McCarthy won his hero award in April, 1926, by shooting it out with two ex-convicts in a spectacular gun battle. He succeeded in killing one desperado and capturing the second, indirectly saving the lives of several other persons whom they had attacked in a holdup. He received two wounds.

In connection with the Tree medals, certificates of bravery are to be given to Sergt. Ralph Cheney and Patrolmen George Wandlang, Michael J. Curtain, J. J. Murther, Jerimiah Lucey, Danial Muldane, Michael Conway, William Walsh, Howard J. O'Brien, Clarence Elverson, Joseph Flynn and George Grogan.

POLICE SLAYER SENTENCED TO HANG APRIL 15

Elin Lyons, dusky holdup man, who claims that he is related to a leading family in the republic of Colombia, yesterday was sentenced to be hanged on April 15 by Judge William V. Brothers. The judge denied a motion for a new trial.

Lyons was convicted last week by a jury of the murder of Policeman Julian Bonfield, who was shot to death on Dec. 15 when he attempted to prevent the escape of two men who had held up 28 employés of the University Extension conservatory at 702 East 41st street.

Lyons refused to make any comment when the judge asked him if he had anything to say. He glared constantly at Assistant State's Attorneys Harold Levy and Emmet Byrne, who had prosecuted him, and his guard kept close watch for fear that he might attempt to attack them. The case makes the thirteenth hanging sentence to the credit of these prosecutors.

Carol's Ex-Wife Appeals to High Court for Her Son

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 26.—Zizi Lambrino, former morganatic wife of Crown Prince Carol of Roumania, today appealed from the judgment of the lower court; last December, refusing her permission to enroll her son, Mircea, at Lycee Michelet school under Crown Prince Carol's family name, Hohenzollern. She also appeals to the higher court against the exemption of Prince Carol from paying the expenses of the boy's education.

Two Tear Bombs Subdue This Two-Gun Bad Man

Tear bombs quickly sobered a drunken negro, armed with two revolvers, who barricaded himself yesterday in a shanty in the rear of 6300 Archer avenue and threatened to shoot anyone who approached. County highway police threw two tear bombs into the house and shortly thereafter the negro, Jack Johnson, 38 years old, stumbled out, his head covered by a blanket. He surrendered meekly and was locked in the Summit jail.

Wife Sues W. M. Woodring, Steel Man, for a Divorce

Walter Monroe Woodring, wealthy executive in the steel industry at Altoona, Pa., was sued for divorce in a bill filed in the Superior court yesterday by Mary Helen Fuller Woodring, said to be a member of a well known Baltimore family. Her lawyer, Lester Bauer, refused to disclose her Chicago address. The complaint says they were married in 1915 and that he deserted her in 1924.

ITALY TEACHES WOMEN ART OF ROCKING CRADLE

Fascist Society Bars the Flapper and Tomboy.

ROME, March 26.—(AP)—Teaching the science and art of cradle rocking is the principal function of the femine Fascist organization which within three years has mustered 140,000 members.

Flappers and tom-boys are barred from this "army of mothers" whose members are taught what to do with their hands when babies wail instead of what to do with their feet when saxophones wail.

"Mothers to All Children."

"Some of us are or will be mothers of children of our own," Signora Eliza Majer Rizzioli, leader of the women Fascists, said, "but all of us must always be mothers to all of Italy's children, protecting them with a skill in which natural knack blends with scientific efficiency."

The Fascist women's organization is divided into 1,400 groups with a total membership of about 80,000 women and 60,000 girls. Each group is charged with providing the women of its district with ample means of education for motherhood and the care of babies.

Handle Dispensary Services.

Local ambulance and dispensary services are in the hands of these women who also conduct social work among minors of both sexes as well as criminals in prisons and persons on parole.

They periodically visit homes and schools, examining children with a view to conserving their health. The need for this work is considered most urgent, because Italy has the highest proportional birth rate in Europe and with it an extremely high infant mortality rate.

DAWES HITS HIGH SPOT IN HEARTS OF PANAMA FOLK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PANAMA CITY, March 26.—The press of Panama is enthusiastic in its praise of Vice President Charles G. Dawes, whose visit with President Rodolfo Chiari of Panama yesterday morning created the most favorable impression made by any American statesman. Brig. Gen. Charles Martin, commander of the Canal Zone army forces, and United States Minister John G. South accompanied Mr. Dawes on the courtesy call. All the Panaman cabinet ministers and leading officials were present.

The Panaman president will give a banquet for Vice President Dawes on Monday. Brig. Gen. Dawes requested that native music be played and said he was most interested in Panama. He then asked to be shown the national museum. He admired the native potteries.

Mr. Dawes was a guest last night at a reception given by the Panama canal governor, Col. Meriwether L. Walked. Six hundred officials of the Canal Zone were present. He reviewed the United States troops at Fort Clayton during the morning.

PRESIDENT PLANS TO REVIEW U. S. FLEET IN HAMPTON ROADS

Washington, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—President Coolidge is expected to review the 140 ships of the United States fleet after they arrive in Hampton Roads from New York. The review will be early in June. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur told the President of the plans to bring the fleet into Hampton Roads. The President said that he would make the review if his engagements permit. If he does he will leave on the Mayflower, while others will go from here on a transport. The review, as now scheduled, will take place about the time the Geneva arms conference assembles.

DAWES' ACTION MAY DECIDE FATE OF REED INQUIRY

Washington, D. C., Mar. 26.—[Special.]—Resignation of Senator Reed [Rep., W. Va.] as a member of the Reed senatorial campaign investigating committee has put up to Vice President Dawes the question of determining the legality of the continuation of the activities of the committee.

If the Vice President makes an appointment to fill the vacancy it will be equivalent to a ruling that the committee has legal authority to continue despite the failure of the senate to approve a resolution for an extension of its powers beyond the close of the 69th congress. Failure to fill the vacancy will be construed as meaning that the Vice President agrees with Senator Keyes [Rep., N. H.] that the authority of the committee ended with the adjournment of the last session.

The suggestion has been made that Senator Shortridge [Rep., Cal.] may be appointed to fill the Goff vacancy.

TAKE $25 FROM GROCER.

Three men, two of them armed with revolvers, entered the grocery store of Samuel Morrison at 1751 Maypole avenue yesterday morning and robbed him of $25.

Only the birds of the air have travelled so fast so quietly, no roar, the restful motion of a yacht with the speed and luxury of a limited train, It's a new sensational experience you can enjoy only in the new Paige "8"

No car has ever been able to do all these things:

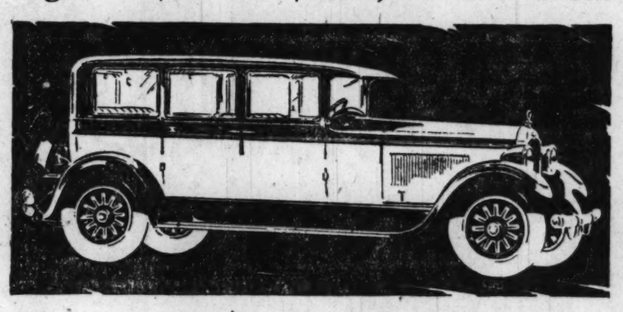
5 to 25 miles per hour in only 5 6-10 seconds—and on up to 40 miles per hour in 5 seconds more! And similar sensational performances on the longest, steepest hills.

70 honest miles per hour and more—as easily and QUIETLY as you now do 50.

An approximate saving of 30% in gasoline consumption in fourth speed.

Mile a minute speed—all day long if you want it—with the smoothness and QUIET of an ordinary car at 40 miles.

This "8" completes the new Paige line of 20 charming body types and color combinations—4 chassis in Sixes and Eights at $1095 to $2795, f. o. b. Detroit.



The Most Beautiful Car In America

You've never had such an opportunity for personal expression of your own individuality as that afforded by the twenty charming models of the new Paige line. Among these many Sixes and Eights is one ideally suited to your own requirements, and exactly expressing your own taste.

You must see—you must drive—these new Paige cars before you can fully appreciate what beautiful cars they are—what wonderfully performing cars—what truly amazing values! Climaxing 18 years of successful manufacture, these twenty new models are not only the most beautiful Paige cars ever built, but also the greatest values Paige has ever offered. In justice to yourself, you should by all means see the new Paige line before you buy any motor car.

with and because of its exclusive Two High Speeds,,,

No kind of transportation hitherto conceived by man has ever before achieved tremendous speed so silently . . . so smoothly . . . and so luxuriously . . . Aeroplanes will carry you as swiftly, but only to the accompaniment of a deafening staccato roar . . . A yacht will transport you as silently, but far too leisurely. But this great new Paige "8" brings to the modern highway the tremendous speeds of the air with the restful silences of the water.

Because of its new and exclusive Hi-Flex transmission, with 4 forward speeds, the engine actually turns over no faster when you are traveling 70 miles per hour than it does in other cars going 50.

You use fourth speed nine-tenths of the time . . . the gasoline economy that comes of this new power range approximates a saving of 30% . . . acceleration, in third speed, is the sprightliest ever achieved in a wheeled vehicle, sweeping you from 5 to 25 miles per hour in only 5.6 seconds . . . and up over the steepest hills with an effortless ease that's positively uncanny.

This "8" is a big "8" . . . not a compromise nor a little "8" . . . and yet it sells at or below the price of most ordinary "8s" . . . Come see this car and ride in it.

WORLD OF ART PAYS TRIBUTE TO BEETHOVEN

Mark 100th Anniversary of Composer's Death.

PARIS, March 26.—(AP)—Ludwig van Beethoven was honored today throughout Europe on the centenary of the great composer's death.

Probably the most elaborate celebration was held in Vienna, where the composer lived and is buried. Germany observed the anniversary throughout the nation, but particularly in Berlin and in Beethoven's native city of Bonn, where a "Beethoven archive" of manuscripts and other relics of the composer was dedicated. All the principal centers of Europe observed the anniversary.

Paris Honors Composer.

Special services were held here in the Madeline church, Cardinal Dubois officiating. The conservatory orchestra was present and played the "Mass in D," with Philippe Gaubert conducting.

Former Premier Herriot was sent to Vienna by the French government "to salute Beethoven in the name of France" at today's exercises, for which music lovers gathered from many parts of the world. Pietro Mascagni is representing Italy. M. Herriot was one of the chief speakers at the Vienna exercises today. The president of Austria and many notables participated.

U. S. Envoy Praises Musician.

VIENNA, Austria, March 26.—(AP)—Albert Henry Washburn, American minister to Austria, tonight paid tribute to Ludwig Van Beethoven at the Beethoven centenary observances here.

Mr. Washburn spoke in German and was the first speaker of the thirteen foreign delegates who paid tribute to the genius of the great composer. He told how America, busy evolving its fate during the lifetime of Beethoven, yet found time to welcome the spirit of his music.

The British minister delivered a special message from the Prince of Wales.

Two rarely heard compositions of Beethoven were given by soloists, a chorus, and orchestra.

Broadcast Beethoven Music.

BERLIN, March 26.—(AP)—Throughout Germany the memory of Ludwig van Beethoven was honored today on the centenary of the great composer's death. Countrywide celebrations were held in schools, conservatories, universities, singing societies, theaters and operas.

Newspapers devoted much space to articles about Beethoven, one of the most striking features being publication of tributes from the leading musicians of the world. Official radio stations today broadcast programs of his music.

HONOR BEETHOVEN HERE.

The German club of Chicago yesterday observed the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Ludwig Van Beethoven with a luncheon at the La Salle hotel to hear the telling of the composer's life and selections from his masterpieces.

Beethoven, according to Prof. George Scherger's interpretation of him, owed considerable of his "heaven born genius" to the fact that his father was a drunkard and that the burden of supporting several children fell on him. "Beethoven went through the schooling of suffering that developed character," Prof. Scherger declared.

An orchestra played Beethoven music and Miss Gertrude Clauss, dramatic soprano with the "Vagabond King," sang. Capt. A. F. W. Siebel, president of the German club, was in charge.

GARY STUDENTS WIN HONORS IN MUSIC CONTEST

Two Teams Place in Memory Drill.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Gary would seem to have its children excel in music as well as steel. In the music memory contest at Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon promoted by the In and About Chicago Music supervisors, both the grade and high school teams of this community took a place.

The winning grade school teams were: First, Lake Geneva, Wis.; second, Glencoe; third, Gary, with East Chicago, grade and junior high school, Elgin, Western Springs, Harvard, Cicero, Michigan City, and Wilmette as other entrants. Evanston took first place among the high schools, Gary second, and New Trier, third, Evanston having contributed three perfect scores in its team of five.

Other Schools Entered.

Other contestants were Lockport, La Grange, Highland Park, Michigan City, and University High school of Chicago.

The contest was conducted with the aid of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Eric DeLamarter, conducting. It had several elements, such as the kind and rhythm of a dance form; the nationality of a composition; identification of different instruments of the orchestra; name of a composition, name of its composer, and his nationality. Such information was gathered from various compositions, running all the way from the ancient Bach Air from the D major suite to the modern "Victory Ball" by Schelling.

Impromptu Orchestra Concert.

While the papers were being marked and added, and after the orchestra had left an impromptu concert took place, a youthful orchestra from Wilmette, songs in solo and groups, community singing by all the contestants. Cheers, as hearty as ever across at an athletic contest, greeted the announcement of the winners.

TAXI DRIVER ROBBED OF $19.

Negro bandits held up William Doolittle, 2347 Jackson boulevard, a Yellow cab driver, and robbed him of $19 yesterday. Thaddeus Stevens, 536 East 36th street, also reported being held up and robbed of $28 by two colored men.

ART INSTITUTE'S SUFFERERS BARE SUFFERING CAUSE

Officials and attendants at the Art institute have suffered for years as they answered the silly questions that visitors ask them. Yesterday they retaliated by printing a few of the choice remarks in the Art Institute News Letter.

"Where are the animals?" according to Walter Good, the veteran doorman, is the most frequent query. There are nearly as many demands to be directed to the dog show.

Recently a woman visitor made a long inspection of the Winged Victory and then asked, "Why are all the statues so much more dilapidated than they were ten years ago?" Another wanted to know who painted Titian.

But the prize exhibit of all was the downstate woman who dashed through the entrance and demanded breathlessly: "Where is my train for Galena?"

TWO BANDITS OVERLOOK $500.

Two bandits who held up Miss Susie Devolia, 1247 West Lake street, and her companion, Murray McEvoy, 1814 Park avenue, failed to find $500 hidden beneath the seat of their automobile and fled.

"2-for" sale of 2-pants suits and topcoats

Gabardines, tuxedos, heavy overcoats

2 for $33.00
2 for $57.00

The announcement alone of this famous half yearly sale should crowd our busy clothing department, because from previous "2 for" sales hundreds of customers know the importance of this event. It appeals to all men to whom well fitting clothes are a necessity and who figure their clothing budget carefully.

Two Garments for Little More Than the Price of One

The variety in this sale is very large—more than 2,000 garments to choose from. You'll find here all the new bright colored suits for young men in the new collegiate cut models, handsome blue serges and cheviots, single and double-breasted, silver-striped suits, as well as dark worsteds for the more conservative men. The styles and patterns of the topcoats present almost a riot of colors, any pattern you can think of, in plaids and plain colors, including camel's hair, mixed fabrics.

All sizes to fit men from 33 to 48.
Chest measure—stouts, subs, slims.

BIG BUTTER AND EGG REDS SHOW GERMANS TRICKS

Soviet Agency Accused in Suit of Deceit.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, March 26.—Systematic double crossing by Russian soviet trade authorities, paralyzing all possibility of regular trading with Russia, is denounced in three lawsuits filed in the Berlin courts by a German firm, "Iwa," a corporation for international exchange of goods.

"Iwa" was formed specially for the sale of Russian agricultural products throughout Europe and is suing the Russian trade delegation for the illegal transference of goods given as security, failure to lodge security, illegal arbitration, and breaking of contract.

It is reported in Berlin that since 1922 "Iwa" has been selling Russian eggs, lentils, and beans in all Europe. About $350,000,000 worth of Russian products, mostly eggs, were sold through "Iwa" for Russia, Europe's big scale butter and egg man. But after five years of strenuous efforts, "Iwa" declares it is impossible to stand longer for the "systematic deceit" of the soviet representatives.

Gold Kept from Farmers.

In 1926 Russia was to send 2,000 cars of farm goods. Only 360 cars were delivered. "Iwa" is paying with foreign gold currency on the strict understanding that gold be used to pay the farmers. The farmers never saw the gold, but the soviets tried to pay for the eggs, beans, and lentils with textiles and other goods from their government factories.

The contract provides that "Iwa" pay the cost of the farm products and transportation and share the profits of the sales with Russia. "Iwa" claims to have proofs that the Russians charged more for their farm products than they paid.

Finally, in September of last year the financial tangle was so great that both groups agreed on arbitration.

Arbitration a la Soviet.

This offered a perfect example of what the soviets consider arbitration with a bourgeoisie power should be. Two Russian officials and one German, Prof. Kahan, were named on the committee. The Germans acceded to this, feeling certain that the documents in their hands were sufficient to carry their case even in Moscow.

The committee met in Moscow. Before it convened a Russian member of the trade commissariat, Lebatschew, arrived in Berlin to perfect the negotiations. The German member of the arbitration committee remained in Berlin negotiating with M. Lebatschew. Exploiting his absence, the Moscow soviets appointed a third Russian to the arbitration committee and, behind the backs of the Germans, passed a sentence that the "Iwa" pay $400,000 in settlement of its egg bills, for which they have now sued in the German courts.

LAY PLANS FOR ANNUAL WAR ON DIRT, JUNK, RATS

Declaring war on overfilled ash cans, rats, junk, and dirty alleys representatives of the public schools met with a committee of the Association of Commerce at a luncheon yesterday in the Great Northern hotel to plan their annual clean-up campaign from April 18 to May 2.

A committee of high school students reported that 3,242,482 units of work were done last year by the students including 93,010 rats killed, 122,812 vegetable gardens planted, $51,606 worth of junk and old papers sold, and 170,471 ash cans emptied.

SHAKESPEARE'S HOME CITY MAYOR WILL SPEAK HERE

Archibald D. Flower, chairman of the board of governors of the Shakespeare Memorial theater at Stratford-on-Avon, England, and mayor of the poet's birthplace, is expected to arrive in Chicago Tuesday morning for a series of addresses and social affairs.

His first engagement will be at the Chicago Woman's club, for a luncheon at noon Tuesday, and at 2:30 o'clock that afternoon he will speak to the Junior Drama league on the topic of Shakespeare tradition as preserved in the poet's birthplace, of which he has been mayor for six years.

Naval Aviation Mechanic Killed in Fall of 2,000 Feet

Augusta, Ga., March 26.—(AP)—C. T. Stone, aviation merchanic of the Hampton Roads naval station, was killed today when a plane en route to the Pensacola air station fell 2,000 feet. Lieut. N. B. Wilkins, pilot, and G. F. Lawhon, chief mechanic mate, leaped and were not hurt. Stone also jumped and attempted to release his parachute, an investigation disclosed. The body was free of the wreck.

"pioneer of the industry's most widely accepted advancements, Oakland is pioneering again today"

Adhering to its purpose to produce a low-priced six, rivaling in beauty and mechanical quality the finest cars of the world—

—Oakland has introduced many of the foremost automotive improvements in use today.

Oakland developed the widely imitated Harmonic Balancer and led the industry in the adoption of Duco finishes. Oakland led its field in offering Fisher bodies, 4-wheel brakes, air cleaner, oil filter and foot-controlled tilting-beam headlights.

And just as in the past it has been pioneer of the industry's most widely accepted advancements, Oakland is pioneering again today—

—by employing practices and processes of such extraordinary exactness that their use has previously been restricted to the manufacturers of extremely costly cars!

Go through the great Oakland factory and you will find instance after instance where super-precision, rigorous standards and extra measures are being employed to insure an extra measure of owner satisfaction. You will see piston pin bushings being diamond bored to limits of three ten-thousandths of an inch—connecting rods being matched both for weight and center of gravity—and many other operations, equally unusual in Oakland's price class.

And when you drive the Greater Oakland Six and thrill to its almost unbelieveably smooth and spirited performance, you will understand why this rigorously controlled quality is paying such lavish dividends—to Oakland in the form of ever growing good will—to owners, in the form of everlasting satisfaction!

$1095 SEDAN

Oakland Six, $1025 to $1295. The New and Finer Pontiac Six—at New Low Prices—$775 to $975. Bodies by Fisher. All prices at factory. Easy to pay on the General Motors Time Payment Plan.

YANK LINKED TO REVOLT OF ILLINI PRINCESS' DATU

Trial Reveals Intrigue of Maj. Malone.

JOLO, Island of Sulu, March 26.—(AP)—Testimony that an American officer of the Philippine constabulary, Maj. Dorr H. Malone, fostered the recent rebellion of Datu Tahil, high Moro dignitary and husband of Princess Taharata Kiram, by giving the Moro chief 600 rounds of ammunition and several rifles and urging him to defy the government, was brought into Tahil's trial for sedition here today.

Provincial governor, Carl Moore, on the witness stand, produced an affidavit signed by Tahil implicating Malone, who was accused of having promised assistance to Tahil if the latter got into difficulty. The affidavit was sworn to before a justice of the peace.

Traces Feud to Divorce.

Gov. Moore testified that the trouble back of the rebellion originated in a feud between Tahil and Datu Uddin over who should have the most power in the Patikul district of which Uddin is president. Another factor was Tahil's divorcing Princess Korona, Uddin's daughter, in order to take Princess Taharata as his fourth wife. The Mohammedan law, which the Moros follow, allows a man but four wives.

Aided by U. of I. Co-ed.

Princess Taharata, University of Illinois, educated niece of the Sultan of Sulu, figured in the uprising when she visited Tahil's fortifications, thereby preventing the constabulary from attacking them. Injury to the Princess would have angered the entire Moro tribe.

Tahil and the princess escaped from the fort but later were taken into custody. Tahil was charged with sedition and the princess is being held in semi-confinement.

$300,000 OUSTER SUIT PRAECIPE FILED BY BROKER

Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick is to be subpoenaed before the state department of education and registration in a hearing April 15 involving the promotion of the Devonshire apartments, 6334 Sheridan road, by Krenn & Dato, agents for her properties, according to Attorney Roy C. Woods, who yesterday filed praecipe in a $300,000 suit against the real estate firm in behalf of A. B. Allen, real estate broker.

Mr. Allen claims to have been ousted from his apartment in the building last summer on a forcible detainer suit. Damages and the return of $18,500 paid Krenn & Dato on the cooperative ownership plan will be asked, Woods said.

NOTRE DAME GIVES LAETARE MEDAL TO MARGARET ANGLIN

MARGARET ANGLIN. [Fairchild Photo.]

Notre Dame, Ind., March 27.—[Special.]—The Laetare medal, known as one of the highest honors that can be conferred upon an American Catholic lay person, will be awarded to Margaret Anglin, it was announced today by the Rev. Patrick J. Carroll, C. S. C., acting president of the University of Notre Dame, which annually makes this award. Miss Anglin is the ninth woman and forty-fifth distinguished American to receive this honor.

The custom of giving the medal annually is an adaptation to the domain of secular knowledge of the bestowing of the papal Golden Rose on Laetare Sunday by the pope upon some Catholic renowned for services in the cause of religion. Each Laetare Sunday at Notre Dame sees the medal conferred upon some American Catholic distinguished in literature, science or art and who has served meritoriously both country and church. Miss Anglin's service to the stage as an exponent of classical dramatic art is regarded as making her worthy of this honor.

In conferring the medal upon Miss Anglin, Notre Dame has for the second time in forty-five years honored a member of the theatrical profession, Augustin Daly having received the medal.

LAST BOND ISSUE ROUTE HEARINGS START MONDAY

A series of public hearings in connection with the location of state bond issue routes for concrete roads between Chicago and neighboring suburbs will be held at the Sherman hotel beginning tomorrow and extending through Wednesday.

The meetings will be held under the auspices of the state department of public works and buildings.

The various routes and the time called for the discussion of each follows: Monday, 10 a. m., Chicago to Highland Park; Tuesday, 10 a. m., Barrington to Dundee, route 63 and Chicago to Algonquin, route 62; Tuesday, 2 p. m., route 22, at or near Half Day, to route 4 at a point south of Lisle, route 53; Wednesday, 10 a. m., Sycamore to Maywood, route 64; Wednesday, 2 p. m., route 54, at Archer avenue to Indiana state line east of Chicago Heights, route 52; Harvey to Indiana state line near West Hammond, route 53; Elmhurst to 111th street and Archer avenue, route 54.

C. R. Miller, director of the division of highways, and Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, have sent out official notices of the hearings.

LAWSONIA

America's Finest Country Club Colony

BUILD a Summer home on the shores of Green Lake, Wisconsin. Become a life member of a country club owning its own bathing beaches, bridle paths, yacht harbor, roadways, two eighteen hole golf courses, playgrounds and sunken gardens.

A drive over perfect cement roads brings you to Lawsonia. Here has been established a colony of summer homes, delightful to their owners. These homes have about them the natural scenic beauties, the perfect landscaping, the ideal location selected for his summer home by a man who had millions.

Lawsonia was the country home of the late Victor F. Lawson, editor of the Chicago Daily News. It is being divided into smaller estates. Title to each of these will carry a life membership in the Lawsonia Country Club.

Prices are surprisingly reasonable. Never before has there been an offer like this to the residents of Chicago.

At figures made possible only by the circumstances, here is the most unusual property with all the expensive developments completed. Everything has been done but your home building and the Lawsonia Corporation will take care of that, if you wish.

Send in the coupon below for a brochure giving all details, or telephone Mr. Thomas R. Gowenlock at the downtown office of H. O. Stone & Company, 6 North Clark Street for complete information.

Make your reservations now. Look over the property at your convenience.

Some well-known Chicagoans tell of Stutz surpassing performance

YOU saw the Improved New Safety Stutz at the Automobile Show last January—the center of attraction—the talk of all.

You saw the new, distinctive smartness of the car—with its ultra-low, close-to-the-ground body.

You saw its many features of in-built safety, beginning with the unapproached stability gained by a radically lowered center of gravity.

What you couldn't see at the Show was the surpassing performance and reliability of the Stutz.

Yet these qualities were so convincingly demonstrated during 1926, right here in Chicago, that local Stutz owners have written us many enthusiastic letters testifying to the superior way in which the car rides and drives and stands up under mileage.

Four of these letters, all from well-known Chicagoans, are reproduced here. It is worth your while to read each one through.

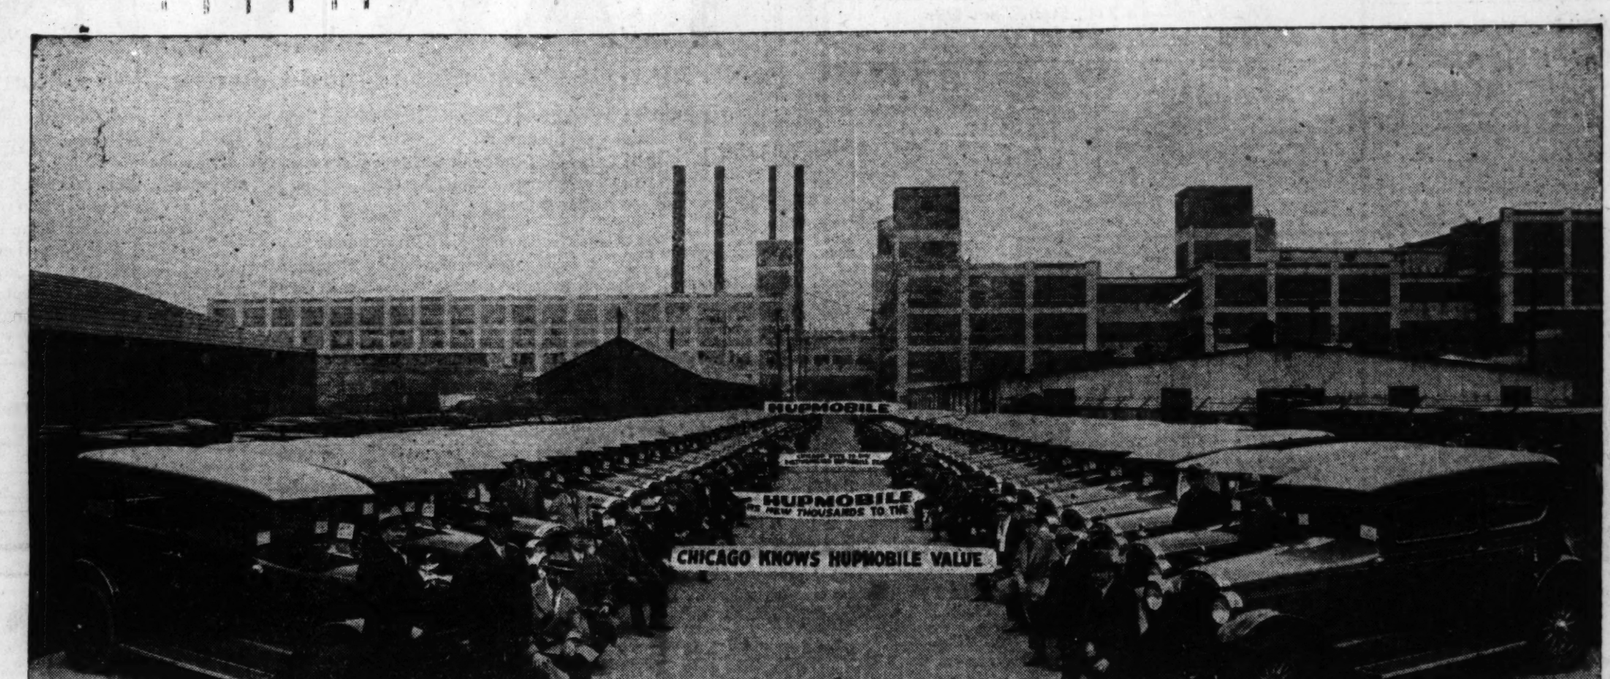
HUPMOBILE EIGHTS
Break All Fine Car
Drive-Away Records

Many new owners from Chicago District drive their new cars from factory in this greatest of all Straight-Eight deliveries



Nearly Quarter Million Dollars' Worth of Hupmobile Eights Make Big Parade from Detroit to Chicago

Further convincing proof of the constantly increasing popularity of the Hupmobile Eight was evidenced when the Gambill Motor Company, Associate Dealers and new owners arrived in Chicago with the greatest procession of Straight Eights ever driven from any motor car factory in one day.

This great delivery of Hupmobile Eights represents only a part of the $3,278,680.00 order for Hupmobiles placed by the Gambill Motor Company during the Chicago Automobile Show.

Chicago's verdict on Hupmobile Eight prestige and value strengthens the endorsement given this great car in every section of the country—and has played its part in maintaining the undisputed leadership of Hupmobile Eights among all cars of its type.

Hupmobile Eight has proved that the final word in luxurious motoring is now procurable at less than the prices of the finer sixes. And it has refined and proven this performance until the payment of more than its own price for eight-cylinder smoothness is both unnecessary and wasteful.

You will gain an entirely new idea of eight performance and eight-cylinder costs in your first few months of Hupmobile ownership.

You will realize then what the whole industry now concedes—that Hupmobile has taken the eight out of its special and limited class and opened up for it a far wider and more popular market which is rapidly deserting other types, and giving preference to Hupmobile among eights.

Fourteen Distinguished Body Types—priced from $1945 to $5795 f. o. b. Detroit, plus revenue tax. Custom Bodies Designed and built by Dietrich.

CANZONERI AND TAYLOR FIGHT TO DRAW

JONES' 281 WINS SOUTHERN OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP

GEORGETTI AND STOCKHOLM WIN SIX DAY RACE

Beat Spencer and Winter by Lap.

Final Standing

	Miles.	Laps.	Pts.
Georgetti and Stockholm	3,365	9	464
Fisher and Spencer	3,365	8	816
Hallen and Horan	3,365	7	243
Kockler and Merkner	3,365	6	222
Gaffney and Costello	3,365	5	485
Benedetti and Vermeerbergen	3,365	5	446

Bello and Benezatto	3,365	4	415
Brown and Declerck	3,365	4	267
Paul and McBeath	3,365	3	235

Lapping the field in the final hour of wild and almost incessant jamming, the team of Franco Georgetti, the little Italian, and Carl Stockholm, Chicago's smiling Adonis of the cycling game, won the fifteenth international six day bicycle race, which came to a close at Dexter Park pavilion at 11 o'clock last night.

Frank Spencer, the New Jersey boy, and Charley Winter, the big blond New Yorker, trailed in second place, one lap behind the winners. Spencer and Winter also gained a lap on the field in the final hour of relentless jamming.

CARL STOCKHOLM.

FRANCO GEORGETTI.

The Irish team of Harry Horan of Plainfield, N. J., and Eddie Madden of Newark, N. J., finished third, two laps in the rear. Fourth place in the long grind went to Ernest Kockler and Eddie Merkner of Chicago.

Cling to Lead.

Georgetti and Stockholm entered the final hour with a one lap advantage gained Wednesday night. Spencer and Winter were a lap behind, with the rest of the field strung out. Just before the gun sounded to start the sprints Referee Frank Kramer withdrew the combination of William Grimm and Freddie Taylor.

The jamming started in the second sprint when Heinsberg and Hill let go for a lap but the pack soon caught them. Winter and Spencer tried six times to break away and draw up on even terms with the leaders, but Stockholm and Georgetti were always right behind.

During the seventeenth sprint, Georgetti, starting high on the turn, broke away and pedaled into a quarter of a lap lead before the pack started in pursuit. Making perfect pickups with Stockholm, the pair soon caught the field. Then Spencer cut loose and when the jam had subsided, they, too, had drawn ahead by a lap.

Bello-Horan in Spill.

Spencer and Winter annexed the most points in the final sprints, winning a special $100 prize, and boosting their total for the week to 816. One hundred and one laps were gained by the riders during the week of pedaling.

Only two spills featured the closing jams; Bello and Horan tumbling on the back stretch while chasing McBeath and Petri, who were away to a good start toward stealing a lap. McBeath fell on the turn a moment later.

The fans gave Stockholm and Georgetti a rousing ovation as they paraded the wooden saucer with their arms loaded with flowers at the close of the race. Results of sprints follow:

First—Bello, Hill, Declerck, Petri.
Second—Gaffney, McBeath, Vermeerbergen, Benezatto.
Third—Costello, Merkner, Garrison, Horan.
Fourth—Coles, Roman, Costello, McBeath.
Fifth—Benezatto, Hill, Merkner, Garrison.
Sixth—Coles, Zucchetti, Winter, Stockholm.
Seventh—Winter, Stockholm, Horan, Declerck.
Eighth—Spencer, Georgetti, Madden, Zucchetti.
Ninth—Gaffney, Kockler, Declerck, Zucchetti.
Tenth—Spencer, Benezatto, Georgetti, Vermeerbergen.
Eleventh—Petri, Merkner, Winter, Stockholm.
Twelfth—Zucchetti, Roman, Benezatto, Madden.
Thirteenth—Winter, Vermeerbergen, Kockler, Bello.

Twenty-fifth—Roman, Vermeerbergen, Kockler, Madden.
Twenty-sixth—Georgetti, Spencer, Benezatto, Vermeerbergen.
Twenty-seventh—Garrison, Madden, Stockholm, Zucchetti.

A crowd of more than 5,000 watched the long grind come to end.

Florida Flop Hits Major League Rolls

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 26.—A number of prominent financiers of the baseball business appear to have been left on base when the Florida real estate game was called on account of overcast skies. Strange as it may seem, there is no report that Babe Ruth, always regarded as a natural born customer, was among them. The Babe's escape may have been due to a chivalrous principle of the real estate dealers that it would not be sporting to take such easy money, or it may have been that the springtime usually found Ruth without any money worth taking.

Most of the thousand odd ball players of major and high minor league ranking who trained in Florida in the two springs of the boom were invited, even pestered, to invest and hypothetical fortunes were being realized so easily that many did become customers. With such canny financiers as Col. Jake Ruppert, John J. McGraw and Miller H. Huggins setting a reassuring example it was no wonder that ball players bought real estate. The dotted line was as much a part of Florida life as the color line and some of the most illustrious names in the big league box scores were inscribed thereon. Certain players of the Washington team, with two world series purses idling in the bank were among the investors.

Freddie Lindstrom, the Giants' young third baseman, bought some frontage. Jack Fournier became a landholder pro tem and Bill Doak, then associated with the Brooklyn Dodgers, became so enthusiastic that he turned down a large raise in pay to retire from baseball and become a realtor with customers of his own.

This spring Doak and old Rube Marquard, another realtor, have been reported as applicants for reemployment in the baseball business. The Rube was so eager that he walked in cold and flapped his ancient elbow for McGraw's team in a game against the Senators in Tampa. And McGraw was so dubious about the pitchers he had that he encouraged Marquard to accompany the club to St. Augustine and give further demonstrations.

So many of the fortunes that were made in the real estate business were purely theoretical that it usually is inexact to say that so-and-so lost a lot of money. If he invested only $800 in the first place, ran it up to a paper profit of $150,000 and was wiped out in the end, you may say that he lost $150,000 but a crapshooter who starts with a dollar, runs it up to $1,000 and tips over in the last pass, usually consoles himself by reflecting that he had a lot of fun for a dollar.

One of the Washington players was telling your correspondent the other day about two lots of his in one of the swanky developments on which a tax bill or installment or some such expensive payment had just fallen due. Some one had advised him to hang to his vision and his realty and he did. But Al Schacht, the clown who works with Nick Altrock, saw the crash coming and persuaded the advertising manager of the same project to pay him a profit of 100 per cent in return for a testimonial letter. Sweet, indeed, were the uses of advertisement to Mr. Schacht for he doubled his investment in the face of a tumbling market.

Even Mr. Billy Sunday, whose devil wrestling act has always been as reliable in its own sphere as the periodical reunions of Strangler Lewis and Wayne Munn, has been having a hard time making expenses in Tampa. A few nights ago he tore off his coat, jumped on a chair and finally jumped up on the pulpit but although he may have loosed the piety and repentance of the multitude he was only human and the miracle of striking blood from a turnip was not vouchsafed him. It took him four weeks, the Tampa papers said, to raise the expenses of the show which were not great, either.

Yet some of the hotels are not doing badly. Those in St. Petersburg are as rapacious as ever. The one favored by the New York Yankees, an inn with pressed steel furniture and bare, unpainted walls gets $8 a day for a room that would not command $5 in the heart of New York or Chicago and in the dining room where commonplace food is served with all the eclat of a dairy lunch, the menu lists such items as spinach, 50 cents; string beans, 50 cents; shrimp cocktail, 90 cents, and steak, $1.50.

The abolition of dog racing was a wise move because the customers who wagered at the pari mutuels never had a chance of a square deal and most of the money was drained off the community and sent outside the state. Being unsupervised, the proprietors of the tracks could post any odds they wished to and there was no way for the customer to obtain an accounting.

Toronto Sextet Breaks Canadiens' Winning Streak

TORONTO, Ont., March 26.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs broke the twelve game winning streak of the Montreal Canadiens with a 2 to 1 victory in the closing game of the regular National Hockey league schedule tonight.

BY HARLAND ROHM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Atlanta, Ga., March 26.—The golf machine that is Bobby Jones missed a stroke or two today, and then purred along to the southern golf championship. He turned out two more near-perfect rounds of golf at Eastlake, his home course, and when the totals were added he was found to have spread-eagled the field by eight strokes.

JOHNNY FARRELL.

Bobby's score for the 72 holes was 281, one over par, made up on four rounds of 72-66-71-72. The first two rounds gave him a lead of five strokes on the field, which he increased to eight this morning. He held the field even in the afternoon.

Farrell and Golden Tie.

Two eastern Johnnies, with last names of Farrell and Golden, had each scored 74 in the morning and Farrell, an Irish stripling from New York, was second to Jones with 217. Two strokes behind was Golden, bulky and stolid Pole from Paterson, N. J.

Clarence Hackney, who had been tied with Farrell at 217 after the third round, had blown up on the first nine and Al Watrous with 219 was out in one over par, which practically left the $4,000 first and $2,500 second prizes up to Farrell and Golden.

Each gained and lost a stroke on the tenth and eleventh, Golden squared it on the twelfth, and went one stroke in the lead on the fourteenth. Back came Farrell and sank a 30 foot putt on the 17th to make it all square on the 18th tee.

Al Watrous Third.

Farrell's tee shot was short and down the steep pitch from the green down to the water carry. Golden was hole high on the right. Farrell took half a dozen practice swings and then sent his chip shot to within the inches of the hole. Golden was four feet short of his approach putt and Farrell, after another practice swing, sank his two inch putt. Golden walked calmly to his putt sighted in and sank it for $1,500.

That left the two Johnnies tied for first prize with 289. The committee endeavored to split the prize, but Farrell didn't like the idea. For a time there was talk of playing for the entire $6,500 on a winner take all basis, but that was discarded, and they'll play off at 18 holes Monday afternoon for the $1,500 difference between first and second.

Al Watrous will take home the $1,750 third prize check for shooting two fine rounds of 73 and 72 for a total of 291. Fourth was Leo Diegel with a 70 and 72, added to his 150 of yesterday for 292 and $1,200. Willie Klein, finishing with a 71, for 293, gets $800 for fifth. Joe Turnesa, Bob Cruickshank, and Larry Nabholtz each will get a third of $1,300, after tying at 294 for sixth, seventh, and eighth places. Jim Foulis of Hinsdale collects $250 for ninth, with 295. Jock Hutchison's 297 will bring him $200 for tenth, and Freddie McLeod and Tommy Armour split the next two, totaling $250 for 298's. After that come fourteen more $100 prizes and five $50 prizes.

Voight Second Amateur.

George Voight, tall thin newspaperman from Washington, was the second high amateur, tieing Jock Hutchison at 297. Watts Gunn was the next amateur in line, scoring 299.

Bobby's last two rounds today each should have been a stroke less. The galloping herd of the gallery which has hampered everyone playing with Bobby—they began to charge and talk when Jones had played regardless of what the other two in the threesome were doing—finally penalized Bobby a stroke. On the tenth hole of the morning round, some of the advance guard hushed over Bobby's ball and somebody stepped it into the soft turf. He had to take a mashie and dig it out.

That shot would have given him par.

Bush Pitches Home Runs So Los Angeles Wins, 6-5

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 26.—The fast ball that Joe Bush, the Mississippian, employs with such uncanny effectiveness against the Giants, doesn't seem to go so well in these parts. The slatlike southerner threw a lot of them today and not a few were turned back on him so neatly that they went clear over the wall of Bill Wrigley's ball palace and caused the Cubs to tumble in defeat before the champion Angels. The score was 6 to 5, the deciding run going over in the ninth when Bob Osborn was on the knob.

GUY BUSH.

Bush stuck willingly to his job for seven innings and seven hits were made off his speed. Three of these blows were good for the circuit. Two of them occurred with nobody on base, but the third happened in the seventh when two hostile athletes were on base.

Angels' Gifts Do No Good.

The Angel management sent forth three different pitchers of no particular reputation but the Cubs made them look like world beaters. First was Moss, who allowed three hits in four innings. Two of these hits were added up with some freak happenings in the fourth and the major leaguers collected four bargain tallies then and there. The next three chapters were handled by Yarrison, who was in the big league some time or another, and he was frisked for two blows and a run in the seventh. Then a lad named Cunningham, just in from Pocatello in Idaho, hung the Bruins by their ears for the last two rounds.

What the Cubs couldn't do with their bats they did in the field, so the 2,000 attending natives felt they received a run for their money. Mr. Webb, the new outfielder, leaped high for a one handed catch against the wall and Hack Wilson did a similar stunt except that he used both hands to keep the flying pellet from bouncing off the bricks.

Jacobs Does the Damage.

The gentleman who caused most of the trouble for Bush was Jacobs, the Angels' second sacker. Jake smacked the first pitch over the left field wall in the opening inning, then he went to work and did it again in the seventh with two men on bases as the result of an error by Freigau and a single. Jake also had a hand in promoting the winning tally off Osborn in the ninth. With a mate on base, Jake doubled, but the other runner was caught at the plate. Jake took third on the play and a moment later Cox, the ex-Brooklyn fly chaser, drove him home with a single.

Still another who caused the Cubs some worry was Art Weiss, once a Chicago performer. Art was up four times and produced as many hits. The first of the four was a homer over the left field barrier in the second inning, but his remaining three taps didn't figure in the scoring.

Frank Kern, the infield recruit from Waukegan, Ill., started for home this evening upon receipt of word that his father had passed away.

Homers Do It

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Dallas, Tex., March 26.—John Blankenship, hearty rancher from Atoka, Okla., who specializes in rearing high grade baseball pitchers, today saw his oldest boy, Ted, win a game of baseball, 6 to 1. He's going to stay over tomorrow in the hope that the "next un" Homer or Cy, as he calls him, will be selected by Manager Schalk to do the Sabbath throwing.

To show Ted that his dad wasn't the only person on the premises interested in a Blankenship victory over the Dallas Steers, the White Sox turned in an errorless game and knocked out 13 hits, three of them homers.

Sox Get Three Homers.

One of the homers, by Bib Falk, the pride of Texas, accomplished in the ninth inning, was said to be the longest hit ever made in the Steer stadium. The blow brought Bib's training season total to 18 hits in 40 times at bat. Ten of his efforts have been for extra bases.

Capt. Kamm placed the game on a satisfactory basis in the first inning by batting the ball over the left field fence after Ward had walked. The other homer was made by Peckinpaugh in the second inning.

That Schalk is satisfied with the training progress of the pitchers expected to take regular turns when the championship season opens is indicated by the fact that he has abandoned the usual exhibition process of arbitrarily changing his boxmen at the end of the fifth inning. Thomas pitched eight innings Wednesday and Barnabee went all the way Thursday. Blankenship was in at the finish today.

By way of convincing Aimee Semple McPherson that the old devil, whom the evangelists suspect is training in the south, has nothing to do with the baseball industry, all boys under the age of whiskers today were admitted to the stadium free of charge.

Play Dallas Again Today.

The great test between four base blows as expounded by the White Sox and four square gospel as expounded by Mrs. MacPherson will come tomorrow afternoon. Both sides are claiming sellouts and there probably never will be a way of determining the winner, as both organizations have a rule against announcing the actual gate, except in world series.

After the game tomorrow the Sox will go back to Shreveport, their training headquarters. On Monday they play a benefit game not on the regular exhibition schedule. They have five scheduled games with Shreveport and on April 5 start northwabr, making stops in Texarkana, Louisville, Memphis, and Toledo.

Out of competition so bitter that winners of four individual events had to better aged records to triumph, Northeastern High school of Detroit and the La Grange track teams yesterday emerged in a tie for team honors in Northwestern university's fifteenth annual national interscholastic track meet. Each scored thirteen points. Northwestern of Detroit was a close runner-up with twelve.

While the battle was being waged on the track, prep swimmers were struggling for honors in the tank.

Wilmington finally was declared the winner with 26 points to Northwestern's 23.

The outstanding individual performance of the games was made by Warne of Kokomo, Ind., who shattered the world's interscholastic record in the pole vault. The Hoosier athlete soared over the bar at 12 feet 7⅞ inches. The former Northwestern meet record was 11 feet 9 inches, set by Johns, of La Salle-Peru in 1924.

Shot Put Record Falls.

Clarence Sample of Webster Grove, Mo., established a new mark in the shot put with a toss of 49 feet 11¾ inches, 5½ inches better than the old mark set by Allman of Urbana in 1916.

Lemoine Boyle, Rockford's demure all around performer, won the high jump, after a bard fought duel with Kuehn of Oak Park at 6 feet 1¾ inches, slightly more than an inch higher than Miller of Elmwood did last year for his record.

Beatty, the dusky flash from Detroit Northeastern, turned in a collegiate performance with his 2:01.7 half mile, almost four seconds better than the mark done in 1923 by Stocking of Rockford.

Marsh of Central High, Minneapolis, came down as a one man swim team to win the 100 yard back stroke and succeeded not only in winning but throwing into the discard the mark made by Sam Hill, now captain of the University of Minnesota swimmers. Marsh covered the distance in 1:07 4-10.

The other swimming record to fall was lowered by Wilmington in the preliminaries. Their medley relay quartet pared its own record to 2:07.4, while their 160 yard relay team equaled its own mark of 1:20.2. Summaries:

BOTH BOXERS ARM WEARY AS BATTLE ENDS

Bell Whips Vacca; Peters Beaten.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

In the greatest fight held in the state since boxing was legalized nearly a year ago Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., the world's bantamweight champion in eighteen states, and Tony Canzoneri of New York battled ten rounds to a draw at the Coliseum last night.

BUD TAYLOR.

It was a savage fight. If it had gone a few more rounds both fighters might have dropped from exhaustion. At no time did they hesitate to trade punches and they put everything they had behind these knockout efforts. Their heads at times bobbed about like punching bags.

Canzoneri proved a stronger opponent than Taylor and his supporters anticipated. The Italian lost no time to carry the fight. He came out of his corner at the tap of the bell and let go with a wild right swing. As the fight wore on, however, Tony mounted his bicycle and Taylor had to do a lot of chasing in the last half of the contest.

In awarding a decision, three cardinal points generally govern. These are clean punching, aggressiveness and sportsmanship. The Italian did most of the clean hitting and Taylor evened the score by aggressiveness. Canzoneri's performance was marred by his poor sportsmanship at the beginning of the tenth. It is customary in Illinois for the fighters to shake hands at the start of the final round. Instead, Tony let loose with a right hand swing. Taylor was unprotected at the time, but managed to get out of harm's way.

Verdict Pleases Fans.

The decision met with almost universal approval. The verdict handed down by Judges James G. Barsaloux and John H. Lyle did not draw the customary booing and hissing.

Canzoneri frequently jabbed Taylor with right hand leads, and Taylor never tried to counter. Taylor's ring experience should have taught him never to permit fighters who lead with right hands to pile up scoring punches. While these straight right hand leads did not have any sting, they counted, and a fighter of Taylor's ability should not have permitted them to land.

Taylor appeared bewildered at times as the Italian danced around him and stabbed him with left leads and hooks. This was particularly true when Tony was on his bicycle and Taylor had to chase. The Italian, however, changed his pace frequently and took the aggressive to lead with a left and bring over his right in one-two fashion. In the last half of the bout Taylor solved the defense of his opponent and kept the score even.

Both Carry Battle Scars.

Taylor fought a great fight. He was up against a clever fighter who is sure to go far in the bantamweight division. Canzoneri appears to have everything which goes to make a great fighter and the pair likely will be rematched for the title. Both were marked when they left the ring. Bud's left eye was swollen and Tony had a cut over the left side of his forehead.

The bout started at a furious clip. Canzoneri had all the best of the milling in the first round when he carried the fight to Taylor and landed almost at will on Bud's head and body. Bud showed better in the second session, when honors were about even. The Terre Haute mauler evened the score by winning the third session. Bud hit straighter and did not miss as often.

Honors were about even in the fourth round, which was featured by toe to toe fighting. The fifth went to Tony, and he had a shade in the seventh. The eighth was about even, and Taylor had the best of the ninth, which again was featured by hard punching, with science thrown to the winds. The final round was a thriller. Both fighters unbelted everything they had, but there was little steam behind the punches. Taylor weighed 118 pounds at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and Canzoneri 117. Joe Choynski, the old-time heavyweight, refereed the bout.

In the semi-windup Abe Attel Goldstein of New York, the former world's bantamweight champion, won the eight round decision over Peter Sarmiento, the Filipino. In the seventh Goldstein upset the Filipino with a right cross for a four count. In the fourth Sarmiento scored a knockdown with a left hook to the body. Goldstein was up before a count could be made over him.

Extra Bout Thrown In.

Following the match, Sarmiento started another fight. In going to his dressing room he took picks on Joe Sherman, a former local lightweight, who had called him a Chinaman. This fuss was stopped before any damage was done.

In the introductory bout, Earl Mastro, local flyweight, won a four round decision over Sid Kelly of Milwaukee. Earl scored four knockdowns in the opening round but was unable to put hisopponent away in the remaining three rounds. They weighed 112 pounds.

THIRD ROUND—Taylor missed with left to body and then shot same hand to the face. Canzoneri missed with his left and right to the head and Taylor connected with left uppercut to face. Tony came back with a right cross to the jaw. Bad shot a right to head and followed with straight left jab to the face. Taylor blocked Tony's hard right and left swings to the face and started to pepper the Italian with both hands around the face and body.

FIFTH ROUND—Tony danced around and tried to spear Taylor with straight lefts. Bud put a straight left to stomach and pulled away from a right cross. Bud put a left to head and a left to the body. Taylor was short with a left swing and Tony hooked a left to the body and then brought it to the head. Canzoneri stuck two lefts to Bud's face without return. The Italian socked Taylor with a hard right cross. Bud slipped to the mat but it was not a knockdown. Canzoneri danced around Taylor and hit him almost at will at the bell.

SEVENTH ROUND—Taylor connected with left hook and folowed with two right crosses to the jaw. Tony immediately got on his micycle and Bud had to chase him. Bud blocked a hard left to the body and then Tony speared him with two straight lefts to the face. Taylor missed badly with a left hook and the Italian jabbe dhim twice with straight lefts. Bud missed two left hooks to the head and again the Italian shot straight lefts to the head without return. They traded lefts to the face and then Canzoneri shot two rights to Bud's jaw. Bud drove a right to the jaw and Canzoneri came back with a right to the head at the bell.

EIGHTH ROUND—Taylor was short with a left hook to the head. Tony danced around and shot his left to the face without a return. They traded right and left punches to the body at close quarters. Tony shot a hard right to the jaw and they clinched. The Italian put hard right and lefts to head which slowed Taylor. Taylor was short with a left hook but came back and planted another left to the face. They threw science to the winds and turned loose every blow they knew. Tony was tiring and his blows lacked steam. Canzoneri connected with a right swing at the bell.

NINTH ROUND—Tony led with his right and connected twice on the face. They traded blows to head at close range. The Italian stuck his left in Bud's face twice and Bud came back with a right to the body. They whaled away with both hands to head and body in center of the ring. Both were tired. Canzoneri rocked Taylor with right hook. Taylor was short with right and left hooks. Canzoneri stuck two lefts to the face and followed with right cross to jaw. Taylor evened the score a moment later with hard right to the body.

MICHIGAN BEATS CORNELL TRACK TEAM, 50 TO 44

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 26.—[Special.]—For the fifth consecutive year Michigan's track team defeated Cornell in the annual indoor meet, held at the Yost Field house here tonight. The final score was: Michigan, 50½; Cornell, 44½.

The easterners, who took second in the eastern intercollegiate, were doped to win over the Big Ten school, as Michigan was only good for fourth in the conference meet. Michigan took four firsts, Cornell three, and three events ended in a tie.

The most thrilling finish of the evening came in the two mile run, when Hornberger of Michigan, after trailing Benson of Cornell during the whole race, sprinted to tie him at the tape.

Ottawa Hockey Team Wins Over Maroons by 3 to 2

MONTREAL, March 26.—(AP)—Ottawa Senators closed the regular National Hockey league season tonight with a 3 to 2 victory over the Montreal Maroons.

EAU CLAIRE WINS TITLE.

Madison, Wis., March 26.—(AP)—The Eau Claire High school basketball team romped off with the state title here tonight, defeating the Madison Central, 18 to 13.

BRADLEY'S BOO TAKES $15,000 LOUISIANA DERBY

Fred Jr. Is Second and Fly Hawk Third.

New Orleans, La., March 26.—(AP)—Boo, E. R. Bradley's successor to the many famous "B's" of the Idle Hour farm, which have run before him, upheld the stable's name here this afternoon by winning the $15,000 Louisiana Derby by a length and a half over Fred Jr., his nearest competitor.

The winner's time for the mile and an eighth was 1:51 4-5, three-fifths of a second slower than the track record set by Bagenbaggage last year.

The winner was a 9-10 favorite. Two dollar tickets on him paid $3.80 to win, $2.60 to place and $2.60 to show.

Crippled Johnson Rides.

Boo's win, in a large measure, was due to the ride given him by "Goldie" Johnson. Johnson with his left leg in a plaster cast as a result of an injury yesterday in the third race, rode Boo today. He held the son of Black Tony off the pace until the three-quarter was reached, then made his move and came into the stretch to win going away from Fred Jr., who had hung all the way around.

Fred Jr., S. W. Grant's 3 year old, who was mentioned in the advance dope as the most probable contender for the honors, ran true to form under a steady ride by N. Burger, and finished second, although outrun in the stretch by Boo.

Fly Hawk Is Third.

Fly Hawk, a rank outsider in the betting, finished third, a head in front of Peter Peter, the Greentree star, but eight lengths behind Fred Jr. The Greentree entry, Peter Peter, and Overlooked could no better than finish fourth and sixth respectively.

Ideal weather, a fast track and record breaking crowd of 16,000 cheered the eleven contenders as they flashed down the stretch.

The start of the race was delayed 30 minutes when Jockey Dale, with the leg up on Bob Rogers, became ill as the horses went to the post and fell to the ground. Dale was carried from the track but was not badly injured. He was replaced by Zucchini.

WIDE CAPTURES TWO MILE RACE FROM RITOLA

Runs Distance in 9:05 at New York.

Madison Square Garden, New York, March 26.—(AP)—Edvin Wide, the smooth running Swedish schoolmaster, decisively defeated Willie Ritola, Finnish-American veteran, and Willie Goodwin of the New York A. C. tonight in a two mile race featuring the United Swedish Charities' track meet, but failed to break the world's record.

Wide was clocked in nine minutes five seconds, as compared with the standard of 8:58 1-5, set two years ago by the Finnish phantom. Paavo Nurmi.

The Swedish stylist, however, gained sweet revenge over Ritola. It was the first time they had met since the 1924 Olympics, when Ritola trimmed Wide in four straight races.

This was to have been Wide's farewell to board tracks, but it was announced after his victory that he would make another attempt to lower the world's indoor mile record of 4:12 on April 9, at the Seventh Regiment armory. The Swede was beaten by Lloyd Hahn, American champion, recently in a mile race here.

"Chick" Werner, former University of Illinois hurdler, now wearing the colors of the Illinios Athletic club, shattered one world's indoor record and equalled another in making a clean sweep of the series of timber topping events providing an early feature for the meet.

Werner stepped over the sixty yard low sticks in 7 1-5 seconds to displace the former mark of 7 2-5, set in 1913 by J. J. Eller at Chicago.

Harold M. Osborn of the Illinois A. C., world's champion high jumper, turned in the best performance he has shown in his specialty this season, when he leaped 6 feet 5¼ inches to win this event.

but he made up one on the eighteenth on the morning round, where his tee shot landed to right of the green his chip shot, 40 feet from the hole, rolled straight into the cup.

Bobby tossed one away himself when he took a back handed slap at a four inch putt and missed it. In the afternoon he took three putts on four holes, but was only two over par at that.

MISS FORDYCE BEATEN

Pinehurst, N. C., March 26.—(AP)—The playing through champion, Miss Louise Fordyce of Youngstown, had her crown snatched unceremoniously from her head today. The conqueror of the Ohio girl, who won the title by defeating Miss Glenna Collett in last year's final round, was Mrs. Florence C. Burrows of the Engineers' club of Long Island.

The score of the match was 4 and 2, but it might have been even more decisive except for some poor putting on Mrs. Burrows' part.

Two other favorites, Miss Helen Payson, the Maine champion, and Mrs. Stewart Hanley, the Michigan state titleholder, fell by the wayside, while Miss Bernice Wall, the former Wisconsin state champion, and Miss Edith Quier of Reading, a former Berthellyn cup winner, came perilously close to being eliminated.

The three outstanding players of the championship, Miss Glenna Collett, yesterday's medal winner; Miss Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, and Miss Maureen Orcutt of Englewood, the holder of the women's metropolitan championship, won easily.

CENTRAL A. A. U. PENTATHLON WON BY WEISSMULLER

Takes First Place in Every Event.

John Weissmuller of the Illinois Athletic club, world champion swimmer, won the Central A. A. U. pentathlon swimming championship at the I. A. C. pool yesterday. Johnny's point total was 5, against 11 for Weston Kimball, his team mate, and 14 for Albert Schwartz, Northwestern university freshman competing unattached.

JOHNNY WEISSMULLER.

Victory for Weissmuller and the second place for Kimball closed the gap in the race for the Central team championship between the I. A. C. and the C. A. A. The latter still leads, 54 to 52. Three events remaine to be decided—the 150 yard back stroke, the 220 yard free style, and the fancy diving. These events are to be held on Wednesday at the Milwaukee A. C.

In the pentathlon Weissmuller won the 100 yard free style in :53 2-10, the 100 yard back stroke in 1:06 8-10, the 100 yard breast stroke in 1:25 2-5, and the 500 yard free style in 5:56 1-10. Kimball was second in every event except the diving, in which Schwartz was second to Weissmuller.

An Unusual Opportunity for a Man Who Controls National Advertising Accounts

This message is addressed to an able advertising salesman and account executive who wants to obtain the utmost in agency service for his clients.

The man we have in mind controls one or more accounts. He feels that his present connection does not give him the full measure of co-operation on business in hand or in the acquirement of new accounts.

He is ambitious to enlarge his business and is in a position to make a new agency connection if shown that such a move would be to his advantage.

One of America's foremost agencies offers this man the opportunity he is looking for. This agency has been established for many years. It has branches in leading cities, and capital to handle accounts of any size.

It not only offers all in equipment, organization and man power that can be desired but it also has a feature of service which no other agency can offer. It is prepared to back the right man to the limit. The location is Chicago.

If you are the man and can visualize what a connection like this means, we are ready to arrange for an interview.

You can write with the knowledge that your communication will be held in strict confidence. Our own people are informed of this advertisement and your letter will be read only by the officers of the company. Address CB-563 Tribune.

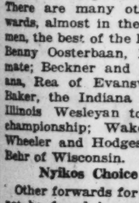
BY FRED H. YOUNG.
(BIG TEN OFFICIAL.)

No basketball season would be complete without the usual compendium of individual talent known as the all star teams. Mr. Camp started it nearly forty years ago with his football teams and the custom has grown both in football and basketball until now every man who has seen one game picks his all star team, and of late years the custom has spread even to those who have not seen a game.



FRANK HARRIGAN.

Some of these all star teams are good and some art not. Most are based on newspaper publicity, and that is why they take into account so little of what really counts. It is consistent ability and not paragraphs that make a basketball player a star.

Two Notre Dame Men Picked.

George Keogan's great Notre Dame five, which has won 38 out of 40 games the last two seasons, and which is entitled to a strong claim on the middle western championship, is given two places on the first team, Capt. John Nyikos being chosen as center on the first quintet, and Louis Conroy, the brilliant Blue and Gold guard, being named as Chuck McConnell's teammate on the first selection. Ray Dahman, Keogan's other guard, who also was a big factor in the team's phenomenal showing this year, is placed on the second team.

As usual, the Big Ten conference is allotted the majority of places.

There is also excellent material in the smaller colleges of the west, and these men have been given consideration in making the final selection.

Capt. Russ Daugherity, Illinois' star forward, who was chosen for the all conference team, also merits a place on the all western. His remarkable all around ability stamps him as one of the greatest players the Big Ten ever produced.

The other forward position is awarded Frank Harrigan, Michigan's expert dribbler and shooter, who can play any of the three positions on the court. There are many other brilliant forwards, almost in the class with these men, the best of the lot probably being Benny Oosterbaan, Harrigan's teammate; Beckner and Kreuger of Indiana, Rea of Evansville college, Joe Baker, the Indiana boy who carried Illinois Wesleyan to a second state championship; Wakefield of Butler, Wheeler and Hodges of Purdue, and Behr of Wisconsin.

Nyikos Choice at Center.

Other forwards for whom places can not be found because there are not enough to go around are Otterness of Minnesota, Lawless of Loyola, Evard and Dalrymple of St. Viator, Smaha of Nebraska, Byers of Kansas Aggies, McMillen of Ohio State, Shake of Danville Normal, Wooden of Franklin, Robinson of Wabash, Wine of North Manchester college, Yunker of Missouri and Layman of Lincoln.

John Nyikos of Notre Dame is picked for the first team center berth. Nyikos is all that any coach could ask for in a center. Remarkably clever, a wonderful shot, and as strong a floor man as there is in the country, he was not outplayed all year, and would help round out a team that would outclass anything in the country today.

Other good centers deserving of honorable mention are Lyons of Franklin, Felt of Michigan State, Norderly of Carleton, Hite of Danville Normal, Kowalczyk of Wisconsin, and Mulhenberg of the championship Cornell five of the Midwest conference.

As in 1926, Chuck McConnell, the slender Iowa guard, and Conroy of Notre Dame are assigned the first team guard posts. Neither suffered through the publicity they received a year ago, and both played leading roles in making their teams among the strongest in the west. Only a shade behind them are Hunt of Ohio State, Dahman of Notre Dame, Barnum of Wisconsin, Devol of Wabash, Hubbard of Coe, Chadd of Butler, Heorger and McDonough of Chicago.

JOYCE CAGERS CAPTURE COOK COUNTY TITLE

The Joyce and Company basketball team won the heavyweight championship of Cook county by defeating the Lemont K. of C. team, 22 to 12, in the finals of the titular tournament at St. Philip's gym last night. The Boys' Brotherhood Republic squad beat McKinley Park, 19 to 12, in the 115 pound class; Columbus Park Celtics nipped the B. B. R. in the 125 pound class; the Jewish People's Institute Flashes fell before the Collegiate five, 22 to 18, in the 135 pound division; and the Jewish People's Institute defeated the Brandon Sportsmen, 24 to 15, in the 145 pound division.

RYERSON WINS AGAIN.

St. Augustine, Fla., March 26.—(AP)—John R. Ryerson from Coopertown, N. Y., and former Yale star, annexed another Florida golf title here today when he defeated Tommy Aycock, young Jacksonville player, 2 and 1, in the 3½ hole final contest of the amateur tournament for the winter championship of Florida.

Wisconsin	9
Illinois	6
Chicago	6

Champaign, Ill., March 26.—[Special.]—Michigan, headed by Samson and Darnall, easily won the Western conference swimming championship in the seventeenth annual Big Ten water meet in the new pool of the University of Illinois today. The Wolverines scored 49 points, the largest team total ever amassed in the competition.

Seven Records Fall.

In seven of eight events new conference records were established. Two of these new marks, established by Samson of Michigan, also are national collegiate records. The new Big Ten records are as follows:

100 yard free style—Darnall, Michigan, :53 4-5.
220 yard free style—Samson, Michigan, 2:18 1-5 [also national collegiate record].
440 yard free style—Samson, Michigan, 5:09 4-5 [also national collegiate record].
150 yard back stroke—Spindle, Michigan, 1:46 1-5.
200 yard breast stroke—Kratz, Wisconsin, 2:43 3-5.
200 yard relay—Michigan, 1:39 1-5.
300 yard medley relay—Michigan, 3:18 3-5.

One of the closest races was in the 150 yard back stroke in which Spindle of Michigan defeated Jim Hill of Minnesota. Hill had broken the conference record in the preliminaries and was the favorite, but the Wolverine triumphed by lowering Hill's record.

Colbath Loses in Diving.

Heinie Groh, Illinois sophomore, defeated Colbath of Northwestern, Central A. A. U. diving champion and undefeated in his specialty this season. Groh scored 106.3 points to 102 scored by Colbath. The Purple star recently recovered from an illness which kept him out of competition for weeks.

The Wolverines won all the events except two—the breast stroke, which went to Kratz of Wisconsin, and the dive won by Groh of Illinois. It was the first time in history that Michigan ever took the championship in swimming.

50 YARDS FREE STYLE—Won by Darnall, Michigan; Hill, Minnesota, second; Oker, Chicago, third; Manovitz, Northwestern, fourth. Time, :24 2-5.

200 YARDS BREAST STROKE—Won by Kratz, Wisconsin; Purdy, Minnesota, second; Shorr, Michigan, third; Baumrucker, Chicago, fourth. Time, 2:43 3-6. [New western conference record.]

200 YARDS RELAY—Won by Michigan [Seager, Watson, Sampson, Darnall]; Minnesota, second Northwestern, third; Chicago, fourth. Time, 1:39 2-5. [New conference record was established by Michigan in preliminaries last night at 1:39 1-5.]

150 YARDS BACK STROKE—Won by Spindle, Michigan; J. Hill, Minnesota, second; Hubbell, Michigan, third; Miller, Northwestern, fourth. Time, 1:46 1-5. [New western conference record.]

100 YARDS FREE STYLE—Won by Darnall, Michigan; Moody, Minnesota, second; Sam Hill, Minnesota, third; Noyes, Chicago, fourth. Time, :55.

440 YARDS FREE STYLE—Won by Samson, Michigan; Wagner, Michigan, second; Bjornberg, Minnesota, third; Druiding, Northwestern, fourth. Time, 5:32 2-5.

FANCY DIVING—Won by Groh, Illinois; Colbath, Northwestern, second; Hattleberg, Wisconsin, third; Pertle, Illinois, fourth.

200 YARDS FREE STYLE—Won by Samson, Michigan; Lucke, Minnesota, second; Moody, Minnesota, third; Wagner, Michigan, fourth. Time—2:18 1-5. [New national collegiate and western conference record].

300 YARDS MEDLEY RELAY—Won by Michigan, [Shorr, Spindle, Seager]; Minnesota, second; Northwestern, third; Wisconsin, fourth. Time—3:18 3-5. [New western conference record].

CLARENCE DE MAR OF BOSTON WINS BALTIMORE RACE

Baltimore, Md., March 26.—(AP)—A wise old head, topping a pair of venerable whipcord legs, put youth to rout today as Clarence de Mar of Boston, national champion, won his second consecutive Laurel to Baltimore Marathon.

Through a spattering, murky rain, the Melrose American Legion veteran covered the 26 mile 385 yard course in 2 hours, 43 minutes, 49 4-5 seconds, to clip one minute 55 2-5 seconds from his time for the Marathon last year, but endangering neither Frank Zuna's course record of 2:41:39 2-5 nor the national record of 2:25:40 2-5 hung up at Boston last year by Johnny Miles, sensational young Nova Scotian.

Albert R. Michelson of Cygnet A. C., East Port Chester, Conn., finished second. His time was 2 hours 45 minutes 15 1-5 seconds. Frank Zuna, Millrose A. C., New York, was third and William Agee, Emorywood A. C., Baltimore, was fourth.

Pennock Given 3 Year Contract; Joins Yankees

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26.—[Special.] — All differences between Herb Pennock, the New York Yankees' pitching ace, and Col. Ruppert were announced as adjusted today with the news that the southpaw had been given a three year contract. Herb arrived at camp this morning.

In the Wake of the News

WHITNEY DERBY HOPES.

HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY, carrying on the name of a family famous on the American turf, is one of the most persistent seekers of Kentucky Derby victories although fortune has not been overkind considering the attempts and quality of contenders entered. Whitney, too, ranks high with Kentuckians for his sportsmanship. There have been times when Whitney shipped to Louisville with only "hopes"—outside hopes at that—so that his colors might be represented and to help make the race.

Not since 1915 when Regret triumphed—the only filly ever to win and incidentally a granddaughter of Modesty, a mare which took the first American Derby in 1884—have the Whitney colors flashed first past the judges' stand.

For 1927 Whitney vied with E. R. Bradley in being the heaviest nominator, each naming seven. The Whitney entrants are Afterglow, Bostonian, Byrd, Night Mail, Termangent, Valorous, and Whiskery.

Of these, Valorous and Whiskery are the most highly regarded by Jimmy Rowe, veteran trainer for the stable of blue and brown silks. Whiskery, by Whisk Broom II., was rather ordinary in his early two year old form but began showing class in the fall. In the Pimlico Futurity he finished third to Fair Star and Jopagan in a race where he was crowded and impeded. His more highly regarded stablemate, Valorous, ran unplaced. The brown colt has wintered well at Brookdale farm in New Jersey.

Valorous, a chestnut son of Pennant, went to the races late, first appearing in August. After winning two smaller stakes, he finished third to Scapa Flow and Candy Queen in the Belmont Futurity. His stable connections asserted a swerve in the stretch by the winner destroyed his winning chance.

Valorous easily reversed the verdict on Candy Queen by taking the Kentucky Jockey Club $50,000 stakes at a mile over sloppy going in 1:43 3-5, with his stablemate, Bostonian, second. Previously, Valorous had not been thought a mudder. His Pimlico Futurity showing never was satisfactorily explained, but Rowe retains his confidence.

Like Whiskery, Valorous has trained well. Both are sure starters barring mishaps or revised estimates before May 14.

Poker Variations.

Friend Harve: We call it "Woolworth" because it is four-up and four-down with fives and tens wild. Deal four cards to each player, all down. On the next round, the card is turned up and betting begins. Similarly for the next three cards. If you have a five or ten in your hand or a pair of either, you have threes to start with. If you haven't a wild card or a pair in the first five cards, you better drop out. It usually takes a straight flush or fives to win. Some real poker players don't care for this game but we get a lot of fun out of it. Helper Rube.

They still talk of the advent of the straight eight, of the balloon tire, of four wheel brakes. In years to come they will talk of the Shock-less Chassis—as soundly revolutionary an advance as the automobile world has ever seen. And if you will thoroughly investigate it [we'll help gladly] you will talk of the Shock-less Chassis as an early owner, rather than one who delayed the inevitable.

FIVE RECORDS FALL IN U. OF C. INVITATION MEET

Sivak of I. A. C. Runs Mile in 4:21 3-10.

Participants in the first University of Chicago invitation track meet welcomed Maroon hospitality at Bartlett gymnasium last night by breaking five of the gymnasium records, some of which had stood for many years. The Chicago A. A. won the team honors with 54½ points. The University of Chicago was second with 22½ and the Illinois A. C. third with 18.

The mile record fell before the fleetness of Sivak of the Illinois A. C., who stepped the distance in 4:21 3-10 in the best performance of the evening. Phelps of the Chicago A. A. and formerly from the University of Iowa reeled off the two mile in 9:37 7-10, in what was proportionately almost as good time.

C. A. A. athletes fought for honors in both the high and low hurdles and lowered the record in each. Dan Kinsey, former Illinois trackster, topped the lows in :06 2-10, while Clarence Brickman, former Maroon, nosed him out in the high hurdles in 06 2-5. Laddie Meyers of the C. A. A. cleared 12 feet 4½ inches to break the record in the pole vault.

Summaries:

FIFTY YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Brickman, C. A. A.; Kinzey, C. A. A., second; Wallace, C. A. A., third; Novarro, Crane college, fourth. Time, :06 2-5. [New gym record.]

POLE VAULT—Won by Meyers, C. A. A.; Knourek, I. A. C., second; Gerhart, U. of C., and Graham, I. A. C., tied for third. Height, 12 feet 4½ inches [new gym record].

SHOT PUT—Won by Klein, U. of C.; L. Greenberg, C. A. A., second; Weaver, unattached, third; Clarke, C. A. A., fourth. Distance, 42 feet 1 inch.

MILE RUN—Won by Sivak, I. A. C.; Devert, Armour, second; Mooney, I. A. C., third; Johnson, unattached, fourth. Time, 4:21.3 [new gym record].

FIFTY YARD DASH—Won by Francisco, Mooseheart; Coaffee, I. A. C., second; Lattman, Crane college, third; Cody, U. of C., fourth. Time, :05 3-5.

FIFTY YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Kinsey, C. A. A.; Wallace, C. A. A., second; Brickman, C. A. A., third; Kennedy, unattached, fourth. Time, :06.2 [new gym record].

TWO MILE RUN—Won by Phelps, C. A. A.; Dugan, U. of C., second; Krogh, I. A. C., third; Uppling, C. A. A., fourth. Time, 9:37 7-10. [New gym record.]

HIGH JUMP—Won by Burg, U. of C.; Nelson, Star and Crescent A. C., second; Gray, C. A. A., third; Barbour, Morgan Park Military academy, fourth. Height, 6 feet 4 inches.

HALF MILE RUN—FIRST RACE—Won by Burke, U. of C.; Sivak, I. A. C., second; Devert, Armour Tech, third. Time, 2:01.

HALF MILE RUN—SECOND RACE—Won by Warner, C. A. A.; Hegovic, U. of C., second; Herniler, Lake Forest college, third; Herdeen, Westside Y. M. C. A., fourth. Time, 2:03 4-10.

440 YARD RUN—Won by Ascher, C. A. A.; Fitch, C. A. A., second; Calhoun, C. A. A., third; Hagen, C. A. A., fourth. Time, :53 8-10.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

BY DON MAXWELL.

Chicago's latest six day bicycle race is over. In its wake are a number of answers to intriguing questions on public interest in pedalling that lasts for a week but gets the pedallers no place.

For years the six day races have been held in the Coliseum. The last three races held in that centrally located building drew capacity crowds. The promoters made a great deal of money.

Dexter Park pavilion, on the south side, lacked accessibility. The field in the race was mediocre. And the crowds were small. The promoters may have made expenses. Possibly that is all they hoped to do. They wanted to keep the six day grind alive.

But the fact that on at least three nights the attendance was good proves that Chicagoans enjoy the sport. The north sider who stayed through the 2 o'clock sprints and walked out at 3 a. m., realizing that he must travel ten miles before he reached home, had to be an enthusiast or a nut.

Chicago proved that it wants six day races. At the same time the fans demonstrated the foolishness of staging the race any place save in a centrally located building with hope of financial success.

Bicycle racing is one of the oldest of our sports. It began several generations ago with amateur contests between gentlemen. It numbered among its early riders men who now are millionaires, and statesman. Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts was a star rider in his youth. Carl Fisher, millionaire automobile race track owner, was another.

Chief interest now is held by the professional races. There are probably 60 high class riders whirling their way around the tracks in this country. Some of them are highly paid. Reggie McNamara makes $30,000 a year. Black haired little Georgetti is paid half as much.

The top rider in the race just closed left Chicago at least $3,000 richer than when he started the six day pedalling It was a poor rider who made less than $800.

Bicycle racing in America is largely controlled by one man. John Chapman has been the boss of the professional game for years. All the good riders are under contract to him. His friends will deny indignantly that this condition makes the pro bicycle racing business a trust. They'll point out that any syndicate is at liberty to build a track and stage a race anywhere, at any time. Let them try to get the star riders without Mr. Chapman's coöperation!

He can keep the riders busy year in and year out, and the foolishness of any of them jumping from his ménage to ride for a single track is too evident to argue.

The six day races have become international sport. Paris and Berlin vie with Madison Square Garden and Chicago.

McNamara incidentally tells an amusing story of his last race in Berlin. One night he heard a great "to do" being made about a prize offered in the sprints. McNamara decided that it must be a prize worth winning and made a great effort. And he won. The crowd set up a roar, laughter predominating. When the prize was delivered McNamara learned the reason for laughter. The prize was a keg of beer. No wonder, the crowd reasoned, that the American raced so hard.

From Chicago the riders go to Newark to open the outdoor season in the big veledrome there. And throughout the spring and summer months they'll be pedalling on the outdoor tracks of the east.

The scope of the game constantly is broadening. Arrangements have been completed by Chapman to stage races in Miami next winter. A large outdoor track will be built during the summer. The bike riders will contest with dogs and the horses—providing the latter are permitted to run—for the winter visitors' trade.

No one has been found who can tell why folks are willing to stand all night long around the infield fence at a six day race, watching with unabating interest the ceaseless, merry go round. Folks wouldn't stand that long to watch a theatrical performance. The circus that attempted to make its patrons stand during an entire performance would play to empty tents.

And no one yet has explained why prominent lawyers, doctors and bootleggers will sit for six hours in smoke filled atmosphere, happily munching peanuts and drinking warm soda water, thrilled by a six day race to noplace.

It's a dizzy problem.

FRENCH TENNIS STARS SWEEP U.S. INDOOR FINALS

Borotra Defeats Brugnon for Singles Crown.

New York, Mach 26.—(AP)—Smashing through Dr. George King and Francis T. Hunter for a final round doubles victory, Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon today completed the route of America's tennis ranks in the national indoor championship. The match was decided in straight sets at 7—5, 6—3, 6—3.

The French pair then took the court as rivals in the third consecutive all-French singles final on American soil, with Borotra carrying off the title by 6—2, 6—4, 6—3. Spectacular stroking, teeming with sparkling rallies at the net, swept the basque back to the peak he occupied in 1925. It was France's third straight national indoor singles triumph, Rene Lacoste having taken the title a year ago.

France's First Doubles Win.

By their dash through both singles and doubles, the tri-color Davis cup star brought off France's first twin triumph in one even on this side of the Atlantic. Never before has an exclusively French team captured an American doubles crown, although Borotra, paired with A. W. Asthalter of New York won the indoor honors two years ago.

Borotra was the dominating figure on the court in the doubles. It was from his versatile racket that the finishing shots in nearly every rally sped, but he was ably seconded by Brugnon's powerful service.

French Play at King.

Dr. King proved the vulnerable link in the American combination. It was through his service that the European team broke in each set to gain their advantage. Erratic forecourt play on the part of the New York man cost the losers many points and eventually paved the way to their downfall.

WABASH H. S. WINS.

Bloomington, Ind., March 26.—[Special.]—With a total of 35 points to its credit Washington High school was crowned Indiana state wrestling champions at the fifth annual tournament concluded at Indiana university gymnasium tonight. Bloomington was runner up with 34 points.

AMES RUNNERS BREAK WORLD RELAY RECORD

Medley Four Topples Mark at Rice Games.

Houston, Tex., March 26.—(AP)—A new world's record for the medley relay was set here this afternoon when Iowa State's runners turned the distance in 7:34.4 at the Rice institute games. The old record was 7:35.

Michigan State's 440 yard relay team clipped the meet record for the event by stepping the route in :42.3.

White of Illinois, who won the pole vault with a mark of 12 feet 8¼ inches, tried for height and set a mark of 13 feet 3¼ inches, which Rice authorities claimed was an intercollegiate record. The best previous record was 13 feet 2 inches, made by S. W. Gaar, Yale, last year. Summaries:

HIGH JUMP—Won by Brunk, Drake; Henderson, Oklahoma, second; Compton, Oklahoma State Teachers, third. Height, 6 feet 1 inch.

POLE VAULT—Won by White, Illinois; 12 feet 8¼ inches; Patterson, Texas, second; Cabanisa, Rice, and Drake, Oklahoma, tied for third.

SHOT PUT—Won by Lyons, Illinois, 46.1 feet; Rinefort, Grinnell, second; Brown, Missouri, third.

FOUR MILE RELAY—Won by Illinois [Fairfield, Molwee, Settig, and Rue]; Rice, second; Oklahoma, third. Time, 17:50.4.

440 YARD RELAY—Won by Michigan State [Alderman, Grim, Henson, and Lang]; Notre Dame, second; Kansas, third. Time, 42.3 [new meet record].

100 YARD DASH—Won by Cockrell, Texas; Farley, Missouri, second; Landa, Texas, third. Time, :10.

MEDLEY RELAY, COLLEGE RACE—Won by San Marcos [Texas] Baptist academy; Haskell Indians, second. Time, 3:33.6. Only two teams entered.

UNIVERSITY MEDLEY RELAY—Won by Iowa State [Caulum, half mile; Thornberg, 440 yard; Wilmer, 220 yard; Conger, mile]; Oklahoma, second; Southern Methodist university, Dallas, third. Time, 7:34.4 [new world's record].

HALF MILE UNIVERSITY RELAY—Won by Michigan State; Kansas, second; Notre Dame, third. Time—1:27.4.

220 YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Kennedy, Texas A. and M.; Gartner, Kansas, second; Doornboss, Kansas, third.

TWO MILE UNIVERSITY RELAY—Won by Iowa State; Kansas State, second; Haskell, third. Time—7:51.

DISCUS THROW—Won by Rinefort, Grinnell; Brown, Missouri, second; Gooch, Texas, third. Distance, 148 feet 6 inches.

BROADJUMP—Won by Simon, Illinois; Stalker, Oklahoma, second; Smith, Texas, third. Distance, 23 feet 7 inches.

HALF MILE COLLEGE RELAY—Won by Oklahoma Baptist college; Haskell, second; West Texas Teachers, third. Time—1:30.4.

JAVELIN THROW—Won by Cloud, Oklahoma A. and M.; Hammond, Schreiner institute, Kerrville, Tex., second; Holleron, Texas A. and M., third. Distance, 178 feet 3½ inches.

BURGHLEY WINS HURDLES

LONDON, March 26.—(AP)—Lord David Burghley, Cambridge university's titled timber-topper, starred in a sweeping victory over Oxford in their fifty-ninth annual track meet at the Queen's club today. The Cambridge captain, who is going to the United States in April for the Penn relays, won both the hurdle events for the third consecutive year. Oxford captured only two of the eleven events contested.

Robert L. Hyatt, former Harvard athlete, appearing for the last time against Cambridge, won the pole vault for Oxford.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

Bob Tells How to Aid Birds in Making Nests

BY BOB BECKER.

Suburbanites, farmers, owners of estates in the country, or any one who lives on a fairly good sized plot of ground, decorated with a few trees and shrubs, can have a lot of fun this spring by dealing in building materials for the birds.

It is a known fact that nesting boxes will attract certain species of songbirds to your yard, but many species prefer to build their nests in trees, shrubs, and on the ground.

Stock your building material "yard" as follows and then watch the fun during the next month or two: For robins put out short lengths of cotton string or narrow strips of cotton cloth 6 to 8 inches long. The robins, barn swallows, and phoebes [workers in mud] like soft sticky mud in which some short dry grass is mixed. Put out a dish of "mud pies" in your back yard and these birds will make a raid on it.

Wrens like horsehair for the lining of their nests, and the same goes for the orioles and chipping sparrows. If you'll lay out short lengths of colored yarn the orioles are apt to work a little color into their hanging nests and you'll have some fun figuring out their color preferences. A small amount of cotton batting is another material you might add to your stock. Kingbirds like this soft stuff for their nests and you may see other species make way with some of it.

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune.

The Question.

Are you glad Buck Weaver will play ball in Chicago?

Where Asked.

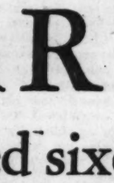
Broadway at Argyle.

The Answers.

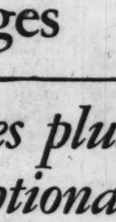
L. Roy Kohn, 930 Margate terrace, cigar salesman — Yes. He still is the greatest third baseman in the game and there is no reason why he should not be readmitted to baseball. I think he will help boost the caliber of baseball on the semipro lots and he certainly will be a drawing card.

Dave Simon, 1128 Argyle street, cigar store proprietor—I was thrilled when I read in THE TRIBUNE that Weaver at last had been given a chance to get back into baseball. He didn't get a square deal in the big leagues, but after seven years of struggling to establish his innocence it seems he has gained his goal. Weaver will pack the stands at the Niesen games this season.

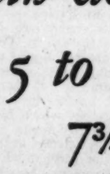
Morgan Gardiner, 6316 Glenwood avenue, pugilist—Absolutely. Bill Niesen made a lot of new friends when he signed Buck. Weaver in public estimation was the victim of unfortunate circumstances in the 1919 world's series exposé. He will be a big drawing card this summer. He is one of the best third basemen in the country.



Patricia Landon, 4824 Winthrop avenue, waitress—You bet I am. Baseball is my favorite sport and Weaver is one of my favorite players. Landis should have reinstated Weaver when he whitewashed Cobb and Speaker. It took William Niesen to do it. I am sure thousands of Chicagoans were thrilled when they heard that Weaver was coming back to the game.



Catherine Herbst, 4824 Winthrop avenue, waitress — I am glad Weaver is to play in Chicago. I saw that 1919 series and he played a great game. He has put up a courageous fight to clear his name and I for one will welcome his return to baseball.



Forester League Continues Championship Round Today

Two important games are scheduled for this afternoon in the championship tournament of the Catholic Order of Foresters Basketball league at the St. Rita gym, 63d street and Oakley boulevard. St. Cecelia, an undefeated team, will play St. Monica, one of the strongest aggregations left in the running, while Hofbauer will meet St. Sabinas, another strong secondary team. Englewood and Carmelite will fight it out for last place.

Sam Hill Chosen Leader of Minnesota Swimmers

Minneapolis, Minn., March 26.—(AP)—Brother will succeed brother in the captaincy of the University of Minnesota swimming team. Election of Sam Hill of Minneapolis, crack dashman on the Gopher team, to the leadership of next year's team was announced here today following his selection by his teammates at Urbana, Ill., where the Minnesota tankmen participated in the Big Ten tank meet. He is a brother of Jim Hill, who captained the team this year.

ALLAN, NAVY'S SWIM ACE, KEEPS 200 YARD TITLE

New York, March 25.—(AP)—Hallie Allan, navy ace, scored a second consecutive victory in the 200 yard breast stroke to retain his title in the individual intercollegiate swimming events in the college pool here tonight. He just beat Walter Schott of Williams, who defeated him in the qualifying swim last night while setting a new record at 2:41.

The first champion to topple was Clifford Cooper, of the navy, who lost his fancy dive championship to Kenneth Michaels of Dartmouth. James House, Yale, won the 50 yard title in 24 2-5 seconds. House plunged back into the pool to win his second championship of the night in the 150 yard back stroke.

Spanish Net Star Wins Nice Finals, 6-2, 6-3

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NICE, March 26.—For the second time running Senorita Elia d'Alvarez, the Spanish tennis star, won the finals in the women's singles from Mlle. Contostavlos in the Beausite tournament at Cannes today. The score was 6-2, 6-3.

THOUSANDS HAVE LEARNED that of all the lighter lower-priced sixes only Chrysler "60" combines these advantages

COUPE (with rumble seat) $1245

60 miles plus— with exceptional ease

5 to 25 miles in 7¾ seconds

22 miles per gallon

7-bearing crankshaft

To literally scores of thousands, Chrysler "60" is proving that its public preference is based upon the soundest of buying reasons —unmistakable money-value.

There's more than a thrill in the "60's" pick-up and in its speed ability of sixty miles and more an hour with exceptional ease. There's speed without the least effort, combined with most unusual riding comfort and handling facility.

Mechanically, the "60" has many of the very same features to be found in the Chrysler "70" or Imperial "80": seven-bearing crankshaft, invar-strut pistons, impulse neutralizer, manifold heat control, air cleaner, oil filter, full pressure lubrication, hydraulic four-wheel brakes and shock absorbers.

Come, see the Chrysler "60"—and note the essential fineness of its Standardized Quality manufacture. You'll recognize, especially after driving it, there isn't another six of its price that even begins to compare with it in quality and value.

Chrysler "60" prices—Touring Car, $1075; Club Coupe, $1125; Coach, $1145; Roadster, (with rumble seat), $1175; Coupe, (with rumble seat), $1245; Sedan, $1245.

MT. CARMEL FIVE WINS STATE PREP BASKET TOURNEY

Beats Peoria Central in Final, 24-18.

Champaign, Ill., March 26.—[Special.]—Mount Carmel took the state high school basketball championship from Peoria Central, 24 to 18, in the finals at the University of Illinois gymnasium here tonight. The game was hotly contested throughout by two well coached teams.

It was again the Kamp family, Elbert and Robert, cousins, who with George Eaton put the Maroon and Gold to the fore. These three men were responsible for all of the Mount Carmel points. Lineup:

U. of S. C. Track Stars Beat California Bears

Los Angeles, March 26.—(AP)—The University of Southern California's national intercollegiate championship track team, tallying eight first and tying for another, romped over the Golden Bears of the University of California to the tune of 76½ to 54½ here today.

Lessons in Bridge

East met west last Tuesday in the radio bridge game broadcast from station W-G-N, in which two Californians, Mrs. Helen M. Hubbard of San Francisco and Mrs. Catherine A. Streeter of Los Angeles, participated as partners of Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead, respectively.

HELEN M. HUBBARD

Mrs. Hubbard was dealer, in the "south position. She held: Spades, A, 5, 3; hearts, Q, 10, 9, 3, 2; diamonds, 7; clubs, A, Q, 9, 6.

Mr. Whitehead, "west," held Spades, K, J, 9, 7, 6; hearts, K, 4; diamonds, Q, J, 10; clubs, K, J, 10.

Mr. Work, "north," held: Spades, Q, 4; hearts, A, J, 8, 6; diamonds, K, 5, 2; clubs, 7, 5, 4, 3.

Mrs. Streeter, "east," held: Spades, 10, 8, 2; hearts, 7, 5; diamonds, A, 9, 8, 6, 4, 3; clubs, 8, 2.

Mrs. Hubbard identified herself with the modern school of bidding by opening with one heart.

Lacks High Card Strength.

Mr. Work, "north," with good assistance for his partner's heart suit, said two hearts.

Mrs. Streeter passed. Although she had normal support for Mr. Whitehead's spades, she did not have sufficient high card strength to justify a raise, nor was her hand strong enough for three diamonds.

The others passed, making Mrs. Hubbard declarer with her contract two hearts.

Mr. Whitehead led the queen of diamonds.

As soon as dummy was down, the declarer, Mrs. Hubbard, reckoned the game going possibilities of the combined hands. Seeing dummy's queen of spades and the ace in her own hand, she knew at once why Mr. Whitehead did not lead spades. Figuring that he held the king-jack, Mrs. Hubbard saw she could make two spade tricks. She was liable to lose one diamond trick and two or three club tricks, depending on the location of the king-jack-ten of the latter suit.

By Mr. Whitehead's lead of the queen of diamonds, the ace was marked in Mrs. Streeter's hand, as Mrs. Hubbard was certain that Mr. Whitehead would not lead the queen if he held the ace. Therefore, since there was no question as to whether dummy should cover the queen with the king, dummy played the 2 of diamonds. Mrs. Streeter played the 8 as an invitation to Mr. Whitehead to continue the suit; and declarer played her singleton 7.

Mr. Whitehead continued with the jack of diamonds; dummy played the 5; Mrs. Streeter completed her signal by playing the 3 of diamonds; and declarer trumped with the 2 of hearts.

Mrs. Hubbard led the 3 of hearts. She knew she could catch the king if it were held by Mr. Whitehead, "west;" but that if it were guarded in Mrs. Streeter's hand, it was bound to win. She had everything to gain by taking the finesse.

Mr. Whitehead could see it made no difference whether he went up with his king at once or played the 4. With the king in his own hand and the ace-jack in dummy, he knew that declarer must hold the queen to five hearts, and probably the 10 also. Therefore he could not benefit his partner whichever way he played the hearts. He played the 4; dummy finessed the 8 spot, as the only higher adverse heart was the king; and Mrs. Streeter played the 5.

Dummy led the king of diamonds; Mrs. Streeter played the ace; declarer trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played the 10 of diamonds.

Mrs. Hubbard's Game Excellent.

Mrs. Hubbard continued with the 10 of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played his king; dummy the ace; Mrs. Streeter the 7.

Mrs. Hubbard now planned to throw the lead to Mr. Whitehead, to force him, if possible, to lead spades from his king-jack, or else a club up to her tenace in clubs. Therefore declarer led the 3 of clubs from dummy; Mrs. Streeter played the 8; and declarer finessed the 9. She expected to lose either to the 10 or the jack, but wanted to do so in order to put Mr. Whitehead in the lead. Mr. Whitehead played the 10.

Mr. Whitehead led the jack of clubs. Dummy played the 4; Mrs. Streeter the 2; Mrs. Hubbard the queen.

Mrs. Hubbard led the ace of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the king; dummy the 5; Mrs. Streeter discarded the 4 of diamonds. Mrs. Hubbard continued with the 6 of clubs; Mr. Whitehead discarded the 6 of spades; dummy played the 7 of clubs. Mrs. Streeter discarded the 2 of spades.

At this point Mrs. Hubbard conceded the king of spades and claimed the other three tricks winning the game, with 40 for four honors divided.

K. of C. Teams Begin Title Series Today

Play in the championship series of the Knights of Columbus Basketball league will start this afternoon at the 132d regiment armory, Rockwell and Madison streets. Four games are scheduled as follows:

Hennepin vs. Oak Park.
St. Francis vs. Damen.
Aquinas vs. Fort Dearborn.
St. Patrick vs. Calumet.

The first game will get under way at 2 o'clock, with the remaining three matches following at hourly intervals. The losers will be dropped from further competition.

The fifteen teams in the series are the survivors from the 45 quintets that played in the regular schedule from the five divisions. Every section will be in action with the exception of northern division representatives, who do not play until Thursday night.

Preparations have been made to take care of 6,000 fans at today's games. Last season the championship contests averaged 5,000, and larger attendances are looked for because of the increased interest.

Two sectional champions will play today—Hennepin, titleholder in the west division, and Calumet, champion of the southern section.

DATES SET FOR 1928 GOLF SHOW

Golf for the season of 1927 was teed off last night with the closing of the second annual international golf show at the Hotel Sherman.

At a conference of exhibitors yesterday morning it was decided to hold the show in Chicago March 12 to 17. All of the exhibitors reserved space for next year's show.

The attendance this week was unusually large, despite poor weather. Last night's attendance was in excess of 10,000.

Heilmann Hits 2 Homers, but Tigers Lose, 7 to 2

San Antonio, Tex., March 26.—(AP)—Harry Heilmann's two homers were the only runs scored by Detroit off Dana Fillingim and Lefty Bill Ward of the San Antonio Bears in the eighth game of the exhibition series here today. One of Heilmann's homers cleared the fence near center field, a distance of 375 feet from home plate.

MAROONS SLUG OUT 10 TO 3 WIN OVER ARKANSAS

Fayetteville, Ark., March 26.—[Special.]—Scoring six runs in the ninth inning, the University of Chicago Maroons won the final game of their series with Arkansas Razorbacks today, 10 to 3. Chicago combined three hits with two bases on balls and several fielding miscues by the Porkers to score the half dozen runs in the final frame. Kaplan hurled for Chicago and allowed eight scattered hits and struck out five. Score:

TUNNEY SEEKS AUDIENCE WITH BERNARD SHAW

New York, March 26.—[Special.]—Gene Tunney and George Bernard Shaw are going to have tea at Adelphi Terrace, London.

It was definitely announced today that Mr. Tunney and his attorney, Dudley Field Malone [unkindly characterized by those who do not approve of Gene's intellectual pursuits as "that society lawyer"] are going abroad this spring.

They may, of course, interview a few kings and queens, but the great object of their quest is Mr. Shaw, and Mr. Shaw is very willing to talk to Mr. Tunney—about Mr. Shaw.

Mr. Tunney politely has said that he regarded Mr. Shaw "as the possessor of one of the greatest minds among living men—possibly the greatest," an opinion not denied by Mr. Shaw.

Mr. Shaw replied, "It is highly flattering to hear that the world's champion boxer is coming to Europe expressly to pay me a visit."

And although Mr. Shaw did not exactly invite Mr. Tunney to spend the night, he did suggest that Gene write him a letter and wait and see what would happen.

MOTORDOM

Automobile Fans Help Car Makers Sing Spring Song

Their Orders Speed Up Wheels of the Motor Industry.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., March 26.—[Special.]—In direct contradiction to pessimistic forecasts, there has been a remarkable picking up in the automobile business since the first of the present month, and particularly so during the last two weeks. Official reports show a gain of nearly 13 per cent in the employment of skilled automotive mechanics as compared with the preceding month.

The first warm days of spring, as in past seasons, are the main contributing factors for increased sales. They have caused a noticeable stepping up in activities all along the line.

The automobile industry far outstripped all other lines in the rapidity of its rebound from the midwinter slump. Dealers report an unexpected increase in demands for cars for immediate delivery.

As for the general trend in the automobile business, country-wide reports show the usual spring activity is nearly three weeks ahead of schedule, with farmers coming into the market for trucks, especially of the one and one and a half ton models, in greater numbers than ever before at this early season of the year.

In corecasting a continuance of good business for the spring months automobile builders, with but few exceptions, are influenced not only by their own sales, but also by the steady growth in production during similar periods of the last few years. In 1925 the increase over the preceding period was 118,964 units, and in 1926 the increase was 277,255 units, the total production for the first half of 1926 being 2,450,780.

But with Ford getting off to a slow start, and still lagging, those foremost in the industry are satisfied the figures for the first half of 1927 will at least equal those of last year.

Recent figures show that the once invincible production and sales figures of the Ford company are now exceeded by one and possibly two other automobile concerns.

Employment in the various automobile plants and accessories shops of Detroit continued its upward climb last week, when 1,463 men were added to the pay rolls. This number brought the total to 227,613. For the corresponding week in 1926 the total number employed was 44,521 greater.

During the last few months no fewer than five newcomers have entered the straight eight field, and prices have been liberally reduced by several of the higher priced sixes.

April 14 is the date set for the sale at public auction of the $6,000,000 Rickenbacker Motor company. Four months of operation under receivership has failed to produce a reorganization which would take care of the creditors in full, so the court and receivers deemed it advisable to liquidate through sale of the property.

An effort will be made to attract bidders who would prefer to see the business continued rather than disorganized. Receivers are lending their coöperation to any such plans and are seeking advance information on any such bids contemplated. It is probable that the property will be auctioned as an entirety. On a basis of going business the company's books recently showed the assets to be $6,335,864.08.

Indications are that another increase in the price of automobile and truck tires will soon be necessary caused by raw materials rising in price and a heavy retail demand developing. Akron manufacturers agree that present price schedules are as low as they possibly can be to allow rubber concerns to make a reasonable profit.

New Chief of Motor Makers' Association Climbed from Bottom

ROY D. CHAPIN, recently elected president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce to succeed Charles Clifton of Buffalo, after 23 years' service, is a pioneer in the automobile industry, although still in his forties.

ROY D. CHAPIN.

Leaving the University of Michigan when he was 21 years old, he went to work for R. E. Olds, who then controlled the Olds Motor works. He was paid $35 a month as an amateur photographer. But he was a climber, and the years that followed found him one of the leaders in the industry. In 1909 he organized the Hudson Motor Car company, of which he is now board chairman. During the world war he was chairman of the highway transportation committee of the Council of National Defense. In recognition of his services to the study and knowledge of highway transportation he received in 1922 the degree of master of arts from the University of Michigan. He was one of the initial sponsors of the Lincoln highway, and later was among the first to see the need for a federal highway plan.

Solons Consider Ousting of Old Roadside Court

THE elimination of justice of the peace courts and the substitution of regular courts such as the Municipal courts of Chicago, was discussed by Illinois legislators at a meeting recently held in Springfield.

Representatives from various Illinois cities attending the meeting were told how the total fines alone, without costs, paid in Cook county by autoists, in 1926, amounted to $1,300,000. And of that total, only $400,000 was collected in Chicago and $910,000 in Cook county outside Chicago, where the costs go to the courts in many instances.

The discussion came as a result of the decision of Chief Justice William Howard Taft of the United States Supreme court that an Ohio justice of the peace was not as impartial judge for the reason that he collected the costs in the event of conviction, and hence profited by a conviction.

J. H. Braun of the Chicago Motor club presented the figures on Cook county, collected as result of the "speed trap" campaign of last year, in which is was estimated that $700,000 in costs alone were paid by Chicago motorists.

Despite the fact that Chicago has 365,000 vehicles, and the rest of the county only 100,000, there were 175,000 arrests in the county and only 145,000 in Chicago. For every 100 arrests in Chicago, two were fined; for every 100 arrests in seventy-eight county towns, fifteen were fined.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question George Grier, 1510 North Eddy street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Where do you plan to drive on your first automobile trip of the 1927 season?

Where Asked.

Clark and Randolph streets.

The Answers.

Matt Ruppert, 2112 Wilson avenue, director.—I plan to drive to New York for my first trip and wind up to the jaunt in Paris, where the American Legion convention will renew old friendships. I look forward to good going in the automobile end of the trip, for the roads to New York and through the east generally now are good and the scenery is excellent.

Oscar Lindstrand, 3737 North Hermitage avenue, lawyer.—My first trip of the season will be over the southern route to the Shrine convention, taking in Philadelphia and Washington. The roads that way are good and the historic interest of the trip alone is worth the drive.

Harry B. Feldman, 3522 West Twelfth place, court reporter.—I am planning an eastern trip as the first of the 1927 season. We have driven west and northwest several times and want a change in scenery. Good pavements and old cities and towns should make the eastern trip interesting.

Harry De Rose, Bellwood, Ill., clerk.—I plan to take the Grant highway—Illinois route 5—as the first trip of the season. The concrete road is now finished to Dubuque and takes the tourist through the finest scenery and historic country in the state. The road from here to the Mississippi river is the first leg of a run to the Yellowstone which should be popular this year.

Joseph A. Porcaro, 648 North Tolman avenue, clerk.—I have figured out a great trip this year which will end in a tour of some of the interesting European countries after attending the American Legion convention in Paris. I plan to drive east and load the car on the boat. After the convention I hope to tour through France and Italy before coming home.

1927 Tourists to Dig Deeper for Gasoline Tax Toll

TWO more states raised their gasoline tax rate last week. The South Dakota legislature just before adjournment passed a bill increasing the tax from 3 to 4 cents a gallon. A few days later Maryland increased its rate from 3 to 3½ cents.

Earlier in the month New Mexico increased its rate from 3 to 5 cents, Idaho from 3 to 4 cents, and Wyoming from 2½ to 3 cents. Including Alabama, which raised its rate from 2 to 4 cents the first week after the legislature met in January, this makes six states that have increased gasoline taxes since the beginning of 1927. The South Dakota law will take effect July 1.

In Massachusetts, one of the four states which have no gas tax, the committee on taxation in the state legislature has reported favorably a bill for a 3 cent gas tax. The action of Virginia in 1923 was cited as a precedent for beginning with a 3 cent tax.

Pinch Racers.

A new plan to prevent deaths at grade crossings by arresting reckless motorists who successfully race speeding trains has been put into effect by Pennsylvania state police, working in coöperation with Pennsylvania railroad officials. State troopers have been placed on duty at dangerous railway crossings, with orders to arrest reckless drivers who do not observe caution signs and warning bells at crossings.

Smooth Canadian Way for Army of Thirsty American Tourists

THE Detroit Automobile club is making elaborate preparations to take care of the 1,500,000 tourists that are expected to cross the border, either into or out of Canada during the coming season. A new highway, recently completed between Windsor, Ontario, and Niagara Falls, Canada, will give tourists a short cut to the east, making the mileage approximately 200 miles less than the route through Ohio.

Still another feature of the Canadian route, it is argued, will be the new liquor law which will become effective on May 1. A small fee is charged for permission to purchase liquor from government stores, and the tourists are permitted to drink in their hotel rooms or on the street, but not in restaurants and hotel dining rooms. They are also within the law while drinking in their tourists cars, or their automobile itself if they call such places their "home."

Accordingly, Canada is anticipating a rich harvest from this year's American tourists. Extra ferry boats will be put into service at this point to take care of the traffic.

One Reason.

Yellow lights have no place in our traffic signaling system because 2 and 8 per cent of our male population is color blind, in the accepted interpretation of the term, says Dr. Knight Dunlap, professor of experimental psychology at the Johns Hopkins university.

Rely on these trucks because they are Internationals

When you are thinking of buying a truck or several of them, know all you can about the trucks but above all know their maker.

If you know a lot about truck mechanism you will be interested in the design of the engine, the style of the clutch, the type of the drive, and other mechanical features. And the more you know about these things the better you will like International Trucks. Their individual features of construction make these trucks stand out in any comparison and stand up on any job.

And even if you know nothing at all about trucks you can buy Internationals with all the confidence of an expert. You are perfectly safe in judging these trucks by their maker and International Trucks are built by an organization that has been building good trucks for twenty-three years—an organization whose history goes back almost a century.

The International line includes the Special Delivery for loads up to ¾-ton, 4 and 6-cylinder Speed Trucks of 1½-ton and 1½-ton sizes, Heavy-Duty Trucks ranging from 1½-ton to 5-ton sizes, Motor Coaches, and McCormick-Deering Industrial Tractors.

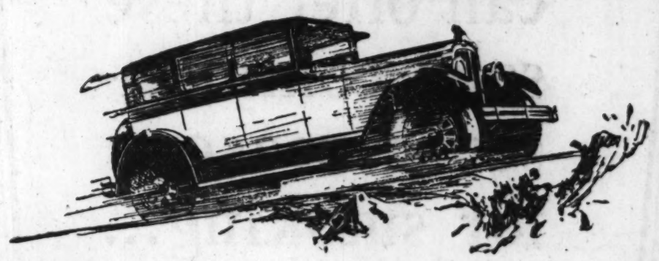
Who says any other car can step or climb like a Chandler?



THERE'S nothing like performance to reveal the true worth of an automobile.

Put any car you please on a chalk line, nose and nose with a new Chandler. Signal "Go." See which car outsteps the other in the getaway.

From a standstill, start any other car up a long steep hill side by side with a new Chandler. See which car takes the lead and is the first over the top.

Try riding over a rough stretch of road in any other car. Then come back and ride over the same piece of road in the Chandler. Judge which car glides more smoothly and comfortably over the ruts and the bumps.

Match the new Chandler Royal Eight against any other eight, and the new Chandler Sixes against other sixes—and let results, the real show-down, determine your final choice.

As to body style, interior decoration, richness of upholstery—the new Chandler Eights and Sixes are simply magnificent. Twenty-five different models. The Sixes at $945 to $1895, the Royal Eights at $2195 to $2295, f. o. b. Factory.

Just see these cars. Drive one. Anybody can make claims—but it's performance that tells the real story!

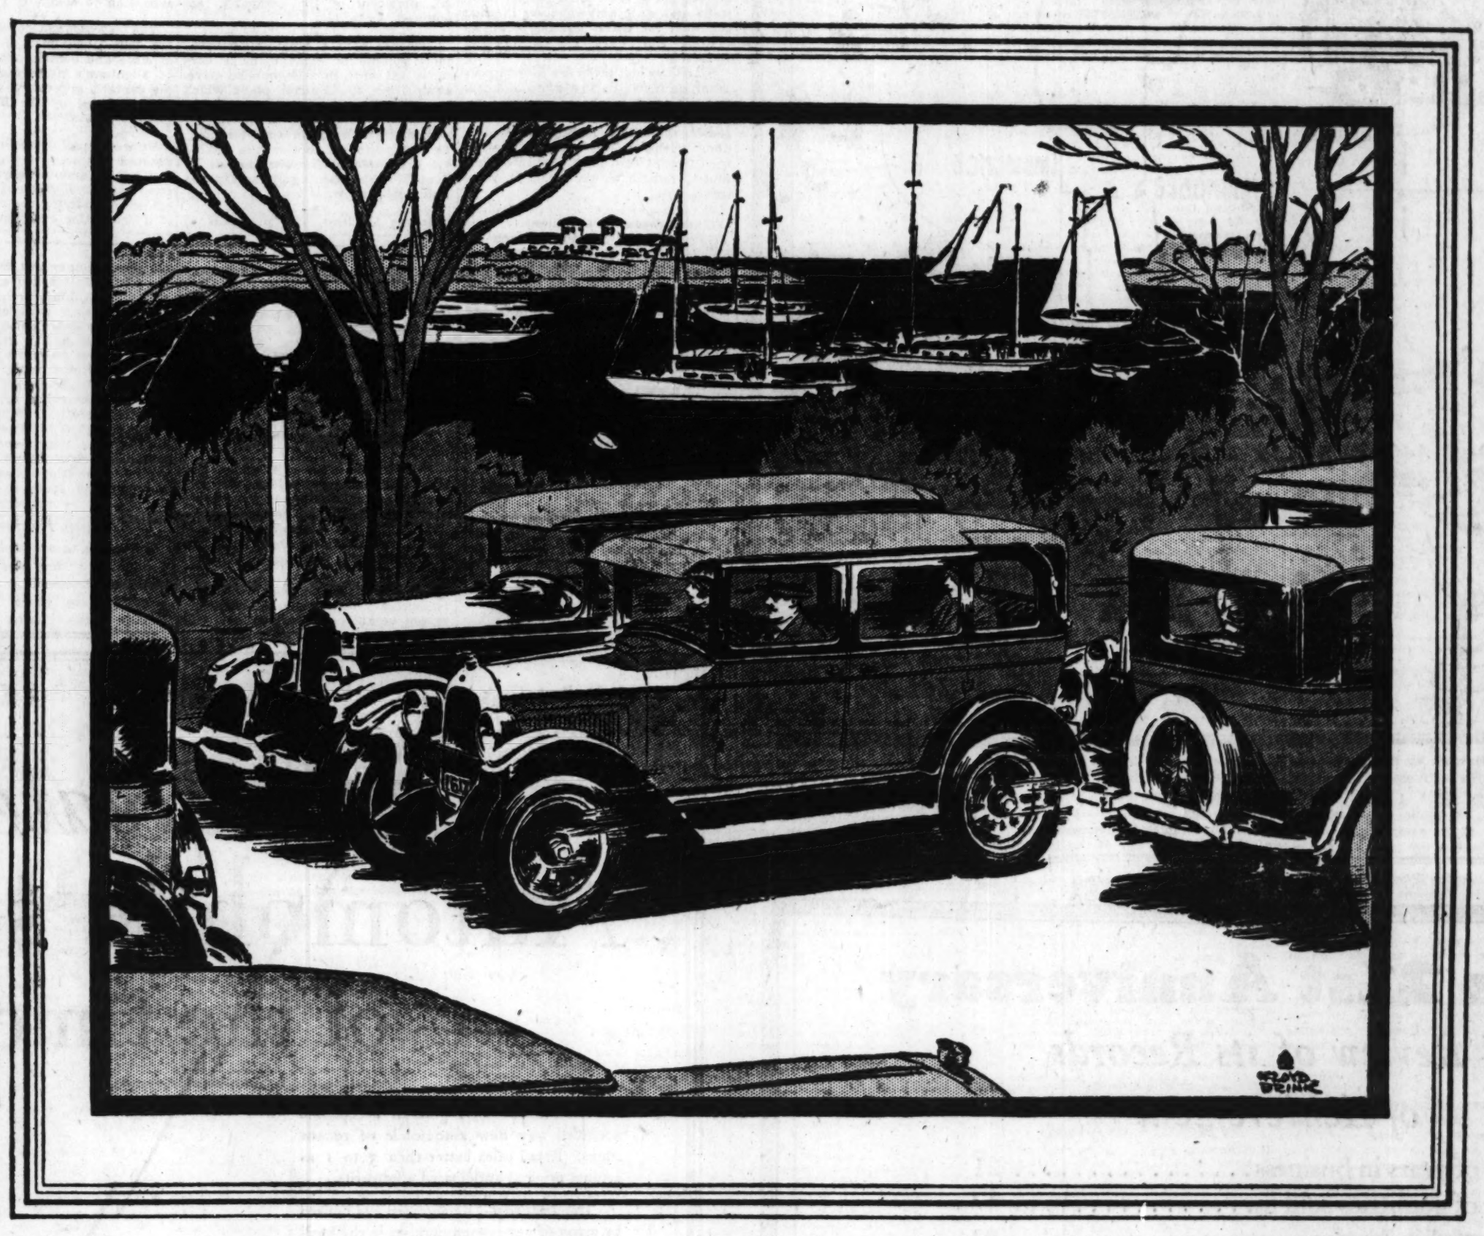
4-Wheel Brakes
a necessity in Chicago Traffic



THE WHIPPET is the only light car that offers the necessary safety of 4-wheel brakes as national standard equipment. Behind the wheel of a Whippet you feel safer. You dart in and around Chicago traffic with a new sense of security.

With 4-wheel brakes you drive faster and cover greater distance, because your car is always under perfect control.

From the driver's seat you can see — you have full vision. The glass area is large and the corner posts are narrow. You have a complete panorama of the road in front and on each side.

And in addition, the Whippet provides the extra protection of low gravity center. It is built low to the ground and hugs the road at any speed.

New Performance Standards

Nothing short of a demonstration can give you a true picture of Whippet performance. Just imagine a car that will do 55 miles an hour in safety and comfort.

Imagine a car that will throttle down in traffic to 5 miles an hour in high gear . . . and then pick-up with flashing speed to 30 in 13 seconds.

And further, the Whippet offers you outstanding economy no other light car can equal . . . plus abundant interior room and comfort.

The Whippet is available in six distinctive body styles. 4-wheel brakes and oversize tires standard equipment at no extra cost. In fairness to yourself see this remarkable car.

Whippet prices: Touring $625; Roadster $695; Coupe $625; Coach $625; Sedan $725; Landau $755; f. o. b. factory. Prices and specifications subject to change without notice. Willys-Overland, Inc., Toledo, Ohio.

Have a Heart for Animals on Road, Says A. A. A. Appeal

Organized Drivers Asked to Stop Highway Slaughter.

BECAUSE thousands of animals, birds, and domestic fowl are sacrificed yearly on the streets and highways of America, every motorist should give his full cooperation to the various humane movements designed to reduce these losses.

This appeal is made in a statement from the American Automobile association, asking its 850 member clubs scattered throughout the country to enlist their membership in a continuing campaign to protect animal and bird life.

Dogs, cats, rabbits, squirrels, chickens, and birds are the victims of tens of thousands of highway mishaps every spring and summer, the national motoring organization's statement declares, and a great majority of these animals may be spared.

"While there are, of course, no figures available on the total number killed, any one who has done any touring can look back into his own experience and find himself able to estimate that the aggregate losses are amazingly large," says the appeal. "Undoubtedly many of these killings are unavoidable. Many, however, are needless and could have been prevented if the motorist had been willing to make the necessary concession to the animal's inability to act with reason.

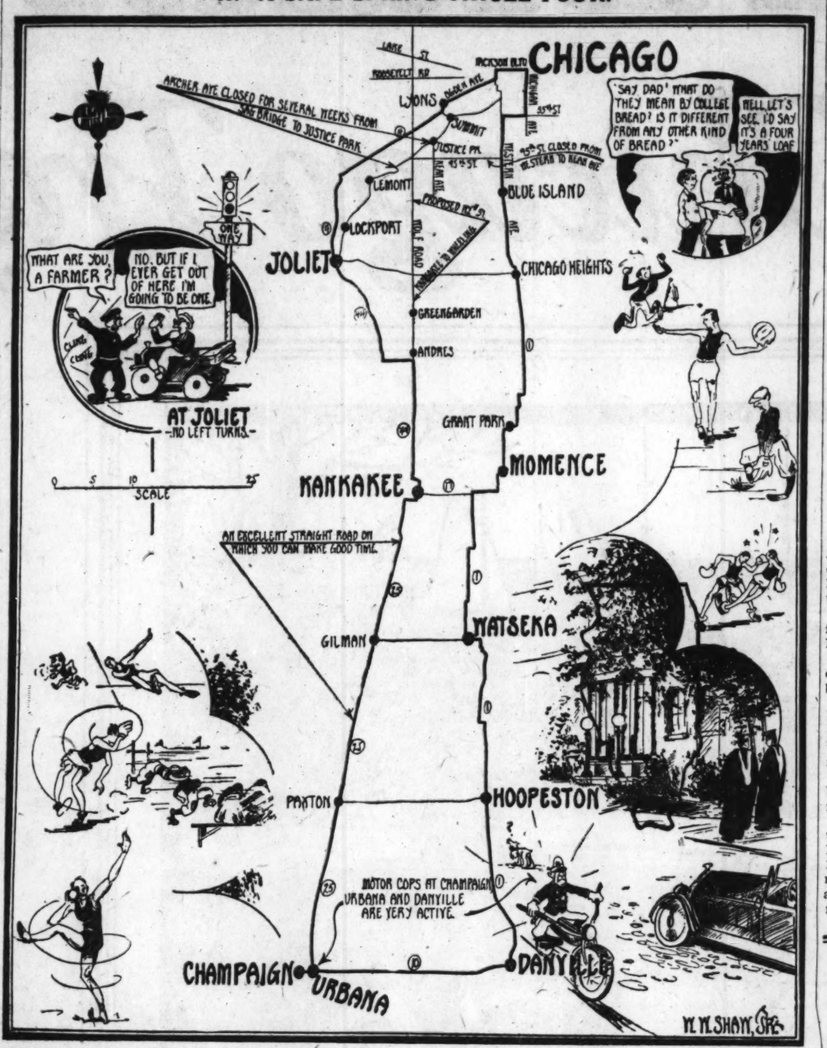
"In one way there is more than the humane element to the matter of giving the animal a chance to get out of the way. There is an element of self-protection as well. It is a matter of record that an animal the size of a dog easily may cause the wrecking of an automobile, and this point should be remembered by all motorists.

"In appealing for consideration for the lives of these innocent jay walkers it is obvious, of course, that no one would expect thoughtfulness to extend to the absurd limit of jeopardizing the life of occupants of the car. There have been hundreds of such unfortunate cases recorded in the history of motoring accidents, however, and they show the ultimate limit to which some individuals are willing to go in protecting domestic and wild animal life."

Night driving devolves a special responsibility upon the motorist in the protection of animals because they often are rendered blind by the car headlights, it is stated. Woodland animals, rabbits and squirrels, are the particular sufferers in this respect and the motorist who does not make this concession when he can do so without endangering himself is deficient in sportsmanship, it is pointed out.

Tribune Tours

II.—A SAFE SPRING CIRCLE TOUR.



WITH most of the gravel and earth highways in the middle west closed to spring tourists by the annual mud embargo, main trails of the great Illinois paved road system are the only remaining safe bets for the March and early April week-end tourist.

This weekly tour suggestion offers an interesting jaunt over all weather roads and completed pavements into and through the heart of the Illinois corn belt with the beautiful University of Illinois campus as an objective. Both routes shown on the map are in excellent condition. The Chicago driver may find it interesting to use one on the trip south and the other for the return run.

Heavy Rains Wreck Many Roads for Chicago Tourists

GENERAL rains during the last week have made all highways except concrete pavements and heavily graveled roads poor or impassable for motor travel through the north central states, although load limits are being enforced in most states, according to a bulletin issued by the Chicago Motor club.

Considerable rainfall is reported from the central division of the southern states and all highways except main trails will be slippery or muddy for several days. Motorists should make local inquiry when leaving main trails.

Precipitation was light in the eastern section of the United States. Main trails and state highways are in good condition for travel. Extreme northeastern trails are gradually being opened.

Highways and trails are now in poor condition in the northwestern and central plains states because of the recent blizzard accompanied by rain and snow. Conditions through these sections depend entirely upon the weather for the next few days. Southwestern routes, remain in good condition for travel.

Illinois roads are as follows:

Chicago—New bridge is open on Kedzie avenue south of 34th street over railroad tracks. This bridge open leaves Kedzie avenue open all the way to 6700 south.

Chicago—Lincoln avenue is closed in Morton Grove; use Touhy avenue or Dempster street to Ill. 42-A.

Ottawa—Paved highways in good condition. Earth roads improving, but bad in places.

Ill-1—The 5 mile detour between Carrier Mills and Stonefort is now in poor condition. This detour, however, will be in normal condition after a few days of fair weather.

Ill-4—This route which was covered by water at Lincoln for a few days is now open for all travel.

Ill-4A—Closed from Willow Springs to Sag bridge for repairs. From Joliet Ill-4A may be used to Sag bridge, then 107th street [gravel], east to Kean avenue, Kean avenue south to 111th street, and 111th street east to Western avenue.

Ill-46 — Ninety-fifth street closed from Oaklawn west to Kean avenue for reconstruction. Detour for Ill-46 from 95th street will be south on Cicero avenue to 103d street, east on 103d street to Kedzie avenue and north one mile back to 95th street. From Kean avenue and 95th street the detour will be south on Kean avenue to 111th street and east on 111th street to Western avenue.

INDIANA roads are somewhat improved.

Indianapolis, Ind.—All gravel and stone surfaces in the state virtually back to normal. A few of these types in northern Indiana reported somewhat soft, but sunshine and high winds are aiding in their rapid improvement as maintenance crews work them.

U S-30 [Lincoln highway]—A detour is necessary between Dyer and Schererville because of construction. The old short detour not being available, the state has marked a detour southeast into St. John, then north back to the old detour west of Schererville. This road is badly cut up; would be almost impassable if wet. Eastbound traffic should go north from Dyer on US-41 to Ridge road, then east to Highland and south on Kennedy avenue to Schererville; or continue east on Ridge road to South Gary, then south on Ind-55 to Merrillville, joining US-30 there. Westbound traffic can go north from either Merrillville or Schererville to the Ridge road, then west to Munster and south to Dyer.

News and Views of the Auto Trade

REO'S big production expansion program launched in February, has brought the manufacture and shipments of the new "Flying Cloud" models and other Reo products to the highest point in company history, according to an official report received yesterday from C. E. Eldridge. The March schedule, which called for 4,500 units, will be reached before the month ends, he added, but in spite of the stepping up more than half of the March car orders will have to be carried into April. Production and shipment of the new models have reached 150 daily.

The Velie Bell company, wholesale distributors of Velie cars in this territory, has moved to larger quarters at 2329 Michigan avenue. R. J. Bell Jr., president of the company, announced yesterday.

Evidence of the rapidly increasing sales volume of eight cylinder cars came last week in a Hupmobile driveaway from the Detroit plant which brought 80 straight eight models to the Gambill Motor company of Chicago for immediate delivery in this territory. This shipment is part of the $3,278,680 order placed for Hupmobiles by Gambill at the opening of the Chicago Automobile show.

George H. Bird, vice president of the Chicago Automobile Trade association and president of the Bird-Sykes company, returned from a visit to the Pacific coast last week with an interesting report of the performance of the new Paige eight, four-speed car in mountain driving. The new fourth speed, he declared, was used exclusively over 95 per cent of the difficult mileage in a 200 mile coast run.

Nash employes, including workers in every department of the big Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee plants, own a total of $17,000,000 of company stock, it was disclosed yesterday in a statement made by President C. W. Nash.

Production of Marmon cars is averaging 100 a day, with orders on hand for nearly 5,000 of the new small model, according to company reports.

The Cleveland-Chandler company has added 1,000 men on its production of sixes and eights. At Lansing, one of Michigan's numerous manufacturing centers, approximately 13,000 men are employed by the Reo, Olds, and Durant plants.

Prices on all Lincoln models were reduced last week from $100 to $400. No public announcement was made from executive offices of the company, officers considering the cut in the light of a production readjustment.

Both Preferred.

According to automobile experts in London, fair men are more careful motor car drivers than dark men, but brunettes are much steadier than blondes at the steering wheel.

Mellon Holds Out Hope for Repeal of New Car Tax

AS AN excise tax, the war tax of 3 per cent on passenger cars is in a class by itself and the secretary of the Treasury Mellon favors its repeal as soon as the government revenues permit such action.

Assurance to this effect was given to the secretary at a recent conference with Representatives James C. McLaughlin and Clarence J. McCloud of Michigan.

Representative McLaughlin, who is Michigan's member on the ways and means committee, and Representative McCloud called on Mr. Mellon to urge on him the advisability of the administration itself taking the initiative for the repeal of the war levy that the motorists are still paying. They told the secretary that should the administration fail to take the lead in the matter, a fight to a finish for repeal would undoubtedly be fought on the floor of both houses of congress. Notice to the same effect, they added, will be served on the ways and means committee when it meets this summer to frame a new revenue law.

After a conference of nearly hour, in the course of which the gressmen laid before the treas head the attitude of the American tomobile association and other bo that are demanding immediate repeal Mr. Mellon said in effect that he does not consider the automotive excise tax in a class with other excise taxes such as the tobacco taxes, for instance, and for this reason, he believes it to be one of the taxes that should be repealed as soon as the administration is assured of sufficient revenue from normal taxes.

Better Highways.

Canada has about 250,000 miles of travelable roads; of these, about 54,000 miles are gravel and higher type. The standard width of right of way for trunk roads in the dominion is 66 feet; standard width of grade, 30 feet and hard surface standard central, 20 feet. All of these roads are under a system of patrol, insuring that the surface is kept up to the standard of construction.

Moon's 21st Anniversary

A Review of its Records of Achievement

Number of years in business	21
Number of countries sold in	47
Number of distributors	82
Number of dealers	598
Number of companies started since Moon began	607
Number of companies now in business	36
Total value of Moon products sold	$122,429,650
Total cash dividends paid	$2,500,719.44
Increase in business last 7 years	612%

This record has been possible by being not only constantly abreast of the times in engineering, but often leading the industry; coupled with outstanding performance and smart appearance.

Such success is due to a consistent policy of building high-quality, fine-looking cars of advanced improvements and refinements at prices that establish equally advanced values.

The present Moon 6-60 and Moon 8-cylinder Dianas are each leaders in their respective classes. Drive one of these wonderful cars before making any motor-wise decision.

AMERICA'S FIRST TRULY FINE SMALL CAR

The greatest Automobile success of the times

The Public—The greatest acceptance accorded any new automobile of recent times. Retail sales better than 3 to 1 as against original anticipated allotments.

The Industry—Recognized and praised by many of our contemporaries in the business and reflected in many major operations.

The Trade—More than 200 new distributors and dealers (including some of the strongest in the country), after observing the tremendous public interest, have invested their capital in the Marmon proposition during the past ninety days.

The reasons, of course, are quite evident—

First—As a truly fine and luxurious car, in a somewhat smaller, more convenient size, the little Marmon 8 was an entirely new and refreshing development.

Secondly—It has introduced a uniqueness of performance without parallel in the industry.

Thirdly—It is built by a company whose word the public has come to take as final in fine car manufacture—and at a price which sizable thousands can afford to pay.

This, in a few words, is a summary of the great Marmon success which everybody these days is talking so much about.

CONGRATULATIONS are coming from every where on what has proved to be the greatest automobile success of many years

WHAT IT WILL DO

70 honest miles per hour with ease. Fastest acceleration ever known. Lightning-quick gear shift. 18-22 miles per gallon of gasoline. Easy riding as cars twice its weight. Complete line of standard closed and open cars—all under $2900 f. o. b. factory.

Week end offerings of hogs cleared readily at about the highest prices since middle of last week, top at $12.25 being within 10c of the highest since Feb. 10. General average remained unchanged at $11.25, against $11.10 the previous Saturday, top and aver- age showing $1.00 "spread," against the a week earlier and $1.60 a year ago, when range was unusually wide. The average price the corresponding day a year ago at $11.40, lowest in March, 1926, stands lowest from Jan. 1 to Aug. 3, 1926, with only eight days averaging below this figure during the entire year.

Hog Prices Wide.

A struggle between buyers and sellers in the hog market last week, with pack- ers endeavoring to hold prices down in face of rapidly dwindling supplies, re- sulted in the widest range in months. Light and light butchers soared 25@50c, while heavy moved up only 10@20c, big hogs showing the least gain.

The previous week's drastic break, muddy roads, and the fact that farmers are preparing for work in the fields all helped to cut last week's hog receipts to 128,700, the smallest since last Octo- ber, being 32,600 smaller than the pre- vious week. Shipments at 29,900 were also smallest in five months. Estimate average weight at 241 lbs compares with 244 lbs the previous week and with 248 lbs a year ago, when hogs were aver- aging among the heaviest on record for the time of year. The week's average at $11.35 was lowest since December, 1925, due to the large share of offerings clearing at low prices first half of the week.

Cattle producers last week enjoyed some of the most satisfactory markets of the season, stock in several classes finishing at the high point of the year. Buyer were at a disadvantage in at- tempting to check the rise, despite the slight increase in offerings. The pre- vious week's losses in beef steers were fully recovered. Decreases in supplies earlier in March are apparently cutting the reported surplus of dressed beef. Chicago receipts thus far this month are 19,000 head short of the same period in 1926. Butcher stock advanced 25@50c during the week, closing at new high prices for the season. General average price of good beef cattle moved up 35c at $13.70, despite poorer quality. Ab- sence of finished heavy beeves held the week's peak down to $13.25. About 800 head passed the $12.00 line, 1,244 lb averages at $12.65, and 1,156 lb aver- ages at $12.25. A few 966 lb yearlings brought $12.00. Calves tumbled $1.00.

Lambs Sell High.

Dwindling supplies of lambs, coupled with a sharp upturn in dressed lamb at the close of the week, elevated prices nearly 50@75c since the close of the pre- vious week. The appearance of Colo- rado stock, marketed in small numbers, had little effect and prices finished as high as any time since last June. The week's average price of lambs at $15.29 stands highest in eight months and $2.15 above a year ago. Aged sheep estab- lished new high marks, ewes at $10.00 going back to last May for an equal.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 15,000 cattle, 47,000 hogs, and 17,000 sheep, against 16,513 cattle, 46,116 hogs, and 1,601 sheep a week ago, and 18,329 cattle, 48,859 hogs, and 19,495 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 48,000 cattle, 160,000 hogs, and 65,000 sheep.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreign demand for cash wheat was fairly active, with sales of 750,000 bu in all posi- tions, and there also was a little business in rye and oats, and a good trade in barley, but figures on the latter grains were not given out. There was 100,000 bu No. 1 hard winter sold at the gulf to exporters at 11¼c over Chicago May, with No. 2 hard 9½c over for first half April, and 9¾c over for last half.

Chicago handlers sold 6,000 bu wheat, 35,000 bu corn, 45,000 bu oats and 5,000 bu barley to the domestic trade, with 100,- 000 bu corn to go to store.

Demand for cash wheat was fair with the spot basis here unchanged, with No. 2 red 2@2¾c under, and No. 3 red 4@6c under, while No. 2 hard was May price to 1½c over, and No. 3 hard 2@4c under the future. Basis in the southwest showed lit- tle change.

Offerings of cash corn were small, but the demand was relatively slow, a leading in- dustry securing part of the receipts from outside markets and was credited with hav- ing bought more to come here. Spot basis was steady to ¼c lower with No. 3 grades 3½@5c under, No. 4 grades 8¼@9½c un- der, No. 5 grades 9½@10¾c under, and No. 6 grades 11@11½c under the future. Out- side markets were unchanged to 1c higher.

Cash oats were in demand and the basis steady to ½c higher. No. 2 white brought 2c over, and No. 3 white 1c over to 2c under May.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Sat- urday.: Wheat, 33 cars; corn, 102 cars; oats, 43 cars; rye, 3 cars; barley, 5 cars.

LARD MARKET EASY

Although the hog market was strong, with receipts for the week disappointing, the pro- vision market was easy, with trading light. Weeks shipments of meats and lard showed a decrease from last year, while receipts of lard were in excess of the shipments. At the close lard was 5@7½c lower, short ribs un- changed to 5c lower, and bellies 2½@5c low- er. Domestic trade was fair. Liverpool lard was unchanged to 3d higher. Export clearances of lard from the seaboard were 2,918,250 lbs and bacon 274,500 lbs.

A top of $12.25 for the best light hogs has been maintained for the last few days. Arrivals here were only 7,000 hogs, with 47,000 for Monday and 140,000 for this week. The latter will compare with 168,000 last year. Western receipts were 38,000 for the day, against 21,735 a week ago, 29,619 last year. Prices follow:

CHINESE CLASH RAISES WHEAT PRICES IN PIT

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Removal of hedges against export sales of domestic wheat abroad, with marked strength abroad and uneasiness over the Chinese situation, made a higher level of prices, with the finish at net gains of ⅝@⅞c, with the close about the top, with May $1.34⅝@ 1.34⅞; July, $1.29⅝@1.29¾; and Sep- tember, $1.27¾@1.27⅞.

Corn Prices Break Later.

Corn was firm early, but broke sharply toward the last and closed ¼@ ⅝c lower, with May, 71⅞@72c; July, 76⅝@76¾c; and September, 80@80½c. Oats finished unchanged to ⅛c higher, with May 43⅝@43⅞c, and July 44¼@ 44⅜c. Rye was 1½@1⅞c higher, with May $1.01@1.01¼; July, 99¾c; and Sep- tember, 96½c.

While all deliveries of grain, with the exception of May rye, sold at a new low on the crop the last week, there was a strong rally from the inside figures on wheat and rye, wheat closing ½c to ⅝c higher than the previous week, with rye up ⅝@1⅞c. Corn, however, was weak and lost 1⅞@2½c, with oats ⅝c lower to ½c higher. Lard closed 5c lower to 5c higher; ribs, 15@30c higher, and bellies 35@40c higher for the week.

Less Pressure on Wheat.

The development of a fairly active export demand for domestic wheat has had considerable influence on sentiment which was more in favor of the buying side. There was buying of futures here to remove hedges against export sales, one order for over 100,000 bu being filled against sales at the Gulf. The seaboard reported 750,000 bu sold in all positions including Manitobas as well as hard and red winter. Liverpool closed ⅝@1¼d higher to the surprise of the trade, while Buenos Aires gained 1@1¼c.

Commission houses were on both sides with large selling orders in evidence at $1.35 for May, and with selling against offers checked the bulge. There was no material pressure on the market early. Winnipeg was firm and ⅛@⅜c higher with a moderate export business on direct cables. Crop reports from the winter wheat belt continue favorable, with the weekly forecast for seasonal temperatures and occasional precipita- tion.

Corn Breaks Toward Close.

Short covering was on in corn early, but the bulge was checked by profit taking and selling against offer, and toward the last the market declined rather sharply, with weakness in the cash grain a factor and support was lacking on the way down. Country of- ferings were small and the eastern de- mand slow.

Oats showed more strength than corn, with aggressive short covering in evi- dence and the finish was firm. Selling against offers and the late reaction in corn checked the upturn. Seeding is under way in southern Nebraska.

Eastern interests were aggressive on the buying side of rye, and there were intimations of a good export business. Germany has decided to make no change in the import duty. It is estimated that 4,000,000 bu rye is sold for shipment from Duluth, and the bulk of the 853,000 bu at Milwaukee is said to have been dis- posed of to exporters.

PRIMARIES FOR WEEK

Primary receipts of grain were the lightest in more than two months, with an aggregate for the past week of 9,016,000 bu, a de- crease of 1,469,000 bu, or 14.5 per cent from the previous week, with a loss of 2,410,000 bu, or 21.9 per cent, as compared with last year, and a reduction of 1,829,000 bu, as compared with the five year average. REAL ESTATE OPERATORS—PROPERTY OWNERS—OTHERS TAKE NOTICE!

A most prominent man, with a national reputation as an organizer, financier and doer, with whom I am associated, has directed me to come to Chicago and procure for him, if possible, an operation.

This man, who knows industry, finance and real estate equally well, has made a study of the nation's business and from his analysis deducts Chicago and district to be on the eve of unprecedented prosperity.

To his credit this man has the successful direction of an important part of a na- tional campaign in which a president of the United States was elected. The finan- cing and building of "One of the world's engineering feats—the longest automobile bridge in the world—the Gandy Bridge," an investment from which the public are deriving about 25% per annum in dividends. The promotion and successful cul- mination of great hotels, buildings, townsites, subdivisions and the like. The organi- zation of large manufacturing and merchandising organizations.

My associate should have retired long ago—the income tax money he paid to the government last year was about one four hundredth of the total of a great state—his properties and affairs run into the millions—he is a young man—a powerful talker—is reported to be one of the most versatile men in America—he works eight months of the year and plays the other four—his hobbies are his yacht and his mountain place.

We will purchase acreage, mortgage issues, the control of a business, underwrite an issue—anything real and legitimate that makes for a big permanent business.

This man would prefer to contract to direct sales with or for the other fellow—to put in a sales organization and direct it—recompense would be based upon results and no advances would be required—he would contract to remain with such a propo- sition through a selling season—he is not too big to handle and he need not disrupt—he is constructive and appreciates the other fellow's point of view—you would have a man who would get maximum results with minimum grief—a man who will not countenance high pressure methods—who would build a vast organization to sell on facts.

Kindly write, stating what you may have to offer, it will be treated in the strictest of confidence—if you do not care to write yourself—have your broker or agent write and arrange for an appointment—we mean business and can make good—you will favor me by not wasting my time on an indifferent proposition.

Note: I will look for replies to this advertisement for a week to come, giving to out-of-town readers time to answer.

Our ex-managers, salesmen and others will refrain from taking my time. Write your applications to me at this address and I will see you in good time.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

With larger export buying against sales of domestic and Manitoba wheats in the hands of brokers here who were taking off hedges, a better feeling existed and values responded more readily to the buying. At $1.35 for May there was heavy general selling which checked the advance. This made a more mixed trade sentiment with considerable bear- ishness predominating in favor of sales on all sharp advances.

Heavy liquidation in corn has placed the market in a position that values respond more readily to buying on breaks, but trad- ers remain bearish despite the rally in wheat. Light receipts are cutting no figure at present, as stocks are large and the cash basis was slightly widened.

Expectations are that the visible supply of wheat will show a good decrease for the week and that there will be little, if any, increase in corn supplies. World's ship- ments of wheat for the week are estimated at 14,000,000 bu and will compare with 11,495,000 bu last year.

Duluth reports fair sales of spring wheat for export within the last few days and Minneapolis has sold wheat for shipment to Baltimore. A local miller sold a fair sized lot of clear flour to Austria during the week. This is a little more encourag- ing to holders of wheat, although the trade in the main would like to see prices con- tinue on an export level as at present so that the surplus can be reduced.

It is said that high protein American wheat is needed in Europe for mixing with Argentine wheat, as the latter, while heavy in weight, is deficient in protein. This has brought export buying on the break here.

German reichstag has settled the import duty question by making no change. This is expected to result in more business in rye with Germany.

A Milan, Italy, cable says native wheat is coming from farms in larger quantities for immediate sale. Crops in North Africa have been benefited by a heavy rainfall and new wheat for July shipments from there is of- fered at equivalent to $1.74½ per bu.

Strength in Liverpool cables was attributed to smaller world's shipments of wheat, with shorts covering March contracts. Offers of Manitobas and winters were firmer.

PRODUCE MARKETS

A break in butter prices of 3¢ was made on Saturday in trading in Chicago, with ex- tra creameries 49½c. Fresh eggs declined ½c to 2¢c for fresh firsts, with a fair business and good supplies.

Potato prices were unchanged, with a mod- erate business. Receipts were 87 cars, with 192 cars on track.

Strawberries were taken freely at $6 to $6.25 for 24 pint cases of Louisianas.

IT'S RAIL MAKING THAT PRODUCES RAILWAY HISTORY

BY HARPER LEECH.

Although the name railroad tells what it is better than many names for the things that have revolutionized the life of man in the last century and a half, the average man's idea of a railroad probably mimimizes the essential. He visions locomotives, cars, and other moving equipment. We have, in fact, recently been celebrating certain anniversaries of locomotive trips as if they were the real birthdays of railroading.

Now as a matter of fact rails, not what runs on them, make a railroad, and the economic strength of the railroad consists in the advantages of contact between a smooth wheel and a small smooth surface. The railroad originated in the wooden tracks in coal mines. It would have become widely used, if horses had remained the principal motive power of man.

As early as 1802 the use of horse drawn trams on cast iron rails was a demonstrated success—the cost of moving freight on one such railroad in England having been calculated at four pence per ton against three shillings, four pence for horse drawn traffic on the highway.

It was the insufficiency of the rails of the time that made Trevethick's locomotive of 1804 practically a flop. If the art of rail making had been sufficiently advanced at that time, steam railroading would have got under way before the Clermont started practical steam boating.

It is interesting to recall how many of the new departures in transportation are merely returns to old ideas. Three or four years ago Editor Cease of the Railroad Trainman dug up some interesting old prints of the steam busses, which ran on British highways before the railroad locomotive was much more than a speculation. As clumsy as those things were, they might have had a chance, had it not been for laws procured by horse people and the rapid improvement of rail making.

Outside of electrification, the two most important improvements which seem to be in prospect in the railroading art are the adoption of roller bearings for equipment and the construction of permanent bases for track. Experiments long drawn out appear to have produced bearings competent to withstand the terrific side thrusts of the enormous weights of railroad loads. The idea of a permanent roadway instead of the perishable tie, goes way back to the beginning. Twelve miles of the old Mohawk and Hudson were laid on granite blocks. The equipment of that time could not stand such a rigid road bed, and it was abandoned after a time. Now that equipment has improved and concrete come in, a return to the idea is imminent.

The steel frame building construction of today may have originated in a railroad mistake. Very high rails tried out on an early road had to be discarded. They were sold to builders who used them for pillars and beams. From that came the cast iron pillar which doubtless suggested the steel frame later on.

New York, March 26.—(AP)—Despite sporadic bear selling of vulnerable specialties and a rather large volume of week end profit taking, stock prices made further progress on the upside today. Bullish sentiment was created by Secretary Mellon's optimistic forecast of business on the eve of his departure for Europe, the further improvement in business, the continued ease of credit conditions, and the inexhaustible demand for high grade issues of investment merit.

An outburst of buying in General Motors, based on Vice President Raskob's prediction of the best first quarter earnings in the company's history, sent that stock up 2¾ points to 179. Willys-Overland closed ¾ of a point higher at 25, despite the publication of a disappointing 1926 earnings report. Hudson moved up over a point but most of the others showed narrow fractional changes.

Kelsey Wheel Rebounds.

Kelsey Wheel, which bear traders hammered down yesterday to the lowest price in several years, opened 14¼ points higher today at 86, sold down to 77, and rebounded to 79.

U. S. Steel common moved up ¾ to 194, or only half a point below the record high established earlier in the week. Baldwin was run up 2¾ points to 183.

A brisk demand for the Pan-American Petroleum issues, each of which closed 2 points higher, was inspired by reports that the company was contemplating a merger of South American properties, including the American Maracaibo, Creole syndicate and Lago companies, the common stock of the latter crossing 30 to a new peak. Houston added 1½ points to yesterday's gain, but the other oils were still under the restricting influence of overproduction of crude oil.

Public Utilities Advance.

Public utilities continued to respond to favorable merger and earnings reports and predictions of higher dividends by some of the larger companies. Montana Power climbed over 2 points to a new high record at 93 and American Telephone moved up nearly three points to within a fraction of its peak price for the last twenty years. North American common was under pressure on the announcement of an increase in authorized capitalization.

Establishment of new peak prices for the year by Eureka Vacuum, Pressed Steel Car, National Biscuit, Central Leather certificates, Federal Light and Traction, Fleischmann, International Business Machines, Jones Brothers Tea and a few others contrasted with the registering of new low prices by American Brown Boveri, Electric Refrigeration, and Tidewater Oil.

Renewal of selling pressure against the Western Pacific issues, which sank to new lows, and gains of a point or more in Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, Reading and a few others were the outstanding developments in the rail group.

Bond Market Irregular.

Bond prices were irregular. Accumulation of the new Burlington 4½s at a premium over the issue price was an interesting feature of the carrier group. Seaboard adjustment 5s and Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeastern incomes also were bought. Erie convertible 4s D, which have been under selling pressure of late, showed signs of recovery.

Industrial prices were steady with a gain of more than a point in Pressed Steel Car 5s commanding the most notice. Utilities were dull. Aside from a point gain by Rhinelbe 7s little of importance took place in the foreign list. Prices were irregular. Further selling of second Liberty 4¼s and moderate buying of treasury 3¾s told the story of the federal government group.

N. Y. Loans and Deposits Drop.

Passing the special demands for credit entering about the federal tax collection date were reflected in today's weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks. Loans, discounts and investments decreased $83,945,000 and net demand deposits fell off $92,553,000, while time deposits decreased $2,406,000. Excess reserve of $63,078,320 is shown, a decrease of $12,074,940.

Establishment of a new high level for the year by sterling exchange with demand bills quoted around $4.85 5-16 was the only change of consequence in the foreign exchange market. French francs held firm around 3.91 cents.

WALL STREET NOTES

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—Based on business of General Motors corporation in the first quarter, a record year for sales and earnings in 1927 was forecast by John J. Raskob, chairman of the finance committee, on his departure for Europe. The automobile outlook generally was very satisfactory, he said. Exports of General Motors were running 70 per cent ahead of last year.

Stockholders of Utah Power and Light company will vote at a special meeting April 7 on a proposed splitup of common stock on the basis of ten for one. Par value of the common, second preferred and preferred shares will be changed from $100 to no par, the share of new $7 preferred will be exchanged for each present preferred share and one share of new second preferred for each share now held.

Youngstown dispatches say steel plants in the Mahoning valley will operate next week at 83 per cent of capacity in both steel making and rolling mill divisions. Full finished sheet makers are unable to meet demands and are establishing backlogs.

R. G. Dun & Co. reports 492 commercial failures in the United States this week against 470 the week before, and 443 a year ago. Bank clearings in 23 leading cities in the United States for the week ended March 24 totaled $9,761,031,000, against $9,069,470,000 in the same week last year, an increase of 7.3 per cent.

California Eastern corporation has accepted an offer of Julian Petroleum corporation to sell its assets in exchange for stock of California Eastern, which has arranged for $7,500,000 financing through the First Seattle company. Offering will be made shortly of $7,500,000 first mortgage 6½ per cent convertible bonds and $5,000,000 7 per cent debenture bonds.

The General Electric company on April 1 will sell its flow meter business and patents to the Bailey Meter company and will receive stock in the latter corporation as payment. The Bailey Meter will also take over the flow meter combustion control business and patents of the present Bailey Meter company. Babcock & Wilcox will also be an important stockholder in the new company.

Community Music Is Called a Good Sign

By Edward Moore.

"I HAVE heard that Illinois has passed the band tax law," writes Karl L. King of Fort Dodge, Ia. "Iowa was one of the first to have it," he continues. "Our city has a municipal band, of which I am conductor. It plays free indoor concerts every other Sunday during the winter and two concerts a week outdoors during the summer, all paid for by the city government."

RUTH RADKEY
in piano recital at the Playhouse today.
[Daguerre Photo.]

Illinois also has such a law, passed and approved in 1925. It provides that any city of less than 500,000 inhabitants—which would seem to be the form of legalistic humor that excludes Chicago from its provisions—may, if it desires, levy a tax of not more than two mills on the dollar for the support of a municipal band. Concerning how many communities have taken advantage of the permission I have no information, though at one time and another I have seen editorials in various newspapers recommending that such action be taken.

This may be part of the readjustment process referred to last week. No one can safely predict how the musical situation is going to readjust itself, but there are a few symptoms that indicate a growing community activity. I am told, for instance, that state fairs are beginning to take some interest in musical affairs, that these annual exhibitions do not confine themselves exclusively to beef cattle, huge pumpkins, and cream separators, but include band concerts, school orchestras, and local choruses.

Music in the Schools.

Incidentally that is an entirely sane and encouraging sign. The best way to enjoy music, in some cases almost the only way, is to take a personal part in its performance, and the next best thing is to have one's children or one's friends taking part. That is community music that means something, and it entirely misses the fatal danger of going in for music in the spirit of self-conscious improvement and uplift.

Some cities are doing big work with music in the schools. I was reproved by mail a few weeks ago for saying that Chicago was so far behind the times in this matter, but I was serious. There are some cities that begin their school music in the first year of kindergarten and carry it through till the last year of high school, and what they accomplish is almost beyond belief. I still have a vivid recollection of hearing a high school orchestra in Grand Rapids, Mich., a few years ago, of about sixty-five members, including oboes, bassoons, horns, and everything else that is usually filled out by professionals, and not a professional player among them except their director. It was not only the best amateur orchestra that I ever heard, but in matters of tone, balance, alertness, and enthusiasm it could have given points to many a professional symphony orchestra in the country.

Such symptoms are encouraging. A good many other items of music making seem to be on the decline. But here it is necessary to make a correction of a statement not too clearly expressed a week ago about the Chautauqua movement. A telegram from Howard Tooley, from Oelwein, Ia., and a letter from George G. Whitehead, president of the International Lyceum and Chautauqua association, from Columbus, O., say much the same thing, that a few years ago there was considerable over-promotion of mushroom Chautauquas, that there has been a survival of the fittest, and that those best able to give service are in excellent condition. However, they both admit what I tried to express, that there are fewer than there used to be.

Chautauqua Manager Writes.

Ford Hicks of the Redpath Chautauquas adds to the testimony. He writes to this effect:

"The Chautauquas in the smaller cities may possibly be losing ground, but they are gaining in the larger cities. The Chautauqua was formerly considered as distinctively a small town institution, but it has developed along other lines, and now is meeting its biggest successes in larger cities. For instance, the Redpath Chautauquas go to such cities as Jacksonville, Louisville, Savannah, Knoxville, Mobile, Fort Wayne, Cincinnati, etc.

"The Redpath bureau, which originated the circuit Chautauqua, instead of experiencing a slump has enjoyed an increase in business. This year we will have more towns than last year, and last year our business was larger than the year before.

"The Chautauquas which have changed with the times and kept abreast with public demand have not experienced a slump in business."

Turning back to individual recital artists, P. S. Durham writes me about his experiences as a local manager. "When presenting great artists," he says, "a local manager hears but little of radio competition. He hears this most when his attraction is a good artist not well known, or else one of mediocre ability. If the public likes your attraction they will flock regardless of place or price, and if they do not wish to hear the artist a free ticket will not bring them.

"But, to be more specific, artists' fees are too high in almost all instances. I will go so far as to say that considering the town I operated in, its local conditions, halls, geographical location, and other local considerations, ninety-five per cent of the artists I presented received too much money. . . . Many sincere and fair artists would be not only willing but glad to go into a community on percentage if they had assurance that their merits would be intelligently, conscientiously, and vigorously presented. But after playing fair with a local manager and having some of them lie down to an unbelievable extent, the only thing that artists and their managers can do is to exact a guarantee. It is exacting too much that has brought them to the straits they are in."

Opera to Go on the Road.

Mr. Durham's letter is too long to quote in full, but it is an interesting statement of the local manager's point of view. He concludes, "Out of the night that envelops us will come concerts given by artists with a message and an adequate medium of expression, fairly paid for and selected by managers with taste, acumen, and energy, and attended by that growing army who love good music well performed."

One of the most provocative items so far in the matter of reconstruction is a line from New York stating that the Millay-Taylor opera, "The King's Henchman," is to go on the road. They have liked it so well in the community east of the Hudson that there seems to be a good reason to make up another cast and send it out to other communities.

It is too early to predict it yet, though one may always hope, but this may be a turning of affairs in American opera. Historically the operation has gone that way. After a period more or less long of imported opera—except in Italy, where opera was invented—some one wrote a native opera that caught the taste of the public. From that time on there was more of a market for native operas, and with the market came another market for translated operas of foreign make. Whether Miss Millay and Mr. Taylor are to turn the trick with their work remains to be seen, but there is a chance that they will.

Operetta Suggested.

At that it may not be a "grand" opera that will begin a new chapter for American music. Back in my head I have always had the idea that the "grand" opera is a form somewhat foreign to American taste. Why not an operetta, perhaps with the aid of the dance? Why cannot the spirit of America be expressed in comedy as well as in melodrama? We have the justly celebrated American sense of humor and the almost as celebrated American style of dancing. I have never been able to convince myself fully that a complete expression of the American spirit lay in killing off the tenor in the last act, though I have been present at many a performance.

Gay Farce-Comedy Certain to Amuse

"THE DEMI-BRIDE."

Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Presented at the Chicago theater tomorrow.

THE CAST.

Criquette.....Norma Shearer
Philippe.....Lew Cody
Monsieur Girard.....Lionel Belmore
Gaston.....Teeen Holtz
Madame Girard.....Carmel Myers
Lola.....Dorothy Sebastian

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

It certainly is a pleasure to burst forth this beautiful (?) Sunday morning with the statement:

"HERE is a picture that I KNOW you will like!"

I don't like to come growling and hedging about on a Sunday morning.

NORMA SHEARER
plays opposite Lew Cody in "The Demi-Bride."

"The Demi-Bride" is a gay farce-comedy presenting the unusual sight of Miss Norma Shearer as a pest and a brat—an enfant terrible from whose persistent grasp the fascinating Mr. Cody vainly endeavors to yank his coat tails. Without success, as you will be pleased to have it by the end of the picture.

Mr. Cody is Philippe De Something-or-other, a heart breaking French boulevardier. So great is the fame of his charm and his conquests that even the feminine pupils of the fashionable finishing school on the outskirts of Paris cherish his picture and speak in thrilled whispers about his amatory exploits.

One day while a fencing class is taking a lesson on the sward Mademoiselle Criquette, raising her eyes, finds her charmed gaze resting on none other than Monsieur Philippe, who, in company with a fair lady he has been tea-ing with in the garden next the convent, is rubbering over the garden wall.

Young, but Extremely Wise.

With cunning beyond her years the romantic schoolgirl arranges matters so that it is but a few minutes until she has fallen over the separating fence into the unwilling arms of monsieur. Feigning injury and a faint, she closes her eyes and collapses, as limp as a dead minnow.

Whereat the jealous beauty with Philippe gives him a look containing such dire threats as to cause him to do the patter that has made him so justly famous among the ladies, and which runs thus (or something like thus):

"Flower of my heart! You are the only one! The only one I have ever loved!"

Criquette, hearing and not seeing, wriggles with ecstasy and cuddles just a little closer.

WELL—the upshot of it is that Criquette is expelled. She returns home unexpectedly to find her beautiful step-maMA entertaining Monsieur Philippe. Step-maMA has, too, you see, ze grande passion for monsieur that afflicts all the other ladies. Of this her stocky and well bearded but ever suspicious and jealous Monsieur Girard is, up to the present, unaware. Howevaire—he is by no means sleeping on the job.

Into the tête-à-tête of step-maMA and Monsieur Philippe busts Mademoiselle Criquette and is utterly enchanted by the situation. So soon Philippe, it seems, is trying to secure a stand-in with the old folks!

Two Windows, Two Faces.

Most effectually she dissipates the glamour of the moment for ma-ma and Philippe—the latter finding himself almost immediately homeward bound in the pouring rain. He is watched depart from two different windows, one of which frames a face all giggly and elated, the other a mien that is hard to look at and easy to understand.

Poor Philippe catches a horrible cold and is unable to explain in person next day to ma-ma. He sends her, however, a basket of flowers and a note.

"Flower of my heart," he writes, "you are the only one I love and always will be!"

Again Criquette is exuberant—for she gets the basket and the note and, of course, is certain they were meant for her. She calls up monsieur.

"It is Mlle. Criquette," whispers the trusty man servant to the unhappy monsieur, who sits sneezing and wheezing with his dogs in a pan of hot water. A sad but NOT a romantic sight.

"Name of a name, get rid of the young nuisance! Tell her I am dying immediately," says Philippe.

"Monsieur is dying immediately," relays Gaston.

And it is not so much later that Criquette comes to care for the dying, armed with flowers and jellies and red flannels and the supreme assurance of a damsel who has had her own way all her life and never expects to have anything else.

Criquette brushes by the trusty man servant like he didn't cost a cent and descends upon Monsieur Philippe.

But, have I told you?—no, I have not!—that immediately preceding Criquette's entrance ma-ma, full of fury over the affair of the flowers, has arrived exceedingly from Missouri. Philippe had explained and all was about to be oo la la when—entrez Criquette!

Exit hastily ma-ma into boudoir.

Remainez Criquette.

Sufferez Philippe.

Knockez—pa-PA! Who has found the "flower of my heart" note and has come to put an end to all the earthly problems of the so-loving monsieur.

Halted in His Errand.

Pa-pa has his little gun all cocked ready to go off. Monsieur has fled to the boudoir, where he and ma-ma quake behind a door they fear will prove all too frail, when Criquette, all full of surprise and delight at her parent's entrance, flings herself into his arms, considerably disarranging his revolver and his line of thought.

"Why are you here, pa-pa?" Criquette asks.

"Philippe has been making love to your ma-ma," says pa-pa, "and I am here to settle his hash." Or French to that effect. Says which and produces the note.

Criquette shrieks with amusement. The knees of ma-ma and Philippe grow a little weaker at these sounds of madhouse merriment.

"But pa-PA," loffs Criquette, "that is MY note!" And she forthwith details her love affair as she sees it.

"Well, well," says pa-pa. "Well, well, well, well, well, WELL! Das machts es different!" He strides to the bedroom door and bellows:

"Philippe, come out!"

Philippe, bidding mental farewell to the sunlight and the flowers and all the little singing birds, creeps forth and pa-pa claps him heartily on his cringing shoulder.

"How long has this been going on?" queries pa-pa.

Philippe, who would quite as soon be shot to death as kidded to death, is speechless. But Criquette is not.

Before pa-pa leaves arrangements have been made. Criquette and Philippe become formally betrothed with pa-pa's blessing, and ma-ma sneaks down the back stairs—and so, to home and to bed, as Mr. Pepys would say.

"The Demi-Bride" is a clever, funny, and engaging farce if ever there was one.

The beautiful Miss Shearer's much advertised comedy sense presents itself here proof of the pudding. Lew Cody runs her no mean second. Their pantomime throughout is rich, rare, and racy, as are the subtitles. All other rôles are delightfully played and the beautifully staged thing starts with dash, gathers speed, and has a swell finish.

See you tomorrow!

Beethoven, Obit. March 26, 1827

By H. L. Mencken.

BEETHOVEN stands almost alone among the great artists, first, in that his greatness was recognized almost from the moment he began to write, and, second, in that it has never been questioned by any reputable body of opinion since his death. This second fact is even more remarkable than the first. Very few of the immortal creators have escaped periods of neglect and contumely. Shakespeare, as every one knows, was regarded as a second rater during part of the eighteenth century, and various imbeciles set themselves to the job of editing and improving him. Even Bach had his twilight, and it took a Mendelssohn to rescue him. But only fools have ever questioned the mightiness of Beethoven—and not many fools.

True enough some of his music heard today sounds a trifle old-fashioned. But that is the fault of the orchestra he wrote for rather than of the man himself. His C minor symphony, I believe, ought to be rescored by some one familiar with the larger and more resilient orchestra of today, say Richard Strauss. The colossal first movement, in the concert hall, is always a bit ineffective; the music never sounds quite as tremendous as it looks in score. But scored for the orchestra of "Til Eulenspigel" or "Tod und Verklärung" it would be overwhelming. The stuff is actually there.

Beethoven himself, when he came to the roaring last movement of the C minor, tried to reinforce the every day orchestra of his time by adding a piccolo, a contrabassoon, and three additional trombones. But he lacked tubas and he lacked many other things, and even the trombone in 1807 was not understood as it is today. Would a composer of 1927, writing the C minor, confine himself to two kettle drums and keep them banging away during a whole movement at C and G? It is surely not probable.

There is thus a certain thinness to the modern ear in some of the greatest of old Ludwig's masterpieces as they are heard in the concert hall, but there is no hint of it in the actual structure of his music. He thought on a large scale, and he had the skill necessary to execute his grandiose ideas. The first movement of the Eroica is a monument to one of the most gigantic intellectual feats ever performed by man. In it Beethoven set the tone of music for almost a century, and to this day it has never been surpassed within its own field, not even by Brahms—not even, indeed, by Beethoven himself. It is a creative work of the very first caliber, and in every sense.

It was not conjured up, of course, out of free air—as many too facile music sniffers, including the present humble subscriber, have often alleged. Its roots are actually to be found in the Second symphony—a work curiously underesteemed and, hence, seldom heard. But between the Second and the Eroica there was still a tremendous leap, and Beethoven could never have made it without the aid of genius of the highest order. The first movement, as everyone knows, shocked and amazed Vienna when it was first played: there were loud yells for mercy from the gallery. It no longer shocks any one, but when the clowning of the Stravinskys and Scriablines is forgotten it will begin to amaze again. For there is in it that complete perfection of design which belongs only to immortal masterpieces. It might be written differently, but it could not be written better.

In the smaller forms, with an instrument at hand that was better organized and understood than the orchestra of his time, Beethoven wrote works that remain unsurpassed to this day. For example, there are his later string quartets. No one has ever made the string quartet speak with a nobler voice. Beethoven found it chattering amiably—and going a round of easy emotions. He taught it how to be eloquent, and how to sing the siren's song. In those last quartets, even more than in the symphonies, there is the heavy charge of personal emotion which was, perhaps after all, Beethoven's greatest legacy to music. He found it gay, charming, brave, aphrodisiacal, devotional, even dignified; he made it tragic.

The man, of course, had the defects of his qualities. Compared to such a lordly, soaring improvisateur as Schubert—unquestionably the most gifted natural genius ever heard of in any art—he was laborious, and even a bit heavy footed. The thing vaguely called inspiration seldom gave him much help. His notebooks show by what ghastly struggles he devised his melodies—many of them still banal after he had sweated over them for months and years. It was not often in his life that a lovely tune popped into his head, all ready for use. Only too often even his hardest heavings failed to produce one and he had to go into action with nothing save a vagrant phrase.

But what he made of those phrases is the measure of his genius. He had scarcely stated them before they began to throw out sub-phrases, and in a short while, by devices that remain as marvelous today as they were when he first launched them upon the world, he had built up a structure of such intricate complexity, and yet of such transparent clarity and essential simplicity, that the effect was staggering. It was impossible to misunderstand him, and it was impossible to resist being moved by him. He knew how to enchant the mind, and he knew also how to search the heart. No man before him, not even Bach, had ever surpassed his mastery of the materials of music. And no man following him, save only Wagner and Brahms, has ever offered him serious challenge.

To his melodic sterility add his immense moodiness and the tale of his deficiencies is told. His emotions at their highest flight were almost godlike; he gave music a sort of Alpine grandeur. But such feelings were more than even a Beethoven could bear for long, and so he sometimes slid from them into trivial and trashy moods, as a Rotarian, turning from the cruel demands of Service, takes refuge in golf, spitballs, and bawdy songs to keep his heart from busting. Beethoven invented the musical obscenity: he showed how the canon could be converted into a ribald limerick. And he wrote a great deal of sheer drivel for the publishers. But he never put any of it into the music of his first line. That first line ran a whole county beyond any first line that had gone before it, and not many men have so much as approached it since 1827.

In the life of such a man there is much fodder for the ironist, but there is also a great deal for the optimist. After all, a race of quadrupeds that can produce such creatures must have some solid worth in it, and there is more proof of that worth in the fact that it cherishes them. Beethoven, to be sure, has never been the great hero that Valentino was, or John L. Sullivan, or Adelina Patti. He has never been worshiped like Robert E. Lee, or Bismarck, or Roosevelt. But I don't believe that any prudent man would want to trade his fame for that of any of these darlings, for it is infinitely wider dispersed than theirs, and it will last a great deal longer.

He is dead now a hundred years and yet he remains as alive today as if he still tramped his garden at Mödling, damning his nephew and pondering his gnarled and asthmatic tunes. The great masses of mankind perhaps remain unaware of him, but there is no civilized man who is wholly unresponsive to his touch, or who doubts that he was one of the greatest men the human race has produced. During the last week the press of the world has printed ten thousand articles upon his life and work, and in all the languages spoken by enlightened men. His anniversary has been celebrated in all the great cities on earth; millions have heard him speak and responded to his thoughts. He has been remembered and given a full measure of devotion not only by these crowds but also by countless lonely men and women in the cultural wastes of Serbia, Nicaragua, Ontario, Delaware, Madagascar, and Mississippi. Dead a century, and his bones long rotted and blown away, he has come back with the comfort and solace of an old and well loved friend—nay, of a god. It is a fate that the captains and king may well envy. Not many of them will outlast this grandson of the chief cook at Ehrenbreitstein.

Jeanne Eagels Tries Diluted French Play

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Jeanne Eagels, eager for a Broadway appearance this season after she had given up touring in "Rain" and had refused the heroine's part in "Chicago," tried a comedy farce called "The Cardboard Lover" Monday night at the Empire. The honors went mostly to Leslie Howard, who played the lover. But there were not enough to worry anybody into a fever.

JEANNE EAGELS
is back on Broadway in a new play.
[Moffett Photo.]

This is the play Laurette Taylor journeyed all the way to Paris to see a year ago that she might be sure she wanted to play it. She came home and said she did. She tried, but the odds were against her. The rôle is that of a sexy lady who hires one lover to protect her from another and that is not at all the Taylor type. Nor ever was.

In the original this heroine probably was a scarlet person given to free ways and uncensored liberties. But inasmuch as she is being introduced over here under the auspices of those who later expect to make a moving picture of her story she has been duly married to, and legally divorced from her first lover.

The boy she hires as a protector is a persistent and faithful dub. When she would be rid of him he is most fearfully in the way. Once when she is about to conclude negotiations with her former husband for a second elopement the cardboard lover calmly walks out of her bathroom wearing her prettiest pajamas and spoils everything. She must promise to marry him in the end to be sure she can keep him in his place.

Mr. Howard is engagingly naïve in the name part, a shy lad but honestly determined. The audience liked him so much it would gladly have staged a demonstration for him if he had been professionally indiscreet enough to risk his star's wrath by taking it.

Miss Eagels is not particularly happy as the heroine. Four years of "Rain" have put the stamp of the slithering, shrill voiced lady of loose hips, swaying torso and easy ways upon her and it is not easy for her to pretend to be even almost a lady on short notice. But she has her moments when she makes the most of the fun.

Manning the Drama.

The drama has been suffering another of its pallid lapses. It drooped last week around three not particularly brave attempts to enliven it.

Chief of these signalized the re-fusing of the Louis Mann family interests in the theater. Clara Lipman (Mrs. Mann), who, in the old "Telephone Girl" days was as flirty a soubrette as any of them and knew her "Well, well, master not up yet!" perfectly, has for many years been dutifully playing audience to Louis at home. And if you have the least notion that that is not a regular she-woman's job you don't know your actors, and certainly not your Louis Mann.

Not that Louis is anything but a devoted and admiring husband. But he is also an alert and determined conversationalist, and what he has to say he says. Also his days of activity on the stage have been lessened the last few years and he has had time to make such observations of the taste and deportment of actors, dramatists and audiences as have given fire to his imagination and curled the edges of an honest wrath.

Women are naturally self-protective. Miss Lipman, being duty bound to hear the friendly enemy of her house hold forth on this and that, apparently decided she might better return to the theater, do her listening there and get paid for it.

The Manns found a comedy now called "That French Lady," written by Neil Twomey and Samuel Shipman, who is in funds and great good spirits again with the success of "Crime." In this play Mr. Mann is again such a sputtering hater of the French as he was in "Friendly Enemies," and Miss Lipman a dashing oo-la-la lady returned from the wars with Mr. Mann's son.

After Miss Lipman cajoles and captures Mr. Mann in spite of himself she reveals herself as the son's mother-in-law and neither his wife nor his pursuer. Brandon Tynan is in the cast, and he always helps.

"The Fool" in Court.

The drama got into the courts again in a suit brought two years ago by one A. P. Waxman, charging that Channing Pollock had in effect lifted his play, "The Fool," from a drama Waxman had written ten or twelve years ago and called "Soldiers of the Common Good." The case came to trial last week.

When the evidence was in the striking mystery of the proceedings was the bullheaded courage Mr. Waxman must have had ever to bring his action, and the pitiful lack of legal acumen possessed by the lawyers who supported him.

The plays are utterly dissimilar in theme, character, structure, and general quality. So said the judge after reading them, though he listened dutifully to witnesses who testified that Mr. Pollock had discussed with them the general outlines of the play that afterward became "The Fool" as far back as 1902.

A feature of the submitted evidence was the defendant's answer to the plaintiff's complaint and bill of particulars. A more complete or more scathing exposé of the common charge of plagiarism has not been made since David Belasco staged a complete production of a drama he had been accused of stealing. The plaintiff playwright's charge in that case exploded in the laughter of the audience, judge, and jury before the first act was well under way.

The charged similarity in the Pollock case was based on the leading characters of the two plays. The hero of "The Soldiers of the Common Good" was one Jesse Christy, a reform politician, who suffered defeat in the elections and was thus "crucified" by his friends under circumstances he could not control. The hero of "The Fool" is the rector, Gilchrist, who seeks "to live in literal observance of the precepts of Christ." "The theme of 'The Fool' is 'what would happen to a man who tried to live like Christ?'" reads the answer to the complaint.

"The theme of 'Soldiers of the Common Good' is 'what would happen to a man who ran for state senator on a reform ticket?'"

MOVIE CLOSEUPS.

Walter Long, that deep, dark, daring movie villain, yearns to go straight, according to report. Ever since 1909 Mr. Long has been on the screen, playing anywhere from six to eight pictures a year, and for all this time he's been made to specialize on "heavies." But he's tired of villaining and says that one of these bright sunny days he's going to surprise us as somebody pure and precious.

"The Passion Play of the Life of Christ," by the Freiburg Players, from Freiburg, Baden, Germany, will be at the Playhouse for three weeks. It was first played in Freiburg in 1264, has been a regular institution since, and recently was put into motion pictures by Dimitri Buchowitzki, with the inherited men of Freiburg playing the rôles.—Mae Tinée.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

MR. JOLSON, it is arranged, will resume April 17 in the Apollo with "Big Boy" where he left off when he ran away from here in January of last year. . . . Reports from the Four Cohans continue to indicate that Miss Hayes is on a rising tide of attendance with her revival of "What Every Woman Knows." . . . Although her present manager, Mr. William A. Brady, has for months and months been seeking to inform the strabismic world that he has tied up, secured, and in other and divers ways obtained possession of "all the Barrie plays" for Miss Hayes' exclusive use through the years about to ensue, that young woman has thoughtlessly bound herself for some seasons to come to a rival impresario. . . . Put on too late last week for description in Mr. Mantle's feuilleton of today was "The Spider," a melodrama about a wicked prestidigitateur of the varieties; and comes a credible bulletin to me to say that the new piece "looks like the biggest hit in town since 'Broadway,'" and that the cost of main-floor seats at the box-office, reacting to these symptoms, already has been raised from three dollars to three-fifty. . . . Although Mr. Mantle doesn't write, in the column immediately to the left, with sizzling warmth about "Her Cardboard Lover," the same bulletin that tells of "The Spider" says that Miss Eagels' audience of Thursday night included eighteen persons who paid to stand up, and that that was held by her manager to be an omen of lasting prosperity. . . . But the fiscal report on "Lucky" indicates that the six-dollar scale for seats doesn't appear to have caught the fancy of all strata of theater-goers down there; for, according to the painstaking communique, there are unused seats in the galleries while Miss Mary Eaton and her black-type associates cavort in the new recreation.

MISS PEGGY WOOD
She's one of the name-studded cast of "Treiawny."

Miscellany.

Miss Ina Claire, if we may believe a report from Kansas City, is giving her best thinking to whether she will resume her old job as the diva of the Ziegfeld Follies in consideration of a weekly wage of $3,000 said to have been offered to her by Mr. Ziegfeld. . . . Joe Cook, too, is said to be pondering heavy inducements to insert himself into the Follies, which is scheduled for revelation in Jersey in mid-May. . . . "The Comic" is something newly abstracted from an Hungarian original, and is to have the talents of J. C. Nugent and Miss Patricia Collinge. . . . It is not probable that much will be heard hereafter of "Birds of Passage," in which Miss Mary Nash has been performing, nor of "The Adventurer," a piece from the Italian about Ulysses wherein Lionel Atwill has again been trying to obtain acceptance as a star: the try-out performances of the plays have been discouraging to the respective projectors, it seems.

More Miscellany.

Poodles Hannaford, a clowning horseman of the tent-shows, goes with his little "troupe" into the imported operetta named "The Circus Princess." . . . Miss Margaret Lawrence, thrown into fresh idleness by the quick failure of "The Heaven-Tappers," is turning to the two-a-day—a department of the theater which is about to provide employment for Miss Elizabeth Hines, who is said to be heart-broken by Mr. Ziegfeld's postponement of "Show Boat"; Charles Gilpin, the Negro actor whose repute seems to have no basis other than that he acted for a time in "The Emperor Jones"; Ralph Morgan, a male ingénue of considerable popularity with theater-goers; and Miss Priscilla Dean and Jack Holt, of the movies.

And More.

Miss Vesta Victoria, whose furious singing of "There Was I a-Waitin' at the Church" made her a variety-stage idol of twenty years ago, is again active in the American 'alls. . . . Raymond Hitchcock, whose immense vogue of other years seems to be reacting logically to the law of diminishing returns, is touring the two-a-day theaters, serving as master of the ceremonies. . . . George White, who is preparing a show named "America First!" says he will have not fewer than 124 persons in the chorus thereof. . . . And Miss Sophie Tucker says she is under contract to return to London and head the roster of a revue based, it seems, on the vogue of jazz in music.

On the Restricted Meaning of "Moral."

It is also a rather significant commentary on our national state of mind that the word "moral," or rather the word "immoral," has come to have an exclusively sexual significance. As we remember our definitions, there is nothing in the word "moral" which gives it this limited application. It used to have something to do with honesty, charity, and general integrity as well.

But there seems to be no objection at all to plays in which the hero is a cheat or the heroine a thoroughly cruel superwoman. One of the biggest successes of recent years, "Turn to the Right," generally recognized as a play for both young and old, was a glorification of tricky business methods. Last season, in "Alias the Deacon," the hero was a card-sharper and the audience loved him best when he was plying his trade. One of the few "clean" plays in town this season, "Tommy," has a dear old uncle in it who is a crooked politician and it is through his chicanery that the play reaches its happy ending. Even that cleanest play of them all, which has gladdened the hearts of so many citizens, "Abie's Irish Rose," is based on a lie told by a son to his father and his efforts to keep the old gentleman from finding out the truth.

Our present code seems to be that anything is "moral" that the majority indulges in, and anything "immoral" that the majority either has no taste for or wood like to indulge in but is afraid to.—Robert Benchley in Life.

Etcætera.

Mr. A. H. Woods is quoted as saying: "I should rather have one play produced in London than forty in New-York!"; and that is as funny as anything recently said by any of the American producers, who, at-home or abroad, unwittingly say many funny things. . . . Mr. Woods is still trying to persuade the British play-censor to issue a license for "The Shanghai Gesture," which, it seems, is to be acted next season by not fewer than five casts. When I last heard of the censor's attitude toward that barbecue, I was told that a license would be issued if Mr. Woods or the authors would change the characters of the Englishmen to Americans; and that may not have been true, although, as an idea, it was quite as comical as that of the authors in making the characters Englishmen. . . . And Mr. Woods reports that he has obtained for this country a piece named "Mr. What's-His-Name" that has not yet been performed in London, although it has been popular in other English cities. . . . A new play of last week in London, "Professor Tim," is by George Shields, who has been writing for the Abbey Theater of Dublin; and the London play-reporters are of the belief that he may be "another Sean O'Casey," although Mr. O'Casey has not yet shown a talent commensurate with the fuss made over him when, two years ago, "Juno and the Paycock" was acted in England.

Community Music Is Called a Good Sign

Here and There in Music.

An unusual set of solo, or at least partially solo, numbers are scheduled for the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week. It is, by the way, a heavy week for the orchestra, since its assignments include concerts in Milwaukee tomorrow night, Oak Park Tuesday, a "pop" at Orchestra hall Thursday night, and the regular Friday afternoon and Saturday night concerts in the same place.

On Thursday's popular program there will be two concertos, each written for four violins. The first, by Vivaldi, will be played by Messrs. Itte, Martinson, Charbulak, and Dolnick; the second, from the pen of Maurer, by Messrs. Reiners, Selwitz, Senescu, and Hyna. In addition there will be Hubay's Concert Piece for viola and orchestra, with Mr. Vieland as soloist, and the Theme and Variations; Finale-Polonaise by Tschaikowsky, in which a number of other members of the orchestra will have solo bits.

Some more virtuosity will be displayed on the Friday-Saturday pair. Here there will be the Chausson Concerto for violin, piano, and string orchestra, with Jacques Gordon and Joseph Brinkman taking the spotlight. The orchestral numbers will include Smetana's "Bartered Bride" Overture, the first movement from the Second Symphony by Adolph Brune of Chicago, and excerpts from Wagner's "Die Walkuere" and "Die Goetterdaemmerung."

The Gordon String quartet will play at the Simpson theater, Field museum, the first of a series of six chamber music concerts this afternoon under the auspices of the Library of Congress and the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation. Under the terms of the foundation these concerts are permitted to be given free of charge. The program will include the Beethoven quartet, opus 135; the Cavatina from the same composer's quartet, opus 130, played in memory of the late Franz Kneisel, and Louis Gruenberg's "Four Indiscretions"; finally the Dvorak quartet, opus 96. The series will continue each Sunday afternoon until May 1.

Of the New York String quartet, announced to play at the Goodman this afternoon, it is learned that its membership consists of Ottokar Cadek, Jaroslav Siskovsky, Ludvik Schwab, and Bedrich Vaska. The quartet was founded in 1919 and has been playing continuously with unchanged personnel since then. All of Bohemian origin, Mr. Cadek and Mr. Siskovsky were born in this country and the other two are now American citizens. Mr. Schwab was the accompanist for Kubelik on several tours. Mr. Vaska was formerly first cellist of the Moscow Symphony orchestra and later a member of the Sevcik String quartet. The program this afternoon will include quartets by Haydn and Ravel and short pieces by Bridge, Goosens, and Grainger.

St. Louis, which takes its summer delight in a season of operetta, sends word of what may be expected this year at the open air theater in Forest Park. Works new to that stage will be Leo Fall's "The Dollar Princess"; "The Song of the Flame," by George Gershwin and Herbert Stothart; Victor Herbert's "The Serenade"; "Rose Marie," by Stothart and Friml; Offenbach's "The Tales of Hoffman"; and Herbert's "Princess Pat." Others favored by past presentations will be Friml's "Katinka"; "The Mikado," by Gilbert and Sullivan; "Robin Hood," by Smith and De Koven; "The Red Mill," by Blossom and Herbert; Franz Lehar's "Gypsy Love," and Kalman's "Sari." There will also be some performances of serious operas not yet named.

Andreas Pavley and Serge Oukrainsky and their ballet organization will appear with the Los Angeles Grand Opera company next fall, with a season of five weeks each in Los Angeles and San Francisco. When that engagement is completed they will tour the United States and Mexico. The announcement includes the further information that they will not be with the Chicago Civic Opera company next season.

The glee club of Ripon college, having appeared last night at Kimball hall, will sing this afternoon for the Sunday Afternoon club of Evanston, and tonight for the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall.

A concert for the benefit of St. Edmund's Episcopal church will be given April 4 at the Midway Masonic temple by the University of Chicago choir, directed by Mack Evans, and Gilderoy Scott, contralto.

MISS HELEN MENKEN

SHE'S not been here since, late in 1924, she performed in Cohan's Grand in "Seventh Heaven." She expected to get the title-part in "Lulu Belle," and didn't get it; and she has been in "The Captive." . . . Miss Menken is bill-topping in the Palace, playing the slums-waif in a tabloid of "Seventh Heaven."

Eight New Shows Listed for April

NEW things for the Chicago theaters in April were listed as eight in number when this page was prepared for press at midnight Friday. The list doesn't take account of the Olympic, shuttered with last night's departure of "New-York Exchange," nor of the Playhouse, where a Passion Play movie is marked for three weeks only.

Monday, April 4:

Miss Marilyn Miller, with Jack Donohue, in "Sunny" in the Illinois.—The toe-dancer of "Sally" and other shows and the amusing jester who was last here in "Be Yourself!" in a diversion framed at high cost by Mr. Dillingham for the exploitation of the former. The show was on view through a year in New-York. Frank Doane, Clifton Webb, and Louis Harrison are others in the cast. . . . A matinée will be given Wednesday of the first week: later, performances will be given Sunday nights, and the mid-week matinée will be dropped.

Monday, April 11:

"The Pigeon" in the Goodman Memorial.—A play by John Galsworthy that has not yet been acted in Chicago: to be given by the resident players of this theater, with Whitford Kane (who originated the title-rôle in England) continuing in his posture as their "guest." . . . This will be the first Monday "opening" in the Goodman Memorial; and the plan seems to be to give "The Pigeon" nightly save Sunday, with an afternoon performance Friday.

Sunday, April 17:

"The Nightingale," with Miss Eleanor Painter, in the Great Northern.—An operetta by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse, and Armand Vescey which has Jenny Lind, the famed Swedish coloratura, as the heroine. Stanley Lupino, here with Mitzi last season in "Naughty Riquette," and Thomas A. Wise (whose rôle is P. T. Barnum) are with Miss Painter, who hasn't sung in Chicago since "The Last Waltz," five years ago. . . . "The Vagabond King" will be continued in the Great Northern until April 9; and it is not improbable that, in order to avoid conflict with the other openings of the 17th, "The Nightingale" will have its first Chicago performance the night of the 16th.

Miss Queenie Smith in "Judy" in the Studebaker.—The engaging soubrette and dancer of "Be Yourself!" and "Tip-Toes" in a song-and-dance farce by Mark Swan, Lee Robin, and Charles Rosoff; it has been on view in New-York in recent weeks. Charles Purcell is of the company.

"Twinkle! Twinkle!" in the Erlanger.—A song-and-dance piece by Harlan Thompson and Harry Archer that is in the final weeks of a New-York run, with Joe E. Brown and Miss Ona Munson. . . . This booking for the Erlanger may be described, as to date, as tentative, and as dependent on the attendance for "Oh, Please!" wherein Miss Beatrice Lillie and Charles Winninger are drawing crowds to that theater.

Al Jolson in "Big Boy" in the Apollo.—Return of the most popular of contemporary singing-jesters in the conveyance wherein he was seen here for about three weeks of last season. It is stated that the show has been altered since then. . . . Mr. Jolson's engagement will, it is understood, mark the end of the Apollo as a theater of articulate entertainment: when he finishes, the house will be converted into a film-place.

Monday, April 18:

"Trelawny of the Wells" in the Blackstone.—Pinero's comedy, made known in this country in 1898, in revival by George C. Tyler, who has cast it with players of such celebrity that the venture has attracted country-wide attention. John Drew, Wilton Lackaye, John E. Kellard, Miss Helen Gahagan, Miss Peggy Wood, Miss Henrietta Crosman, Mrs. Whiffin, Rollo Peters, Otto Kruger, and J. M. Kerrigan are some of the actors in it. . . . The engagement is for a week of nine performances: an added matinée is scheduled for Friday, the 22d.

Sunday, April 24:

"The Barker," with Richard Bennett, in the Blackstone.—A play by Kenyon Nicholson about life, license, and love in the minor tent-shows. It is a success in New-York, where Walter Huston has the part of Nifty Miller, to be acted here by Mr. Bennett.

New in Manhattan

These are the new things of the week in the New-York theaters:

"Mariners," by Miss Clemence Dane, with Miss Paulnie Lord, Miss Haidée Wright, Arthur Wontner, Miss Mary Kennedy, Miss Beylah Bondi, and T. Wigney Percyval. . . . This is the second of Miss Dane's plays to be acted this season in New-York: the other is "Granite." She is known in Chicago for "A Bill of Divorcement," acted here in 1922. Miss Wright came back from London this season to be with Mr. Sothern in "What Never Dies," a flivver. Mr. Wontner, in his first season in this country, was brought from the same town for "The Captive." Miss Kennedy is, out of the theater, the wife of Deems Taylor, the composer.

"Lost," by A. E. Thomas and George Agnew Chamberlain on the basis of a novel by the latter, with Ramsey Wallace, James Crane, and Miss Rosalinde Fuller.

Lemaire's Affairs: the rowdy show that ran through last Summer in the Woods, with Lester Allen and Ted Lewis still in it, and Miss Charlotte Greenwood instead of Miss Sophie Tucker.

"Cherry-Blossoms," by Harry B. Smith and Sigmund Romberg, with Miss Desirée Ellinger and Howard Marsh. . . . This is an operetta based on the play named "The Willow-Tree," in which Miss Fay Bainter acted years ago in the Blackstone.

"The Legend of Leonora," Barrie's comedy in revival by Miss Grace George, who has Bruce McRae and Moffat Johnston with her. . . . The play, known in England as "The Adored One," was acted here some years ago by Miss Maude Adams.

"The Scalawag," by David K. Higgins and Bennet Musson, with Mr. Higgins in the principal rôle. . . . Mr. Higgins has been writing plays and acting in some of them through many years. The most successful opus in his list was "Piney Ridge."

"Fogbound," by Hugh Stanislaus Stangé, with Miss Nance O'Neil, Curtis Cooksey, Alfred Hickman, Miss Betty Linley, and Miss Clara Blandick. . . . The author is the son of the late Stanislaus Stangé, who wrote numerous "books" for operetta; and he first came into notice as the dramatist of Tarkington's "Seventeen."

F. D.

GIGOLO NO. 1

RAYMOND HACKETT

He's in "Cradle-Snatchers," vis-à-vis with Miss Margaret Dale, who acts the desperate matron who is first of her circle to take on a college-boy as a paid escort to offset neglect by her duck-hunting husband.

DANCING-GIRLS HERE AND EN ROUTE

MISS MARILYN MILLER — MISS CATHERINE GALLIMORE

MISS MILLER, absent from Chicago since the Spring of 1923, is headed for the Illinois a week from tomorrow, when she will exhibit in "Sunny" the qualities for which she is admired by the general public. She is, from the angle of the box-office, unique among American performers. Miss Miller's adventures in the four years since she last performed here have included her appearance in New-York as Peter Pan, a year's run there in "Sunny," and a reconciliation with Mr. Ziegfeld.

Miss Gallimore is less of a celebrity than Miss Miller. Information furnished by the press-agent is to the effect that she is from Paris, and that she has been trained by Miss Gertrude Hoffman. She is in the goulash named "A Night in Paris."

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Enjoys It.

Oculist—Are you troubled with things dancing before your eyes?

First nighter—O, no, not at all. In fact, I rather like them. O. S. A.

Easy to Pick Up.

Autoist—Where do you get auto parts around here?

Native—At the railroad crossing. W. A.

For Every One.

"Why did the Smith's separate?"

"Nobody knows."

"How terrible!" MRS. C. J. H.

Now He Hasn't.

Grandson—"Have any of your childhood ambitions been realized?"

Grandfather—"I should say! When my mother used to cut my hair, I always wished I hadn't any." L. K.

The Reason.

"Why didn't you dance last night?"

"I had a rented tuxedo."

"Well, what of it?"

"But it was rented where it would show." E. S.

Just to Accommodate.

Cholly: "Everything Smith touches turns to gold."

Polly: "I—I wonder if he'd put his hand on the bracelet you gave me." R. A. G.

Wrong Number.

Wrecked motorist (phoning): "Send help at once, I've turned turtle."

Mechanic: "Say, this is a garage. What you want's an aquarium." L. B.

Following Instructions.

"You're looking fine," announced the doctor to his patient. "Have you followed my dieting instructions and eaten only what a 3 year old child would?"

"Yes, doctor," was the sad reply. "For dinner I had a handful of mud, one of coal dust, a button hook, and a box of safety matches." M. L. M.

Why, the Very Idea!

A congressman's wife, waking him in the middle of the night, told him that there were robbers in the house. "Impossible," said the congressman. "There may be robbers in the senate, but not in the house." E. F.

Ho, Hum! Ho, Hum!

Jim—According to statistical figures, one pedestrian in these United States is killed every eight hours.

Jack—Must be getting monotonous to him by this time. J. P.

All Backward.

Mrs. Thompson [learning to drive]: "Henry, that little mirror up there isn't set right."

Thompson: "Isn't it?"

Mrs. Thompson: "No, I can't see anything but the car behind. G. G.

Memory Aided.

Mrs. Rapper: "If I were to die, would you ever forget me?"

Mr. Rapper: "Impossible. The doctor says my indigestion is incurable." H. A. C.

Hardheaded Youth!

"Better keep your head inside the window!" warned the brakeman.

"I kin look out the window if I want to!" the fresh youth responded, with a wink at his companions.

"Sure you can," answered the conductor. "But if you damage any of the ironwork of the bridge, you'll have to pay for it." S. G. F.

Old World Stars at Peak of Favor in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Louis B. Mayer's announcement on his departure for Europe that he intended to look for available screen players is simply another statement of what has happened to Hollywood in the last few years.

The "foreign invasion" that began some years ago is at its height now with no studios of prominence lacking a foreign star and a foreign director or so and foreign players of lesser magnitude taking up a lot of the footage in all Hollywood productions.

The amazing recent successes of Vilma Banky, the lovely Hungarian, Greta Garbo, the compelling Swede; Jetta Goudal, the French actress who has hit amazingly in "White Gold," and Lya de Putti set the year's high water mark in quickly achieved popularity. This is not the whole list; many others have arrived from foreign shores with foreign successes behind them to make their mark on the screen and marks for the money bag.

Recent arrivals include Maria Corda, a Hungarian from German productions, now at First National; Vera Veronica, a Russia, at Paramount; Natalia Kovanko, from French pictures, notably "Michael Strogoff," and under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Women Take the Laurels.

The most notably successful foreign invaders in the picture realm have been the women. Pola Negri led the van when she was brought over by Paramount after her successes abroad in "Passion" and "Gypsy Blood." She has remained a favorite with the public in spite of the slightly denatured stories in which she has been cast.

Before the fair Appolonia's arrival in Hollywood other distinguished foreign invaders—men—came here.

Sir Beerbohm Tree's adventures in films were scarcely successful; the dignified English Thespian was cast promptly to play a Yankee farmer.

Max Linder, famous continental comedian, next invaded the studios. He was not successful; his type of humor was too continental and he returned abroad.

The only picture of note that Vilma Banky made before Goldwyn brought her to America was "Circusmania," in which she played opposite Linder.

George Arliss, English actor, made a success with his film plays of stage productions, notably "Disraeli," "The Devil," and "The Green Goddess," but never became entrenched as a movie hero. Forbes Robertson and E. E. Sothern made pictures, but with indifferent success.

It has remained for foreign women to make the movie fans like continental players. In the last year Victor Varconi, famous abroad for his "Last Days of Pompeii," has made a hit in "The Volga Boatman."

Lars Hansen of the Swedish school has "clicked" in at least two pictures this year, "The Scarlet Letter," and "Flesh and the Devil."

With the exception of these two, actors with an established foreign reputation in films have not made a great hit here. Ronald Colman and Charles Chaplin have been great successes and are of foreign birth, tradition, and citizenship, but their screen careers have been born and raised in the United States.

Nothing to Rave About.

The arrival of Greta Garbo in Hollywood a year and a half ago had little to suggest that she would be a spectacular success after one picture. She had been starred in a foreign production, "The Saga of Goesta Berling," under the direction of Mauritz Stiller, Scandinavian director, who insisted that she was an artist and secured a contract for her with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Off the screen Miss Garbo is the least impressive of the stars. She is tall and not built at all for the present styles in street clothes. Hollywood scribes were notably unimpressed when she arrived looking pale, not chic, and with a "run" in her stocking as she got off the train.

Since then she has swept the town, not to mention the out of town, with her portrayals of the continental woman of experience, first in "Torrent," then in "The Temptress," and lastly in "Flesh and the Devil."

Lya de Putti, who came to Paramount after her enormous hit in "Variety," made abroad by U. F. A., has not as yet established herself as a great star in American films due to the old trouble—unsuitable stories for her type. It remains to be seen what Hollywood will make of the talented Emil Jannings, known to American fans for years through his U. F. A. pictures, beginning with his portrayal of Henry VIII. in "Deception," down to his present releases, "Variety" and "Faust." He is working now on a picture for Paramount.

Ivan Moskine, known as Mosjoukine, star of "Michael Strogoff," is another newcomer awaiting the turn of events in American films. He came from French films where he made "The Lion of the Moguls," "Casanova," and "Strogoff." Universal is managing his American destines.

Henry Victor, young English actor, who came to Hollywood a little over a year ago, had many European successes behind him, notably "A Portrait of Dorian Gray," "Diana of the Crossways," and a film with Alice Delysia made in Paris. None of them were released in America. Victor's success here so far has ben mediocre, due to lack of good rôles. He played recently in "The Fourth Commandment" as hero, and as the villain in "The Beloved Rogue" with Barrymore. Now he is playing with the Duncan sisters in "Topsy and Eva" for United Artists.

Sid Grauman's Birthday.

St. Patrick's day was celebrated with vigor and enthusiasm by at least one of Hollywood's famous ones. Sid Grauman enjoys his yearly birthday anniversay along with St. Patrick. Sid is the founder of the famous Egyptian theater, and is now anxiously awaiting completion of a second, the Chinese theater, a few blocks farther up the boulevard.

The beautifully greened bronze roof of the theater stands up through the frame work around it. Sid never misses a day walking by and looking at it; he frequently can be seen as he strolls along down Hollywood boulevard, no hat detracting from his long bushy hair and perhaps a hunk of bologna, a paper of oranges or a pickle in his hand which he munches as he walks, like any school boy.

Company Marooned.

The location trip of the "Captain Salvation" company at Catalina was a momentous affair. The caste, composed of Marceline Day, Pauline Starke, Ernest Torrence, George Fawcett, Eugenie Besserer, Lars Hansen and his wife, Karin Nolander, and Sam De Grasse, were quartered in a house up on the isthmus, which is the deserted side of the island.

Three days of rain and the water pipes broken, the steam heat plant blew up and the cooking facilities were limited to one wood stove in which the wet wood would not burn. The company washed their faces and hands in buckets and bid each other

OF OPERA

MISS MADELEINE COLLINS

She's in the title rôle of "Katja," which was named "Katja the Dancer" in Europe; but Miss Collins doesn't classify as a dancer. She's out of the operas, having sung in London's Covent-Garden under Sir Thomas Beecham.

Bits Musical

Mrs. Charles Cooper, acting chairman of the American composers' committee of the National Federation of Music clubs, has announced the award of the Theodore Presser prize of $500 to May A. Strong of Evanston. The prize winning composition is a setting of a poem by Alfred Noyes, "The Slumber Songs of the Madonna," for women's chorus with piano, violin, and violoncello accompaniment. The work will be performed at the biennial of the federation to be held in Chicago in April. Miss Strong was awarded the W. W. Kimball company prize offered by the Chicago Madrigal club in 1924 for the best setting of "May Comes Laughing." She is a member of the faculty of Northwestern university.

Arthur C. Becker will give his third organ recital at St. Vincent's church this afternoon. John Rankel, baritone, will be the soloist.

Five Friday noon recitals at Kimball hall are announced for the month of April. In order they are: 1—William Phillips, baritone; 8—Clara M. Schevill, mezzo-soprano; 15—James Vandersoll, violinist; 22—Watt Webber, tenor; 29—American Guild of Organists. Allen W. Bogen and Edward Benedict, organists, will contribute numbers at each recital.

spare the water; then looked out the window and noted the rain coming down in torrents.

Pauline Starke and her maid were busily embroidering a shawl and when they got it finished, after days of rain and inactivitiy, were asking nothing better of heaven than to get something else to embroider to pass the time. The male contingent looked dour and played cards.

The extras who had thought the trip to Catalina would, of course, mean nights and dancing at the St. Catherine hotel, had all brought evening clothes which had gotten woefully wet and soggy during their stay in the company quarters at the isthmus.

A New Hero for a Fan.

Dear Miss Tinée: At last I have solved the problem. I know where you got your name. You took it from "matinée" and added an "e" to "ma" and therefore made it Mae Tinée. I have often wondered why any one should give you that name, but now I know why. Am I right, Mae?

I wrote you some time ago, saying that Cline Brooks was my movie lover, but ah! I have found another and he is James Hall. Of course, Cline still remains fixed in my mind, but along comes James Hall and fairly takes me off my feet with his love making to Bebe Daniels.

I have seen "The Campus Flirt" and "Stranded in Paris" and they are both wonderful pictures and Bebe and the adorable James make a darling couple. What say? PEANUT.

Editor's Note: Says "yes."

For Rudy's Place.

Dear Miss Tinée: While they are looking for an actor to take Rudy's place, why don't they put Ricardo Cortez in his place? I never saw two men look more alike than these two. Have you noticed the likeness?

The Reasons for Park Lane Popularity

THE THRONGS of people that visit the Park Lane daily are undeniable evidence of the unusual interest displayed in this apartment hotel.

The Park Lane has dared to depart from the commonplace. The Park Lane has believed that larger rooms, more distinctive furnishings and superlative service at rentals within reason would meet with instant public approval. The many apartments already leased verify this contention.

The architectural elegance of the building—the richness of the rooms and apartments—the proximity to Lincoln Park and quick transportation to the loop—plus rental values seldom given in buildings of this character—are reasons for this unprecedented interest in the Park Lane.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Lutherans Hold Lenten Services

"Religion Today," Tribune religious editorials in book form, with an Easter cover in purple and white, will be placed on sale this week at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street. The price is 10 cents a copy, 12 cents by mail.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

LUTHERANS of the Missouri synod will begin Lenten services at the Adelphi theater, 11 North Clark street tomorrow noon. The meeting will continue daily except Saturdays and Sundays until Good Friday. On Good Friday, two sessions will be held at the same theater to accommodate the crowds.

The speaker this week will be the Rev. Harry Eckhardt, D. D., of Pittsburgh, Pa. The speaker next week will be the Rev. Carl Ehlers of Lakewood, O. During the final week the Rev. W. H. T. Dau, D. D., president of Valparaiso university, Valparaiso, Ind., will speak. The plan this year is a departure from the custom of previous years when local pastors spoke from day to day.

The United Lutherans will begin a two weeks' series of noonday Lenten services at the La Salle theater, 110 West Madison street, April 4. At the same date similar meetings will be held at the Chicago Temple, Clark and Washington streets, under the joint auspices of the First Methodist Episcopal church and the Chicago Church federation.

Gypsy Smith, one of the world's best known evangelists, will stop in Chicago on a world tour and will speak as follows: Next Sunday, 7:30, First Congregational church, Oak Park; 7:45 p. m., Fourth Presbyterian church, North Michigan avenue and Delaware place; April 4, 7:45 p. m., Third Presbyterian church, Ogden avenue and Ashland boulevard; April 5, Second Presbyterian church, Twentieth street and South Michigan avenue.

BISHOP SAMUEL P. SPRENG.

Bishop Samuel P. Spreng, Naperville, Ill., will speak tomorrow morning at 10:30 at the Union ministers' meeting under the auspices of the Chicago Church federation, at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, 19 South La Salle street. Following him a debate, entitled "Can the Law Be Enforced?" will be staged.

Bishop Spreng has been in the ministry since 1875. He celebrated the golden jubilee of his ordination at Bellevue, O., Sept. 20, 1925. For eleven years he was a pastor and presiding elder. For twenty years he was editor of the Evangelical Messenger and for the last twenty years a bishop. He is the author of five books. In 1908-09 he made a tour of Europe and of the orient, visiting the mission fields of the church. He is a vice president of the National Anti-Saloon league and has been a leader in many denominational and interdenominational movements.

A service conference in which speakers of national as well as of local reputation will take part will be held at Elmhurst college, Elmhurst, Ill., today, tomorrow, and Tuesday. Registration will take place today at 10 a. m. and at 11 Dr. H. Richard Nieburn, president of Elmhurst college, will speak on the subject, "The Hope and Purpose of This Conference." At 2:30 Dr. C. C. Morrison, editor of the Christian Century, "The Crisis in Christianity"; 4:15, Elmhurst Glee club; 7 p. m., Paul Chih Meng, "Christianity Versus Nationalism." The Rev. Reinhold Niebuhr, Detroit, a minister of national reputation, will speak tomorrow at 10:30 a. m., 8 p. m., and Tuesday evening at 7, the closing session. Dr. A. W. Palmer, Oak Park, and Dr. Martin H. Bickham, Chicago, will be among the local speakers. The Rev. Charles J. Keppel, board of education of the Evangelical synod, will have charge of the devotions of the conference.

The Fellowship Bible class of the Buena Memorial Presbyterian church, Broadway and Sheridan road, is engaged in a membership contest. It now has an enrollment of $750. Andrew Stevenson, teacher of the class, will speak today noon on the subject, "The Church, a Place for Men."

The Wesley Memorial hospital auxiliary will meet tomorrow beginning at 10:30 at St. James' church, Ellis avenue and 46th street. Mrs. John W. O'Leary is president.

The Union Choral society, made up of four north side choirs, will furnish a musical program today at 3:30 p. m. at St. Matthew's Methodist Episcopal church, Oak and Orleans streets. The Rev. Frank Arnold is pastor.

Ildine Utley, girl evangelist, will preach today at 11 at Immanuel Baptist church, 23d street and South Michigan avenue, and at 3 and 7:30 p. m. at the North Coliseum Annex. Doors open at the annex at 1 and 7 p. m. Singing begins a half hour before preaching. No tickets of admission required.

The building of the Asbury Methodist Episcopal church, 3119 Parnell avenue, for several years in disuse as a church, will be reopened today with Sunday school at 10:30 and an evening service at 7:45 by the Associated Christian Volunteers, Capt. and Mrs. E. R. Tyler in charge. Brig. Gen. A. L. Parks and staff will conduct this evening's service.

Wicker Park Methodist Episcopal church, Robey street and Evergreen avenue, will conclude today the celebration of its fortieth anniversary. At 11 a. m., the Rev. W. B. Norton will preach; 12:30-1:30, picnic lunch; 1:30, Old Timers, Edward Horth and Dr. J. L. Albritton, leaders; 2 p. m., the Rev. Thomas K. Gale; 5-6, lunch; 6-7, Epworth League; 7:30, sermon, Dr. William B. Leach. The Rev. George F. Crancombe is pastor in charge. Special music is provided for all of the services. An offering of $900 was subscribed last Thursday evening at a dinner.

The Rt. Rev. G. G. Bennett, bishop of Duluth, Minn., will be the speaker this week at the noonday Lenten meetings at the Garrick theater under the auspices of the Chicago Church club of the Episcopal church. Bishop Bennett is well known as a Lenten speaker in Chicago.

Dr. Preston Bradley will speak this morning at the People's Uptown Temple church, Lawrence avenue near Sheridan road, on the 100th aniversary of Beethoven and Clarence Eddy, organist, will play Beethoven music.

The Rev. Benjamin Horton, St. Edmund's church, has been appointed assistant rector of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, 56th street and Blackstone avenue. He will make a trip to Europe before assuming his new duties.

Edison Park Methodist Episcopal church, Oliphant and Pratt avenues, the Rev. Carl D. Gage, pastor, will be dedicated next Sunday with various meetings and church functions throughout the week. Bishop E. H. Hughes will speak the evening of April 5.

"Birth Control" will be discussed today at 3:15 at the Erlanger theater under the auspices of the Chicago Forum. The Rev. William A. Bolger, Notre Dame, Ind., and Prof. E. A. Ross, Madison, Wis., will speak.

BRING THE KIDDIES to see 'Alice in Bunny Land'

In Our Toy Department—Eleventh Floor

See what Alice found, in the Bunnies' Home

The Bunny Village in the Mountains where bunnies are traveling to and fro at their daily tasks—the Old Castle where the Queen lived—the Mill where Bunny Miller grinds his flour—"Ducky Daddles Inn" where the real downy Ducklings go to swim.

The Guinea Pig Villa, where the real Mr. and Mrs. Guinea Pig reside.—The Cottage of Henny Penny and her numerous family of little live Easter chicks—

—The Bunny Wedding in the Little Old Church—a real Wedding Party—maids of honor and all the guests—the colorful waterfall running away to a brook which runs past the old mill down in the duck pond—live rabbits in their little cave in the hills—the two Easter trees, beautifully trimmed.

Bunnyland is indeed a wonderland for the children.

The Beautiful Feminine Figure Again in the Spotlight of Fashion

Third Floor—Dearborn Street

The new ways of fitting the figure to the Spring Fashions have been solved by famous "Nemo-Flex" garments. Again "Nemo-Flex" garments lead in figure grooming, since Fashion has decreed that women be slim with natural curves this news is doubly timely.

The famous Nemo-Flex garments are dainty, flexible and carefully designed not only to give comfort and grace but with an eye to real beauty. They comprise "laced back," "girdles," "step-ins," and the famous two-in-one garments that do so much to slenderize the figure.

The spring figure will be moulded, not flattened.

Models that are welcomed by both youthful and mature figures—Paris inspired the lines—shown in smart spring colors—with just the right amount of reinforcement where most needed.

Nemo-Flex Step-in, as sketched, a dainty yet practical garment, at $3

RADIO COMISH TO GET PUBLIC'S VIEWS THIS WEEK

Series of Meetings Opens on Tuesday.

BY FRANK HINMAN.

American radio listeners will get their first intimation of what they may expect in the way of relief from the new federal radio commission when that body begins its public hearings this week. The hearings, to which representatives of all branches of the radio industry, listeners, manufacturers and broadcasters have been invited, will open in Washington Tuesday and last four days.

The purpose of the public hearings will be to get the views of the persons most interested in radio on the problems which now confront the listeners—the elimination of interference and the improvement of reception conditions. In view of the absence of Rear Admiral William H. Bullard, chairman of the commission, it is not likely that the other members will take any action, but the listeners undoubtedly will get an idea of what the commission may do.

General Discussions.

The present plan of the four members now in Washington, Vice Chairman Eugene O. Sykes, Mississippi; O. H. Caldwell, New York; H. A. Bellows, Minnesota, and J. F. Dillon, California, will be to discuss general policies. There will be no opportunity at this time for individual broadcasting stations to take up the question of the renewal of their licenses. That will come later.

The principal subjects to be discussed, and on which the commission wants to get the views of the industry are the limitation of the number of stations, widening the broadcasting band, limitation of power, division of time between stations, consolidation of broadcasting service, and simultaneous broadcasting on the same frequency.

Order Hits 100 Stations.

The commission indicated last week that it is planning to keep broadcasting within its present limits—200 to 600 meters. Within this space there are 95 broadcasting bands. Before the breakdown of government regulations last summer American stations enjoyed the use to 89 of these bands, while 6 were used exclusively by Canadian stations.

It was the usurping of one of these bands of WJAZ, a Chicago station, which brought about the order of the attorney general that Secretary of Commerce Hoover had no authority to regulate broadcasting. There are now about 100 American stations using these six Canadian bands, 291.1 meters, 312.3 meters, 329.5 meters, 356.9 meters, 410.7 meters and 434.5 meters, but they are again to be set aside for Canada and the commission must decide what to do with the stations now occupying them. In addition to WJAZ, two other Chicago stations are affected, WOK and WCRW.

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Sunday, March 27.) (Central Standard Time.)

EDITH MASON, prima donna soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera company, and John Corigliano, violinist, assisted by an orchestra under the direction of Louis Eldin, will be heard on the New York program to be broadcast tonight at 8:15 o'clock over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. Among Miss Mason's numbers will be "I've Been Roaming," by Horn; "My Curly Headed Baby," by Clutsam; "Howdy Do, Mis' Springtime," by Guion, and "At the Well," by Hageman. Included in John Corigliano's selections will be "Alabama," by Spalding; "Caprice Basque," by Sarasate; "Larghetto," Haendel-Hubay, and "Menuetto," Porpora-Kreisler.

The opera, "Fidelio," by Ludwig von Beethoven, under the direction of Zerline Muhlman Metzger, will be presented this afternoon between 2 and 3 o'clock as the Lyon & Healy program. The opera is being given in this time in keeping with the observance of Beethoven anniversary week.

The soloist at the Chicago Philharmonic concert, Richard Czerwonky conductor, this afternoon between 3 and 5 o'clock will be Miss Mildred Waldman, thirteen year old child pianist. Little Miss Waldman has concertized extensively through the middle west and her talent is regarded as remarkable. Among her numbers this afternoon will be "Concert stueck," in C minor, for piano, by Chaminade. Among the orchestral numbers will be the overture to "Fidelio" by Beethoven; "The Rose of Algeria," by Herbert, and "Whispering Flowers," by Bion. These North Side Turner hall concerts are under the personal supervision of Joseph A. Schwickerath and have been held under the auspices of the Chicago Turngemeinde for the last 65 years.

Our music room period, 9:15 to 10 o'clock, will be devoted to compositions by Rubinstein. Kathleen Ryan, contralto, will sing "The Asra," "The Dream," "Now Shines the Dew," and "Yearning." The Drake concert ensemble, under the direction of Henry Selinger, will play "Valse Caprice," "Kamenoi Ostrow," "Russkaya Trepak," and melody in F.

WLIB PROGRAM

Oney Fred Sweet will be heard in one of his characteristic talks between 5:30 and 5:40 o'clock this afternoon over WLIB, the Liberty Weekly station on the Drake hotel. Mr. Sweet has won a host of followers who enjoy his brief visits over the radio, because of the originality of his droll humor mixed with moments of sentiment. Herbert Johnson, pianist, will give a recital between 5:40 and 6 o'clock.

The American Conservatory of Music program at 5 o'clock will be presented by Beulah Rosine, cellist. Miss Rosine will play "Sonata" in E minor, by Brahms; "Sur le Lac," by Godard; "Spanish Dance," by Hecker; "Adagietto," by Loomis, and "Harlequin," by Popper.

CHICAGO CIVIC OPERA STAR TO SING FROM W-G-N

Edith Mason Features Program Tonight.

Edith Mason, prima donna soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera, will broadcast the Atwater Kent radio concert tonight from W-G-N, the CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

While a student at Boston, only 21 years old, the opportunity came for Miss Mason's operatic debut.

The singer cast for the role of Nedda in "Pagliacci" at the Boston Opera suddenly became ill and Miss Mason was asked a few hours before the performance to assume the role, which she sang without a rehearsal.

Sings in Montreal.

At that time artists from the Boston Opera were being sent from time to time to Montreal for grand opera presentations. On such a visit Miss Mason and her mother had barely established themselves in the Canadian city when Miss Mason was asked to take her first leading role, Marguerite for the performance of "Faust."

The following year the Boston Opera disbanded and Miss Mason went to Europe, where she sang in opera at Monte Carlo, in the municipal operas at Marseilles and Nice, and the Opera Comique in Paris, and later in Mexico, Havana and Venezuela.

She made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera in "Der Rosenkavalier," and remained with the New York organization for two seasons, later going to Paris to perfect herself in her roles. There she sang at the Theatre Lyrique, Opera Comique and the Grand Opera, for a period of three years.

Came to Chicago in 1921.

In 1921, Mary Garden, then directress of the Chicago Civic Opera, offered a contract to the now internationally famous singer, who made her debut there in Madame Butterfly. She has been with the Chicago Opera ever since, and has sung four summer seasons at Ravinia Park.

Born in St. Louis, the daughter of Baron Steuben Barnes, the singer was educated at Bryn Mawr and Cincinnati, and studied singing at New York, Paris, Boston and Milan. In 1919 she married Giorgio Polacco, whom she had met when a conductor with the Metropolitan Opera. He became the first conductor of the Chicago Civic Opera, and later musical director.

AUSTRALIAN FANS FEAR BOOST IN PRICE OF SETS

Widespread interest has arisen among wireless traders and users in Australia at the action which has been taken by the Amalgamated Wireless, Ltd., a government controlled company, to collect royalties on apparatus used for broadcast reception, according to advices to the department of commerce from Assistant Trade Commissioner J. B. Foster, Melbourne.

The company is claiming heavy royalties on every tube receiving set sold by endeavoring to force wireless traders to sign a license agreement demanding high royalties, and has taken steps to prove its claims.

The company contends that it holds the Australian patent rights of 145 Marconi radio patents. No tube receiving set, it claims, can be built without utilizing one or more of these patents.

If it can prove its rights to the patents and can collect royalties the price of wireless sets will be greatly increased, with big losses resulting to the traders.

PROPOSALS FOR BIG RADIO MEET RECEIVED BY U. S.

Copies of the book of proposals, a compilation of all suggestions of the various governments and countries interested in the international radio telegraph conference which will be held in Washington next October, have been received by the state department. They are in the nature of agenda.

The department of state is sponsoring the conference next autumn and it is expected an active part may be taken by the newly created federal radio commission. It was first planned to hold it this spring, but the time required for the distribution of the book of proposals to interested countries and the time required for delegations to reach Washington caused the postponement.

Money to cover the expenses of this conference was appropriated by congress.

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

I AM looking across the office at a studious young man pecking at a typewriter. He is one of those figures who work behind the scenes of an up to date radio station—and there are many—providing props here and there and lending assistance all along the line, in order that the accomplished radio programs may roll out to the audience in a smooth and easy flow.

This young man represents a new and unadvertised job in the radio field. He labors below decks, unhonored and unsung. His job is the writing of the announcements for the routine program announcers. The public, in general, is unaware of the existence of him or his job.

In some advertising programs broadcast through the chain the announcements are written by the advertising agency; in some cases they are written by the staff announcement writer of the station where the program is staged.

The need for written announcements is obvious. When the serious program announcements were left to the announcers themselves they indulged in such fol de rol that the subsequent institution of written program notes was inevitable. Radio has recruited few personages who can extemporize and maintain a facile flow of lingo while introducing programs night after night. Charlie Erbstein and "Roxy" speak their own stuff, of course, but they perform as personalities.

Some stations, taking the word from the movie industry, call their announcement writers "continuity men," meaning that they provide the script which gives a period of entertainment a definite and plotted sequence to hold it together.

The work of the announcement writer or the continuity man is all too transitory. It may take hours of delving into musical lore to provide a short paragraph which the announcer spiels in a half second and never repeats. The "productions" on which I have been engaged at times for almost two years require an unbelievable amount of time for research and construction. The "Old Time Fights," which consume only a half hour on the air, need four days for research and writing. The Lincoln-Douglas debate, which used only an hour in performance, took me ten days to write.

This young man I am looking at—Edward Barry—brings a musical knowledge to his business of writing. All day he consults books and drubs the typewriter to produce the announcements for the announcers to announce—the Arabian Night's Entertainment, the Phantom Violin, Our Music Room, the Moments from Grand Opera, the Music Box, etc.

There are more things, my dear Horatio, in the production of radio programs than the public wots of, my dear Horatio! Ah, more by a thousand wots!

STATION WOW, at Omaha, goes in for various kinds of vocal contests. We have heard hog calling contests and chicken calling contests, and now WOW has a laughing contest, which sounds like a jolly good noveilty for the radio. The next will be a gargling tournament.

MY ANIMALS in the nightly Punch and Judy show for the children, have at last consented, after three years of bashfulness, to sit for a series of pictures. They are depicted by Artist Frank King, romping with Skeezix, on the Gasoline Alley page of the comic section this morning.

THERE IS much language being spoken and printed about the effect of the radio on various forms of our American activity, such as the theatre, sports contests, the movies and the churches. The first thought is that an influence like the radio can do naught but keep the public at home and benefit only the electric light company. This is not true, at all, at all.

It was long ago settled that the radio works no detrimental effect on the theatre, the movies or sports. But the discussion about radio and religion continues.

The paradoxical conclusion too every discussion is that religion on the radio is a great boon and a great pest. It brings the religious services to many who through illness or isolation are unable to attend church; and another virtue is that it may gain the willing ears of many who have been unwittingly beyond the rim of any flock.

Few radio listeners are non-committal about their attitude toward broadcast religion. They either look upon it as a blessing, pointing out its possibilities and accomplishments, or they give vent to wrathy denunciations of religious stations or the religious programs that prevent their reception of other radio offerings.

The main bugaboo in the discussions, however, is the question of whether services on the radio will lessen the attendance in the pews, or encourage more laggards to attend worship. It is always easy and pleasant to theorize, depicting on the one hand the lazy citizen preferring his easy chair and comfort before the radio horn—especially when he hears the tinkle of the collection—and on the other hand, the indifferent or lackadaisical churchgoer who becomes attracted to church by the excellence or the inspiration of the services he hears from his loud speaker.

In reality, nothing much has been proven, although instances are cited here and there. But one thing is true, and that is that the churches are using radio as they have never used any other medium, for propagation of the gospels and their own messages. To convince yourself, look at any directory of American stations, and note the number that are owned in whole or in part by religious organizations or denominational schools.

TUINUCU, CUBA, LISTENS IN ON KDKA PROGRAMS

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 26.—[Special.]—Radio concerts have taken their place along with band concerts in the public park of Tuinucu, Cuba, according to officials of radio station KDKA here.

Frank Jones, chief engineer of the Tuinucu Sugar company, is the sponsor of the free radio concerts. With a short wave receiver he tunes in on the programs of KDKA and has a loud speaker in the public park so that the Cubans can enjoy the music.

Coast Station to Observe Birthday with Big Program

Los Angeles, March 26.—[Special.]—The fifth birthday program from KHJ in Los Angeles will be in the form of a continuous broadcast beginning at noon on April 13 and continuing until midnight and even thereafter. Each hour of the broadcast will be divided into quarters. The first quarter of each hour will hear a radio orchestra and each third quarter will bring to radioland some outstanding speaker. The second and fourth quarter periods of each hour will be given over to vocal and instrumental soloists and ensembles.

SOVIETS CARRY PROPAGANDA TO PEOPLE BY RADIO

Now Have 30 Stations, 17 More Planned.

A few weeks ago the post and telegraph department at Moscow announced the decision of the communist party and the soviet government to introduce an important change in the development of their "radio policy" as a result of the broadcasting experience gained during the year 1926.

The essential feature of the "policy" is that expensive vacuum tube receivers are to be made unnecessary and the sending stations of the soviet capitals are to be brought within reach of ordinary crystal sets, even in the remotest nooks of the U. S. S. R.

Reds Develop Radio.

With the vast territories and poor communications of Russia, one would have expected the soviet government to realize at once the possibilities of wireless telephony to keep them in touch with outlying districts, but this was not until 1924 that a start was made at all to popularize broadcasting, and no really organized effort worth mentioning were made until 1925. After waking up, however, to the fact that here was a powerful means for propaganda, the bolsheviki lost no time in developing it.

They began to build broadcasting stations all over the country, a "Society of Radio Friends" was formed to create and sustain an interest in wireless among the masses, and a "Electric Trust" was given the monopoly of supplying wireless apparatus and parts. At present there are 30 broadcasting stations working more or less regularly in the populous centers of the U. S. S. R., and it is officially stated that 17 more are under construction.

Moscow Best Station.

What the bolshevists regard as the model broadcasting center at present is the Comintern station at Moscow, which is most probably the most powerful broadcasting station in Europe. Indeed, the only long period during which it is silent is from 1 to 8 a. m. The program is made up of speeches, lectures, home and foreign news, the "Workman's Newspaper," the "Peasant's Newspaper," talks to the "pioneers" (organization of little children) and to the "komsomoltsi (organization of adolescent children), concerts, operas, theatrical performances, and weather forecasts. Until recently a striking feature of the program from Moscow stations was the absence of dance music. The stations were, as explained in the soviet periodical literature, to be first and last the mouthpiece of the communist party, the medium for carrying the teachings of Lenin directly into the homes and clubs of the people.

L. AND N. PUTS A RADIO RECEIVER ON CRACK FLYER

The Louisville and Nashville railroad has equipped its Cincinnati-New Orleans train with radio sets.

Each chair in both the club car and observation car has a pair of headphones so that any of the passengers may listen. There is also a loud speaker but this can only be operated with the consent of all the passengers.

FOLK SONGS OF WALES FROM WLS NEXT TUESDAY

William Davies, a native Welshman, will be heard from station WLS Tuesday in a program of Welsh folk songs. He will be assisted by the WLS players, under the direction of Koby Sirinsky. The players will present Welsh instrumental music, some of it centuries old and some of it relatively new.

The Welsh people lived in Wales before the coming of the English and Caesar found them there on his expedition. When the English battled for ownership of the British Isles the Welsh held out and in the fastness of their mountains succeeded in evading control of the English. It was then agreed that if the Welsh would come into what was later to be known as the British empire the oldest son of the king of England would be designated the Prince of Wales, giving the Welsh a title in the court of the king and a personal representative to the king.

The hardy Welsh mountaineers developed and retained their own language, though practically surrounded by English speaking people. They developed their own music and still sing it. The Welsh church is a church apart from the church of England and in this institution much of the folk song singing of the Welsh people is today handed down to the younger generations.

History and Romance of Mich. on WLS Wednesday

Michigan will be the commonwealth honored in the all-state program of WLS on Wednesday. The history, the industry, the romance and the drama of this great state will be put on the air. The state chamber of commerce and state officials, including the governor, have agreed to cooperate with WLS in this broadcast.

FATHER O'BRIEN WILL TALK BEFORE SUNDAY EVENING CLUB TONIGHT

Father John A. O'Brien, director of the Columbus Foundation at the University of Illinois, advisor and chaplain to Catholic students, and head of the Catholic diocese of Peoria, will deliver the address before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight. The program will be broadcast by WMAQ. Father O'Brien was the first Catholic priest to take a Ph.D degree at the University of Illinois. His subject for his address is "Religion and the Inner Sources of Power."

Dr. Carl A. Patton, acting chaplain of the University of Chicago, will give the informal Bible talk at seven, and the Ripon College Glee club will sing a group of three selections at this early service. At the main meeting Elmer T. Stevens, a trustee of the club, will preside, and the choir of 100, in recognition of the Beethoven anniversary, will sing "Worship of God in Nature" by that composer. Mark Love, soloist of the evening, and the choir, under the direction of Edgar Nelson, will participate in the services.

ONEY FRED SWEET TELLS OF JAUNTS ABOUT CHICAGO

Oney Fred Sweet, formerly a feature for THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, is entertaining thousands of listeners over WLIB, The Liberty Weekly station on the Drake hotel, with his Sunday afternoon feature known as "Walks About Town with Oney Fred Sweet."

Every Sunday at 5:30 o'clock, Oney comes on the air with the description of some stroll he has taken through some popular or little known part of the city during the week. Last Sunday Oney told his listeners about a walk through Lincoln park on a spring day, and this afternoon he will describe walks and things to be seen on the north and south sides of Chicago.

Oney tempers his local travel talks with humorous bits of his own likable philosophy and he discusses amusingly the lives of the people he encounters as he wanders about the great metropolis.

HAMS AID CHESS FANS IN A LONG DISTANCE MATCH

DARTMOUTH, N. S., March 26.—What is believed to be the first interdominion chess match ever played by radio in the British Empire was recently staged between the Chess club of this city and that of St. Johns, Newfoundland, through the coöperation of amateur station 1DD, operated by Maj. W. C. Borrett, of this city, and station 8AR, owned and operated by Loyal Reid, of St. Johns.

According to information furnished the American Radio Relay league, of which both men are members, the game was highly successful, and lasted nearly three hours, twenty-three moves being completed on each side of the board. The match resulted in a draw, but judging by the enthusiasm displayed by both teams, the two amateur stations will probably be called upon in the near future to assist in a deciding match.

WBBM to Conduct Radio Journey to Lapland

Laplanders, those hardy Scandinavians who dwell at the northmost extents of Sweden and Norway, have received little recognition either in history or literature. At 8:30 Wednesday night, Billy Spears, international travel talker, will take WBBM listeners on a trip to Lapland. They will visit the villages of wooden cottage clustered around the inn and the church where they will observe the "little folk" of Scandinavian legend at work and at play. They will also see the copper mines and the iron deposits which are among the most extensive in the world, the great forests, and the impressive scenery of the coast country.

Mason Sings Tonight

EDITH MASON.

Prima donna of the Chicago Civic Opera company, who sings tonight from W-G-N.

FATHER PERNIN AND HIS BOOKS AGAIN AT KYW

After more than two months away from the microphone Father Claude J. Pernin, S. J., will be back at KYW today at 5:30 p. m. with his "Twenty Minutes of Good Reading."

This feature, which has been an outstanding one at KYW for nearly five years, was much missed by Father Pernin's listeners, who had each week tuned in his readings. Starting today this broadcast will be given each Sunday at 5:30 p. m.

Father Pernin is the head of the department of English at Loyola university.

Church Federation Picks Pastors for WLS Services

Pastors who will be in charge of the chapel services from WLS on Sunday afternoons during April have been selected by the Chicago Church federation. The pastors in charge for April follow:

April 3—The Rev. H. Hampton Hough, pastor of the Englewood Methodist church.
April 10—The Rev. H. E. Sandstedt, pastor of the Bethlehem Lutheran church.
April 17, Easter Sunday—The Rev. E. L. Reiner, pastor of the Waveland Avenue Congregational church.
April 24—Young People's commission.

UNUSUAL VOCAL PROGRAMS FROM W-G-N THIS WEEK

Two exceptional vocal programs headed by the second appearance of the Apollo Musical club, are the high spots of the coming week's program from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The Apollo club will present a program of choruses from famous oratorios and a group of "part songs" on Tuesday evening between 7 and 7:30 o'clock. The remaining two appearances by the Apollo club on successive Tuesday evenings will take place at 9:30 o'clock.

The other choral program also takes place on Tuesday evening. The Amherst College Glee club will be holding its annual Chicago concert in the Blackstone hotel on that date, and W-G-N will place its microphones in the ballroom so that listeners will hear the best portions of the collegiate songfest. The Amherst club goes on the air between 9:30 and 10 o'clock.

SHORT WAVES

J. C. W. Reith, director of the British Broadcasting company, believes that in due course the world's chief broadcast systems will become so interrelated that the barriers of nationality, language and geography will be overcome.

Comparatively few banquets are broadcast because they seldom begin on time and speakers are apt to talk too long.

In Malaya the broadcasting of advertising must not exceed 10 per cent of the total daily broadcasting time.

There is a wireless installation in every second or third home in England.

When a land station or a ship hears SOS it immediately flashes QRT and then endeavors to establish communication with the vessel in distress.

The Inductively Tuned RADIO of Flawless Reproduction

Cabinets of real beauty—worthy of the finest surroundings.

A Built-in Speaker of marvelous tone—positively free from microphonic interference with the receiver.

The Aristocrat of Radios

Indeed—the Kellogg could be no less than "the aristocrat of radios" and be worthy of the fine traditions of quality that have been handed down for 30 years within the Kellogg organization. In all those years this great organization has been developing and perfecting that modern miracle, the telephone of today—and Kellogg Radio—the "younger son,"—must measure up to the standard of its "elder brother."

New York Groups Honor Beethoven

By Joan King.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Recent metropolitan musical days can best be described as Beethoven days. Ludwig van Beethoven, that greatest of German composers, died in Vienna 100 years ago the 26th of March. Throughout the city—and country—the entire season has been one of commemoration, but these latter days, bringing to a close the centennial, have been replete with Beethoven memories. Sonatas, quartets, and concertos; individual interpreters, civic musical organizations, schools, colleges, and even churches—all have joined in programs of honor to the great composer.

The New York Philharmonic in its week's series offered all Beethoven numbers. Under the auspices of the ordinary body of Beethoven week, the Civic Forum and the League for Political Education, a free concert of Beethoven music was offered at Town Hall. Elsa Alsen, soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera company, sang a group of songs; the Musical Art quartet, comprised of those noted players, Sascha Jacobson, Bernard Ocko, Louis Kaufman, and Marie Rosanoff, played the Warburg Stradivari instruments in a chamber music offering; addresses were rendered by W. J. Henderson and James M. Beck upon the respective subjects "The Living Force of Beethoven" and "The Memory of Beethoven." Henry W. Taft presided.

"The King's Henchman," that much discussed and highly honored American production from the pens of Deems Taylor and Edna St. Vincent Millay, is also on tour, beginning this spring. This will be the first time in history that an American grand opera, given its inaugural production in the Metropolitan, has thus dared the risks and hazards of the road—such hazards as only certain European works have undertaken — as "Parsifal," "Mme. Butterfly," and "The Girl of the Golden West."

The tour is expected to last 16 weeks, continuing through the summer and autumn. Two alternating casts are to be provided, so that the opera may be given six performances weekly. Frances Peralta and Ralph Errolle have thus far been mentioned as possible singers for the leading rôles. Jacques Rimsroud, husband of Thalia Sabanieva, Greco-Russian soprano of the Metropolitan company, will conduct.

Children's Concert.

One of the most interesting of the musical events, here each year, is the concert given by the Associated Music School settlements. Players chosen from the 2,170 children attending the seven schools in the association will take part this season at Town Hall which has been chosen for the event. Six compositions have been dedicated to the schools by Mischa Elman, Daniel Gregory Mason, Ernest Hutcheson, Ignaz Friedman, Flonzaley quartet, and Ernest Schelling. Certain of the most talented children of the various schools have been selected to play these numbers, all rights and royalties of which have been transferred to the association with the one exception of the Mischa Elman composition.

BEAUTY ALONE ISN'T INTERESTING

ONE soon recognizes the gleam of humor, the fresh viewpoint, the telling phrases of the woman who has "just come home from abroad."

Her chic gown speaks of Paris. And you may be sure she paid less for it than you did for that simple black crêpe.

She has a fund of interesting thoughts and tales. And, of course, she has the relaxed air of the woman who knows how to get away from herself.

"And so she sailed for Europe"

—a not-too-long booklet will give you details. It was written by a woman who went abroad alone. May we send you a copy?

The Evolution of the Chicago River

By Mme. X.

THERE probably are people still living who once skated on the Chicago river. As late as the early sixties its smooth, frost-bound surface provided excellent sport for such gliders who followed its course around the bend, either to the north or to the south. In those days Chicagoans had real winters when the river was closed to traffic, when all the nearby streams were gripped by Jack Frost, when snow lay deep over the land, when the great delight was to ride into big, hay filled trucks set on runners and drawn by sturdy horses. They would speed miles out into the country, perhaps as far as the Samuel E. Kerfoots' hospitable house up in Lake View (about where Pine Grove avenue is now), where a restoring eggnog was always forthcoming to warm the chilled mortals. After that period of years the gentle river was treated with contumely, befouled by industry, turned into an ill smelling sewer, the butt of jests, the object of curses, admired only by one or two out of the millions that daily crossed it in their comings and goings.

Today it has again become one of Chicago's chief assets. It is an important link in an international scheme for water transport. Its esthetic possibilities are opening up a vista which takes the imagination far into the vision of a stately waterway, with both banks bordered by wide, smooth balustraded boulevards, flanked by imposing and handsome structures. Beautiful bridges will replace the present purely utilitarian structures.

Rival of Famous Rivers.

The Grand canal at Venice will tremble for its laurels. The Seine at Paris will wonder whether it is to be surpassed. The Thames at London will open its gray-green eye. The Spree, as it flows through Berlin, will say "Mein Gott!" and the Danube will lash its tail and hurry onward to the Black sea, worried pale, as it rolls through the various picturesque cities on its long and tortuous way.

The principal thing to be considered in this new outlook in the city plan design is that these new structures, which will spring up on the banks of the Chicago river within the next decade should be designed by the greatest, the most experienced, and the most sapient architects of the day. Competitions such as the W. G. N. inaugurated when it planned to build its present stately and matchless abode, should be the order of the day. There is much architecture in Chicago today, but some of it is not contributing to the beauty of the city.

I do not say this out of my own frail and uneducated acquaintance with architecture, but I glean it from people of authority in such matters, both local and from other communities, who have opened my eyes to serious defects, artistically speaking, in several of our most important buildings. It would not do to specify or name which these are or in what lies their lack. Suffice it to say that there is cause to criticize and not an overwhelming amount to praise in our municipal architecture of today. It is a pity to waste so much effort. It is the fault of a lack of education on the part of the mass of the people. It is one of the drawbacks of a democracy.

Debts to Aristocracy.

In the time of the French kings, when the Place de la Concorde, the Champs Elysees, the Place Vendome, and the other parts of what was then snuffy old Paris were designed and created to make the French capital the most beautiful city in the world, the aristocracy was in power, inferior in numbers, but a force for art with a knowledge of what was beautiful.

It was the tyrants of Greece, the emperors of Rome, the oppressors of Egypt who adorned their cities with great architecture, splendid statues, and fine monuments. It is up to us Americans to prove that a democracy can initiate beauty as well as it does justice and equal opportunity. We in Chicago did it in 1923, when we created the world's fair, the most wonderful vision of loveliness the world has ever seen. We must now show that we live up to our traditions. At present, we are not quite on the right path to this achievement. Perhaps we are working too hastily and without taking council of the rest of the world.

A Subject Worthy of Thought.

For instance it is important that our new opera house should be an adornment to the city as well as a shelter and means of support for our civic grand opera. It would be a great subject for a worldwide competition. If this is not considered advisable then the work might be in the hands of a commission who would canvass the country for suggestions. In New York the director of the destinies of the Metropolitan Opera company, Otto Kahn, who also plans a new opera house for that organization, is taking three of Gotham's most noted architects with him to Europe this summer in order to study the famous buildings of this order in the various countries where they have for generations been making a cult of grand opera and its presentation under the best conditions. This is a wise and practical mode of procedure. It insures to New York the best possible results.

A similar plan here would be of advantage to Chicago. Mr. Insull promises us a new opera house within less than three years. When he promises a thing it is as good as accomplished. His genius lies in carrying out his well designed projects. Let us hope he will find it possible to give up a shrine for our civic grand opera which shall be as inspiring outwardly as it is practical and profitable in its interior. That beauty and serviceability can be united has been proven many times in American architecture. We are the first modern nation to prove it. Our greatest contribution to the world of art is in architecture. Therefore, in this moment in Chicago's history, a moment which may well be compared to the renaissance period in Italy, to the golden age in Athens, and to the age of the Cæsars in the days of ancient Rome, it should be of prime consideration to every builder of an important structure in Chicago to have the best talent supply our needs, with esthetic beauty as a major object.

As an Example.

Also, it is suggested that whoever designs the new opera house should make a close study of the late Louis Sullivan's underlying principle in shaping the interior of the Auditorium. The latter's matchless acoustic properties was no matter of chance, but was the result of carefully worked out theories. He studied the shape of a trumpet and noted that no surfaces in the instrument interfered with the successful emission of sound. He so formed that great hall that nothing should catch and return an echo into the sonorous void while from the stage more sound was coming.

From every point in the Auditorium the hearer gets the full value of every vibration. Perhaps the most exquisite notes are to be heard in the back row of the topmost gallery. To listen to a great singer from those heights is to experience the joy of pure sound, for the voice seems disembodied. So far away is the mortal producing it that he or she is quite unimportant to the listener. Therefore it is to be devoutly hoped that we shall not lose what we now have, the most ideal place in the present world for listening to music, when our opera is moved to Market street and the river. Both Muratore, the famous French tenor, and Mme. Galli Curci, the quite as famous Italian soprano, have told me that, of all the opera houses in the world, this is the best from the point of view of the singer as a place in which to give forth vocal sounds.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

The box selling committee of the Friends of Opera are looking forward to the time when they will not have to find so many purchasers for boxes, as Mr. Insull announced some time ago that there would be only forty of these luxurious enclosures for the moneyed patrons of music. Instead of having to entreat people to take boxes, Mrs. Meeker, Mrs. Jacob Baur and their faithful helpers will be put to it to allot boxes to those most deserving them. There will be much competition to get them.

It is a matter of rejoicing that Mrs. Baur has once more accepted the chairmanship of this committee. Last year she went abroad and the task fell to others. The excellence and thoroughness of her achievements in this direction were never so fully appreciated as when she left the job to others.

Mrs. Meeker, as president of the Friends of Opera, made a remarkable contribution to Chicago music lovers by the programs she presented at the meetings of this society last winter when its members had the opportunity of hearing and meeting many of the great artists who make up our troupe at the delightful afternoon musicals organized by her and her committee. Everything which brings the company and the community together makes for the deeper rooting of the enterprise into the very fiber of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Insull have gone abroad for their usual spring hegira. After a few weeks in England they propose to take a motor trip through southern France. They expect to return in late May, when they will open their large estate on the confines of Libertyville. Mr. Insull has 5,000 acres there under cultivation. His hobby is the raising of prize cattle and big draft horses.

A Visit of Importance.

The visit here lately of Mrs. Marshall Field was a great event to her many friends who, in spite of the nearly two decades which separate her from her life in Chicago, cherish her as the most beloved social leader who ever guided the destinies of Chicago's beau monde. As some people have a genius for music and others for art, Mrs. Field has the gift of being an ideal hostess. Both in Chicago and in Washington, her present home, she has earned for herself an enduring fame as a social factor.

Chicago has known no one quite her equal since she left here. Her entertainments were sumptuous and gay, not an easy combination. Also they had distinction. The gayety never became rowdy; the sumptuousness never was overdone; the balance was always perfectly preserved. Her niece, Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge, and the latter's husband, who spent several weeks here in the old Field mansion at 1905 Prairie avenue, returned to their home in Indianapolis on Monday last.

Mr. Beveridge is the author of many notable books, the most conspicuous of which is his "Life of Chief Justice Marshall," a remarkable compendium of the times of that eminent jurist as well as an excellent biography of this important shaper of the young democracy. He is at present at work on a life of Abraham Lincoln, which he intends to make a companion to the Life of Marshall.

The Beveridges spend their summers in Beverly Farms, Mass. They are popular members of that extra aristocratic community, composed as it is of Boston Brahmins, the backbone of the backbay, if a backbay can be said to have a backbone.

The genuine Bostonese is a conservative creature. Many of this species have never been west of the sunset edge of Massachusetts. I have heard not a few of them boast that they never have spent a night in a sleeping car. If they turn their eyes away from their native state it is to look eastward, not our way. So when they like and accept one born out in the remote regions about Lake Michigan's southern end it is a real concession, or at least so I am told. I really don't think they are so entrenched in their own extremely honorable past as not to recognize our modest claims to notice.

From Boston.

An ex-Chicagoan, who has for many years been living in Boston and who visited here recently, is Mrs. Henry Lincoln Houghton, wife of a well known Boston physician. She was the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Emily McAvoy. Mrs. Houghton, who was Miss Cornelia McAvoy, was noted in her day here not only as a popular member of society but because she was the first to take up nursing as a profession. With her in this enterprise was Miss Emily Wakem, now Mrs. George Higginson of Lenox.

These two young, good looking and fashionable young women, took a course of training in St. Luke's hospital at a time when such a thing was unknown in their world. Since then this has become a recognized career for young women of well known families. Both of these pioneers made good and added luster to what it is not too much to term the highest calling a woman can take up.

Chicago's Literary Lights.

Since the days of Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, and even before, Chicago's smart set has had a decidedly literary streak. Some one once said she had no time to read foreign or English authors because she had to keep up with the books writ by fellow citizens. Two more volumes are soon to be added to Chicago's contribution to contemporary literature. Next Friday Dorothy Aldis' little book of verse, "Everything and Anything," will be presented to the public. I had a preliminary peek at it a few days ago and found it of an exquisite charm that carried me through to the end of the simple stanzas. They are the song of childhood and with much the atmosphere and humor that A. A. Milne puts into his famous ditties. It is not unlikely that they were inspired by the author's two youngsters, Mary Cornelia, aged four, and Owen, aged eleven months. Charming drawings by Helen D. Jackson accompany the text.

MRS. JAMES LA CURTO.

THE marriage of Miss Donna Pasdeloup, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Pasdeloup of Maywood, to James La Curlo of New York took place on March 18 at Waukegan. Miss Pasdeloup has been appearing in Milwaukee in one of the season's plays, and her husband is in a play now in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. La Curto will reside in New York.

The second fruit of our local genius is a neat looking volume by Janet Fairbank, known perhaps to more people as Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank. This is entitled "Idle Hands" and is a collection of short stories. Some of them have already appeared in current periodicals, but the main part of them are quite new. If Mrs. Fairbank makes the progress in this that she made between her first book, "The Cortlands of Washington Square," and her second one, "The Smiths," she will rise to the front ranks of American writers of fiction today.

Mrs. Fairbank's quest of $1,250,000 for the Lying-In hospital is in full progress. The latest enterprise to add to this fund is a picturesque café which will open on Wednesday at 209 South Wabash avenue and which promises to be a gay rendezvous for the "pretty world." It is to be called "The Stork," and it has been decorated by two young matrons, Mrs. Walter Paepke and Mrs. Philip Maher. They have adorned the walls with comic outlines in black and white representing possible scenes connected with the mission of this great hospital, as, for instance, an aghast young father presented with triplets. Another depicts taxis approaching one door of the hospital and baby carriages leaving an opposite one. The walls are white; the floor is black; storks trail up the side of the staircase. Mrs. Joseph Harris is in charge of the running of the café, to which all the food is donated, so whatever is made is clear gain for the hospital fund.

An Unsightly Fashion.

Just what is in the minds, or what is the ideal of the young, the quite flapperish, young women of today who drop a lock of hair over one eye, generally the right eye, is something beyond the understanding of the mainstay of this p. p. p. An uglier, more unsightly fashion never disfigured otherwise really sweet young faces. When added to this is a close fitting hat, slanting back off the face, the effect is beyond words unattractive and fantastic. It gives a look of sinister ferocity quite out of keeping with our friendly era.

Even so might the furies of the French revolution have gotten themselves up when they escorted Marie Antoinette to the guillotine. From behind these pendant, often matted, tresses gleam eyes with much the expression of those of that species of canine known as poodles, whose optics are obscured by their curly locks. It is, we hope, but a passing mode, and the sooner it passes the more alluring will the general aspect of youth become.

Mourning the Loss of a Friend.

The untimely death of Mrs. James Keeley last Sunday at Carcassonne, in France, took from Chicago's civic and social life a remarkable personality. Charming, gallant, able, with great sympathy for and understanding of life as it is lived today, she has left a void here hard to fill. Her friends will always miss her friendly companionship and the delightful entertainments she gave at that lovely home on Ritchie court.

It was a sad ending to a gay outing undertaken early in the winter. With her youngest daughter, Miss Ruth Keeley, and her friend, Mrs. C. M. Ely, Mrs. Keeley set out on a tour full of variety. They spent several weeks at St. Moritz during the time of its liveliest winter sports; they took in Rapallo, that popular Italian winter resort; they visited Mrs. Bryan Lathrop in the Medici Villa, at Fiesole, once the abode of the famous Florentine family of that name. The party became a quartet when Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney joined them in Italy. From there they went to Spain, thence to North Africa, and were on their way back to Paris when Mrs. Keeley was taken ill and died at ancient and picturesque Carcassonne. It is sad to close the eyes on this warm and eager world in a distant, unfamiliar place. Mr. Keeley is on his way to meet the sorrowing little party and to escort them home.

A Wrong Impression.

It seems that last Sunday some of my readers received a wrong impression from something written here as to Lady Muriel Paget's connection with the present Russian régime. If she is interested in helping in the establishment of a training school for nurses there, it is merely as an international philanthropist of wide experience. She is a far sighted, tolerant, intelligent citizen of the world, such as old England produces so successfully. Of the stoutest nationalism, the British yet can look at the problems of others with a clear vision denied to other races. The fact that their flag flies from every port on the globe gives them this comprehensive outlook.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"WHAT'S your Beaux Arts club doing now?" one club woman asked another as the two sat together on a loop bound train.

"Nothing much. We haven't had a meeting for months—not this year, in fact."

"What's the matter? You used to have a lively club."

"Not since our present president was elected. She seems to be so wrapt up in her art that she hasn't any time for club details. She's getting all sorts of recognition at home and abroad, however."

"But that shouldn't excuse her from functioning in an office she's assumed."

"Maybe not, but it works out that way," answered the Beaux Arts member. "The club activities began to lag right away after she was elected, and although her term of office expired last spring she has never called a meeting for the election of her successor. All our meetings are on call."

"That's one way of staying in office indefinitely," laughed the other club member. "Why doesn't a group of your members call a meeting and straighten things out?"

"We don't want to offend the president. She reflects considerable glory on us, you know. We've suggested to her several times that she have the secretary send out notices for a meeting, and she says, 'Yes, I'll do it when I get time,' but she never gets time."

"Glory is a poor substitute for work when it comes to keeping an organization together," commented the other member. "The case reminds me of a somewhat similar one that occurred several years ago when I was on the state board. The board always meets just before a convention and the district presidents who are retiring from office present the names of the incoming presidents who have been elected by their districts some time previously.

"When one of the suposedly retiring presidents was called on for her successor's name she said there wasn't any successor. Had there been an election? No. Why not? Her friends said they wanted her and she was willing to keep on being president. She was instructed to call a meeting for election as soon as she returned home."

Question.

"Our secretary moved to another state several weeks ago and has not resigned her office. Have we the right to appoint her successor?

"M. G."

Reply.

Yes, if your by-laws state that vacancies are filled in that way.

Question.

"Has a club the right to assess its members. E. H. F."

Reply.

Not unless the by-laws authorize assessments.

Ira N. Morris Host to Swedish King

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NICE.—[Special Correspondence.] Chicagoans are prominent in the social life at Nice this month. A number of notables are spending the remainder of the season here.

One of the most brilliant dinner parties the Riviera has seen in a long time was given by Ira Nelson Morris, former minister to Stockholm, in honor of King Gustav of Sweden. Among the numerous other guests were Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, the Marquis and Marchioness of Huntley, Prince Hohenlohe, Prince and Princess Christian of Hesse, the Countess of Lisburne, and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Drexel.

After the dinner other guests joined the party and later in the evening Mr. Morris entertained with a supper in honor of Archduke Max of Austria.

Other noted Chicagoans now at Nice include Mr. and Mrs. John A. Lynch, who landed on the Mauretania at Villefranche and are making the Hotel Majestic their headquarters. This is the fourth season Mr. and Mrs. Lynch have spent on the Riviera.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Dinner Parties Break Lenten Quiet

By Dolly Madison.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Town is filling quickly, now the Florida season is at its end, and every one is taking a breathing spell before departing on the continental visit that is now absolutely de rigueur. Thus the Lenten quiet is disturbed by many dinners and suppers. The Harry Payne Whitneys, co-leaders with the Payne Whitneys of the Long Island polo set, entertained at dinner this week at the Ambassador, as did the Stuart Davises, who have just returned from Havana and are not yet settled in their Southampton home.

Another dinner of large proportions was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Spencer August in the Ritz tower on Tuesday. Among their guests were several of the ex-royalties, including Princess Alexandra Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein and her commoner husband, Capt. Arnold Ruemann. Also of the continental erstwhile royalty was Archduke Leopold of Austria.

Others present at the dinner, which was given in honor of Mrs. August's birthday anniversary, were Prince Gialma Odescalchi, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Latham Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. James Ripley Bartholomew, J. Fred Pierson Jr., Mrs. Robert Morris Phillips, Elizabeth Detwiller, Count Lovatelli, and Countess Castelli.

For the Younger Set.

An event of interest only to the younger set was the annual dance in honor of the Yale Glee and Banjo clubs, given at the Pall Mall club in the Lorraine last night. Incidentally, when the Lorraine is given up to the progress of business in October, the Pall Mall club will move to new quarters in the St. Regis, which, being further up the avenue, is dignified by close contact with such strongholds of society as the Union club and the University club.

Many of the debutantes of this winter were members of the executive committee for the dance, including Helen Beale, chairman; Sally Hudson, Nina Hudson, Zoe Banks Belt Marion Gould, Katherine Boston, Katherine Jordan, Betty Kendall, Nancy Watson and Sally Walton.

Others present included Mrs. Timothy F. Allen Jr., Mrs. W. Preston Gibson, Mrs. Reginald V. Hiscoe, Mrs. Horace Ingersoll, Frances McCoon and Josephine Willcox.

Trans-Atlantic sailings, of course, are the thing of the day. The outgoing liners continue to be filled to capacity, and the number of fashionable folk aboard is awe-inspiring. The Marquess and Marchioness of Headfort and Lady Millicent Taylour left yesterday on the Olympic. Others who have recently left for London to partake of the delights of the season include Countess De Jumilhac, Baroness Amaury de la Grange, Lord and Lady Strathcona, the Countess of Suffolk, Mrs. Charles B. Alexander and Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, who are such inveterate globe trotters, given to exploration of foreign lands, that a trip across the Atlantic is not much more than a ferry ride to them.

A Brilliant Concert.

Wednesday had its brilliant event in the gold medal winners' concert given at Carnegie hall, the performers being the winners of the annual contest of the New York Music Week association.

Mrs. Henry P. Davison was chairman of the concert. Her invitation committee included such notables as Mrs. George F. Baker Jr., Mrs. August Belmont, Cornelius N. Bliss Jr. Mrs. Artemus L. Gates, Mrs. William L. Harkness, Frederic A. Juilliard, Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn and Clarence H. Mackay.

The auditorium was sold out days in advance, and society responded in great numbers. A debutante committee took charge of selling the programs for the event, among the girls being Louise Watts, Virginia Chapin Jane Brouillard, Candis Hall, Ruth Noyes, Helen Beals, Virginia Bedell Marjorie Sperry, Carolyn Storrs, Kathleen Von Gontard and Elle Upercu.

Among those present were Mrs. Vincent Astor, who has gone to her home on the Hudson, where she will shortly be joined by Mr. Astor, who is returning from a long stay abroad; Gustavus Rogers, Mrs. George Wood Bacon, Mrs. A. D. Carver, Mrs. Albert M. Billings, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Mrs. George W. Kenyon, Mrs E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Henry Fairfield Osborn, Countess Mercati, Mrs. William Barclay Parsons, Mrs. Edward Everett Watts and Mrs. J. F. Workum.

To Aid Six Colleges.

Everything is in readiness for the matinée of "Boris Godunoff," which will be given at the Metropolitan on Friday in aid of the scholarship funds of the six American colleges in the near east.

Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge is one of the patronesses, her family having been connected with the American university at Beirut since its inception in 1863. Bayard Dodge is president of the American university.

The six colleges, besides that at Beirut, include Robert college, the Constantinople Woman's college, the International college of Smyrna, the Sofia American school and the Athens college at Athens, Greece.

You Can Depend on PHILCO Power Units

With the Philco power units you are assured of remarkable results. Please do not confuse this power unit with the many announcements regarding battery eliminators. With the Philco, the expense of battery upkeep and so-called eliminator troubles have been done away with entirely. The Philco power supply with which this Pfanstiehl radio is equipped takes care of all your battery requirements and allows you to operate the set direct from your electric light socket. The upkeep is so small that the average family will not notice the slight addition to the monthly statement.

Rules of the Sale:

Due to limited quantities the following provisions are necessary:

No Phone Orders — No Mail Orders
No C. O. D. Orders — None Sold to Dealers

Deliveries will start within two days and sets will be delivered in rotation as orders are received. For this reason we again emphasize the importance of early selection.

ART AND ARTISTS

Exhibit of Canvases by Glen C. Sheffer

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE Palette and Chisel club has made a vast improvement upon its space for exhibiting pictures. The partition between the two north rooms on the first floor has been done away with and the resulting single spacious room makes an unusually good gallery. The first exhibit to be shown there is the current one of paintings by Glen C. Sheffer.

Mr. Sheffer has developed surprisingly in the last several years. His talent for painting decorative interiors, each a setting for a pretty model, has grown into an instrument which welds fabric and color together, achieving an effect so charming in itself that it does not need the presence of the girl to give body to its beauty. Nevertheless a girl is the central theme of many of his canvases.

Striking a New Note.

A few are reminiscent of the trip he and Mrs. Sheffer enjoyed abroad last year. One of the most effective of these is a street scene, "The Market, Capri." Another exquisite painting is "The Swing Circle." In this the artist has reached a note which is new to his work. Simplicity and artless, chubby childhood are its charm. Perhaps the most decorative of this group of his pictures is found in "Festa Jiornata," a Venice idyll with the canal and gondola, gondoliers and lover [all perfect] and the lady herself a bit of mischievous beauty.

In these paintings the same love of color and the same generous softness of technique which distinguish the nudes are discovered. In two cases, possibly, the significance of the picture would have been improved by the injection of a little pre-war. "Spoils of Bararosa" and "Beachcombers" do not live up to their titles. The soft, padded touch should have been exchanged here for the iron hand in the steel glove.

Pleasing and Decorative.

Among the paintings of girls there are many which are pleasing and decorative. Not one unpleasant canvas can be found. The artist's weak point, hands, is ably concealed by the disposition he has made of these necessary but difficult to paint members. One of the greatest portrait painters has remarked on the pitfalls which beset the painter of portraits when attacking this particular adjunct to human beauty. Hands are, sometimes, beautiful in themselves. Not so often is this true though, but that, when it is true, the beautiful hand is invariably remarked on.

Mr. Sheffer has trouble with hands. Generally speaking he leaves them alone, blocking in a vague shape and letting it go at that. In those pictures where the hand is concealed by its position or the skillful disposition of scarf or fan or dress, the effect is the most engaging.

Aside from this weakness, one shared by many artists, the paintings have much to commend them. There is vigor, youth, beauty, a wonderful feeling for texture, a marvellous use of vivid color—oriental in its profusion—a clever sense of composition, a happy and cheerful atmosphere (almost as though Mr. Sheffer whistled between his teeth as he painted and was never too engaged to exchange a joke) and a constant direct, clear approach to his subject (which, in these days of ambiguous mud pies, comes as a direct blessing), that are all to be appreciated by those who find delight in something pretty.

Notes of Art and Artists.

The International exhibit, the paintings which were brought here from the Carnegie International, is still exciting eager debate. There are a number of lovely things to be found in it, and a number of others not so lovely—some positively repellent in nature, such as the portrait of the woman in purple. Her name and the artist who painted her are equally unknown to me, but each time my eye falls on her it is as if a rawhide whip were drawn writhingly over my unfleshed nerves.

In other cases the effect is not as powerful. In some, one merely stops to wonder and stays to scoff. In others the first mockery may be reduced to stupefaction. How can such and such a painting be painted? What intelligence conceived this? Kensington Gardens, that spot made dear to every one through Barrie's "Peter Pan," has been subjected to indignity by the fertile imagination of Leon Underwood, through whose machinations we are introduced to the "Venus of Kensington Gardens," a highly objectionable red-pink female, dressed only in her skin, who has planted herself at the same iron table with a group of stupid, stolid, startled Britishers (the kind that drop their h's).

On the other hand, another Englishman, Frank Brangwyn, presents us with one of the most gorgeous paintings in the room, a canvas rich in color and dignified in its beauty, "The Return from the Wedding." A third Englishman strikes a melancholy note with his somber and gray, "The High Road." Laura Knight, the English artist whose black and white work was a sensation of last year, gives us a striking and daring canvas in "Tights and Tarlatan."

Among the Italian painters, Ferruccio Ferrazzi is represented by a beautiful and simple canvas, perfectly unstudied and absolutely candid, the portrait of a woman and a little girl, "Horitia and Fabiola." This was awarded the first prize in the Carnegie exhibition.

Another Italian, Giovanni Romagnoli, has almost an entire gallery hung with his pictures. There is a fragrance of sachet about his work. They are reminiscent of the sentimentalist school. A rather soft, full-faced, blonde woman is the heroine most met with in his paintings. The paintings are all gracious and graceful and charming, all very pretty. One of the most fascinating is "Studio Models," and it is fascinating because of the crimson blotches of watermelon which the model is devouring, crimson blotches that have the wickedness of blood stains against the creamy innocence of the action.

"THE OFFERINGS," by Maurice Greiffenhagen, an English painter, in the International exhibition current at the Art Institute. The exhibition is composed of paintings selected from the recently held Carnegie International and is creating a certain amount of interest, due primarily to a quality of shocking bluntness in many of the paintings. The exhibition will run through the middle of April.

The Arts club announces the opening on March 18 of an exhibition of paintings by Albert Bloch.

A card from Anna Lynch tells us that she is now in Havana, Cuba. Miss Lynch brought back a number of beautiful paintings from Spain. It is to be hoped that Cuba will inspire her talent as delightfully.

The next exhibition at the Chicago galleries will open April 5 and will consist of paintings by Josephine Reichmann and Agnes Potter Van Ryn.

The Saturday morning matinées at 10:30 in Goodman theater, Art institute, have been discontinued for the present, but the Saturday afternoon matinées at 2:30 o'clock will be continued until the close of the present season, about the first of June. After April 2, Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird" will be succeeded by "Six Cherry Tarts," by Miss Muriel Brown.

The preliminary competition for the annual traveling scholarship competition of the school of the Art institute was held on Tuesday, March 22. Four awards are available for 1927. These are the William M. French scholarship of $1,000; the Bryan Lathrop scholarship of $800; the John Quincy Adams scholarship of $750; and the American Traveling scholarship of $125. Thirty odd entrants were listed for the preliminary competition.

The Chicago Society of Etchers recently closed a remarkably good show at the Art institute. Its success, speaking from a money standpoint, was unusual. Eight hundred and sixty prints were sold for the total sum of $10,037. Last year $7,249 was realized.

Paul Manship has an interesting exhibit of sculpture just now in the first of the east wing galleries at the Art institute. The pieces are illustrative of grace and motion caught in this least plastic of the arts. The portrait busts are done with a fineness and delicacy of touch and a sureness of insincerity that leave nothing to be desired.

Spring Visitors in Florida Set a Record for Tarrying

MIAMI, Fla.—[Special Correspondence.]—The pleasant duty of acquiring a few additional layers of beach tan with which to withstand the bleaching of April in the north seems to be almost an obsession among the hardier varieties of winter colonists who find it possible to remain through the glorious spring days along the beaches from Miami to Palm Beach. During the official height of the season in February and early March never have the sands been so densely thronged as at present. Whatever attractions Florida may have in the winter months, in contrast to the ice and snow of the northern states, the burst of luxuriant tropical blooms that mark late March and April certainly offer, at least this year, one of the most alluring spots in America.

The great volume of the personnel of resorters, however, are leaving south Florida. Some are going home, but mostly they are not—they are moving northward by slow stages with stops in northern Florida cities—St. Augustine will have a famous anniversary festival commemorating some 400 years of existence next week—and then dropping off at some of the Georgian and Carolinas spring resorts before clenching fists and plunging back into the uncertain spring of Chicago and New York.

Resorts Closing.

The exodus, however, is considerable, especially from the seasonal establishments of note, and almost daily announcements of closing for the season are made. The Royal Poinciana at Palm Beach ended its season on Monday and the Hotel Alba at that city closed on Sunday. The Flamingo and Pancoast at Miami Beach are ending their seasons this week, and the historic Royal Palm hotel at Miami is to close on March 31.

Many Places Open.

In recent years the real Floridaphile among the fashionables have taken to establishing winter homes and these are in their glory in the late spring months. Years ago the last of March was synonymous with the end of attractive living accommodations, but now at Palm Beach and Miami many of the finer public establishments remain open well into April. The fashionable clubs, like the Everglades, and the Beach and Tennis at Palm Beach also are open into April, and those who linger have all necessary facilities for continuation of enjoyment.

In fact the Orange Gardens at the Everglades have been more heavily patronized this week than before the great hotels at Palm Beach closed. The last club night this week saw one of the most representative gatherings of the winter. Among those who were guests at a dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Paris E. Singer were Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock and Miss Muriel McCormick. Miss Daisiana Smith had a party of a dozen at dinner, also for the occasion in the honor of Fairbanks Carpenter.

Others at the club were Mrs. Franklin P. Smith, Miss Virginia Burden, and Miss Beatty, Miss Elizabeth Bryant, and E. W. Goodrich, Mrs. R. J. Beatty, Robert Law, Mrs. Browne Townley of Brownwood farms, Wheaton; Fred D. Briet and Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Riley, Mrs. G. L. Pirie and party of the Mountain Lake club and Chicago were at The Breakers, which is to remain open until April.

Boxing Tournament.

Over at the Beach and Tennis club there is much activity. Mrs. George McMurtry was hostess for Mrs. Charles Farnum and Mr. and Mrs. Ward Ames. Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Wheeler and Mrs. William Waller Jr., Ralph J. Hines, Louis G. Kaufman, Miss Constance Fox, and Esmond O'Brien were also among the diners.

One of the thrilling contests of the winter at the club occurred this week when the juniors held their boxing tournament.

Thatcher Waller, who figured in the finals, was unable to wrest the crown of championship from young Teddy Sawyer, son of the Phil Sawyers of Wisconsin, but defended the honor of Chicago in a manner which brought him great praise from the spectators and instructors. Bobby Wheeler of Lake Forest was also vanquished by a Wisconsin lad, Henry Barkhausen, of Green Bay. The youngsters of the Lester Armour family did not go in for the grueling contests at the finals, although they have shown excellent form and were expected to do great things by the end of the season.

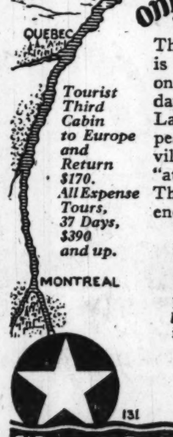
MONTREAL TO EUROPE — The Shortest Sea Route

A Thousand Miles of River

only 4½ Days at Sea



The shortest, most beautiful route to Europe is via White Star's luxuriously comfortable one-class cabin liners from Montreal. Three days of scenic grandeur on the magical St. Lawrence — of towering cliffs, pine-clad hills, peaceful farms, picturesque old French villages. You find your "sea legs" and feel "at home" before you reach the open sea. Then the exhilarating swift ocean crossing is ended all too quickly.

Book your passage on one of White Star's famous "Comfort Ships of the North Atlantic"—the sumptuous Albertic, palatial new Laurentic, beautiful Doric and Regina, superb Calgaric, magnificent Megantic. Visit gay Montreal, quaint Quebec en route. Daybreak Saturday Sailings. Embark Friday evening (no hotel expense).

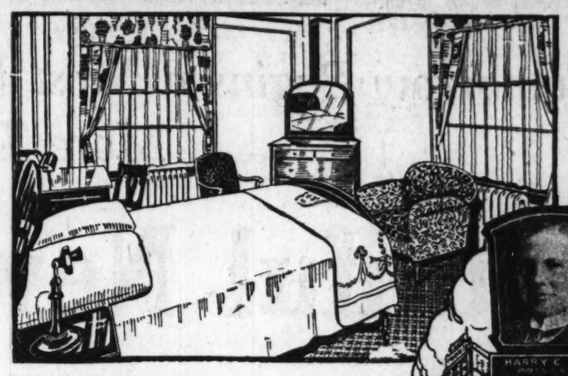
After a Night's Sleep In Chicago's 46-Story

Morrison Hotel



A GUEST ROOM IN THE TOWER, MORRISON HOTEL, CHICAGO

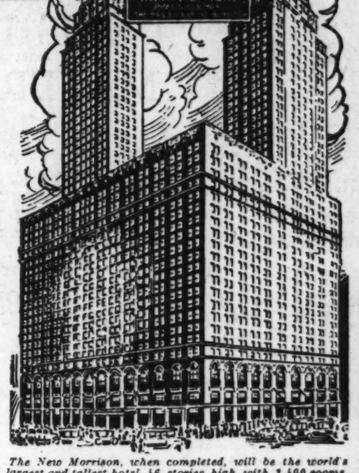
WHEN you wake in the morning after eight hours' rest in a tower room at the Morrison, you find it hard to believe that you have spent the night at the liveliest intersection in America's great inland metropolis.

Silent Guest Rooms

Hundreds of feet below you, the glittering festivity of Chicago's gayest social life has run its course into the small hours. Yet not a sound has penetrated the silence of your room in the tallest hotel building in the world.

The Terrace Garden

This famous location owes much of its celebrity to the Morrison's historic Boston Oyster House, a landmark for half a century, and also to the entertainments in the Terrace Garden, the hotel's picturesque "dance-and-dine" restaurant.



The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

Rates, $2.50 Up, at the World's Tallest Hotel

The Morrison has 1,944 outside rooms, each with bath, running ice water, bed-head lamp, and Servidor. Every floor has its own housekeeper, and all guests enjoy garage service. Yet rooms are rented for $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 elsewhere; at this location—the very center of the city—the valuable subleases pay all the ground rent, and the entire saving is passed on to the patrons.

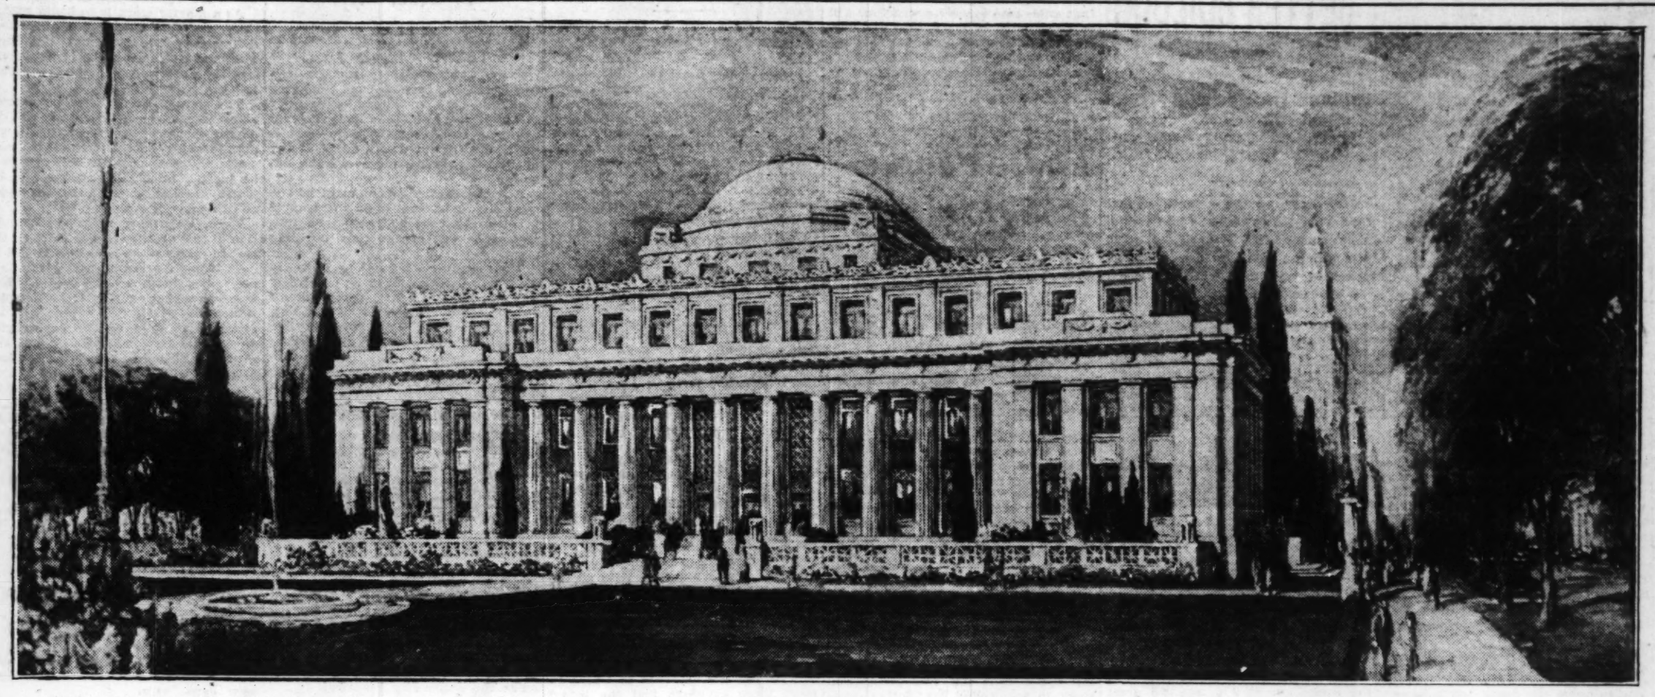
Cuneo Press Plans $2,000,000 Additions to Its Big Plant

HELPING TO BEAUTIFY ONE OF CHICAGO'S INDUSTRIAL SUBURBS



Philip B. Maher of Chicago designed the $700,000 city hall which the city of Gary, Ind., will erect shortly. The new structure, of classical design, will form a part of an interesting civic development which will include a park that will touch on the Dunes highway and be visible to travelers on passenger trains going through the town. Provision is made for another building of similar design when the growth of the city demands. Lawrence Buck drew the picture shown above. Story on page 2.

WARLIKE DAYS OF OLD INSPIRE UNUSUAL HOUSE

Feudal Trappings in the Modern.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders' Editor.]

The French Norman period offers a rich field of opportunity for adaptation to American domestic architecture.

LOUISE BARGELT. [Perry-Atlas Photo.]

H. R. Bishop, architect, 10 East 43d street, New York City, was awarded fifth prize in the six room division of THE TRIBUNE homes competition, and his design, which is reproduced on this page today, falls into the class of the distinctively unusual. What once was a style of architecture typified by lofty feudal castles in France and later in England has been so simplified and so modified by American genius for adaptation that its interior and exterior alike are now practical and far reaching.

Norman architecture has been called the "circular architecture," and in many French Norman homes there is a preponderance of curves which creates a form especially harmonious with any rolling landscape, curved street or hilly building site.

The house in particular is rather the farmhouse type and its appearance of massive strength is a reflection of the old days when every dwelling was more or less a stronghold in itself. This same massiveness lends dignity even when it is applied on a small scale to a six room house which can be built on a thirty-five foot lot.

Fitted for Battles.

Norman architecture was essentially "durable for battle" with its loopholes for weapons, its doors at ground level only, its small windows, its secret staircases and sturdy building materials. Since the 11th century, when William the conqueror brought Norman refinements to Saxon England, tall castles, chateaux with towers and severely plain walls have been inspiration of many architects.

In this home the ultra sturdy masonry of these warring Normans has been cleverly simulated in whitewashed brick, stone facing is around the doors, the exterior woodwork is of oak or white pine stained a French grey, with slate roof of red, black and green.

There is an old time feudal air in the doorway, in the heavy outside wall around the house, and these details can be emphasized still further by light fixtures of hand wrought iron, with small mullioned panes in the casement windows, with a simple fireplace with battlement treatment above and plain walls of stained plaster slightly modeled.

A Circular Staircase.

Sometimes a circular staircase leads up from the main hall, though this kind has not been specified in this instance. A circular staircase is, of course, more expensive than a plain one.

The idea in the planning of this house was to protect all the rooms from the north wind and still give to them all possible sunshine and cross ventilation. This has been done without depending on any borrowed light from the neighboring lots.

It can be seen on examination that a neighbor can build very close without interfering with either sunlight or air.

The dining room in the front overlooks the entrance walk, the living room commands a front entrance and yet overlooks the rear secluded porch and terrace and pool.

Another point in economy has been the elimination of areas to the basement windows, the house having been raised to make this possible. The interior plan deserves a careful study for the merit of its layout.

Has Many Conveniences.

The dining room walls and window spaces are receptive to a number of delightful interior decorative schemes. The kitchen is closely adjacent, with cupboards, sink, outside refrigeration, and entry beyond. All of the rooms are squarish rather than elongated, and the interior woodwork is to be of birch or white pine, stained a French gray or chestnut.

The garage is under the house and this is a feature which is greatly favored by some home owners who decidedly do not like the idea of walking any distance to a garage in inclement weather.

On the second floor the shape of the house permits all of the bedrooms to have two exposures, while the master bedroom has three exposures, two closets, and a fireplace.

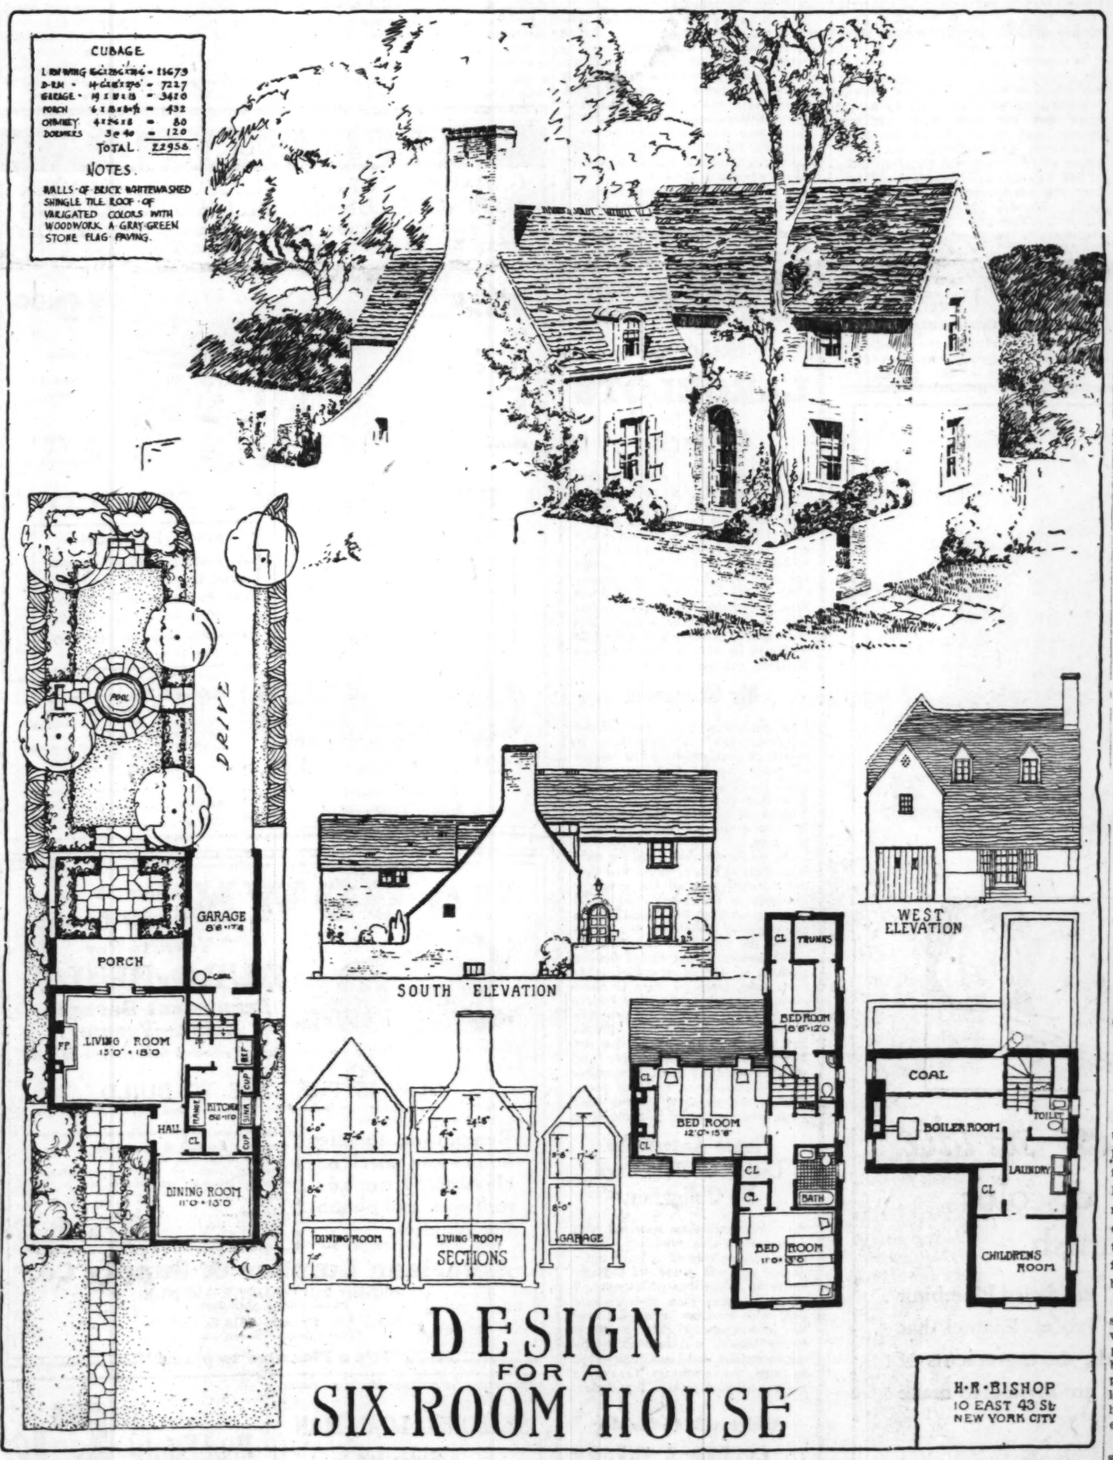
There is also a hall closet opposite the bath and trunk space opening out in the rear of the end bedroom.

Nothing commonplace about this house, but rather do its distinctive features lift it far above the usual run of six room houses. It is not a home which one can advertise by the slogan "cheap to build." But its roof lines, the style of its walls, and the general shape of the interior layout are planned for the family who desire something out of the ordinary and who contemplate in the building of a six room house an expenditure of from $12,000 to $13,000.

The basement has not been forgotten. It has a children's playroom, a toilet, a carefully apportioned boiler room, coal room, and laundry.

HARKING BACK TO FRENCH NORMAN PERIOD



Here the substantial masonry of the French Norman period has been cleverly simulated in whitewashed brick walls, with a stone facing around the doors and a slate roof of black, red, and green. A house which can be built on a thirty-five foot lot, it has six rooms, a bath on the second floor, and toilet provision in the basement. The design is by H. R. Bishop, 10 East 43d street, New York City, winner of the fifth prize in the six room division of The Tribune Homes Competition.

14 Story Co-op Will Rise on Astor Street

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Dad Dearborn's Gold Coast is to have another skyscraping de luxe apartment building. The latest is to rise at 1350 Astor street, and will overlook the Potter Palmer property, so the occupants likely will have an unobstructed vista of the lake for some time to come.

It's to be fourteen stories high and will contain thirteen seven room apartments. Garages will be located in the rear of the building for the tenants.

Designed by Thielbar & Fugard, the structure is to be in the residential Gothic style of architecture. The owners, a syndicate headed by Joseph Beuttas, deserve a friendly pat on the shoulder from old Dad Dearborn. For the structure is to be of face brick on all sides, offering a presentable view from Lake Shore drive.

Will Delight Eye.

Further, the penthouses on the roof are to be treated artistically. In this case they will be hidden in a tower which will also contain living rooms. Thus travelers along the drive will not have their eyes damaged by this structure. This is not the case with other buildings nearby, where concrete seams and ordinary brick appear more than unusually ugly because of their contrast with the beautiful surroundings.

A citizen interested in the beauty of Chicago, in speaking of buildings with attractive fronts and ugly sides, recently remarked:

"Buildings of that type resemble a gentleman who is dressed in evening clothes and wears a top hat, but who has been chary of using soap back of his ears and on the neck."

While Mr. Fugard, one of the designers, was in England last year he became quite taken with a brick much in use there. This brick is of a very dark red color. He has decided to risk the danger of having his name linked with that of King George to the extent of facing the new structure with this material. However, he'll qualify somewhat by purchasing the brick in the "Good Old U. S. A."

New Type of Trim.

Another interesting feature will be a new trim. This will consist of Bowling Green stone, between marble and Bedford stone, and also real marble. Bowling Green stone comes from Kentucky, as its name might indicate.

The building site measures 40x119 feet and was purchased last fall by Moe A. Cushman from Mrs. Leander McCormick. Title recently was conveyed by Mr. Cushman to the Chicago Title and Trust company for the syndicate. Construction is expected to start within sixty days, and will be in the hands of Beuttas Brothers. The investment will be in the neighborhood of $400,000.

8 STORY FLATS FOR WINTHROP AND BRYN MAWR

Work is to start in a week or so on a $600,000 eight story apartment building at the southeast corner of Winthrop and Bryn Mawr avenues, from plans by Dubin & Eisenberg. The owners are I. J. Berkson, attorney, and A. Smith, builder.

The first floor will have an elaborate 15th century lobby, with fireplace, fountain, and half timbered ceiling, and four stores. Upper floors will contain ninety-one kitchenette suites of one, two and three rooms.

The street elevations will be of tapestry brick and the other walls will be paneled. The penthouse will be treated architecturally. Completion is set for October.

Ballou Street Flats Change Hands: $58,000

David A. Klein has sold the twelve flats at 2115 Ballou street to Joseph Sutcher for $58,000, according to Edward P. Saltiel, who, with Alwin W. Ehrhardt, were attorneys in the deal.

Announce Two Big Buildings for North Side

Sales handled through the office of McMenemy & Martin, Inc., recently give promise of two more skyscraping apartment buildings for the north side.

DAVID R. FORGAN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

In one deal L. J. Mensch, engineer and builder, bought from the First Trust and Savings bank as trustee the residence property at 440-42 Barry avenue, just west of Sheridan road. David Forgan Jr. had occupied the dwelling on the site as his private residence, the bank holding title. Mr. Forgan will move to Lake Forest in June.

Mr. Mensch, who recently announced a tall co-op for 1532 North State street, plans a sixteen story structure on the site which he just acquired. He has not yet decided on the exact number or size of the apartments for the building. However, work is expected to start early this summer. The site of the lot is 50x178 feet.

In the other deal Hiram De Camp, bought from Isadore Newman, a loop jeweler, the vacant property, 75x150 feet, at 5736 Sheridan road, just south of Ardmore, for an undisclosed consideration. This property is restricted to residential purposes until December, 1928. When the restriction expires Mr. De Camp proposes to erect one of the finest types of coöperative apartment buildings in the city on this site. Incidentally Mr. De Camp although past eighty years of age is an active Chicago real estate and building operator.

McMenemy & Martin represented all parties as brokers in both deals, James E. MacDonald acting for his firm in the latter.

Three Sniffs!! Kirk's Soapery to Wash Away

Three sniffs and a sigh of satisfaction should greet this bit of news—at least it should if the reader has his office to the windward of the Boul Mich Kirk soap factory. For it's been definitely decided to close down this plant on July 1, 1928. Soap making will then be transferred to the $1,000,000 factory on North avenue, which is to be completed on that date.

This announcement is expected to result in the closing of negotiations toward the erection of some major improvement on the present Michigan bridge soap factory site. With the possible exception of a home for bootleggers' widows, this piece of property has been the rumored site for nearly every thinkable building.

John Hertz has planned a yellow skyscraper; William Randolph Hearst has persistently erected a 90 story home for his publications; Mr. Statler has built at least eight hotels; nearly every department store owner in Gotham has looked over the site; Mr. Insull and his opera house have been mentioned half a dozen times; the Ritz organization has built several nifty hostelries, as have the Bowman hotel interests; Al Woods has covered the ground with playhouses, and so has Florenz Ziegfeld; various women's clubs have given it the once over, in fact, just about everything that could be built has been placed there by the "they say" rumor experts.

CITY'S CLAIM OF W. G. PRINTERY IS EMPHASIZED

Building of Austin Nichols Leased.

(Picture on page 3.)

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago's claim as the world's greatest printing center is to have a good sized boost by John F. Cuneo in the shape of a $2,000,000 series of additions to the huge Cuneo Press, already said to be the largest commercial printing organization under one head in existence, according to an announcement yesterday.

JOHN F. CUNEO.

In addition to erecting two big printing units, the Cuneo Press has taken a long term lease on the large six story structure formerly occupied by Austin Nichols & Co., eastern grocery wholesalers, who have retired from the Chicago market.

Work Just Started.

The Cuneo Press already occupied two good sized buildings at 22d, Canal, and Grove streets and the south branch of the Chicago river. One of the new buildings, work on which has just started, will be just south of and adjoining the nrst unit at 22d and Grove.

The other new unit will be on the river bank south of the other building already owned and occupied. It will be connected with that structure, which in turn will be linked with the big structure leased from Austin Nichols & Co. A bridge across Grove street, which, by the way, is to be renamed Cuneo court, will connect these three units with the original Cuneo unit and the new one being erected.

In addition to these five units the concern contemplates erecting two more big structures later in the year which will strengthen still further the claim of world's largest.

Will Employ 4,500.

The total floor area of the two original units, the Austin Nichols plant and the two under construction will be considerably more than 1,000,000 square feet. Alfred S. Alschuler is the architect. About 4,500 skilled workers will be employed and the capacity of the five units will be twenty-eight car loads of printed matter a day.

Chicago already is the world's greatest magazine and catalog printing center. This concern alone prints 10,000,000 magazines a month. An imposing list of national magazines are entirely printed in Chicago and many others have their midwest and western editions printed here. Millions of copies of big mail order catalogs of various sorts are printed in this city each year.

Each Unit Specializes.

Each unit of the Cuneo press is designed for a certain kind of work and is devoted exclusively to the production of it. For example, one plant is given over to the printing of national magazines, with a considerable proportion of the equipment used for color printing, such as colored covers and inserts.

Another unit houses advertising printing, such as booklets, catalogues, etc. Another building is for book manufacturing and it is interesting to know that, although Chicago always has lagged far behind other cities in book publishing, several big eastern publishers have books printed here.

Called Logical Print Center.

"Chicago is the logical printing center of North America," said John F. Cuneo. "Half of the entire population of the United States lives within a night's ride of Chicago. Most of the important national magazines and mail order catalogues already are being printed in Chicago. Due to the enormous savings in distribution costs, it's only a matter of time until practically all periodicals and catalogues of national circulation will be printed in this city.

"Chicago not only leads the world in point of printing produced but this lead is being materially increased each year."

In addition to its big 22d street plants the Cuneo concern operates a large unit at Arthington and Spaulding avenues in Chicago, two plants in New York City, and another in Milwaukee.

JEAN DELAUNAY TO OPEN CAFE IN NEW DRIVE CO-OP.

Jean DeLaunay, formerly connected with the Meurice in Gay Paree and its namesake in Los Angeles and more recently chef at the Blackstone and the Opera club, is to open a de luxe restaurant in the tall co-op nearing completion at 1400 Lake Shore drive. Mr. DeLaunay has leased 2,300 square feet of space for ten years on the first floor of the structure, which he will have finished in the period of Louis XIV. The café is intended especially for the occupants of the building, although outsiders will be served.

Six Apartment Building on Glenwood Avenue Sold

John J. Kern & Co. report having sold the six apartment building at 6337-39 Glenwood avenue for Emil Toorwald to Martin McHugh for $60,000, subject to $32,500.

Harry L. Wheaton Building 22 Houses in Edison Park

Harry L. Wheaton, builder, is erecting twenty-two five-room brick bungalows on thirty-three foot lots in Edison Park. These homes will sell for $7,250 each.

Syndicate Plans Twenty Flats for Niles Center

A syndicate represented by Henry L. Kane, attorney, has bought several parcels of lots in Harry A. Roth & Co.'s "Broadview Heights" subdivision in Niles Center, and has started work on twenty six room apartments.

Thos. Hogan Pays $60,000 for Albion Avenue Flats

Thomas Hogan has purchased the six apartment building at 1314-16 Albion avenue from Michael Stanton for $60,000, subject to $35,000, according to John J. Kern & Co., who represented both parties.

Madison and Parkside Corner Bought by Woman

Mrs. Rose Murphy bought the southwest corner of Madison and Parkside, improved with thirteen flats and two stores, from Raphael Golde for an undisclosed consideration. McGee & Harrington were the only brokers.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

SEPARATE ROOM FOR YOUR SON A HOME NECESSITY

Caring for His Own Domain Builds Character.

BY HOMER GRANT.

Frequently in the planning and building of a house, the need of a room for the boy and girl is not considered. The children, perhaps, have not yet come or they are very young. And in the midst of myriad pressing demands to be met, of mounting bills which must be included in the family budget, the problem of providing separate space for the boy or girl, or for both, space which will be their very own and contribute in generous measure towards their future development, is dismissed as impossible.

From the health standpoint it is admitted that a child should have his own bed from the moment he is born and after his second year, at least, should have his own room. By the time he is three, and anyway four, he needs his own room for more than purely health measures.

A "room-of-his-own"—for today the boy's room rather than the girl's room will be discussed—creates and educates the idea of possession and of responsibility. And these are two ideas which need careful and constant development throughout adolescence.

Learn to be Neat.

He early learns to keep things picked up, to help at least in keeping the floor clean and the dresser in order, and he has a place to which he and his chums can retire when they come to play.

A small room serves all the needed purpose of the growing boy. If in building your home you find that your savings do not permit this extra chamber, see if you cannot raise the mortgage a little to cover it. Such a little exertion on your part, and such years of solid enjoyment ahead for your boy.

Later on, as the boy grows older, if there are other small children in the family, his room can be used for some of the younger members and he can be given perhaps some attic space to call his own.

A small attic space can be made into a real den for the boy by the use of wall boards and perhaps an electric or gas grate. This latter article will will assist with the heating of the room if it is not quite up to the rest of the house, or it can be made to add to the mystery and thrill of campfires without any of the attendant dangers of an open grate.

Attic Is Important.

In building today this attic space is of vast importance. Like the basement, it has come into a distinct use of its own, and in the extra space it offers can save hundreds and even thousands of dollars on the building cost of the house.

A boy's room should be of no particular period or style. It is essentially the boy's style, and it is for him to have what he wants, his rackets, his books, his skates, his paraphernalia of every kind. Deaden the walls of the room if necessary and protect the ceilings of the rooms underneath, and then let him bring the "gang" in and do what he likes.

He won't be running wild in some far less desirable place and the chances are that his own pride of possession will keep the boys from waxing too destructive.

If attic space is used, a boy can help apply a plaster substitute, finish it any color desired, and shellac the walls so that they are washable. He can help to finish the floors, left bare and stained or covered with linoleum.

About Wall Decorations.

What he puts on the walls is for him to decide, though his tastes may be a little aided by presenting him with a few good pictures of horses or dogs or cowboys or Indians. As for furniture, it should be of simply designed, heavy wood; a bookcase, a table, a desk, dresser and bed. If he is fortunate enough to have one room for play and another for sleeping purposes, the bed need not be included, but otherwise the bed can be a "man's bed," a cot with wire springs and mattress, its bedding concealed by some heavy blanket.

No money spent on this space which a boy can call his own should be begrudged. It is as necessary for his development as the air he breathes. It is true, of course, that there are children who rise to the top without any of these advantages. But where one rises, thousands are crushed and submerged because they have never had the opportunity to develop.

Your particular boy may be bright and strong, but he may not have that streak of the Titan in him to push ahead without some encouragement. So, arranging things that he may have every opportunity for sane, wholesome development is a wise precaution indeed.

TRIBUNE'S BOOKLET OF HOUSE DESIGNS IS NOW ON SALE

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE BOOK OF HOMES is now on sale at the Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn, and also at Tribune Tower, 431 North Michigan.

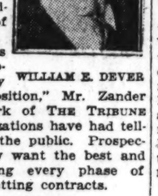
This book contains full page reproductions of the prize winning designs in the recent Chicago Tribune Homes competition. Eighty other designs of five and six room homes are included in the book, which is handsomely bound and illustrated. The house designs printed were carefully selected from among the 814 competitive home designs and represent the best work of talented architects from all parts of the country.

The price of the book is $1. TRIBUNE readers wishing it mailed to them will send $1.35 to The Chicago Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn, Chicago, together with name and address carefully enclosed.

SEES HOME SHOW AS STIMULUS TO BETTER BUILDING

Mayor Dever Will Open Exposition Doors.

Stimulated by the seventh annual Own Your Home Building and Equipment exposition, which opens next Saturday, April 2, in the Coliseum, Chicago will witness its greatest era of better built homes, is the belief of Henry G. Zander Jr., fifth vice president of the Chicago Real Estate board and chairman of the committee of administration of the exposition.



WILLIAM E. DEVER

"Indications are that the public anxiously awaits the exposition," Mr. Zander said. "The work of THE TRIBUNE and other organizations have had telling effects upon the public. Prospective builders now want the best and they are studying every phase of building before letting contracts.

Dever to Open Doors.

Mayor William E. Dever will open the exposition at 8 p. m. To greet him and assist in the ceremony there will be a committee consisting of the officials of the board and other prominent Chicagoans. The public will be permitted to enter the Coliseum a few minutes earlier so that they can witness this ceremony.

Robert H. Sexton, managing director, has had five homes built of brick, frame, stucco, concrete, and concrete faced, built around a perfectly landscaped garden. As the visitor steps into one of the buildings every part of it is complete, a cross section making the exhibit appear as if a huge cleaver had sliced through it, appears. This is for the purpose of showing by actual work how the roof, walls, ceilings, beams, and floors should be built.

Lectures and addresses on every phase of the home will be given daily at the exposition. Saturday will feature the advantages of home ownership. Monday is "Planning the Home"; Tuesday, "Selecting the Homesite"; Wednesday, "Financing the Home"; Thursday, "Building the Home"; Friday, "Equipping the Home, and the last day is "Decorating, Furnishing, and Landscaping." Men of national reputation will speak.

Makes Better Citizens.

"Home ownership is the ambition of every one," Robert Sexton, head of the exposition, says. "The person who has a substantial investment in his own home and maintains a savings account becomes a better banking risk and a respected citizen in his community. The home is the birthplace of independence. It is the work shop for character building and it is the foundation of social and financial standing."

The country's leading manufacturers and dealers in the field of materials that enter into home construction will be represented by interesting exhibits. Every exhibitor must submit his exhibit to one of the committees and obtain its approval before placing it in the Coliseum. The exposition will be open every day from 1 p. m. until 11 p. m., including Sunday.

These People Bought Homes You Can, Too

How One Woman Acquired a Home.

CHICAGO.—The year 1916 found me with $75, no job, and a small daughter! Weary of teaching, I borrowed $1,000, entering business with a brother. Disagreeing, three months later found me with no job, $1,100 obligations, a $500 note credit.

Disgusted and discouraged, I came to Chicago, becoming manager of a Y. M. C. A. cafeteria. Determination to one day own a home for myself and child led me to buy two business lots, my $500 note as first payment, monthly payments of $50. An auto accident a few months later left me on crutches for months. Then $300 for injuries, left after doctor and lawyers took their share, kept up loan and lot payments.

December, 1917, found me manager of a small café at $50 per month, flat included. Four years we stayed. All my spare time for two years was spent in remodeling my clothes, sewing and doing odd jobs of all kinds. This last two years was spent in teaching, as I had reëntered the teaching profession. Savings were invested in Liberty and farm loan bonds.

In 1922 I pooled my savings, buying a three flat building at $3,000 cash, $5,500 first mortgage, and $6,500 second mortgage. I still wonder how I scared up the courage!

By acting as my own agent, subletting part of my own flat, selling real estate as a sub-agent, teaching summer, night, and day school, the second mortgage was paid. Luck in the shape of keeping apartments rented, little sickness aside from a minor operation, have aided us wonderfully.

Our home has increased $5,000 in value and, thanks to I. C. electrification, my original purchase will show a profit of about $20,000.

Am glad I had the courage to try and the determination to stick!

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Causes of Plaster Cracks.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: What is the cause of plaster cracks in a house, and how can we prevent them? We have rented for a number of years and the plaster was always cracking and falling. We would certainly like to prevent this in our own home. D. S.

Answer: One could write a book on this subject, but, briefly, plaster cracks are caused from warping of the plaster base, a "skinned plastering job," undue shrinkage, or settlement of the timbers in the building. To prevent this, make sure that your house has ample foundations and is well braced and heavily constructed. Metal lath as a plaster base prevents this warping or buckling and braces the entire framework. Even with a slight settlement metal lath resists this condition excellently.

On Buying a Lot.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: We have a chance to buy a lot in a new suburb where streets are not yet paved, and where gas, water and sewer mains are just being laid. We are told that this is an expensive thing to do in "the long run," and that there are many "pitfalls" to be avoided. Is this true and ho wabout the "pitfalls"? B. D.

Answer: I would not say that it is the expensive thing to do "in the long run," though there are pitfalls to be avoided. If you buy a lot with all the improvements in, you pay for them in the proportionately higher cost of land per foot. If you buy a lot which is unimproved, you pay for these improvements in the form of taxes and special assessments. You have, however, a number of years in which to meet these expenses and the initial low cost of the lot is a decided advantage to many people who otherwise could not consider homeowning. There is, of course, more speculation attending a lot in a new community than in an established one, and the investor in such property should get expert counsel on its appraisal, weigh its transportation facilities and its private restrictions. Find out what is the minimum cost of home specified in these restrictions and be sure you can afford to build your house in it. Furthermore, last but of first importance, consult a good lawyer or abstract company in reference to the validity of your title.

NEW TOWN HALL AND PARK TO AID BEAUTIFY GARY

Gary, Chicago's lusty Indiana suburb which has been so busy supplying materials used in helping to beautify other cities that it's had little time for primping itself, shortly is to have a city hall that would be a credit to any of Dad Dearborn's more esthetic offspring.

And the seat of government of the steel city is to form a part of a civic development that will help take that metropolis out of the ugly duckling class.

The structure, designed by Philip B. Maher of Chicago, is to be on Broadway and will face a large park that will extend across 4th street to the New York Central and Baltimore and Ohio tracks. This park should give persons passing through the city, both on railway trains and by motor along the Dunes highway, a brighter opinion of it.

Will Have Big Dome.

Of classic architecture, the new city hall will be of stone construction on all sides, with a great dome capping it. It's to be rectangular in shape, measuring 200x78 feet. Along the north front, facing the park, there will be a grass terrace inclosed by a stone railing.

Three stories high, the city hall is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $700,000. On the first floor will be found the offices of the city treasurer, city controller, building department, and city clerk. His honor will find his throne room on the second floor, overlooking the park. And let's hope his honor may get a little inspiration from the view that will make him want to make the entire city beautiful.

Large Council Chamber.

Besides the mayor's office the second floor will contain the council chamber, the board of public works, and the department of health. The council chamber will measure 40x69 feet and will have windows on three sides.

The east end will have a sort of forced popularity for many of the Garyites, because here will be the city courtroom, jury room, judges' chambers, etc. At the west end will be the city engineer's offices. The basement, just a few feet below grade, will contain the offices of the fire and police chiefs.

Work is to start in a few weeks.

Will Erect 215 Buildings; Cost Is $3,000,000

A $3,000,000 building program is announced by Goodson & Wilson, Inc., for the Lincoln-Crawford district in the far northwestern part of the city. It is proposed to complete the entire project, calling for the erection of 215 buildings, within a year.

As a starter work is to begin within thirty days on twenty-five bungalows and twenty-five three flat buildings. The bungalows are to be of six rooms and the apartment buildings will contain six room flats.

The bungalows are to be erected along Lawndale avenue and will be placed on thirty foot lots, with a vacant lot intervening between each residence. The apartment buildings will be located on Albion avenue and on North Hamlin between North Shore and Pratt.

Then, sixty days after the completion of this unit, work will start on the second group when apartments will be built along Warren avenue. Sixty days after this group is completed a group will be erected on Monticello between Albion and Pratt.

The last group will be constructed on Central Park between Albion and Pratt. Included in this huge building program will be a number of thirty-two flat buildings. Plans are now being made for them. The larger buildings mainly will be located along Prairie road and Pratt boulevard, closer to Crawford and Lincoln than the others.

This district is known as Lincoln Avenue gardens.

The Interstate Construction company will do the building and E. W. Schweider is the architect.

AVERS 250,000 CHICAGOANS LIVE IN UNFIT HOMES

Four Families Occupy 5 Room Apartments.

BY THOMAS WREN.

There are approximately 250,000 Chicago people living in homes that are unfit for human habitation, dwellings that should be condemned and dismantled and in their stead erected 50,000 homes of a good sanitary type, according to a statement made last night by Benjamin J. Rosenthal, president of the Chicago Housing Plan association.

BENJAMIN J. ROSENTHAL.

Mr. Rosenthal said William E. Dever is the first Chicago mayor who has seen the deplorable housing conditions in their true light and he has been working on plans to eliminate this situation. He said some progress has been made in this movement, but pointed out there is considerable improvement still to be accomplished.

Mr. Rosenthal said the most deplorable housing conditions exist in what is known as the "black belt" on the south side, where the colored people deal with colored landlords, who hold political jobs. Through this combination, he averred, there are as many as three and four families occupying an ordinary five room apartment, all using the same lavatory.

Pay Higher Rents.

"Rents in Chicago's colored belt are higher, considering the kind of quarters, than in other parts of the city and perhaps in any section of the United States," Mr. Rosenthal asserted.

"Housing problems for working people also exist in the back o' the yards district, on the west side, and in some neighborhoods of the north side. To my mind there is nothing that so vitally affects the physical, social, and economic welfare of Chicago as the housing of her people.

"If you visit your jails, hospitals, reformatory institutions, the Juvenile court, the Morals court you will undoubtedly find that intolerable housing is largely responsible for the incarceration of people one may find in these institutions. Decent and right kind of home environment would have saved many of those people from criminal careers.

Many Pitiful Sights.

"Go into any of the congested districts of Chicago and one will find home surroundings and sights that will sicken even the hardest of persons. You will see homes where entire families sleep, wash, eat, and live in a single room; you will see instances where as many as five persons sleep in one room; you will find beds in closets and hallways. Then, too, you find hundreds of people sleeping in rooms without ventilation.

"Six room apartments in Chicago's black belt that rented some years ago for from $35 to $50 a month have been divided into three room apartments and the rent has been doubled and trebled. Sometimes even four families live in the five and six room apartments. No repairs are made until they become absolutely necessary, and the colored people of Chicago are probably being exploited more by both colored and white landlords than any other division."

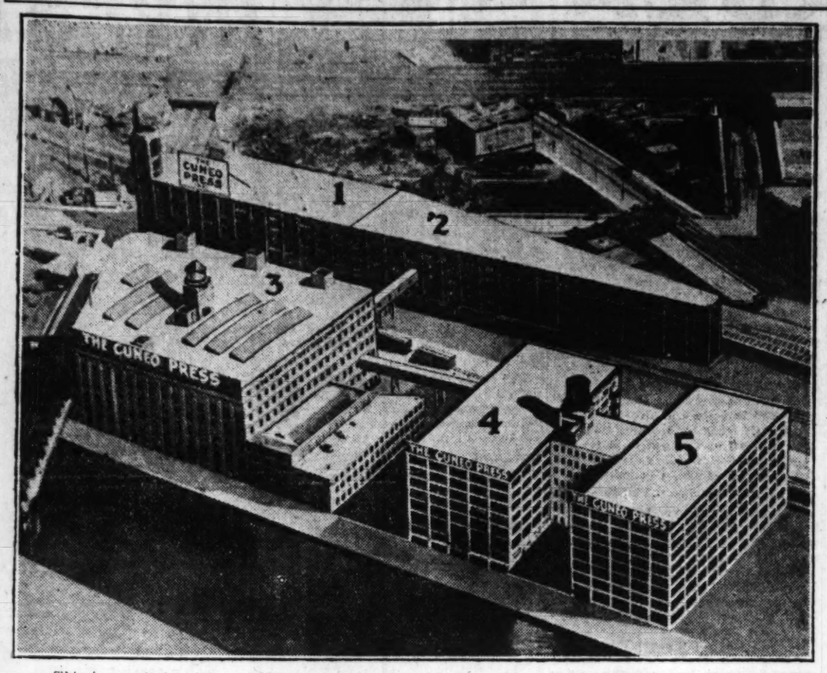
Mr. Rosenthal said that every dollar spent on housing and recreational centers will save one hundred fold on the erection of jails, hospitals, prisons, and reformatory institutions, insane asylums, to say nothing of the ravages of sickness and death that follow in the wake of miserable housing.

Home for $6,500.

"Plans," he said, "are now being worked out whereby homes for working people can be constructed for $6,500.

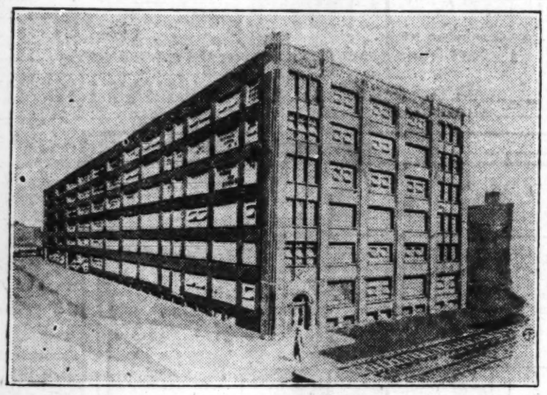
"In fact, that part of the plan has already proven feasible, and the raising of additional funds for home building is under way. The latter is what is occupying our time. Ten per cent is paid down by the prospective home owner and the balance is paid at the rate of $40 a month as rental. Before we talk of a great world's fair to show off Chicago, let's clean house first and remodel or repair insanitary homes and build additional thousands of homes for wage earners."

AIRPLANE VIEW OF CUNEO PRESS DEVELOPMENT



This is an airplane view of the Cuneo Press development at 22d street and the river. No. 1 is the original plant. No. 2 is one of the two new additions now under construction. No. 3 is the former plant of Austin, Nichols & Co., just leased by the Cuneo concern. No. 4 is a unit in operation for some time and No. 5 is now under construction. To the right of No. 5 the company owns space on which two more big units are to be erected later this year. Alfred Alschuler is the architect. Story on page 1.

MEDICINES AND COSMETICS



A. Epstein designed the above building which is being erected on Iron street, in the Central Manufacturing district, for the Walgreen company. The big drug firm, on the completion of the structure, will utilize it for storage and laboratory purposes.

BIG DRUG FIRM TO HAVE PLANT IN FACTORY AREA

With its drug stores growing pretty nearly as numerous as the well known corner saloon of the good old days, the Walgreen company has been finding it a bit difficult to keep its cosmetics, spring tonics, malted milks and other components of the modern apothecary's shop in a convenient place for dispatch to meet a sudden demand.

So the firm will unite its stock rooms, storage units and laboratories scattered about the city under one roof. Work is being rushed on a buiding for the company in the central manufacturing district on Iron street, about 100 feet north of 37th street.

The big drug house has leased for five years the land and building under construction, with the privilege of purchase any time during this period. For the present the structure will be three stories high, but the foundations and walls are constructed so as to carry three additional floors later.

It is estimated that the six story building will represent an investment of $550,000 and the three story structure $262,000. When completed the building will have 151,200 square feet of floor space. Construction is to be of reinforced concrete and face brick, with terra cotta trim.

The structure is to front 113 feet on Iron street and will extend back to the Chicago Junction railway tracks. The terms of the lease call for an annual rental of $25,884, plus taxes, insurance and maintenance cost.

Carl L. Kingsbury of Chandler & Montague was attorney. The district was represented by H. E. Poronto and J. C. Erickson. A. Epstein is the architect.

PISTAQUA CLUB GETS CONTROL OF 503 MORE ACRES

Plans Five 18 Hole Golf Courses.

A syndicate composed of members of the Pistaqua Heights Country club has acquired 503 acres lying between the property of the club in Lake county, on Pistakee lake, and the cement road (route 20) running between Waukegan and McHenry, according to an announcement made yesterday by J. Scott Matthews, president of the organization and chief examiner of titles of Cook county. The club is in the Fox lake district.

The syndicate proposes to put through at once a 100 foot private driveway from the cement road to the club, with an ornamental entrance for club members on route 20.

With the control of this property in its hands it is claimed that the clut is now the biggest golf club in the country, in point of acreage. It now has 1,075 acres, of which it is intended 1,000 will be used exclusively for golf. The other seventy-five acres will be used for divers outdoor sports.

Syndicates of members either own or have under contract more than 1,500 acres, exclusive of the club's property, so the organization now controls appoximately 2,600 acres.

It is proposed to have five championship eighteen hole courses, two putting courses, and one minature putting course on the property. Then there's to be an eight mile riding track through the club's property, and that controlled by its members.

A deep, spring fed lake is situated on a part of the club's land, and this body of water, called Lake Matthews, will be connected by channel with Pistakee lake.

TRACT AT 127TH AND CICERO TO BE SUBDIVIDED

A tract of thirty-six and a half acres at the southwest corner of 127th street and Cicero avenue is to be subdivided following its sale by John W. Prassas to Estelle Rozene and others for a reported $64,800. Most of the frontage will be divided into fifty foot residential lots, with the corners reserved for business. George Akouris of George Akouris & Co. represented all parties as broker.

"RAVINELAND ACRES," NEAR CAMP LOGAN, OPENED BY PENNY

J. H. Penny & Sons, developers of "Chiwaukee," on the lake shore, just over the state line, are opening a new north shore subdivision of fifty-five acres at Sheridan road and Camp Logan road, which they have platted into half acre lots. In addition to the Sheridan road frontage, thirty of the lots overlook a ravine of thirteen acres which is to be made into a park.

Camp Logan, east of "Ravineland Acres," as Mr. Penny has christened it, formerly was used as a rifle range of the Illinois National Guard. At the last session of the legislature a bill was introduced to convert Camp Logan, with its mile of lake frontage, into a state park.

Woman Pays $82,500 for 13 Flats at Melrose-Oakley

Margaret La Pagila has brought the thirteen flat building at the northwest corner of Melrose and Oakley avenues from Samuel E. Davidson, as trustee for the owners, for a reported $82,500, subject to a mortgage of $61,500. Mr. Davidson was attorney for the sellers.

2130 LINCOLN PARK West

An Apartment Building of Artistic Merit

Undeniably Smart—And Withal a Most Judicious Investment

UNDENIABLY smart in location as well as modern in interior and exterior appointments, 2130 Lincoln Park West has a distinctly enhanced appeal to business men who pride themselves on the sagacity of their investments.

These spacious six and seven room apartments (three baths) overlook Lincoln Park and the Lake. Larger apartments, too, are available. The flexibility of the building plan makes almost any type or size of apartment available. They have atmosphere, distinctiveness, yet lower maintenance costs are guaranteed. These things, together with a novel purchase plan,* make 2130 Lincoln Park West unequalled in co-operative development.

On May first, 2130 Lincoln Park West will be available to its owner-tenants, who, if they desire, may now give to their apartment the touches that interpret the personality of the occupant.

An unusual feature of this investment is the builders' unconditional guarantee to pay all costs of unoccupied apartments and their further guarantee of lower, stabilized maintenance costs.

See how perfectly the "ultimate apartment," furnished by John M. Smyth Company, meets your views of what your ideal home place should reflect. You will be charmed with its beauty. The building phone is Diversey 6244.

FARM AND GARDEN

Famous Grower of Flowers Gives Hints for Beginner

Treatment of Soil and Plant Varieties Are Discussed.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

I HAVE just finished a big day with August Koch, whose name has become a byword with flower gardeners from one end of this country to the other. He's what slang artists would call a "walking encyclopedia." He has catalogued in his mind the practical things he has learned from time to time in his fourteen years' work at Shaw gardens, St. Louis, Mo., and fifteen years as chief florist of West Chicago's great park system, with its eighteen parks.

It would be a great treat if all beginning gardeners could take their first lessons in flower growing from this practical teacher. Playing the rôle of a home builder who had never stuck a flower seed or a plant in the ground, I asked Mr. Koch to give me some of the first things an amateur should know if he suddenly found himself standing at the garden gate with a spade, a hoe, a rake, and a plot of just plain dirt in front of him. I jotted down his answers to a multitude of beginner's questions, which are given here in substance.

Get acquainted with the soil is the first step. Dig down a foot to see what is below the surface; see if there is sand mixed in the soil to make it loose. If there is sand underlying the top layer, the garden is likely to drain well. Clay soil is hard to work. It is solid and drains poorly.

City Soil Needs Treatment.

Almost all soils in cities need treatment of some kind before flower seeds are planted or plants are set. Fall plowing or spading is best, especially where clay soil has to be dealt with. Whether the plot is spaded up in the spring or fall it will need treatment before it is worked and again before seeding. Well rotted manure is best where it is worked into the soil in the spring. Spading in the spring must be done a week or ten days before seeding.

The soil should be allowed to remain in the rough after spading for at least a week before the seed is sown.

Few flowers do well in strongly acid soils, which means that soils should be sweetened with lime wherever there is danger of sourness. Lime is often needed in most city soils where excavators coat the surface with clay. Where there is an underlying layer of sand, such as is the case in many Chicago gardens, lime is needed to sweeten the soil.

Air slaked lime is commonly used on gardens. A liberal dusting of lime on the surface of the garden soil immediately after it has been spaded or plowed is sufficient. See that the ground is fairly white, as if it were covered with a thin blanket of snow. Finely pulverized limestone commonly found around building yards, and old plastering taken from the walls of old buildings will also sweeten the soil.

Along with the lime the soil should be given a good dusting of wood ashes which supply potash, a valuable food for plants.

Lime and ashes should be worked carefully into the surface. Less lime is needed on extremely heavy soils. Lime and ashes help loosen heavy soil and aid drainage. Finely pulverized cinders will also help to loosen soil. Cinders are especially valuable in extremely heavy soil.

Where clay has to be dealt with and the soil is tight, poorly drained, and difficult to work, spread a two inch layer of sand on the rough surface of the freshly spaded garden and then, in a few days, work it into the surface with a rake. Sand also keeps the soil from baking; it works down into the lower layers of the soil in a few years and much of it disappears so that additional sand should be put on every few seasons.

Before sticking a spade in the ground the gardener should have his planting plans outlined and staked off, especially where lawns and paths are to be left. Where the whole garden is to be made new, including the building of a new lawn, the whole plot should be spaded up. The soil where the grass seed is to be sown will need about the same treatment as the flower beds and borders. In planning the grower should have a definite idea where the border beds, shrubbery, paths, lawn, and walks are to be, as well as each row, bed, or group of flowers.

Before seeding the flowers see that the surface of the soil is finely pulverized and every single clod is broken up. This is necessary in planting flowers, because most of the seeds are very small and cannot be covered with coarse particles of soil. They must be covered with a thin, filmy layer of finely pulverized soil. Most flower seeds, if planted to a depth of one inch or left exposed under the edge of a big clod, will not come up. Mr. Koch follows the general rule of covering light weight seed with a layer of soil twice the thickness of the seed and three times the thickness of a heavy seed.

Planting Annuals.

Here are some of the annuals which Mr. Koch says should be planted as soon as the ground can be worked:

Sweet peas should be planted first. They do well in moderately heavy soil. Plant them along the fence, where they can climb.

Larkspur thrives in almost any kind of soil. Sow the seeds in little drills; make fine lines in the soil with a sharp pointed stick or pencil. Don't sow thick; three seeds to the inch is sufficient and then thinning will have to be done later. Transplant them when they are one inch high if they are too thick and fill in the blank spots where seeds fail to germinate. Planting larkspur seed in rows eight to ten inches apart gives room for weeding and hoeing. A broad border, one to three feet wide, of larkspur is often used. Broadcast the seed and rake in lightly.

Flowers for Early Planting.

Coliopsis is a flower that does well in all soils, furnishing beautiful bright yellow to deep brown blossoms. It is a good cut flower.

Among the other flowers to be planted are the calendula and candytuft. Candytuft makes a good front edging for taller plants such as larkspur and bacheler's buttons.

Pansies and all the annual poppies are to be sown along with the earliest flowers planted. Pansies do well in sandy or mandy loam. Poppies do not do well in extremely heavy soil. Plant early the California poppy, which comes in a bright yellow, with the newer varieties in different shades. Shirley poppies have blossoms ranging from white to deep red. The Flanders poppy, sown early, has a red flower, while the opium poppy blossoms have a variety of color. Poppies have double and single flowers.

Gaillardia or blanket flower does well in all soils. It has yellow and bright orange flowers.

Sweet alyssum, usually used as an edging plant, can be sown from now until the middle of May in almost any soil. Snow on the Mountain or Euphorbia Variegata can be sown now in any soil.

For shady spots where the sun does not strike the garden at all or for only a short time each day, broadcast forget-me-not seed on the surface in any kind of soil. Sow the seed early.

HOME FLOWER GARDEN

[BY R. T. VAN TRESS.]

AMATEUR'S MODEL PLANTING PLAN—Above is a sketch of the home garden, 25 by 40 feet, designed and exhibited by a Detroit garden club at the recent National Flower show, Detroit, Mich. With slight modifications R. T. Van Tress, Lisle, Ill., has sketched the model garden shown here with a key to the planting plan. The names of the flowers are given below. The number given before the name of each flower corresponds to the number on the above planting plan, while the number given after the name of the flower indicates the number of plants to be used in the designated area. $1,000 Special Prizes to Tribune Garden Contestants

Vaughan's Seed Store Offers Merchandise Prizes to Winners

TO EVERY customer of Vaughan's Seed Store (who has purchased our seeds, bulbs, plants, nursery stock in 1927) who wins a Tribune Garden Contest Prize we will give a supplemental prize of seeds, bulbs, plants, or nursery stock of his selection from our catalogs, equal in value to 20% of his Tribune prize. Delivery of prizes won may be taken in the summer or fall of 1927 or the spring of 1928.

As The Tribune prizes total $5,000, this means that we offer to successful Tribune contestants supplemental prizes of merchandise totaling $1,000. Purchasers at our store will be given certificates proving their right to our special prizes, but any bona fide evidence of the required purchase will be sufficient to establish this right.

Customers of Vaughan's Seed Store not only become eligible to these special prizes, giving them the opportunity of obtaining longed for treasures for their gardens, but have the advantage of selecting their flower seeds from the most complete list published in the United States and using the highest quality seeds obtainable in the world.

For fifty years Vaughan's Seed Store has sold flower seeds and plants to florists and professional gardeners, who check results with cost. Our business has grown great upon the record of satisfactory service to these exacting buyers. You can depend upon what you buy from Vaughan's. Our catalog, Gardening Illustrated for 1927, contains a complete list, with prices and descriptions, including 120 colored plates of flowers.

Every assistance in our power will be given to garden contestants. The first step toward success is to obtain Vaughan's Gardening Illustrated, which is free by mail or at our stores. The next step is to make your garden plan and to select the flowers you are to plant, with a particular regard to their height, flowering season and color. Design, color combination and an interesting variety of plant material are undoubtedly the points upon which the prize awards must pivot. You will be handicapped if you obtain your flower seed from any source except the best.

This unusually compact yet convenient bathroom, measuring but 4½x6 feet, is largely achieved by the use of the Wolff "Berkeley" tub. Though only 4½ feet long, it holds as much water and has same body room as an ordinary 5 foot tub.

In this interesting arrangement of fixtures only the Wolff "Afton" pedestal lavatory and "Berkeley" tub are visible from the bedroom, the "York" Closet being behind the door. The "Afton's" broad top provides ample space for shaving gear, tooth paste, wash rag. Its pop-up waste empties the roomy bowl swiftly.

Builders please their tenants with graceful, compact Wolff fixtures

MEN who make a business of building apartments and dwellings judge plumbing materials with a canny eye. They know the slighest cheapness in a fixture or fitting will surely betray itself to janitor and tenant. And faulty plumbing hurts their own good reputation, hits their pocketbook.

Therefore, they install reliable plumbing materials, Wolff preferably—and then forget about them. They have found that Wolff-equipped buildings sell more readily, develop no future plumbing troubles, cost no more.

The space-saving designs of Wolff Fixtures lower building costs, allow more space for living quarters. Their graceful proportions please the eye of every prospect. The smooth Wolff enamel, matching in color and beauty the finest tile, is free from any objectionable defects.

Builders and buyers alike do wisely in looking for the Wolff labels. They mark and guarantee the products of a firm which has spent seventy-two years in carefully making only the finest plumbing fixtures and fittings.

NEW HOSPITAL TO CARE FOR MAN OF MODERATE MEANS

To Be Erected by Church of the Brethren.

A hospital where one won't have to float a bond issue to finance a sojourn is proposed for the Garfield Park district of the west side, where the Bethany hospital plans to erect a new home at the northwest corner of Trumbull and Van Buren.

REV. O. B. MAPHIS.

This structure, to have 135 beds, is planned with the sick person in mind who neither has a purse that's entirely flat nor one that's so heavy as to be a burden to carry. The Church of the Brethren (Dunkards) now operates a hospital at 3415 West Van Buren, but this has been outgrown and the new Bethany is to take its place.

Schmidt, Garden & Erikson have prepared plans for the proposed building, which is to be of attractive appearance. It's to be six stories high, will occupy a site 128x116 feet, and will face Trumbull.

All Types of Rooms.

There are to be twenty-seven private rooms with varying accommodations, twenty-eight semi-private rooms, four four-bed wards and accommodations for thirty infants.

Offices, kitchen, dining room and the like will occupy the first floor, the operating rooms will be on the second, sick rooms will be on the floors from the third to fifth and convalescent rooms will be located on the sixth.

Another important function of the hospital that will be emphasized in the new home will be the training of nurses. Already the small twenty bed institution now conducted by the church has sent nurses to many parts of the world. And there is increasing demand for this type of missionary nurses.

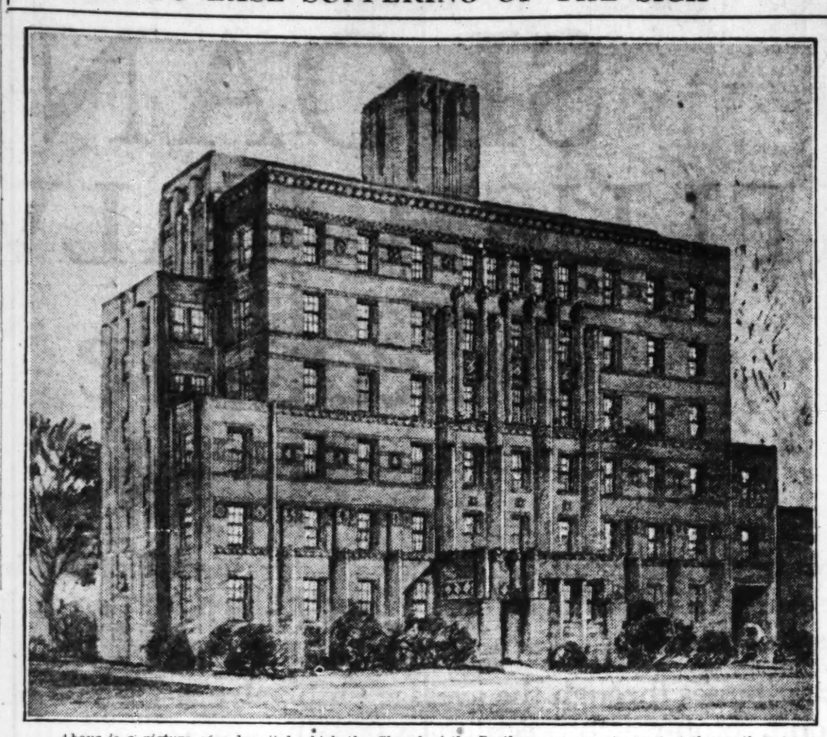
Bethany hospital owns outright the site for its new home and also it owns the property, 103x116 feet, across the street at the northeast corner. This parcel is reserved for a nurses' home that will be erected when conditions warrant.

Start This Summer.

It is hoped to have work start this summer. The church's investment is expected to be between $450,000 and $500,000. A portion of this sum is in hand in the form of the site and pledges and a campaign is to occupy the week from April 1 to 8 to secure the rest.

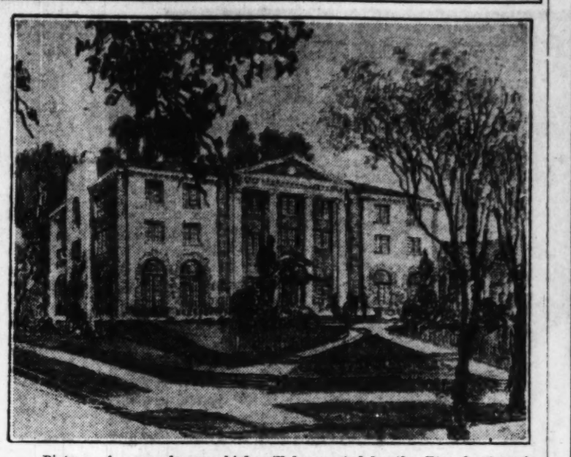
The Rev. Omer B. Maphis is the superintendent of the hospital. The officers consist of the following: Frank N. Sargent, A. E. Wieand, Charles E. Weybright, C. D. Bonsack, Fred E. Strohm, and O. B. Maphis.

TO EASE SUFFERING OF THE SICK



Above is a picture of a hospital which the Church of the Brethren proposes to erect at the northwest corner of Trumbull avenue and Van Buren. It will be called the Bethany. Schmidt, Garden & Erikson are the architects.

RAH! RAH! RAH!



Picture of a new home which will be erected by the Eta chapter of the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity at the southwest corner of 3d and Armory, Champaign. It is estimated the investment in land and building will be $110,000. The fraternity was founded in 1845 and the chapter at the University of Illinois was organized in 1908. F. D. Shobe, a Chicago attorney, is chairman of the building committee. Completion is expected by fall. Rendering by Charles Morgan.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To March 27, 1917; 10 Years Ago Today

Robert Miehle, inventor of the Miehle printing press, bought a piece of property in Wellington street, north front, seventy-six feet east of Sheridan road, from Alexander H. Revell, the consideration in the deed being nominal. The property measures 75x199 feet. Mr. Miehle plans to erect a fine home on the site.

ROBERT MIEHLE.

Sherman T. Cooper, the builder announced that an eleven story hotel, to be known as the Cooper-Carlton, will be erected at the southeast corner of 53d and Hyde Park boulevard. It will front 153 feet on 53d street and 175 feet on East End avenue and will overlook East End avenue and the lake. The land has been owned by Mr. Cooper for several years. Henry L. Newhouse is the architect and the design is a modern adaptation of the Roman. There will be 380 rooms and the project will represent an investment of $1,300,000.

John Waitland of England sold to George B. Ogle of George A. Ogle & Co. the property at the southwest corner of Sherman and Polk, 80x106½ feet. The consideration given was nominal.

To March 27, 1907; 20 Years Ago Today

Mary Reese Cox and husband of Hammond conveyed to Niels Nielson a tract of forty acres at the northeast corner of 138th street and Avenue O extended in Hegewisch, for $40,000. The contract of sale was filed for record a short time ago, when it was announced that Battling Nelson, the son of Nielson and the real purchaser of the property, intended to us it for an athletic school.

BATTLING NELSON.

Murray Wolbach bought from the Souter estate 894 feet of vacant frontage in Calumet avenue between 40th and 41st streets on both fronts at the rate of $50 a foot, a surprisingly low rate. Mr. Wolbach at once will improve about 300 feet of this with apartment buildings containing thirty flats of four and five rooms, the cost of which is placed at $100,000.

Alex Friend & Co., leased for J. W. Kiser one of the Monarch biuldings at the southwest corner of Fulton and Halsted streets to the Federal company, one of the largest dealers in plumbers supplies in the country. The lease is for a term of years at a rental of $400,000. The building is eight stories and basement, 100x125.

To March 27, 1897; 30 Years Ago Today

Plans are being made for the reconstruction of the Atlas block at the northwest corner of Wabash avenue and Randolph street, recently bought by Leander J. McCormick from J. W. Doane. The building will be entirely remodeled into desirable quarters for the retail trade. The old front will be replaced with a modern one of plate glass and ornamental iron work.

LEANDER McCORMICK.

The building and leasehold interest of the Hotel Edingburgh property on the west side of Michigan avenue, north of 22d street, was sold at auction at the rooms of the real estate board. George W. Harlow, to whom the decree of foreclosure had been assigned, was the purchaser, and the consideration was $65,000. The ground has a frontage of forty-nine feet and a depth of 119 feet.

Charles Thisslew has designed for M. Drosdowitz a four story building at 514 Milwaukee avenue. It will front ninety-four feet and will be constructed of pressed brick and stone. The cost is $20,000.

REAL ESTATORS WILL HEAR TALK ON CITY ZONING

Clarence W. Farrier, member of the zoning board of appeals, is to speak before the real estate practice class of the Real Property institute at the Cook County Real Estate board rooms, Tuesday evening, March 29, at 8 o'clock. He is to talk on "Zoning as It Applies to the City of Chicago."

CLARENCE W. FARRIER. [Rayhuff-Richter.]

A. J. Brockman, president of the board, announces that A. L. Reimenschneider, chairman of the valuation committee for 1926 and former president of the board, has been reappointed chairman of the valuation committee for the current year. The other members are E. L. Adams, R. C. Duncan, Frank J. Petru, and Francis A. Horrigan.

BUYS FOUR RESIDENCES.

William Schwandt bought the four residences at 627-33 Oakwood boulevard 90x125, from Winifred Salsman for an undisclosed consideration, through Alex Bisno & Co.

FLAT BUILDING PUT UP AS PRIZE BY REALTY FIRM

A two apartment building to cost approximately $16,000 is a prize that will be given by Smook-Siems & Co. to any one of its customers who brings in the greatest volume of business over a certain period in the firm's Niles Center subdivision. A condition is that a competition entry must own property in the firm's subdivision. Then for each $100 worth of business he brings in he is given a vote. In addition he is paid a commission of two and a half per cent on the sale. When $1,000,000 worth of property is sold officials of the firm state that the prize will be awarded.

Gladys and Turner Avenue Flat Buildings Are Sold

Mandel Lurie has sold to Wolf Noriansky and Charles Engerman the two four apartment buildings at the southeast and the southwest corners of Gladys and Turner avenues for $60,000, according to Rosenberg & Lurie, brokers in the transaction. Epstein & Feiwell and Walter Bloch were attorneys. Two Oak Park residences were given in part payment, one at 1101 Gunderson avenue and the other at 1142 Scoville avenue.

MICHIGAN-56TH FLAT BUILDING SOLD: $115,000

A. Diamond and Bertha Diamond have sold the northwest corner of 56th and Michigan, lot 62x160, improved with a twenty-one apartment building, to Justin McCarthy for $115,000, subject to a first mortgage of $70,000, according to the Howard & Orr company, who negotiated the deal.

Better and More Permanent Building at Big Saving in Cost

"Honor Bilt" homes are planned on the money saving principle of skyscraper construction. All material is carefully cut and fitted at our mills before it is delivered on the job. In the building of skyscrapers every modern means of rigid, permanent construction is employed; every method to eliminate waste, to save time, material and labor is strictly enforced. The steel beams are ready-cut and swing into place; no confusion, cut to fit; the same as in our "Honor Bilt" homes. Our "Honor Bilt" system saves the cost in skilled labor.

Only the highest principles of building construction of homes are followed, as recommended by the building code committee, Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C. "Honor Bilt" homes embrace the best points of hand cut frame construction and, in addition, save you from $500 to $2,000 on a permanent, substantial modern home. The cutting and fitting of the lumber and millwork is done in our factories, the largest of their kind in the world, by modern machinery instead of by old fashioned handsaw method.

SAVE $500.00 to $2,000.00

$100,000,000 Has Been Invested in "Honor Bilt" Homes

More than 37,500 of our homes built today. Our customers have invested over $100,000,000 in "Honor Bilt" homes. 25,400 have been erected by customers themselves. "Honor Bilt" homes are easy to build. Every piece of lumber is marked to correspond with numbers shown on the plans, which we furnish free; the smallest pieces are bundled and marked so as to save time in locating. With each house we furnish a booklet which explains and illustrates the simple directions. We ship you all the material for a complete house, including lumber, millwork, roofing, building paper, paint and varnish, hardware; also plumbing, heating and lighting fixtures. One order brings it all. Material we furnish is shipped to arrive at the job when that particular material will be needed. We do not furnish masonry materials.

The Best Easy Payment Plan —Low Interest Charge

All you require is a Building Lot and a little money to help pay some of the labor. You only need a building lot if you or your friends can do some of the work. Sears, Roebuck and Co. will sell you on easy payments all materials and advance cash to pay for most of the labor, and give you a long time to pay. A small payment each month as you would pay rent makes you the owner of a good substantial modern home in a few years. Your interest becomes less each time you make a payment. Our EASY PAYMENT plan has enabled thousands of families to get out of the renter's class and own their own home in a short time.

Highest Quality Material

The lumber furnished for "Honor Bilt" homes is bright and new, fine, dry No. 1 framing, clear Cypress for outside finish, and clear siding. Expert mechanics, modern machinery and good materials insure perfectly made millwork. Oak, Birch, Fir or Yellow Pine (as specified) for interior finish—the kind of material that will prove to be a little better than generally used in home construction.

SLOAN FLUSH VALVES Measure the Flush!

Most important of all the exclusive features incorporated in Sloan Valves is the Automatic Closing, which offers positive protection against insanitary or wasteful flushing.

Water passes through the average flush valve at the rate of about a gallon a second. Stop-watch precision in pressing and releasing the handle of other flush valves is absolutely necessary to obtain a uniform flush at every operation. Only the Sloan Valve truly measures the flush; guarantees it, in fact, at every operation.

All-Around Satisfaction

IMAGINE the savings effected during the course of a year in buildings possessing many Sloan Flush Valves. Count—if you can—the value in dollars and cents of well-served tenants, and the satisfaction that goes with knowing precision-made equipment stands guard night and day against waste and insanitation.

Make This Test

GO into the nearest building equipped with Sloan Valves. Examine this feature. Try to change the flush. Then find a building equipped with any other valves and make the same test. You don't need a measuring tank beneath the valves to determine for yourself just what Automatic Closing means.

NO REGULATING

Sloan Flush Valves require no regulating of any kind. Their precision in delivering a uniform flush is not affected by different methods of operation and changes in water pressure. Delicate and troublesome regulating devices are eliminated by correct principles of design.

Sloan Flush Valves are the only flush valves that have nothing to regulate.

FULLY GUARANTEED

Sloan Flush Valves are unconditionally guaranteed for five years. The first Sloan Flush Valve, put in use twenty years ago, is still giving perfect service.

Sterling qualities, as exemplified in the ability of Sloan Flush Valves to successfully stand the test of time and meet the most exacting present-day requirements, have made "Sloan" the standard flush valve of the world.

Installations Tell the Story

Every one of these Industrial Buildings such as the Ford, Chrysler, Packard, Hudson, Hupp and General Motors Plants; Western, Westinghouse and General Electric Companies, are equipped with Sloan Flush Valves. Many others, large and well known, are "Sloan" equipped too, but lack of space prevents showing the complete list.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

By Sara Moore

TRY AND DO IT.

The ad men speak with a mighty shout
To make us "conscious" of sauerkraut;
They count and list little calories
In macaroni or milk or cheese;
They say tomatoes and tangerines
Are full of the jiggers called vitamines,
And some insist we are underfed
Without bananas and whole wheat bread.
Huh!
Wanted, an advertising man
To write out a food promotion plan.
One needs professional help to sell
Milk or spinach to Arabel.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

STANDARDIZED.

One looks ahead. The die is cast,
This way it has to be—
A matinee, a bridge, some golf,
A dinner, dance, and tea.

The things girls do are so alike
We should be thankful that
Our friends can still distinguish us
By gown—or shoes—or hat.

THE GIRL HE LEFT BEHIND HIM.

I took my share of the sleet and mud;
Waded in gauze and drugs and blood;
I'd sneak him a light and a cigaret
(Were I not there then he'd be there yet).
He's back in Paris, my soldier fair—
And here I sit in the beaucoup air.

I carried his heavy bedside tray
Day after drizzling, murky day;
I eased up his bandage, wiped his nose,
And sat on his head when his fever rose;
Now off to Paris the Legions wind——
And I am the girl that he leaves behind.

Well, let him go play on his jamboree,
Leaving the world, of course, to me.
All by himself! Do you get my tone?
Next war he can go off and fight alone!

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Tribune.

NAVY blue or one of the tan shades in crêpe satin will make an attractive dress, using pattern No. 709 for its development. The skirt is cut in two parts, and while there is some fullness at the top, it is not too full and gores out towards the bottom, getting the necessary width there without being too full at the opposite end.

The waist opens in the center front, and as you can easily see, it is cut in a deep square opening, this being filled in by an attached vest. The fullness on the shoulders on the front is followed by fullness at the underarm seams on the front, the front being slashed in there, the lower edges gathered and sewed to the upper slashed edges.

There is a narrow belt of the dress material, and the sleeves are in one piece, with the lower edges gathered into a six inch cuff. These deep cuffs could be made of the reverse side of the satin, as could the vest also, using a binding or piping of the same side of the satin to finish the neck.

Cut the vest double, having a fold of the material across the top and seam it together down the sides. Where it sets into the right side of the front, it should be tacked in place under the binding or facing. Then at three-quarter inch intervals set small sized snaps down the left edge, fastening it to the dress. Below the vest the waist buttons together, a much more agreeable way of getting into and out of a dress than slipping it on over the head.

Where waist and skirt join there could be a wrong side seam, overcasting both edges together, laying up towards the waist and then stitching twice from the outside, once close to the seam, and the second row one quarter inch above.

Pattern No. 710 is for a long waisted dress having a short circular skirt. A prettily shaped collar finishes the neck and the slashed opening in the front is finished with a binding. The full length one piece sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands.

Why not make this a "composé" dress—only be careful that the two or three shades of the same color blend perfectly. The shops show so many shades in all the colors that it should be easy choosing. Bind the neck opening and bottom of the dress with a shade contrasting with the dress and make the collar and wrist bands of a third shade. Cut the binding strips on a true bias and measure accurately, making them one and a half or one and three-quarters of an inch wide. Then run the binding on by hand and before turning in the opposite edge to hem down baste the binding close to the seam on the right side so it will stay in place when you make the turning. Of course the skirt should be allowed to hang several days before finishing—evening it off where it has stretched.

Pattern No. 711 is suitable for many different materials and among them one of the washable crêpe de chines would be a wise choice. This comes in the loveliest colors and is a good weight. The front of the underblouse could be made of a printed crêpe and to this under part the front of the two piece skirt is joined. Then the real front of the waist comes over this under part and is held in place by a single button. The sleeves are quite large at the bottom and there is an inset there of the printed material. They are gathered into narrow bands at the wrists made from the dress material.

Another combination of colors would be black satin made up either with white or with a printed material. Black and white is shown in many of the New York shops made into charming dresses for young women as well as older ones.

709—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

710—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

711—Woman's and misses' dress. Size 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 40 inch material, with ½ yard of printed material.

BEAUTY ANSWERS by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MOLLY: WHERE THE LIPS ARE wrinkled and chapped there is often a condition of inward fever. I would suggest that you look well into the condition of your digestive tract and see it is kept in proper order. Soften the lips with cold cream or spirits of camphor.

K. B. D.: AS THE COLD WINter winds cause a dryness of the skin of the face and chapping, it is well to apply cold cream before going out. After massaging the cold cream into the skin, powder with a good face powder, which acts as a further protection. I have a formula for a good cold cream, which you may have for a stamped addressed envelope.

MISS G.: MILD CASES OF EXCESsive perspiration are benefited by bathing the affected parts with hot water to which either boric acid or alum has been added. Too much cannot be said about the need of frequent changing of clothing. After each wearing a dress should be hung up to air before an open window. When possible let the sun get at the dress that is being aired.

J. R. E.: WARTS ARE DUE TO INfection of the skin. The warts on the face may be removed without leaving a scar, when the work is done by a reputable physician.

H. Z. T.: TO REDUCE THE SIZE of the pores, I would suggest the ice treatment. At night cleanse the face with cold cream, then wash with soap and warm water, and rinse in cold water. Take a small piece of ice and put it in a piece of cheesecloth and rub over the affected parts for several minutes.

N. S. C.: AFTER A PERSON HAS attained full growth it would be necessary to resort to an operation to change the shape of the legs, that is, where the bone structure is at fault. If their shapelessness is due to excess weight, send along a stamped addressed envelope and I'll give you some exercises and diets which will do much to improve their appearance, if adhered to faithfully.

MOTHER: THE MOST SATISFACtory work in the straightening of teeth is done when the child is between the sixth and twelth years. Done later, the work must be done slowly to avoid too much absorption of the bone, or the teeth will not again become tight. You may help the dentist by making sure the child brushes her teeth regularly. He will do the rest.

MISS Q.: SKIN WHICH PEELS and chaps constantly is in need of oil. It is excessively dry. Cleanse the face with cold cream instead of water, or if you use water, let it be at night, and after it massage a little cream into the skin. You may leave some on over night. Before going out massage a little cream into the skin and dust with powder, as a protection against the wind and cold.

H. M. H.: WHEN THE FLESH under the chin begins to sag it is necessary to start exercising. I have some neck exercises I shall be glad to send you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope. Always hold the head up. After doing the exercises, massage with a good cold cream, followed by an ice rub. If impossible to obtain ice, use a cloth wrung out of cold water.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Getting a Suit Free.

The cheekiest person I know came into a store one Saturday afternoon in summer and after looking through the pile of bathing suits asked if she could take one home on approval to see if it fit. She took a suit and a pair of bathing slippers.

Monday morning she came in, laid a package on the counter, and simply said she didn't want the suit. Then she left.

On opening the package, it was found she had worn both the suit and slippers in bathing. D. H.

A Selfish Giver.

The cheekiest person I ever knew was a girl friend of mine. About a week before Christmas she asked me if I was going to give her a present. "Because," said she, "if you give me a present I'll give you one."

I replied in the negative. On Christmas, when I gave her a present she did not say thanks, but said: "I'll have to go out and buy you something."

Isn't that cheek? A. D. B.

Solid Brass.

Merely to be accommodating I lent a new dress to a friend. She wore it several times and after she had had it two weeks I asked her to return it so I might wear it to a bridge party.

She said, "O, I'm going to wear it there myself. Can't you wear some other one?" E. R.

Cash and Carry.

Our neighbor kept boarders and one day, when her pantry was bare, she sent her flapper daughter to the house to borrow some money to buy groceries. I couldn't spare the money, so told her I would let her charge the groceries she needed on my account at the store. She said, "Would you please go and get them for me? I do so hate to carry packages."

Well, so do I, for any one, the cheeky. J. C. K.

And Walked Off.

I have a friend who calls often. One evening just as she was ready to go home, she saw we had two decks of cards. Picking up the newest deck she said, "We haven't any cards at home, so I'll take one of yours." E. L.

Worrying Over a Penny.

After a short visit I was taking a friend to the train. Two blocks from home he said he had left a penny box of matches on the living room table I kept driving. He said it was a new box, and he had only used three matches out of it.

Finally, I offered him a penny for another box. To my surprise he took it and was greatly relieved of his worry. P. R. C.

Letting George Do It.

The cheekiest person I know is an employer who, when he is in need of help, waits until his competitor next door puts an ad in the paper and then stands near his competitor's door to hire the applicants. J. D. VAN B.

During an Intermission.

While at the theater, my girl friend and I left our seats during the intermission. When we returned, we found them occupied by two women and our wraps thrown on seats from which the stage view was poor.

How's that for cheek? M. K.

LOOK PLEASANT, PLEASE

by Antoinette Donnelly

These Tips Will Prove Useful on Your Next Trip to the Photographer.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—In the interests of birthday conservation, let the German women give a subtle tip. In a Berlin woman's magazine warnings about the style of dress and coiffure that "date" a woman are given. "Never have your full figure photographed, lest the fashion of your dress give away your age at some future date.

"For the same reason never have your hair dressed in any characteristic or conspicuous style, and, if wearing a hat, select one that might be appropriate for almost any fashion."

The first suggestion may be applied more advantageously for future reference, we think, than the second, relative to hat and coiffure. The hat can be eliminated as a future give-away by the simple process of leaving it in the photographer's dressing room, where it really belongs when one is having a photograph made. A hat unquestionably is the current year's trademark which you can't laugh off three, five or ten years hence. I don't suppose

If you have old family daguerreotypes in your possession you can see how the coiffure survives generations, though a hat will scarcely outlive a season. Simple coiffures they are, always. The huge pompadours, of course, have dated many a poor darling daughter into hurried explanations that they were being worn when her hair first went up, which was along about her fourteenth birthday.

Looked Like Her Own Daughter.

One of the metropolitan dailies ran a series of photographs of personages of twenty years ago. An up to date photograph appeared along with the "old timers" in a number of cases. With one internationally known actress, particularly, her present day photograph made her appear as the debby daughter of herself twenty years ago.

If you go through the files of any photographic library, picking out women's photographs at random, you will see this identical rejuvenation principle. Men do not suffer so markedly the comparison of intervening years.

If we return to long hair, the present day bobbed headed photographs can hardly escape being dated. But, of course, the alibi that "I was one of the first to have it done" may be brought into service. With persons of sharp memories this alibi will not serve, because in its ten or twelve years of life the bob has gone through its own evolution process from the bushy floor mop to the 1927 sleek outline of head.

For Steady Wearing Qualities.

For steady wearing qualities photographers tell me the picture that best survives the years shows a simple coiffure and hands that fall gracefully into the lap, if the hands are shown at all. It is conceded best to reveal just the upper part of the body. Evening dress, since time permits no great latitude in its neck line, or dress along classic Greek lines, and a face pleasant, but without a wide dentifrice display, are items that make for a photograph which will not "date."

One of the great temptations revealed to me by photographic operators hinges on woman's inherent belief that, given a stage or a camera, she can act. And in order to prove herself an actress she believes she has first to dispossess herself of her own personality and assume a foreign one.

I have sat in as judge on a good many beauty contests in which photographs were submitted and if there is any one thing that will send a contestant's picture into the discard quickly it is the artificial pose. Unaffected simplicity is the telling feature of prize winning pictures.

Feel natural, act natural, and be natural when you are being photographed. No borrowed pose will make one better looking.

The Berlin authority offers valuable advice in this: "Avoid assuming the much mooted romantic upward look and the frequently seen ingénue expression, both of which are apt to appear ridiculous in a picture."

Fatigue Always Registers.

Another point to observe is a restful night preceding the day of registering before the camera. Fatigue about the eyes is caught by the lens. Or, if one feels indisposed at all, it is better to postpone the engagement until one is in tip-top shape.

Making up for the camera requires skilled hands. If one is not sure of her mastery of the cosmetic art, she had better leave makeup off entirely. Rouge should never be used on the cheeks, because red photographs black and there is danger of making the cheeks look like sunken areas. Heavily rouged lips will blacken and coarsen them, but a thin coating of a light shade to define the lips is permissible.

Powder has to be dusted on smoothly. Eyebrows may be touched up if they are indefinitely curved. They should be trimmed and shaped before the photograph is made, as the scraggly hairs spoil the picture. Eye makeup, particularly, must be done skillfully. If there is any "spotting," the effect is damaging. A little hand whitener will keep the hands from looking dark.

Solid colors in dress are better than patterned ones, for patterns of certain colors stand out stronger than others and the frock may emerge hard and ugly. Light blue and light yellow photograph white. Pink will look darker. Red, brown, navy, dark green, and purple will be dark in the picture. Light colors add a little more bulk to the figure.

IMMEDIATELY END GRAY HAIR

In five minutes tint your hair at home to any beautiful shade you desire. No fuss—no mixing—guaranteed harmless—BROWNATONE is immediately effective. Penetrates all the hair—one application only required. Buy BROWNATONE at drug and toilet counters, 50c. and $1.50. Any shade from two colors. For trial first, send 10c. For advice or hair tinting, visit the Brownatone Shop, 1033 Stevens Bldg.

RED PEPPER HEAT STOPS BACKACHE

The heat of red peppers takes the "ouch" from a sore, lame back. It cannot hurt you, and it certainly ends the torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub, and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers.

Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

The Whitehall Pharmacal Co., New York, N. Y.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray.

Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

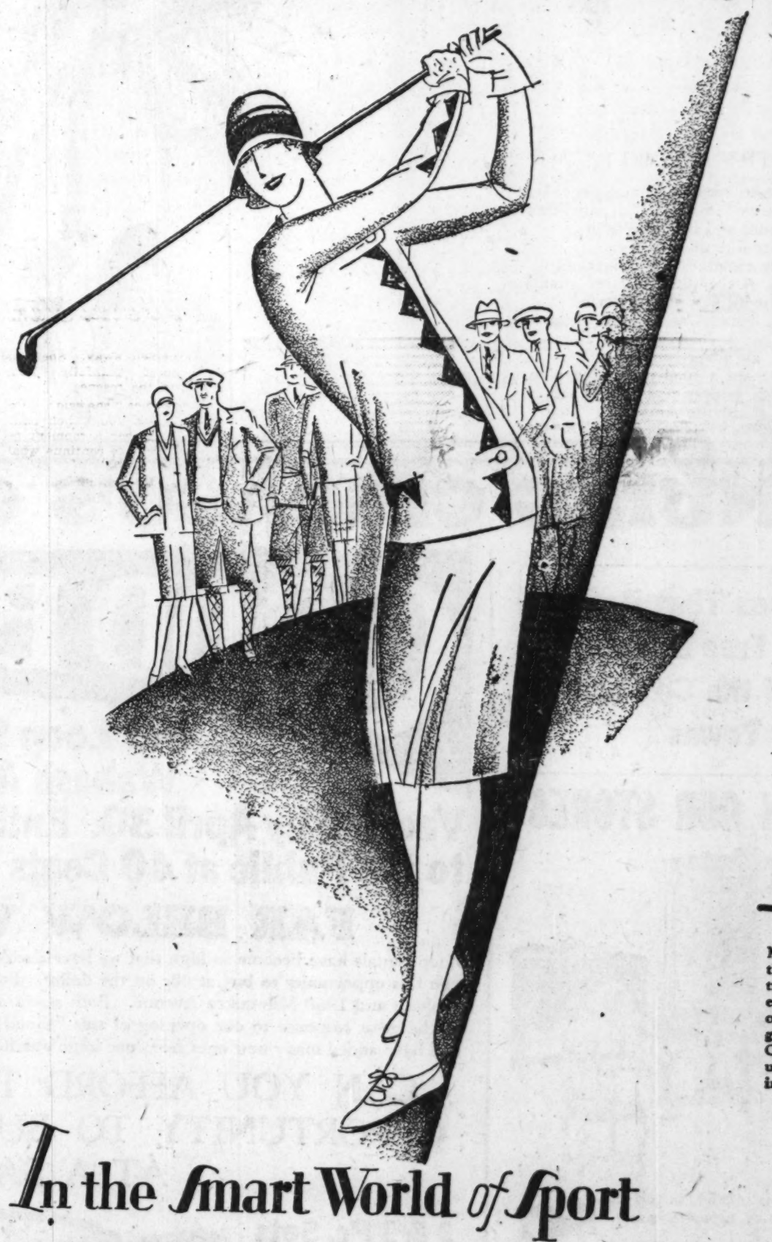
The GOSSARD Line of Beauty



Above, a charming combination forming a complete undercostume. The figure garment is of satin tricot, finished with a brassiere and pantie frill of Georgette crepe. Gossard Tedetite 6608, $10.

Model 6607, designed of the miraculous, pliant, triple-wear Charmosette elastic, which is found only in Gossard figure garments, is shown here. Charmosette step-ins are unbelievably soft, supporting and durable. $10.

In the Smart World of Sport
GOSSARD SILHOUETTES meet every challenge

Your corsetiere will be glad to show you a selection of new Gossards, designed to meet the needs of your figure and various costumes.

The critical eyes of the observing gallery—growing steadily keener as women's athletic prowess increases—concern themselves as much with appearance as with skill. She whose figure lines are naturally, softly supported is assured of a lithe, graceful silhouette. She attends her game undistracted because every movement is in harmony with her costume, and her costume in complete harmony with the fine, important lines of fashion. Her appearance brings joy to observers, assurance to her game.

Gossard Foundations are Scientifically Smart

Gossard garments of each variation—step-ins, combinations, girdles, front-lacing corsets, are scientifically designed to support the muscles of the figure, to free them from fatigue—and to bring the smartest lines of the natural figure to the fashionable world of sport.

A LOVE OF THE TRUTH

by Doris Blake

Child Expert Stresses the Importance of Teaching Boys and Girls Honesty and Accuracy.

ONE of the problems faced by conscientious parents is how to establish standards of truth in their children. What is called "lying" is very general in childhood, and the lies of children differ greatly in kind and in degree. Some parents dismiss the problem with an indifferent shrug and the excuse that it is simply childish imagination out of which the youngsters will grow eventually.

In order to inculcate right habits and right thinking, since civilized life or any kind of community life is possible only if people are dependable—that is, if truth is in them—these early manifestations of falsehood in children should be met with a sympathetic understanding by every parent and the ideal of truthfulness should be implanted as early as possible in the young mind.

The Child Study Association of America, in one of its pamphlets issued for parents and teachers interested in the development and education of children, treats the subject of truth and falsehood in the young, and stresses the importance of inculcating the principles of honesty and truthfulness early in life.

Sidonie M. Gruenberg, author of this particular study, realizes the limitations of the childish mind and its inability to grasp the adult understanding of truth.

An Expert's Ideas.

"All who have to deal with children realize that truthfulness is attained slowly," she says. "We must not condemn the child for every false statement he makes, but rather use each occasion as an opportunity for enlarging his understanding and increasing his appreciation of truth."

While the child is learning to talk and for some time thereafter there is not sufficient development to distinguish between the creations of fancy, memories, dreams, on the one hand, and actual occurrences on the other. He is unable to differentiate the fleeting images aroused by his wishes from actual situations. Under these circumstances Miss Gruenberg believes it worse than useless to reprove the child for saying that he saw a flower fly off the bush like a butterfly, or that the cat spoke to him. He may have misinterpreted what he saw—or his wish may have been father to the thought. What he sees is certainly not true, but he is not "lying," for everything he tells you has a proper place in his own mind and he is not concerned beyond that. Discrediting his inventions will not cure him of lying, in Miss Gruenberg's opinion, since he has not realized his "lie," but our ill considered reproof may discourage his efforts at putting into words what does come into his mind and destroy his confidence in our sympathy and understanding.

However, our child training authority warns that the child cannot go on forever confusing the imagined with the real. Parents can help him bridge this period by showing him patiently that some thoughts do correspond to the tangible world outside, whereas others exist only within his mind. Playing with him in his make believe games is recommended as the measure to lead him gradually to distinguish between one class of experience and the other.

Inventing Excuses.

"Often children invent excuses or justification for their acts, or give reasons which we feel are not altogether genuine," says this child authority. "In fact, the more numerous the reasons are which a child gives in urging the granting of his desires, the more likely it is that his real reason is withheld."

Parents must show children all along the line that to be honest with one's self requires scrupulous investigation of one's own motives.

Another type of problem Miss Gruenberg calls attention to as met frequently by parents is that of the child learning to get what he wants by word or act which an adult may classify as "untrue." The child who, after being put to bed calls for water because in this way he gets his mother's company, is not conscious of the fact that he is lying. He does not begin with a conscious desire to deceive, but simply uses the word or gesture which he has found effective.

"To the child it is not a question of truth or falsehood, or right or wrong; it is only a question of getting what he wants—and he learns that some methods work," says Miss Gruenberg. "Or it may be a question of avoiding something disagreeable and again he learns that certain methods bring the desired result."

Anxious for Attention.

It is not always a seeking of some material satisfaction which induces the child to lie, Miss Gruenberg observes. Just to cause a sensation he may brag of having done something which he really did not do, or tell a story that will astonish or mystify. He sees other people draw attention, even admiration, by the telling of wonderful tales. So he is tempted to tell a good one, himself.

Here again, says the child educator, there is in the child's mind no question of truth or falsehood—there is only the wish to produce an effect. His creativeness is challenged and he does his best.

Dealing with all kinds of "lies" in the same way is not the solution. Parents should know whether the child lies because he is too timid and too weak, or because he lies to show off. In the latter case he can be encouraged to make up a story as a story and have it receive due recognition on its merits and he can be supplied legitimate ways of expressing himself and of receiving the favorable attention which, at this period, the child really needs. Removing the temptation to improvise is part of the parents' job.

The commonest lies among children, Miss Gruenberg further observes, are those designed to save them from punishment.

"Certainly the lies that are prompted by fear of punishment will not be eradicated by more punishment or by giving the child more reason to fear," she argues. "It is necessary to help him realize that lying is an unworthy and weak evasion; it is necessary to help him feel that it is in every way better and more satisfactory to face the consequences of wrongdoing. A challenge to self-respect will be more constructive than an appeal to fear."

Voice Is Important.

The manner of approaching a situation and the tone of voice the parent uses may frighten or challenge a child into making false statements. With proper handling he might have spoken confidingly and truthfully.

A large factor in a child's normal development, the author of this child study treatise declares to be the confidence which he is made to feel in his own ability to do what is right, to overcome temptations, and to outgrow childish faults. Looking for the causes instead of stressing results will help parents to remove the childish temptations to resort to falsehood.

No miracle of sudden reformation or conversion should be expected from the child, the educator concludes. But the ideal of truthfulness should be before the child and before parents as something toward which to strive.

A Small Social Drama

by Persis Standish

In Which Mrs. Harry Uncovers a Petty Bit of Deceit That Good Form Considers Out of Bounds

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.

SOME months ago Mrs. Harry was invited to a tea given for a woman from Philadelphia. The visitor was the house guest of a friend of one of Mrs. Harry's dearest friends, and Mrs. Harry was naturally asked to pour. Also she was bidden to stay and Harry asked to come later and a very informal supper was eaten and then there was bridge. So naturally, also, Mrs. Harry had a chance to talk to the Philadelphian.

Philadelphia had been the home of Mrs. Harry's mother, too, before she married Mrs. Harry's father and some of her family still live there. But these things Mrs. Harry didn't mention, because they did not seem interesting as conversational offerings to a stranger. But in the course of talk the visitor, whom we shall call Margaret Brown, mentioned the name of a certain woman of national prominence who lives in Philadelphia. She didn't actually say she knew her as Mrs. Harry afterward remembered, but implied it, and Mrs. Harry, who had inherited her friendship from her mother, said: "Mrs. Blank is a charming person, isn't she? I remember my first meeting with her when I was a child. She came to see my mother on one of her visits here and though she hadn't seen her for several years, not since my mother's marriage, she remembered that, as a girl, mother had been fond of jasmine, so she came to surprise her carrying an armful of white blossoms. She was most beautiful then, and I remember hanging onto mother's skirts and adoring this beautiful creature, who dumped all the flowers in my mother's lap."

As Beautiful as Ever.

"She is still as beautiful as ever," Mrs. Harry continued, "and I think she has one of the finest voices in the world, don't you?"

Margaret Brown said yes, that she thought so, too. Then they talked of other things. But when Mrs. Harry was leaving she bade Miss Brown good-night and said: "If you see Mrs. Blank before I do, please give her my best love and Harry's, too, won't you?"

Margaret Brown said: "O, I shall probably see her next week when I go back to Philadelphia."

It happened that Mrs. Blank decided to go to California and was passing through Mrs. Harry's city, so she wired saying: "If you are not already engaged save Tuesday and Wednesday for me."

Mrs. Harry was delighted. Mrs. Blank never stayed at Mrs. Harry's house because Mrs. Harry had the good taste not to ask her. She knows that Mrs. Blank travels with a maid and a secretary and that a six room apartment is no place for three extra women. But she always has Mrs. Blank to dinner—as well as to breakfast and luncheon, and sometimes to tea.

Mrs. Blank liked meeting some of the Harrys' friends and so Mrs. Harry planned a little tea for her—just ten or twelve chosen spirits, young women who one way or another are accomplishing something. Then she remembered Margaret Brown, so she invited her, and, of course, the latter's hostess. It was to the hostess she spoke over the phone, saying: "Will you and Miss Brown come to tea next Wednesday? I'm so glad you can. By the way, tell Miss Brown I am having a friend of her's."

A Surprise Indeed.

So they came—into Mrs. Harry's charming little drawing room, more charming than ever with its bright spring flowers and the several pretty young women gathered about a dignified and beautiful elderly woman who seemed to be making them all laugh. Mrs. Harry drew them into the group. "Mrs. Blank," she said, "this is Mrs. Harrison and here is my little surprise for you——"

Mrs. Harry would never have known that anything was wrong by looking at Mrs. Blank, but Margaret Brown gave herself away. She blushed and stammered painfully. Mrs. Blank came to the rescue.

"How nice," she said. "I'm awfully glad to see you," then smiled very sweetly at her a moment before she turned away to continue what she had been saying when they came in.

After her guests had all gone and she and Mrs. Blank sat waiting for Harry to come home, Mrs. Harry told Mrs. Blank the story of Margaret Brown and how she had given her to understand that she knew Mrs. Blank well.

She ended the story by saying: "And you were so wonderful, Aunt Lally. I don't think a soul there knew you'd never seen her before — I wouldn't have known it if I hadn't been looking at her face, instead of yours. She didn't deserve it, you know. I shouldn't have minded if you'd snubbed her in my house. I think it was most annoying!"

Mrs. Blank only laughed, her laugh that seemed so young, that was always infectious. "My dear," she said, "when one gets to be as old as I am one learns to be amused, instead of annoyed!" That was all.

Then Harry came in and after a lovely dinner, just the three of them, they took Mrs. Blank to her California train where her maid and her secretary and several friends were awaiting her.

Talking It Over.

On the way home Mrs. Harry told Harry all about it. When she finished the story she said: "That horrid little snob, Margaret Brown, committed one of the unpardonable social sins—claiming acquaintanceship with some one she didn't know because that person is influential and prominent, and all she got for it was a charming smile, because Aunt Lally wouldn't insult her in my house!"

"O, no," said Harry, "you're wrong this time, my dear. She got something much worse. She was punished by having the lie discovered by you and by Aunt Lally. She got coals of fire heaped upon her head. She knows you both scorned to expose her and she has learned something about human nature. What she has learned is a bitter lesson, namely that a person can be so big that some people look too small for them to bother to despise.

"Besides, a woman like Mrs. Blank meets lots of Margaret Browns, of course. I venture to say that there are probably a hundred unidentified women claiming some sort of acquaintanceship with her everywhere she goes. She has just learned to jangle their nerves instead of letting them jangle hers."

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Following her 45 mile hike from Providence to Boston recently, Miss Eleanor Sears, society leader, without revealing any signs of fatigue, entertained a group of friends at a dinner in her home.

Besides being president of the Fairmount bank at Fairmount, Ga., Mrs. Edna Tate finds time to look after her 2,500 acre farm.

Victoria Drummond, first woman to be granted a seagoing engineer's license by the British board of trade, is a goddaughter of the late Queen Victoria.

Though it is alleged that Kensington palace in London is haunted, it did not deter Queen Victoria of Spain from observing her thirty-ninth birthday in the palace.

All the leech doctors of Austria now are women, who go about with their leeches, kept in moist earth, to draw blood from those who have faith in that sort of treatment.

In an effort to diminish the number of accidents due to careless driving, Turkey has passed a law forbidding women under age to drive automobiles in Constantinople.

At the age of 18 years Miss Irma Ward of Los Angeles, Cal., so far outclasses in feats of strength all others of her sex that she is claiming to be the strongest woman in the world.

For financial wizardry, Anne Nichols, who produced her own play, "Abie's Irish Rose," has beaten the record of any man for money making in the theater, having become a millionaire through one play.

Mrs. Ella Bushnell-Hamlin, independent candidate for congress from Davenport, Ia., favors the elimination of all sex lines and abolishing women's clubs.

SAM 'N' HENRY - - The Boys Face a Mean Judge - - By Correll & Gosden

[Sam and Henry were arrested for making a left turn contrary to traffic regulations and were given a ticket and told to report at Speeders' court. There is a line waiting to go before the judges as Sam and Henry enter the room.]

SAM—Whut are we gonna do now, Henry?

Henry (pointing to a policeman standing near)—Ask dat policeman standin' dere.

Sam—Dat's 'bout de only thing to do, I guess.

Henry—Take off yo' hat now an' act like yo' got some sense, 'cause yo' might as well be in jail as be in dis buildin'.

Sam—Well, I guess I'll ask him. (To policeman.) Say, mistah, a policeman gimme dis ticket up on State street yest'day an' tol' me to come down heah. Whut mus' I do wid it?

Policeman (in very gruff voice)—Get in that line over there!

Sam (scared)—Yessah, mistah, yessah—thank yo'. (Goes back and gets in line near Henry.) (To Henry.) Did you heah what he say?

Henry—Whut did de man tell yo'?

Sam—He tol' me to git back in dis line heah.

Henry—Well, 'tain't no ahgument 'bout it. Go on, git in de line.

Sam (as he gets in line)—Come on, git in heah wid me, Henry.

Henry—Whut I wanna git in dere wid yo' fo'? Ain't none o' my biz'ness.

Sam—Well, Henry, stick wid me heah. Heah whut de man say, anyway. I ain't got but fo'teen dollahs, an' I don' know whut de man's li'ble to fine me.

Henry—Whut evah he fines yo'—dat's yo' biz'ness—'tain't none o' mine.

Sam—Come on—git in dis line anyway, Henry.

Henry (getting in line with Sam)—A' right, I'll git in de line wid yo', but I ain't even gonna be a witness.

Sam—Do yo' reckon de judge gonna let me go?

Henry—De judge gonna let yo' go to jail if yo' don' pay de fine, I know dat.

Sam—I wondah if all dese heah men in dis line done been 'rested fo' de same thing?

Henry—Don' worry 'bout nobody else. You'se de one yo' gotta worry 'bout—jus' worry 'bout yo'self.

Sam (as the line moves on)—It certainly don' take long to try de cases heah, do it? We'se movin' right 'long.

Henry—You'se lucky dat yo' evah got dat car back to de man.

Sam—If he hadn't come aftah it I'd nevah got it dere. Dat policeman done tol' me dat yo' couldn't make no lef'-han' turns in de Loop.

Henry—Yo' don' even know where de Loop is, do yo'?

Sam—Dat's de biz'ness part, ain't it? I wondah why dey calls it de Loop.

HENRY OFFERS AID

Henry—Dat don' make no diff'rence why dey call it de Loop—de thing you wanna do now is to git out o' dis mess dat's you'se in.

Sam—Well, whut is I gonna tell de judge now, Henry, when I git up dere? 'Spose de judge ask me is I guilty or not guilty—whut I goin' tell him?

Henry—Now I tell yo' whut I'll do. I goin' stand up in front o' de judge wid yo'——

Sam (interrupting)—Yeh, Henry—dat's right—you come up dere wid me. I want yo' to tell me whut to do.

Henry—Well, I tell yo' whut I'll do den. When you goes up in front o' de judge I'll walk up dere wid yo' an' I'll stan' right dere behin' yo' an' I'll listen to whut's goin' on, an' if I see you got a openin' dere I'll whisper to yo' whut to say.

Sam (delighted)—Dat's a good idea, Henry. You gonna tell me whut to say, huh?

Henry—Dat's it. We is li'ble to ketch de judge off his guard an' dat's when yo' wanna git in if yo' kin.

Sam—Henry, I ain't nevah seen no one man wid so much sense as you got.

Henry—Now, den, I gotta watch dis thing mighty close now, an' in case I git yo' out o' dis mess I'll let yo' buy my dinner, 'cause yo' know we done laid off today.

Sam—Dat's a' right, Henry. Yo' git rid o' dis heah mess an' I'll buy yo' dinnah an' suppah. Listen, Henry, yo' know we gotta lay off anothah day an' go out to de stockyards an' git dat job—dat's whut we gotta do.

Henry—Yeah, an' we gotta do it nex' week, too. We gotta git a job nearer home dan where we is now.

Sam—I tell yo' whut let's do, Henry. Let's go out to de stockyards Tuesday. Wanna do dat?

Henry—If we kin git one o' de brothers down at de lodge to take us out dere in his car dat's de thing we wanna do.

Sam—Yeah, one o' de brothers o' de Jewels o' de Crown. One o' dis efficers done promised to drive us out dere some time. I'd like to see de place, anyway. I done heard 'bout de stockyards evah since I was a little boy. I wonder how dey kill de cows out dere?

Henry (in his egotistical manner)—Don' be so ig'nant—dey chlorofo'ms dem.

Sam—Whut yo' mean, dey chlorofo'ms dem, Henry?

Henry (seeing the line moving toward the judge's stand)—Move up dere. Move up in line dere. We's gittin' closer to de judge all de time.

Sam—Tell me 'bout dem chlorofo'min' de cows—dat's whut I wanna know.

Henry—Dey chlorofo'ms de cows jus' like dey chlorofo'ms anything else—de firs' thing to do is to git a bull fighter——

Sam (interrupting)—I done seen pitchahs of de bull fighter. He carries a red table cloth on his arm, don' he?

Henry—Dat's it. He's got a bottle o' chlorofo'm under dat red thing.

Henry, say somepin'!

Sam—Well, tell me how dey do it, Henry.

Henry—Well, dis man gits de cow cornered, an' when de cow is in de corner he throws dis red thing ovah his head. Den de cow can't see. Dat's whut it means when yo' heah people say dey got red in dey're eyes.

Sam—Dat red makes de cow mad, too, don't it?

MEAN LOOKING JUDGE

Henry—Yeah, whenevah you blindfol' a cow dat makes him mad. [As the line moves on]: Move up dere in line—it won't be long now.

Sam (moving along)—Dat's right. Go ahead, Henry, finish tellin' me 'bout dis cow.

Henry—Den when de cow is blindfolded dey have a lot o' men to run up behin' him an' throw him down. Den dey tie his han's an' feets——

Sam—What do dey do den?

Henry—Den de bull fighter pours de chlorofo'm up de cow's nose an' while he's unconscious dey cut him up.

Sam—Den when de cow wakes up he don' know whut happened, do he?

Henry—Dat's right. (Seeing the line moving along again)—Move up in line dere now. Dese people is certainly goin' fas'.

Sam (nearing the judge's stand)—Henry, look at de judge. Dis is de firs' time we been able to see him. Dat's a mean lookin' judge.

Henry—Dey all mean lookin'.

Sam—I thought we was gonna see de same judge we saw befo' when we was 'rested fo' shootin' craps. I didn't know dey had two judges.

Henry—Dis place is full o' judges. Dey got mo' judges dan dey got policemen.

Sam—I heard some men talkin' once 'bout 'pealin' de case to a higher cou't—whut floor is dat cou't on?

Henry—Dis cou't's plen'y high 'nuf fo' yo'.

Sam—Henry, I know a man dat was 'rested once down in Bummin'ham an' he got hisself a lawyer. Do yo' reckon I need a lawyer?

Henry—You gonna git me mad in a minute. A lawyer can't do no mo' fo' yo' dan I kin do. Move up dere in line. Why don't yo' brush yo' clothes off befo' yo' come up heah dis mornin'. You look like a ash can.

Sam—I didn't have no brush. Listen, Henry. Tell me once mo' whut yo' goin' do 'bout dis thing when we git up dere in front o' de judge.

Henry—Looh heah—dere's a man takin' up tickets heah—git out yo' ticket.

Sam—Heah 'tis, right heah in my han'.

Man (collecting tickets)—Give me your ticket.

Sam—Yessah, mistah—heah 'tis.

Man collecting tickets (to Henry)—Have you got a ticket?

Henry—No sah, mistah, I'se jus' wid Sam dere.

Sam—Ev'rybody look like dey'se mad 'round heah dis mornin', don' dey?

HENRY HELPS LOTS!

Henry—Dey'se gettin' ready to make de charge 'gainst yo' now. Move up dere in line. It ain't but a couple mo' men ahead o' yo' now.

Sam—(getting nervous)—Henry, I wish you'd 'splain to me again whut yo' gonna do now when we git up in front o' de judge.

Henry—Now, heah's whut I goin' do. I goin' walk up dere in front o' him wid yo', an' when de judge staht askin' yo' questions I goin' tell you whut to say. If I see de judge is off his guard I goin' tell yo' whut to say dat will git de judge e'cited, but I goin' do it on one condition.

Sam—Whut's dat, Henry?

Henry—Dat if I tell yo' to say one thing yo' goin' say it an' ain't goin' say nothin' else. I'se li'ble to tell yo to say, "Yo honor, yo' is mistaken," an' dat's what yo wanna say if I tell yo' to.

Sam—Dat's a'right, Henry. I'll do jus' whut yo' say to.

Henry—Now git ready to go up dere.

Sam (getting excited)—Now don' fo'git, Henry, to stan' right behin' me an' whisper in my ear whut yo' want me to say.

Henry—Yo' wanna have yo' ears open now when I talk, 'cause I can't talk but so loud in de cou't room heah. Some o' dese judges is almos' as slick as I is.

Sam (as man starts toward him to take him before the judge)—Heah dey come—dey's gettin' ready fo' us now.

Court Officer (to Sam)—Is your name Sam Smith?

Sam—Yessah, mistah.

Court Officer—You're next. Come on in front of the judge.

Sam—Come on, Henry, go wid me. (To court officer) Dis heah boy is my witness, mistah.

Court Officer—All right, both of you, come on along.

Sam—Come on, Henry. Stick wid me heah.

Court Officer (to judge)—Your honor, Sam Smith's charged with reckless driving, violating traffic regulations, making a left turn in the Loop, and deliberately blocking traffic. Charges preferred by Officer Walsh.

Judge (in stern voice)—You have heard the charges preferred against you by Officer Walsh. Are you guilty or not guilty?

Sam—Awa—awa—— (to Henry in whisper) Henry, say sompin'.

Judge (impatient)—GUILTY OR NOT GUILTY?

Sam (hardly able to talk in whisper)—Whut mus' I say, Henry? Whut mus' I say?

Judge—Ten dollars and costs!

Henry—Don' argue wid de gent'man—don't argue wid de gent'man.

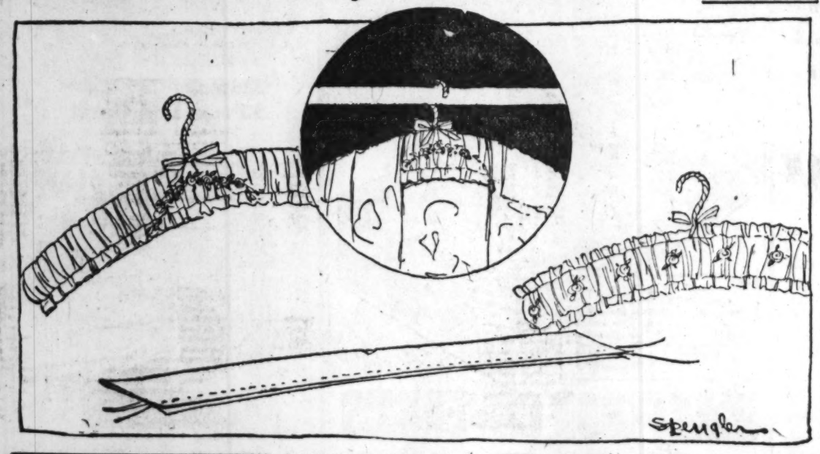
Practical and Fancy Needlework - - - By Clotilde



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

Clothes Hangers Make Pretty Gifts When Padded and Covered with Satin Ribbon

A SET of clothes hangers, covered with different colored satin ribbon, makes a most acceptable gift. The hanger hook should be tightly wound with matching narrow ribbon, and securely fastened. Then for one of the prettiest kind I have seen, five or six inch wide ribbon was used and one yard and a is folded through the center on its length, and shirred one-half inch from the edges on both sides. A tiny hole is made in the center of the length on this fold to slip the hook through; then the ribbon is turned in at each end and the gathered places drawn up to the right length and sewed carefully together, through the gathers.

At the bottom of the hook part, the ribbon used to wind the hook with is tied in a small bow. And in the center of the hanger a half wreath of tiny silk flowers is sewed.

Another pretty hanger was made of ribbon half the width of the one just described and two strips or pieces of ribbon, each one the length of the first quarter of three-eighths was used to cover with.

The hanger was well padded first with cotton wadding, then the ribbon one described. These strips are shirred one-half inch from each edge — the hanger covered with the wadding and then the shirred ribbon set in place. Instead of flowers to trim this one there are large French knots through the center at intervals of about two inches.

Sachet powders should be used inside the wadding and the ribbon bow tied at the bottom of the hook like the other one.

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Loves Only One.

"Dear Miss Blake: We both love a fellow whose initials are A. W. K. He told us he loves one of us and regards the other as a friend.

"ROSE AND HELEN."

The invitations and special attentions will naturally go to the favored one—the other must accept the situation.

Let Him Call You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a fellow who cares for me. He asked me to call him up. Is it proper?

"BLUE EYES."

It's unwise to make a practice of calling boys, Blue Eyes, even though they may suggest it. They'll ask for your telepone number and use it if they're in earnest.

One Out of Three.

"Dear Miss Blake: I invite a girl out every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday. She only accepts for Saturday. Is she going with some one else on the other nights? G. P. H."

There's some one else or she does not get sufficient enjoyment out of the time spent with you, either of which is good reason for eliminating further invitations, don't you think?

Foolish to Consider It Now.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping company for two years and love the girl dearly. I am only making $32 a week, which I know we cannot live on.

"She is 18 and I am 20, but she does not want to wait any longer, if I don't give her the engagement ring by the 1st of next year. BLUE."

You're not yet in a position to consider engagement rings and marriage, Blue. Don't let her scare you into it, either. Use your own good judgment and wait until you can well assume such responsibilities.

HE Makes No Returns.

"Dear Miss Blake: My fellow comes to see me once a week, but never takes me out. I love him. Do you think he cares for me?

"ELIZABETH."

He's imposing when he accepts your hospitality and makes no return, Elizabeth. Let him spend his evenings elsewhere when he is so unappreciative.

Eight Years' Difference.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl eight years older than I. She likes me. What shall I do? CURLY."

Watch your step, Curly. Eight years is quite a difference when the woman is the older. Compare her with the younger girls and see how she measures up.

Drawn, Tired Complexions Instantly Refreshed

As a tired body relaxes and freshens after a warm bath at night, so drawn, "tired" faces freshen and relax after a Calonite bath. But that is not all. They glow with healthy color and utter cleanliness. For lack of these, faces grow dull, oily, sallow, "tired" burdened with blackheads; sluggish; old-looking. Soaps and creams cannot stimulate them sufficiently. Calonite can and will—instantly.

Calonite is a pure white powder that you apply with a damp cloth. Instantly you feel the drawn facial tissues relax, freshen. You feel the hidden oils and powder that clog the pores, that resist other cleansing methods, bubblingly dissolve. You feel the warm, reviving, youthifying blood come tingling to the surface.

How clear and clean and new your skin looks then! How fresh and young it feels! And how it responds to night-cream and rest! From the very first time you use Calonite you look and feel a new person. Because your skin is clean as it never was before, and healthfully stimulated with nature's own beautifier.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it—this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh! Lift off hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes and calluses. It doesn't hurt a bit!

Seems Magic! Just drop "Freezone" on any tender, touchy corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you just lift that old bothersome corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store—Try it!

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

YOU CAN FILL CHILD'S HEART WITH JOY.

LAST week, among the offers I printed was that of a talking doll, and it brought me a deluge of requests that came all week—all asking that they be considered for the one doll offered. Just a few of these letters will give you an idea of the depth and intensity of this longing for playthings among children deprived of them:

"Dear Miss Brown: When I saw your offer of a doll I immediately thought how wonderful it would be to give to a little child who met with an automobile accident recently and has been in the hospital. She has no mother and it would make her so happy to get it.—M. G."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I know of a little girl who is sick. She broke her doll and just grieves about it all the time. Her mother cannot afford to buy her one and I know she'd love to have the one you are offering.—Mrs. B."

"Dear Sally: I have two little orphan girls I got through the Juvenile court. They are two little sisters. One is 6 and the other is 3. Couldn't you see fit to give me the doll for them?—Mrs. A. G."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: My little girl's birthday is the 28th of this month and her father has been out of work for months. She will be 5 and wants a doll and I can't afford to buy one for her. Dear Miss Brown, would you please make my little girl happy on her birthday?—Mrs. W. J."

Now, can't we do something about all these children who were so keenly disappointed? If we have girls and boys in the family, how many dolls, toys, games, and other playthings are lying about because the children have lost interest and grown tired of these particular toys. And how much happiness these discarded playthings would give if they were presented to girls and boys who haven't any and whose parents cannot afford to buy them.

The young owners will be glad, once they know how others will be made happy by their generosity, to part with them—and think what joy we'll bring into the lives of these children and all the other little applicants!

Nurse's Uniform Needed.

"I am a widow and I have been in the hospital for some time. I am able to work again and have obtained employment in a sanitarium, but I need a nurse's uniform, size 40. I would like a black coat, size 38 or 40, also. Do you think one of your readers might have these things to give me?

"Mrs. M. M."

There must be a nurse, somewhere, with a uniform she is about to discard. I can think of no better way to put it to use than this.

Cripple Asks Help.

"I am a cripple and must make my living by selling articles on the street. I need a small satchel, a camp chair, and a suit of clothes, size 42. I am 58 and have no friends. If you could get these things for me, I would appreciate it greatly. J. M. L."

Have you any of the articles this poor fellow needs in his struggle for a livelihood?

A Worthy Case.

"Would some one be interested in giving Mrs. L. some furniture for her living room? She has only one broken chair. Mrs. L. is a frail little woman with three tiny youngsters and a husband who has a crippled leg and who is not able to support his family as he wishes. She needs especially two comfortable chairs, a library table and a rug. H. J. A."

Spring cleaning and moving usually finds us with a lot of surplus furniture on our hands. This request may solve your problem of disposing of such articles and enable you to make a poor family extremely happy and comfortable.

Ex-Service Man Needs Help.

"I am married with two children, 5 and 2. My husband is a disabled ex-service man, living with his family because he can't afford a home for us. We are living in a charitable institution. He is without a job and could probably get one as salesman if he had presentable clothing. You might be in a position to find some one who has a suit, size 38, and a spring overcoat for him. Mrs. J. S."

Can you resist this plea from the wife of an ex-service man? Surely, a bit of clothing is small compensation for what he has sacrificed.

Boy Wants Microscope.

"I wonder if someone among your readers has a microscope they no longer want and would give to me. I am a boy, 12, and have wanted one for a long time. R. C. M."

You will make this boy immensely happy if you have the microscope he has been wanting for such a long time.

Day Bed Needed.

"I wonder if you could help me to obtain a day bed for my husband. He has tuberculosis and will not be able to get in the hospital for about three months. The doctor says he must sleep alone and I don't earn enough money to buy an extra bed. "Mrs. J. H."

Can you befriend this family in the misfortune which has befallen them? A day bed—they cannot use one of larger dimensions—would help enormously.

Ambitious to Earn More.

"I am the sole support of my mother and myself, and I am going to try to earn a few more dollars by teaching French at home. For this reason I should like to have our room looking more like a living room and will need two bed coverings of dark material and a leather couch. Do you think your readers have some they might no longer want. Mrs J. V."

Truly, this ambitious woman is deserving of any assistance we may be able to give her. If you have the coverings she needs, or a couch of some kind, she will be most appreciative for them.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages in foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Harum-Scarum.

The strangest wedding I ever saw, didn't it. The groom was a serious-minded, devout young college professor, handsome and intellectual. The bride was a small town flapper vamp, about 18. The ceremony was to be performed in the office of a magistrate in a neighboring town. The bride was so much amused at the whole affair that she kept delaying the process that had to be called for her time to get her face straight" she kept up a rapid fire flirtation with the magistrate, who, we had learned, was a widower.

At last, on pretense that he had forgotten the lines of his ceremony, he went into the hall, she following. When we called to them after a few minutes they had disappeared. Inquiring on the street we found they had gone away in his car—where no one knew.

It later developed that the magistrate and the other man's bride drove to the nearest city and were married within two hours after they left us. W. B.

His Customary Expense.

In one of our Kentucky mining camps a minister friend of mine was called to perform a wedding ceremony at 6 o'clock in the evening. His religious scruples forbade his marrying couples if either party had been divorced. This time he hurriedly overlooked the matter when he consented to go. At the appointed hour he was there.

Briefly, noting the license certificate he discovered they had both been divorced, but resolved it was too late to speak of it then.

At the close of the ceremony the elderly gentleman awkwardly asked: "Well, how much do I owe you?" To which the preacher replied: "Well, this is just with you. We do not make any charges. Just whatever you care to give me."

The man paused, looked at his blushing bride of some 45 years, then presented a greenback, saying: "Well, I've been a-payin' a dollar." B. H. K.

Masterful Bride.

The bride a foreign born woman of rather forceful mind, lived in a small town but desired to be married and spend her honeymoon in a big city, so several weeks previous to the wedding she came into the city and purchased the wedding rig, her wedding outfit, inquired about the license, engaged the minister, had a taxi to take her to the church in the wedding day, and, in fact, made all arrangements for the eventful day.

The happy couple were to have their wedding breakfast at the home of a friend, so flowers for the bride, also ordered by that lady, were delivered there on the prious day. The wedding day dawned clear and cold, so cold that the bride's flowers were frozen stiff, and to make matters worse the taxi had been ordered too soon by the fanciful lady and we arrived at the bigchurch an hour too early and had to wait through services for a deceased man with the only other occupant of the church the man's widow, heavily decked in mourning weeds.

Never will I forget the long walk down the aisle of that church with the accompanying music as the four of us were all the wedding party, guests and all.

The hotel selected as the domicile for the honeymoon was a carefully guarded secret until, unfortunately, the place was raided and the poor elderly couple were haled to the police court.

I believe that cured the bride of "officiating," as her husband afterward called it, and now she lets him do some of the planning, deeming it the better thing to do. H. S.

Mock Wedding, Legal.

There was a bashful couple in our town who had been going together for several years, so one night when they were both going to a Valentine party, a mock wedding was arranged. One man went to the license bureau and got the wedding license, and the person who filled it being in on the joke, and, having a sense of humor, filled it out properly, together with a certificate. At the party a young man was selected to perform the ceremony. All were masked so there was no telling who the young man was. He went through the ceremony, and after the blessing the masks were removed.

Imagine the surprise when the young couple saw that it was a minister. The wedding was legal, and the task of proposing being off the bashful young man's hands, he decided to let matters stand, and they are now a happy married couple. L. H. O.

After the Ancient Greeks.

There's a family in this town who attempt to live like the ancient Greeks. Their house is a large temple set in a eucalyptus grove, and consists of ceiling and floor connected by pillars. There are no walls; they simply pull down heavy canvas curtains in rainy or cold weather.

One of the daughters announced her engagement just before the Berkeley fire, about three years ago. The temple was badly damaged, the roof being completely burned, and only a few of the pillars remaining. Undaunted by this catastrophe, the "would-be Greeks" decided to hold the ceremony in the charred ruins. So some of us ordinary mortals wandered through the grove that night, to see what we could see. And we surely got an eyeful.

An altar had been erected in the ruined temple with a painting of the Madonna above it. Sacrificial fires burned in braziers, while the wedding march consisted of music made by clashing cymbals and wind instruments—"the pipes of Pan!"

The minister wore an Oxford gown, while the bride and bridesmaids were garbed in flowing Greek draperies, with bare legs and sandals. The bridesmaids, moreover, carried flaming torches instead of conventional bouquets, and danced to and from the altar. After the ceremony they and the bride favored the audience with more "aesthetic" dancing.

Only the bridegroom and his best man were "out of the picture," as they were in black evening dress. Being "rising young business men," I suppose, they refused to take part in the masquerade, even to make a Grecian holiday.

The wedding supper, I was told later, consisted of honey, unleavened bread, and milk, a la an Athenian repast. A. K.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husband and wives! The husband or the wife as come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Let Him Suffer.

Wifey—John, there is some one in the pantry and I've just made a pie.

John—Well, it'll all right with me as long as he doesn't die in the house. E. G.

Her Hair Was Red.

Red Headed Wife—Gee, old man, you're getting so bald I can use your head for a looking glass.

Hubby—The reason I am bald is this: When they passed around the hair in our family, he only color left was red, and I had rather be bald than take it. MRS. O. S.

Now It's Blamety-Blank.

Husband—Jones calls a spade a spade, you know.

Wife—Well, you used to before you tried to dig up the garden. F. H. K.

Right Back at Him.

Husband [sourly, after his wife had spilled a cup of coffee on the breakfast table]—"I've seen men shot for less than that!"

Wife [sweetly]—"Yes, and I've seen men half shot do more than that." H. A. B.

The Reason Why.

I was returning from a trip to Chicago. A nice looking young man sat down beside me. As I was beyond the flirting age, I let him talk to me. He told me of the important position he held.

On reaching home I repeated the conversation to my husband.

"Just think," I said, "he had 400 men under him."

"Humph!" replied my husband, "I suppose he works in a cemetery." MRS. J. G.

Funny Ideas.

Hubby—You've certainly got funny ideas of what's funny and what isn't!

Wife—Well, have you ever heard of any one having serious ideas of what's funny? MRS. B. T.

Doubts Him.

Wife—George, I don't believe you put the cat out.

Hubby—Well, if you think I'd lie about a little thing like that go and put her out yourself. F. H. K.

I do my own wash

—yet my hands stay soft, white

I USED to hate Monday, for my week's wash was always very heavy. But washday is now so easy for me.

I just use Rinso. It's great in our water—makes wonderfully thick, lasting suds.

I soak the whole wash in these suds for about two hours—then rinse. The dirt soaks right out and everything becomes spotless without a bit of hard rubbing. And oh, so much whiter than ever before. Sterilized, too!

And with Rinso my hands never get red and parboiled any more. They stay white and soft.

Why not try Rinso next washday? You'll see why the makers of 30 leading washers endorse it.

Women's Dress Coats

Beautiful kashas, satins, poiret sheens, poiret twills and Lucia cloth are made into some of the smartest coats we have ever offered. Right up to the minute in every respect.

Pin tucks are used profusely in every possible manner and rich embroidery in intricate designs worked in colorful threads also enhances many of these models. An attractive bow on the shoulder is another distinctive feature of some of them.

These coats are also trimmed in fur in many instances—such as American broadtail, pieced squirrel and twin beaver (dyed rabbit). You will like the clever usages of imitation lizard for trimming, too. Linings are of plain or fancy crepe and often taffeta. Every coat is finely finished and a real value at this low sale price.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

A Reasoned Out Beverage Regimen Is More Vital to Our Well Being than a Financial Budget

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

WATER that is hot, water that is cold, man must have his daily half gallon whether young or old. And we would like to be a jolly hydromancer, warning people constantly of what will surely happen to them if they do not watch out and get that half gallon. A hydromancer, by the way, is one who tells the future by means of water, and we are telling you, giving our own twist to the word—a physiological one which we admit it did not originally have.

Now, we are not advising that you become a hydromaniac, that is, have a craze for water, but only a near craze, because real craziness over anything is something to be avoided. To go that far is not pleasant. Indeed, it is a mighty serious thing.

And then there is hydrotherapy, or water doctoring. It has been in vogue 2,000 years or more, and never quite out. Systems of this sort have occupied thousands of printed pages, and with it have gone hydrotherapeutic cook books, etc. The geography of the world is dotted over with places where people seek waters for their health. Around them has flourished a life unique in the way it has dominated and entertained humanity—with doctors and gaming casinos, baths and scenery, food and play.

At this season "watering places" the world over begin to fill up with folk who want rest or "treatment" for their ills, ills so often due in large part to a scant water regimen. So people go to them to be washed and rinsed out, to bathe, etc., when, if these things had been adequately attended to every single day in the year, those people would not now be having to combine disagreeableness with agreeableness. The promoters of these waters see to it that there is much of the latter to balance the former.

It is a strange thing, is it not, that man with his marvelous aqueducts and piping of water even to the top of skyscrapers, and with bottles and thermos carafes to keep water agreeable, should, like the beasts, need to get to a watering trough and fairly swill this liquid? Age after age has preached against this folly, and even the Bible beatifies water. You may read Isaiah—58:11 and elsewhere—and get the idea that a spring of water is a noble institution. And we have a perfect right, in fact, we believe it highly reasonable to do so, to put a physiological interpretation on the biblical expressions which exalt and glorify water, not only as a cleanser externally, but internally. If we believe greatly in a water salvation other than that of holy baptism, we may wish we were Isaiahs trying to turn erring humanity from its careless, indifferent ways as regards its water needs.

Water Service.

A waitress places a glass of water before you as you sit down to table, and she does well. It is not a mere convention. The wise mother provides her bairns and her beloved with a glass of cool and fresh water as soon as they are out of bed, and again when they retire. It does for their bodies what sunlight may do for their spirits, and more. Being a wise mother, she knows that these glasses of cold water—or sometimes it may be hot—are more needed for the health, beauty and happiness of her flock than any other single or simple thing she can do for them. (As an aside, let us say that we know she can largely keep away old age wrinkles from herself if she provides in this way for her own beverage needs, while she dashes cold water on her face and chest every morning of her life—as a beauty, health and energy measure.) One-fourth the daily requirement having been secured by the morning and evening glass, almost any human being who will reasonably attend to the call of thirst will get the other three-fourths through the hours of the day, since a considerable proportion comes in the foods we eat.

Good digestion is nearly assured and elimination certain without a laxative when a human being will give definite thought to maintaining his water balance. He has but to do a little common sense reasoning to know what that is. The many kinds of work water does in a man's body are so vital, and imperative, that racial common sense is always combating some individual's folly in going against the deep rooted reasoning of humanity. There are classic instances of it. A cup of cold water is an ideal of true charity.

The learned author of a cook book printed by Harper & Bros. in 1865 quotes a famous doctor in her chapter "On Selecting Food and Drinks," whose words sound extremely pedantic—his span of life was from 1803-1853—but he was a great medical authority in his day and was perhaps sound for all time on the water question.

He said: "Water is probably the natural drink of all adults. It serves several important purposes in the animal economy. Firstly, it repairs the loss of the aqueous part of the blood, caused by evaporation, and the action of the secreting and exhaling organs; secondly, it is a solvent of various alimentary substances, and, therefore, assists the stomach in digestion." In short, we lose water with every breath and in quantity in other physiological acts; therefore we must definitely, systematically, and all the time repair the loss.

Our Specific Water Requirement.

It is terribly monotonous, and so often fails to make the slightest impression on an individual, this repetition of the fact that we need every day eight glasses, which is four pints, or two quarts, or one-half gallon. It is on honest records that human beings who have evaded systematic water drinking have gone to springs or spas, and for several weeks under presumably medical supervision or some domination have taken seven quarts a day, or fifty-six glasses. What a flood! And what folly to think they can get their water drinking for the year done up in three or four weeks. Because they got on with half their real water requirements now they go through the actual punishment of making oceans of themselves.

We need pure water even to keep our bones clean, as well as to keep our skin from shrinking and to hinder many an internal struggle wholly due to its lack, which shows itself in pain and sometimes even more spectacularly.

Hot Water.

Turning from cold water to hot we find the cook at our elbow. We get our hot water in soups, in gravies, and sauces, in hot fruit compotes and in nutritive or merely stimulating and comforting beverages. It is cooking to prepare these and even to boil water requires some intelligence. Tepid water is an emetic, and if we are taking plain heated water we need to remember that.

Perhaps you have heard people complain of the meals at a given place as being "so dry," no soups, no gravies, no delicious fruit compotes, and being served with only poor or wretched teas and coffee. Man not only needs but craves the food liquids. Waters flavored in various ways approximate nature's best in liquids, the fruits, which are from eighty to ninety-five per cent water, but water that is aromatic, mineralized, filtered, and sterilized. They are great and agreeable agents in this business of keeping the body cisterns filled. And we must not forget that the tomato and cucumber carry the same water load, wonderfully flavored.

Boiling Water.

Boiling water need not be a mere prosaic task, and it is cooking in a real sense. In fiction, where tea has figured so greatly, there are no end of pictures of boiling water, the chief, perhaps, in "The Cricket on the Hearth," by Charles Dickens. To complete the cheerfulness of an open fire there must be a teakettle on the hob and in action. Devices have even been employed to make the sound of the boiling a pleasant one, by using an iron kettle with pieces of iron so arranged in the bottom "as to produce a peculiar melody in which one may hear the echo of cataracts muffled by clouds, of a distant sea breaking among the rocks, a rainstorm sweeping through a bamboo forest, or of the soughing of pines on some faraway hill."

People isolated from the world have devised entertainment like this for themselves, or for their soul's salvation. The cook who can get glorious entertainment from her cooking will cook, compelled or not. And people of a more laboratory mind have found interest in boiling water, watching the bubbles form and break.

Liquid Diets.

A liquid diet and a copious one is the greatest means of getting the necessary water. This is because people are but careless water drinkers and then some persons actually suffer extreme discomfort from drinking more than a quart of plain water a day. Think what the water drinking punishment of old times would have been to them, the horrible agony of it so often resulting in death. But that is no reason for going to the opposite extreme.

Though there was some folly connected with it, the best results I ever saw in the case of some one "reducing," came from a diet consisting almost exclusively of tomatoes and watermelon, each of which are 95 per cent water, or average that. The woman did this without anybody's advice and so risked injury to herself, but since science tells us that hunger sensations come because the walls of an empty stomach contracting hit or knock and cause pain she avoided that ache by eating the bulky watermelon. And the liquid of these two things helped her in more ways than she could guess in her summer martyrizing of herself.

Ices.

Of course one bent on getting a sufficiently liquid diet, though the heavens fall, may easily go to extremes, but that is a danger that is ever betraying humanity in every path of action. The ices, if taken in moderation, and eaten slowly or almost sipped, are worth while in a meal planned according to the ideas we have been exploiting. As to the sipping, there are those who beleive we get the best results and the most desirable alimentary action if we sip all liquids, and thus prolong the exercise the total digestive canal gets when we eat or drink. In other words, we keep our muscles in shape by directly and consciously exercising them. When it is our body proper we may do this with dumb bells, by bending, etc. When it is our digestive canal—an extremely vital muscle—we must apply reasonable methods of exercising it, or refine our methods of getting up action in it.

Pineapple Ice.

Many years ago a fascinating writer of the interesting things of life said that a pineapple ice was a combination of the pine and the palm, of ice and tropical luxury—in other words, of equator and pole, so excellent for our imagination which, with most people, needs more exercise than it gets, and in too many cases none at all is given to food.

For two people, make a pineapple ice or sherbert as follows: Shred or cut up enough of a juicy pineapple to make one-fourth cup. Cook one-half cup of sugar with one-fourth cup of water until it spins a thread, or to 238 degrees. Pour this over the pineapple and let stand till cool. Add to it a little lemon juice to strengthen the flavor, being careful not to use enough to make the whole lack sweetness. Beat the white of one egg till stiff and fold the pineapple and sugar mixture into it. To the fruit may be added a pinch of salt to strengthen the flavor, but adding it to the egg makes its complete fluffing difficult—it may be wet underneath. This may be frozen in a freezer and another egg white added when it is partly frozen, or it may be packed like a mousse and served when it is but half frozen, which makes it a true sherbet.

Lemon Granites.

The Italian granites are often nothing but flavored water half frozen. A little lemon juice in a great deal of water and without any sugar when so treated may be an agreeable thing to sip.

Water Argument.

No more wonderful water argument is to be found in print than that about saving a sick baby, by the means of water, to be found in an article entitled "The Gay Adventure," by Woods Hutchinson, in the Saturday Evening Post, July 29, 1922. The baby had lost water by cups or quarts and with diarrhea which was being restored by spoonfuls only. It is a story to wring the hardest heart, that of the poor baby literally wilting and melting away as a lettuce leaf might from loss and from lack of water, even his skin beginning to hang in folds. Then with water treatment he began to flush, to take up the lack of the wrinkles, and "in twenty-four hours he had swelled up like a tick, and in forty he was well."

If you are an almost violent advocate of water drinking in order to live well, and even for life-saving, this article will be meat to you.

One of our leading dietitians, Flora Rose, has devoted one of her "Easy Lessons in Nutrition" to "The Truth About Water," mentioning the fact that "for some disorders, such as types of heart trouble and high blood pressure, it is necessary to cut down water at all times," but there are certainly doctors who disagree on this.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

Disappointed.

Four of us girls (all teachers) rent a furnished apartment and keep house. A week ago my brother phoned he was duck hunting down here and was coming up with a mess of canvas backs that day for dinner. We had all the dinner fixed except the ducks, which the four of us were going to clean and dress in a hurry, and cream, so we invited three hungry chaps to dinner.

My brother arrived just in time for dinner, with all stores closed, and with one puny mudhen which scarcely made a satisfying meal for the family cat. Embarrassed? O! M. K.

The Man in Gray.

My sister-in-law paid us a visit. As she was about to go, I urged her to stay and dine with us, expecting my husband's arrival any moment. While waiting for him we gathered some flowers.

Then impatiently looking down the street, we saw a man in gray and waved at him in a very familiar way, which he acknowledged. We then rushed in to serve dinner, but no John arrived. We dined alone.

When he came we asked why the delay. Suddenly I recalled he had changed his suit to a brown one that morning. Now, then, who was the other man?

Later in the evening, when sprinkling the lawn, four doors away I saw the man in gray, which makes it most embarrassing, because we are not on speaking terms. MRS. J. S.

Next to a Loud Speaker.

Having a considerable distance to travel to school I had acquired the habit of reading my French assignment on the elevated cars. One morning the entire chapter was difficult and required more concentration than was usual.

I regret that a voluble woman and a quiet well mannered man took seats next to me. The woman became more voluble and agitated as she related the details of a trial at which she had appeared in some capacity.

Needless to say, she attracted the attention of several persons close by, as well as my own, which caused me a deal of irritation. Several times I forced myself to reread the passage I had begun, but it seemed impossible to understand with a perpetual "loud speaker" at my side.

In a desperate attempt to grasp the meaning, I inhaled a deep breath and read aloud with a determined voice: "Monsieur Carot a prit un jour de congé," etc.

Almost at the same instant I was aware of my faux pas, as well as the general amusement of the jostling passengers. Even the long suffering man smiled wryly, which added to my embarrassment. B. E. W.

Why He Remained Aloof.

One night at a dance I was introduced to a stranger. He did not speak, but bowed very low and then withdrew. All evening he seemed to stay aloof from the crowd. The girls thought him "stuck up." When ladies' choice came, the girls dared me to ask him to dance. I tripped up to him and with a roguish twinkle in my eye, stammered, "M-m-m-ay I have the p-p-p-leasure of this d-d-d-dance?

He answered, "The p-p-p-leasure is all m-m-m-mine."

Instantly I recognized his stammering as a natural affliction. You may be sure that I did not enjoy that polka. 'Tis years! But that moment of awful embarrassment to this day sends red floods of shame into my cheeks. L. P.

TENDER FEET. Aching burning, swollen, shoe-chafed feet. The minute you put your feet into a "Tiz" bath you feel pain being drawn out and comfort just soaking in. "Tiz" draws out the poisons and acids that cause foot misery. It is almost magical.

"Tiz" takes all the soreness out of corns and callouses. Get a box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet comfortable.

When Child Doesn't Laugh and Play,—Look at Tongue

Hurry, Mother! Give "California Fig Syrup" at once. It can't harm children and they love it

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Eat your fill . . . and Sleep like a top

HUNGRY . . . all tired out? A good healthy feeling. But it's also nature's warning that energy is running low; that you must be careful what you eat.

A fully ripe banana—whether you're two, twenty-two, or twenty times two—will both relieve that hungry feeling and permit you to drop off into a sound, dreamless sleep. Why?

Because the thoroughly ripened banana is packed with rich sugars—energy elements that hungry, tired bodies can easily assimilate.

How can you tell when this all-food fruit is ripe? That's easy. When the skin is a golden yellow generously flecked with brown, then the banana is so easy to digest that it actually melts in your mouth.

The next time you feel hungry and tired, try a fully ripe banana. In the meantime, we shall be glad to send you a most unusual recipe book that tells of over eighty different ways of serving this nourishing fruit from the tropics. Just fill out and mail the coupon below for a copy.

DANGER LURKS WITHIN US

Do you know that in our bodies are dangers as great as contagion? Many disease germs enter the system with the food, lodge in the stomach and intestinal tract, multiplying by millions—ready to strike down their victim at the first opportunity. They bring about system poisoning, known as Toxemia!

The symptoms are legion—sleepless nights, lack of appetite, headache, nerves on edge—constant fatigue—any one of them may be a sign of Toxemia—a warning to drive out the poisons that are gradually ruining your health. Partola cleanses the system, rids it of life-destroying poisons—sterilizes the intestinal tract—ends constipation—and prevents Toxemia.

Take Partola—a mild, effective tonic laxative—pleasant to take in mint wafer form. At all good drug stores. Regular box, 30c—double size, 50c.

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

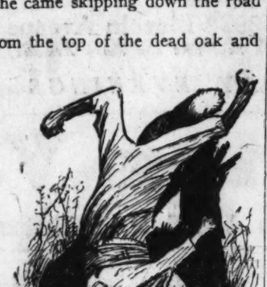
Crafty Fox Thinks He's a Bird.

I MET Zip Coon yesterday and he was laughing all over the place. He told me this story of something that had just happened:

"Golly me! O, golly my! If I had wings, how I could fly.
I'd fly so high I'd bump the sky. Golly me! O, golly my!"

Crafty Fox sang this song as he came skipping down the road one day last week.

Turkey Buzzard heard him from the top of the dead oak and squawked back at him:



Crafty Tries Flying.

"Golly me! O, golly my! I'll bet a nickle you can't fly.

Just take my wings, let's see you try. Golly me! O, golly my!"

Crafty Fox stopped short and sniffed.

"Gracious me," he grinned. "I smell music and if it isn't my old friend Turkey Buzzard's beautiful voice."

Turkey Buzzard couldn't sing a note, but he was so tickled at what Crafty said about him that he flopped down from the tree and bowed several times.

"Come to think of it, Crafty," said he, "I don't see why you shouldn't be able to fly. You are light and graceful and you have such a nice bushy tail to steer with. I'll get an old pair of wings of mine that I don't use any more and strap them on your back and give you a few lessons."

Crafty was delighted. He jumped around and clapped his paws and sang again:

"Golly me! O, golly my! I'll soon have wings and then I'll fly.
I'll fly so high I'll bump the sky. Golly me! O, golly my!"

TURKEY BUZZARD laughed and winked his old red eye as he strapped the wings on Crafty's back. He knew that Crafty would never fly to amount to anything, but he wanted to have some fun with the old sinner, so he just urged him on.

"Now, then, watch me," he squawked as he stood on a stump and spread his wings. "A little jump and—see—how easy it is?"

"Who couldn't do that?" grinned Crafty as he climbed on the Wings Spread Out and Head Still Wabbling.

stump and spread his wings. Then he gave a little jump, turned three or four somersaults, and landed on his left ear.

Just at that moment Benny Bunny came hopping along.

"What was that pretty little song you were singing, Crafty, about bumping the sky? Won't you sing it again for me, please?"

My, but Crafty was mad as he gathered himself together after the wreck. "Never mind," he snapped, "I'm going to learn and when I do fly you won't think it's so funny. Remember that funny Bunny."

Benny blew a kiss to Crafty, winked at Turkey Buzzard, and skipped along down the road. As soon as he was out of sight Crafty called to Turkey Buzzard: "When I learn to fly I'm going to catch him the first thing and give him the worst spanking he ever had. I am that."

CRAFTY kept at it, however, and soon he could rise quite a few feet in the air.

"Now I'm ready, old friend Buzzard," he shouted. "Call Benny Bunny." But Benny did not need to be called. He was hiding in the nearby thicket and saw all that was going on. Out he hopped just as if he had not heard a single word.

Crafty went scooting up in the air. Benny ran around in a circle. Then Crafty flew in a circle. Benny made the circle smaller. Crafty did the same. Around and around they went until poor old Crafty's head began to wobble. He was getting dizzy.

Poor Old Crafty Bumped a Tree.

"Now catch me," squeaked Benny as he scampered for a clump of little trees and darted beneath them. Crafty, with his wings spread out and his head still wobbling, sailed between the branches and hung there, making his old legs go as if he were riding a bicycle. Turkey Buzzard finally had to help him down.

Benny Bunny saw him the next day hobbling around with a cane. His best clothes were full of rips and tears.

"Golly my! O, golly me!" laughed Benny. "Poor old Crafty bumped a tree."

Crafty Fox just stood still and shook all over, he was so mad.

My next story will tell how Judge Bear gets hunk with Crafty Fox.

Yours truly, BUDDY FUDGE.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

Children's Rooms May Have as Much Originality and Charm Nowadays as Grownups'.

An attractive room for the little girl.

CHILDREN'S rooms of the present day involve a great deal more than mere sanitation. Not so long ago practicality and cleanliness were the only factors taken into consideration. Modern mothers, however, realize the importance of color and artistic surroundings, in addition to these fundamental requirements. They know the development of the child's growing personality may be greatly aided or hindered by environment. From a sanitary point of view it is no longer necessary that the playroom or nursery resemble a hospital ward. All sorts of fascinating and interesting fabrics, furnishings, and decoration are procurable nowadays in styles well suited and adaptable to use in the child's room. Bright color schemes, decorative but washable fabrics, and furnishings of simple, sturdy lines are the best choice.

Shown in today's illustration is a section of an unusually attractive room which has been especially planned for a little girl. Cream colored walls are decorated with many colored circles, cut out from paper and glued on. The whole surface is then proptected with a coat of washable shellac. On the metal shelf is an amusing set of figures imported from France. They are cut out in wood and enameled black and white. The two central figures hold a clock, by which the little girl has learned to tell time. The pair of end figures are electrically wired and fitted inside the lamps with small bulbs. The mantel is black and white marble.

Two little arm chairs at each side of the fireplace are upholstered, one in tiny flowered calico on a turquoise blue ground, the other in glazed chintz, showing clusters of flowers on a cream ground. Long, straight hanging window curtains are of turquoise blue sunfast, lined with cream colored sateen. They are arranged with pulley cords so they may be drawn together at night. A small four post bed, a bureau, and a pair of ladder back chairs are made of maple.

The bed cover is of the same material which hangs at the windows. A lamp on a little table beside the bed is made of a china Dutch girl holding an umbrella shade over the electric light bulb. Cupboards for books and toys are built into two corners. The rug is a deep peacock blue, with a border in two tones of the same color.

Dotted Swiss, delightfully fresh and crisp and so well suited, is used in another little girl's room. Casement windows have curtains of rose colored dotted Swiss, ruffled at the edges and caught back just above the sill with cuffs of the same. They are topped by ruffled valanaces. A cover on the bed is made of the same material, with deep full side flounces finished with a double row of narrow ruffles. An under cover is made of rose colored cotton rep. Runners on the dressing table, bureau, chiffonier, and bedside table are of the dotted Swiss simply hemmed. Deep mulberry, wool chenille rugs are used on the floor. The walls are done in a white paper sprinkled all over with tiny pink rosebuds. Woodwork and built-in shelves are painted white.

Flowered cretonne makes another child's room gay. Recessed windows are fitted with built-in seats, beneath which there is ample storage space for many youthful treasures. The windows are curtained with a peach colored, sunfast voile topped by cretonne valanaces, showing floral motifs on an ivory ground. The curtains are bound with two inch bands of the cretonne and are caught back with cuffs of the same. Boxed cushions, made to fit the window seats, are covered with cretonne. These cushions may be dragged onto the floor easily, where they may serve as magic carpets, or ships at sea, or whatever vehicle young fancy may convert them into.

Twin beds in the room have deep flounced covers of the flowered cretonne. On a small table between the beds is a lamp with a parchment shade decorated to match the flowers in the cretonne. Two little low armchairs are upholstered in deep green diaper patterned denim. A squatty low table set between these chairs holds a sturdy tea set, so that the young hostess may serve afternoon tea of the cambric variety to her favored guests. A warm, pleasing glow is spread over the room by means of peach colored walls, finished with a washable paint. Two toned, green braided rugs are used on the floor.

Checked or plaid ginghams are particularly good in a boy's room. One small boy has a bright, sunny room, with sash curtains at the windows of gay blue and yellow sunfast gingham. The walls are painted clear corn yellow and the woodwork blue to match the color in the gingham. A boxed cover on the bed is made of the same gingham, finished with narrow blue upholsterer's fringe, all washable. Sturdy wooden benches, painted blue, may be put to innumerable uses. A deep midnight blue wool rug almost completely covers the floor.

Another little boy's room has white walls, spangled with many gold stars of various sizes. Woodwork is painted white, with depressions done in vermilion. At the windows are ruffled white organdy curtains, with fine vermilion bindings. All of the furniture is painted brilliant blue. Three wide, low benches are fitted with boxed cushions—army mattresses in disguise. These mattresses are covered with rep, one green, one blue, and one red. The covers fasten along one edge with snaps, so that they may be removed for laundering. The upper parts of built-in corner cupboards are filled with open shelves and the lower parts are concealed behind doors, so that things may be kept in order. A bed cover is made of sapphire blue rep piped with emerald green. The floor is covered with deep blue and white linoleum in large, alternating squares.

Striped sunfast in sage green, copper color, old gold and black, makes the window hangings in an older boy's room. Glass curtains are of old gold theatrical gauze. Panels in the walls are filled with decorative and vividly colorful ship posters. Built-in, open shelves hold the boy's tools, books, and his rapidly growing collection of ship models. A recessed windowed niche at one end of the room makes a happy setting for his work table and bench. The bed cover is made of striped sunfast, matching the window draperies. A comfortable armchair near one window is upholstered in copper colored wool rep, piped with black. Beside it stands a wrought iron reading lamp with parchment shade. A similar lamp linoleum on the floor is supplemented is placed near the bed. Black and ecru by two black fur rugs.

Now you know the quality

The service-quality of the corset depends entirely upon the service-quality of the elastic with which it is made. In America's finest corsets, supreme service-quality in knitted elastic is identified by a wavy blue line, which appears inside the corset, at top and bottom. 'Tis the distinguishing mark of genuine Kenlastic!

Kill the Chill of Spring

with a Gas Radiantfire and a "Unified" Range

THIS is the hardest time of year to control a furnace fire. The sun shines brightly, the house gets uncomfortably hot—so you let the fire die—then, at evening, it's uncomfortably cool.

There's a far better way. Have us install a Radiantfire in your fireplace and a "Unified" Gas Range in your kitchen. Then you'll be comfortable day and evening—never too warm, never too cool. Just turn on these gas-fired servants when needed—shut them off when warm enough. Clean, odorless, economical.

You won't need a furnace fire at all. Save yourself that bother—know that spring is really here!

"Unified" Gas Range

—the combination cooking and heating gas range—the range with the warm air furnace. It COOKS with gas, it HEATS with gas. Price $120. Delivered, connected free. $10.50 down, 15 months to pay.

Better than Soda for Stomach Gas

PEOPLE who use soda or magnesia for gas on the stomach, sour stomach and indigestion know that these give but very temporary relief. The gas and sourness may be removed for a short time, but soon returns because the cause still remains. Recent discoveries made by medical specialists show that gas and sour stomach are nearly always due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis.

Intestinal Stasis

THIS insidious disease, specialists tell us, is caused by faulty diet and lack of proper exercise, and afflicts three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. By remaining too long in the bowels, this matter ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of gas bloating and pains, sour stomach, dyspepsia, dizzy spells and nervousness.

Even if the bowels move daily, enough old matter may be left to ferment, cause stomach gas, and poison the system. Only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing of both upper and lower bowel can lasting relief be secured.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, perfected and first used the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. Adlerika is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other gas-expelling and detergent elements. Unlike other medicines, it acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Relieves Gas Quickly

RELIEF from stomach gas, gas pains and bloating, is felt almost instantly after Adlerika is taken, unless due to malformations or other deep-seated causes. ONE spoonful often brings out an amazing amount of old poisonous matter which you never thought was in your system, and which may have been the hidden cause of gas, indigestion, nervousness or sleeplessness.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika frequently brings out an astonishing amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Adlerika is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for Intestinal Stasis and stomach gas, or whenever a thorough bowel cleansing is needed. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

"In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."—Dr. James Weaver.

"I suffered with intestinal stasis and gas. Soda or magnesia helped me very little. I got relief from the first dose of Adlerika, and since taking it, I eat almost anything, sleep well and gained weight."—Mrs. Chas. Rhodes, Yakima, Wash.

"Both my wife and myself suffered a great deal from indigestion and gas. Soda would give some relief, but Adlerika has done us more good than anything we have tried."—Charles Slaven, Terre Haute, Ind.

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the fly, which has five eyes and is so hard to catch, should be able to see a distance of not more than two or three feet!

These eyes of the fly, tiny as they are, are not nearly so simple as are those of man. They are likewise nowhere near as useful. The fly, like all the insects, depends on smell to find its way in the world much more than it does on eyes.

Two of the fly's eyes are called compound eyes. They are the big round follows that sit up on the front of its head and seem to look out so wonderingly. If man's eyes were as big in proportion to his size as are those of the fly they would stand out like grapefruit.

These fly eyes have no lids on them and so are always open. They cannot be turned from side to side. It is because of this that they must be made "compound." Man's eyes have a single lens like a camera. That lens must be pointed at the thing at which the eye is looking. Man can do this by turning his eye. The eye of the fly has 4,000 lenses, each pointing in a different direction. In this way the fly's does not need to turn its head. It does not need to turn its head. So it can see any enemy that would try to catch it. It cannot see it, however, until it is within two or three feet and so must be quick to dodge.

Besides these two big, round eyes the fly has three tiny ones on top of its head. These are little more than skylights looking up. It is the big eyes that do most of the business.

The fly can see better than most insects. The ant, for instance, has but 50 lenses in its eyes and sees very little. Bees and wasps have average eyes and can see two feet. Certain butterflies have the best of insect eyes and can see as much as six feet. The eye of the dragon fly is among the most complicated and has 20,000 lenses. There is, however, a moth which has 27,000 lenses in its eye. These lenses are all packed together and, under the microscope, look like honeycomb. It is by measuring them that scientists can find out where they focus and so can tell how far the insect can see.

Billy was the only boy in the family with four older sisters. A caller at the house asked him how he ever managed to get along with so many girls. Billy hesitated a moment, and then, walking over to the caller, said very quietly, "I just simply fights 'em."

Mary, 3½ years old, had been given permission to stay for lunch at a neighbor's. She stayed all afternoon and while auntie was preparing dinner, she said, "Auntie, your lunch was so good, I guess I will stay for dinner."

V. E. B.

David and Bobby, both 4, were great pals, but often had fights which ended in tears. One morning David came in from play looking rather downcast, and being asked whether he and Bobby had been fighting again, he answered, "Well, no, we haven't been fighting, but we sure had a lot of conversation about somethin'"

Too Amibitious.

When small children, my brother and I were constantly vieing with each other to be our father's pet. We were both of a jealous disposition and were really angered if father paid more attention to one than the other.

One day my father bought a pony for brother, which I could not ride because I was too small. Seeing him ride before my father's admiring eyes was too much, so I decided to gain father's admiration by learning to ride, too.

Father forbade this, so one day I went to the stable unobserved and took the pony. I finally mounted, gave the horse a cut with the whip, but when he started running I fell off, breaking my shoulder blade. I still have an ugly protusion on that bone to remind me of the folly of jealousy.

Spoiling the Fun.

I was going to a grand party, where every one dressed wonderfully.

My girl friend and I went up to get new shoes. Imagine my dismay when arriving home to find mine were too small.

She offered to take them back for me. Knowing my clothes were much nicer than hers, she got my shoes a size too large this time.

Being time to go, I had to wear my old shoes, and my whole evening was spoiled on account of a jealous heart.

Women the World Over

Night work for women is gradually being done away with by law in Japan.

Changing about of women from job to job in industry is now easy, since most of the factory work done by women today requires little skill or experience.

The Missouri State Board of League of Women Voters has begun a campaign to have that state join the 22 other states which have jury service for women.

By husking more than 1,500 bushels of corn in 23 days, Miss Mary Franzen of Kingsley, Ia., set what is believed to be a new record. Her daily average was 68¾ bushels.

Mrs. L. M. Foster Welch, J. P., recently appointed sheriff of the county of the town of Southampton, is England's first sheriff since the creation of the office in 1477.

In Atlantic City recently a circuit court suit was tried by an entirely female jury, the first time in the history of the state that a jury entirely of women had heard a case.

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

This was Never Suspected
A BEAUTY parlor may have one of seventeen imitations of Nestle permanent wave machines. But few women suspect that many of these have been given away gratis or sold at cheap prices simply to obtain a footing. Sometimes the hair treated is of good quality and a satisfactory wave results. But more often, the patron is not so fortunate. More often, the results are unsatisfactory and she gives up the thought of having a second wave when the time comes.
With the new Nestle Circuline method, your hair is tested in advance to assure perfect results in the end, either by the Nestle Text-o-meter or by sample waves on the back of your head.

Fur-collared kashmir coats and trim tailleurs further promote the success of the strictly tailored outline

The coats, $85

Straight and undeviating is the line decreed by the new mode for frock and coat alike. Soft cashmere, that readily lends supple folds to tucks or pleats, comprises this entirely new and exclusive collection of coats.

At left—a model fashioned of jorella weave, body of the coat being tucked diagonally and a tuxedo of squirrel, forming an unusual note.

Center—a model of kasha weave with tuckings is trimmed with the flat American broadtail (sheared dyed lamb) much in demand.

At right—a coat of soft kashmir has a deep shawl collar of monkey fur, again sponsored by Paris as most chic. Fourth floor.

Tailleurs, $50

Like the first harbinger of spring the tailleur reappears and meets an enthusiastic greeting, true tribute to its unfailing success. The newest suits combine a plain hip length jacket with striped or matching skirt as the model sketched.

In the Lady Joan Shop hats are youthful—head sizes large

And crochet viscas—perle viscas—novelty straws, felts and fabric combinations present an alluring choice—in all the lovely tints and tones favored by the smartly dressed for immediate wear.

Black, of course, is included in this chic collection.

All models developed in 23½-inch to 25-inch head sizes. Fifth floor.

Coolie coats of Japanese crepe—brightly printed

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL — by Westbrook Pegler

On Police Records, and the Case of Friend William

He now lives at the country club with his old lady.

I WAS reading an article in the papers this morning where it stated that a young man was arrested for shooting some people, and the article stated that the young man had a police record as long as a day in church. It stated that, because of his police record, the young man probably would get an extra long housing in the penitentiary for shooting these people, and it disgusted me to read such a narrow minded article in the papers.

Of course, I do not think that young men should go around town shooting people unduly, because if you do not regulate shooting you will not have anybody left to watch parades or vote on election day, and then you will have a very serious situation, as there will be nobody for the coppers to shove around.

SUCCESSFUL ARRESTS

But I do not think that a young man who shoots somebody now and again should be put into prison where he will have to associate with dog poisoners and welfare workers and dishonest wardens, because you would be likely to spoil his character and make a criminal of him.

It disgusts me to read an article about a young man's police record being held against him, as I know some very fine people with police records, and I realize that the friendships and personal contacts that a young man establishes in this way sometimes help him to become a useful citizen and a leader in worthy public movements.

I have a friend named William who was arrested every Thursday night and arraigned in court every Friday morning for two years and a half, and he tells me that his success in the last few years has been almost entirely due to the ground work of his career that was laid in the bull house of the 72d precinct. He was just a young chump when he started his police record, but he was a smartish young fellow at that, and, in the course of time, he made friends, and now he has retired and lives at a country club with his old lady.

The coppers used to put the finger on William for running a joint called a membership fight club in the days when everybody that went to the bouts was supposed to be a member of the club in good standing. The coppers were supposed to raid these joints on fight nights and take the worthy president, and my friend William was greatly excited the first few times because he thought it was a disgrace to get arrested.

A $300 LAWYER

At first he hired an expensive lawyer to go to court with him and explain to the judge that the members were just holding their regular weekly meetings and that some of the members liked to fight and they were just fighting sociably. The lawyer would get up in court and he would tell the judge a lot of information about habeas corpus and he would state that a gentleman's club was his castle like it was over in England in the old days when the soldiers would come in and toss people around and turn things upside down and drink up everything in the bar and the king, who was running for réelection, finally said an Englishman's home was like the king's castle and the soldiers were just like a lot of gorillas breaking into places that way and drinking up everything in the bar.

The judge would listen to William's lawyer and then he would say, "All right, that will cost you $10; pay the clerk on the right and no checks cashed; next case." So William would pay the clerk $10 and he would pay the lawyer $300 and the next Thursday night the cops would bust into the joint again and cause a lot of disturbance in the midst of the fights.

JUDGE AIDS HIM

After a while the judge called William into his office one day and he said, "William, it is none of my business, but I think you are a chump to be paying that fellow $300 to be your lawyer every Friday and I have a young friend who is just out of law school and he has not got much business yet so he will take your work for $50 a crack."

So William changed lawyers and the judge scaled the fine down to $5 and it got so that he would let William sign tabs with the clerk and run the bill up to $50 or so before paying off.

Then one day the judge called William into his office again and told William that he ought to quit loping around and get into some good business where he could make some dough and be respectable, as the fight business was a low business and full of bums.

"Since they closed the saloons in this town," the judge said, "it has been very hard for the leading citizens to get good material and I have an idea that you would be a success in this business as you are a smart young fellow and are well known to the bulls and the bondsmen and the courts.

"So," the judge told William, "if you want me to I will put you in touch with a couple of prominent gentlemen who have a warehouse full of material and if you will call at my house this evening I will introduce you to the gentlemen."

A TRIUMVIRATE

So William called at the judge's house that evening, and the judge said, "William, I wish to introduce you to Sheriff So-and-So, who is one of the prominent gentlemen that I spoke about in my office."

Of course, William was glad to meet the sheriff, but he said to the judge, "Judge, who is the other prominent gentleman?" and the judge said, "I am the other prominent gentleman, and the sheriff and I wish to have some smart business man hoist this material out of the warehouse and put it on the market in a quiet way, and we will do business three ways with the dough."

So William resigned from the worthy presidency of the fight club and retired from the prize fight business, which is really a low business and full of bums, and became a rich and respectable member of the community, and he now lives at the country club with his old lady.

HE MIGHT SUCCEED

Therefore, as I say, it is very disgusting to me to read a narrow minded article in the papers stating that a young man's police record will be held against him and that he will probably get extra long housement for shooting those people.

You cannot tell why the young man shot those people, because, for all you know, the young man may not have been feeling good at the time, and when a man is not feeling good he is likely to do things that he will apologize for afterward, and I have no doubt that if you put it up to this young man in the right way he would promise not to shoot those people any more.

And if his police record is all that the article says it is, I don't see why he shouldn't become a subetantial and respectable member of the community like my friend William.

LADIES IN CRIME

Kitty Malm, the Tiger Woman

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

IF ever a 19 year old girl had reason to be a cynic about men, it seems to me that Kitty Malm —the Tiger Woman, they called her—had that right.

Now Kitty, understand, was no saint. Maybe she did carry a gun where most girls hide their love letters. But perhaps she wasn't altogether wrong, from her arc of the circle of experience, when she mumbled to the bailiff at her own trial for murder:

"Men are quitters. They're long on talk, but, Lord, when it comes to the showdown, they're yellow."

MARRIES AT 15

Kitty, or rather Katherine Walter, was born in Austria-Hungary; she came here in the steerage when she was 7 years old. She finished the fifth grade when her mother, in a moment of philosophy, reflected:

"No need for girls to go far in school. You just spend a lot of money on them, then they get married. But fine for the boys."

So Kitty went to work in a machine factory. And grew more the cynic, if we can trust her words:

"Fellows, always fellows. I didn't want to marry 'em. Then they'd try to scare me, saying they'd scar me and spoil my looks with a razor or a gun if I wouldn't marry 'em."

Finally one of the men in the factory, Max Baluk, the Russian, married her. She was 15. Four years later, when she is on trial, she can still remember the ugly names her husband called her. Her baby was coming, she recalls, but she couldn't go back home to her mother's, for her stepfather called her worse names than her husband did.

THE UNGALLANT HUSBAND, Otto Malm, who blamed the murder of the watchman on his 19 year old wife. The young mother's answer was that all men are weak.
(TRIBUNE Photo.)

LOVED HER BABY

Kitty, it is very possible, was too busy "prowling joints" ever to belong to a mothers' club; and she phrased a colorful oath much more easily than she mouthed a sentiment about the "nobility of maternal sacrifice." But she did love the baby.

"Lord," she exclaimed in her jail cell one day, and of course part of it was rhetoric, "I could kill a woman who'd rather have a dog than a kid."

She loved the baby, "Tootsie," and worked for her, fought for her.

"I had to hurt my baby's leg onct," she told me, "gettin' her over a barbed wire fence to get her away from a man who stoled her to try to get me to marry him. I hurt her, but it was to get her away from a bad joint."

Once more a man crossed her path. This time, as she tells it, she asked Otto Malm to pose as her husband for half an hour and "smash the face of a dirty man down the street who's trying to steal my kid."

Malm, an ex-convict, played the part for half an hour, and the two went into partnership.

A KILLING

Which brings us to the night of Nov. 4, 1923, when Kitty and Malm and a man named Eric Noren drove to the Delson Knitting company, 3051 Lincoln avenue. They were there to "pull a job," but they were surprised by Edward Lehman, night watchman. There was shooting. Lehman was killed; Kitty was shot, by a stray bullet from Malm's gun, it is believed.

The wrong couple, brought in by the police, were indicted through the confession of the girl, Ethel Beck, who vaguely and dumbly offered no rebuttal when the police fastened the crime upon her and a man. But later Malm was arrested, and once more the men she knew played Kitty false. About the first, and surely the last thing, Malm said to the police was: "It was the shot from her gun that killed the watchman; she done it."

For a brief, restless, futile time Kitty Walter Baluk Malm had the satisfaction of besting several men. The police, dispatched by Malm's ungallant and, it seemed from later evidence, untrue shifting of the blame, to a house at 1531 North La Salle street, were refused admittance by a woman whom they didn't know and who knew they didn't know she was Kitty. One of the men went back to headquarters for instructions, leaving two others guarding the place.

KITTY GETS AWAY

Kitty slipped quietly out the back door, leaving her young sister there to receive the officers with their new orders and instructions. The coup caused the suspension of several policemen and enabled Kitty to get away to a boarding house in Indianapolis.

But this pasty-faced, hard talking, strangely emotional Austro-Hungarian girl who said, with many a violent expression, that she loved her baby, really did. She got lonesome for the child.

And one afternoon, perhaps a week after her disappearance, a stolidly built young woman in a near seal coat walked up to the desk sergeant at the Hudson avenue police station and said, casually enough:

"Do you want me? I'm Mrs. Malm. I wanted to see my baby."

They locked her up. They took a statement from her, in which she declared that she had been merely the lookout at the robbery, that she had had no gun that night, that her own husband had accidentally shot her, and that she didn't bear him any particular malice for having insisted that she did it.

It wasn't his fault so much as it was all men's weakness, she explained.

"They must'a made him do it," she said over and over. "When I seen him just now, I could see that, God, he looked so bad, it got me. Men, say, they're brave as the devil but they can't hold out the way a woman can. Now me, say, they coulda beat hell outta me and I wouldn't a-squealed. Say, listen, they could of built a fire under me and I'd never of squawked."

And I rather imagine she wouldn't. Not for a long time, anyway.

A CURIOUS MOTHER

Then they brought the baby to her. Crying, swearing, sobbing, kissing, yelling, she was a curious mother; fierce, sincere, inconsistent, earnest, impassioned, pathetic.

"There ain't nobody can be as good to her as me," she cried.

"May God help me to kill her if they ever try to take her away from me. And if I get out and the judge says I can't have her, I'll kill her first. There's only one person in this whole world I'd let take her and that's my mother. But I'd never want my mother to tell the baby who her mother was. Not a word."

Her face at this point sagged into lines of cruel desperation, and she worked her mouth in ugly wrinkles to keep from crying. It wasn't playacting. Then, just before the tears came, she looked over at the child.

"She'll be three years old the 29th of July. They're cute at that age, ain't they?"

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

The police matron warmed up a bottle of milk; the police sergeant sent out for some bread, and the baby feasted with her mother. Next day the youngster's grandmother came and took her away and Kitty went over to the county jail. Beneath her sturdy, stolid peasant figure was a whirligig of emotions, the authorities soon found out. There were scenes, terrible outbursts of temper and postscripts of weeping.

Once she tried to commit suicide by hanging herself with a bed sheet. Upon being revived she was savage in her rebukes of her rescuers. They called her the "Tiger Woman," and so she was, some of the time. Other times she was twice as "scare't," in spite of denials, as any of the more suave, beguiling ladies who had sat behind the bars and thought up naive phrases. Kitty had no nice phrases, no silken syllables.

The trial began before Judge Walter P. Steffen, on Feb. 18, 1924.

Kitty, none too stylish with her rather greasy black hair cut straight and square, sat near her lawyer, Attorney J. J. McCarthy, that opening day and saw her co-defendants desert her and leave her alone. "Blonde Kitty" and the man she had implicated in her foolish confession had long since been dismissed.

KITTY MALM AND HER BABY—The mother, called "The Tiger Woman" by jail officers, surrendered so she could see her child again. Kitty was given a life term after her husband insisted she was the one who killed a watchman during an attempted robbery.

KITTY LEFT ALONE

Earlier that day Malm, ever the same gallant, had pleaded guilty to the charge of murder, but placed the actual killing on some one else when he said, "There were three shots fired and I fired only one." Earlier, too, Eric Noren entered a technical plea of guilty, but swore that he had driven the car the night of the murder and had remained in it.

That left Kitty alone in the defendant's chair. She tried to buoy herself up with remarks such as this:

"Say, I have about as much chance of gettin' the rope as Malm has of gettin' angel wings when he croaks."

Or this:

"Any fool could tell it wasn't me. There was only one gun. And, suppose I had of had a gun, would I of shot myself? Huh? Say, that's a hot one."

And this:

"It's always ladies' day when it comes to shovin' some one up before the cops."

As the state qualified the jurors for the death penalty, Kitty, assuming a bravado that didn't fit in so well with her pallor, her ice cold hands, and the shaky way she reached for the glass of water, asked this question:

"Say, would anybody in the world hang a girl for bein' in the alley with a guy who pulls a gun and shoots? And she even gets a piece of lead in her own head."

LITTLE ONE ON HAND

The evidence did show that a bullet lodged in Kitty's head; that Malm pitched her, head first, into the car; that one doctor refused to dress the wound; that the second doctor did, and that she had an ugly and dangerous hurt for many days.

There was present in the courtroom, too, that first day of the trial, a tiny girl sucking a lollypop. In the midst of the judicial proceedings there was an unjudicial sound, and the plump little girl, well rounded out with leggins and a puffy blue coat, stumbled over to a bench in the front of the court. As she spied the back of Kitty's head and shoulders she stuttered out, around the lollypop, "There's mommie. I want to go to mommie," and started over.

Of course the bailiff intercepted the tiny figure and instructed the child's grandmother that it was against the law for "Tootsie" to communicate with her mother, on trial for murder, when the jury was present.

A SURPRISE WITNESS

The child in the blue coat kept her distance; the twelve men were selected; the witnesses took the stand. Through the days Kitty kept saying, "I ain't scare't." But one afternoon, it was the day after Washington's birthday, the state put on a surprise witness, a Blanche King, who had roomed in the Indianapolis boarding house. One day, Miss King declared, the landlord had escorted her to "the Chicago girl's room."

"Then what happened?" queried the prosecutor.

"She was combing her hair"—it is Miss King speaking of Kitty now—"and I saw a scar on her head and asked about it. She said, 'My husband shot me; we were doing a job at a sweater factory.'"

The prosecutor wanted to know about guns. Miss King was glad to tell him.

"Yes, sir, she had two guns; a 'Big Bertha' and a 'Little Betsy.' She had the big one strapped around her waist. When any one knocked at the door, she would take out the gun and run down the hallway."

ETHEL BECK was arrested with a man companion, and strangely confessed a murder in which neither was implicated. This was proven later, and she was freed.
(TRIBUNE Photo.)

Then, growing more gleeful the [illegible] she said she remembered, Miss [illegible] thought a moment, then almost [illegible] ed out a triumphant epilogue to [illegible] surprise testimony, "She used to [illegible] 'I hate coppers, and I'll kill any [illegible] who comes to take me.'"

FALLS IN FAINT

Miss King was through [illegible] Presently, too, the day's session [illegible] concluded. As she got up to [illegible] across the bridge from the Cr[illegible] court building to the county jail, Ki[illegible] grew whiter than ever. The next [illegible] ment she had sprawled in an [illegible] helpless flop on the floor of the [illegible] room. She lay there, insensible, [illegible] two minutes.

A few feet away, barred only [illegible] legal technicalities from coming [illegible] throw water on the girl's ashen [illegible] stood Kitty's mother, holding Ki[illegible] daughter. The child kept on [illegible] the inevitable lollypop.

After a bit the girl on the floor [illegible] revived into an incoherent, tremb[illegible] woman. Idlers in the courtroom [illegible] their way, speculating on her faint.

"Sure, it was real. Didn't you [illegible] her go? Besides, the jury had [illegible] out, so it wouldn't have done [illegible] good to fake one," some mused.

"She's thinking of her kid," [illegible] ventured.

"Naw, it's the rope she's think[illegible] of," another insisted.

Next day Kitty was sitting [illegible] straight and square. And the next [illegible] after that she took the stand to [illegible] her story. Otto Malm, she declared, ordered her to come with him to [illegible] lookout. Suddenly, from the [illegible] night, Lehman, the watchman, flashed a light on Malm. Malm fired and the man with the light fell.

SCREAMS AND RUNS

"I screamed and ran," said Kitty. "Then Otto fired at me. I felt a sting in the head and fell. Otto pulled me along the alley and shoved me into the car; then we went to a doctor and I got fixed up."

The jury was out an hour and two minutes. The twelve men took four ballots. The verdict was life imprisonment in the state penitentiary at Joliet.

When she heard it Kitty, the Tiger Woman, flew into a frenzy, waved her arms about and yelled, "Keep away. I don't want to see anybody." But the fury was quickly spent and for the second time during the trial Kitty fainted. And came to, only to faint again. And was revived and led back to her cell, where she again fainted.

Stepfather, boys in the factory, husband, more men, the gallant Malm, all the 12 men who sent her to the penitentiary for the rest of her natural life, while those other ladies of ugly crimes and less ugly faces and figures were given a smile and an acquittal.

If ever a 19 year old girl had reason to be a cynic about men, it seems to me that Kitty Malm—the Tiger Woman, they called her—has that right.

A House Warming in tha New Place

ONE night lass week tha B. and C. interrupts my after supper snooze with tha following grief. "Honey, don't you think, now that we're settled down we oughta have a house warming?" I politely informed her that I wood not ask that janitor again for more heat as tha last time I rapped on tha pipes he comes up an tells me those radiators aint Xelophones an' if I didn' quit playing them he wood make it so dam hot for me that I wouldn' appreciate hell when I got there.

About now I get told that her girl friends advised her not to marry a boob as you can't change them. For once in my life I fully agreed that I was a boob cause if I wasn't I'd still be single. She wants to know how come I was dumb enough not to know what a "house [illegible]rming" was, then I get a edjucational lecture entitled "Social [illegible]unkshuns."

SETTLE DOWN AND UP

The idea is that when you either start a new place or move into new quarters you are supposed to throw a party. Lots of times it's poor policy to argue but this time I know my onions and told her in plain Inglish that she's got her wires crossed cause that shindig has always been known as a "Graud Opening."

Also she gets informed by me that tha proper thing to do first, after settling down, is to settle up. Between the 2d and 3d round of the bout I said, "Wouldn' it be fine to have a lotta company an have the Phonograph Company guy walk in with an attachment." Her answer to that is so funny I made off that I was thirsty an beat it to tha kitchin so's I could laff. Whadda you think she pulls? She seys, "Well, if he does I will just tell him tha last attachment we bought don't work so good an we wasn't interested."

Women ain't fooling me much these days, I am hip to a lot of their ideas. The thing that is uppermost in her noodle is to get tha gang over so's she can show off our new furniture an incidentally rits them a bit. I suggested instead of having them come over we could save a lotta kale by having the guys we bought it from give us a cupple dozen catalogues and we could mark "X" on what we bought and mail them to tha girl friends. To this clever thought I got a very high-brow retort, in fact one might call it brilliant repartee; namely, "AIN'T CHU FUNNY."

I could of done better in a jewelry store.

VERDICT IN DUTCH

After talking till I was blue in the face against her plan I finally saw there was no use prolonging tha agony, but I get my way as to their not gonna arrive for 6 o'clock supper. Those sea lions are all through getting fat on my pay check. From now on my slogan is "Don't feed the animals."

A compromise verdict was reached and they will arrive at 8 o'clock and get a "Dutch Lunch" before they go home. For those of you what don't know what is a dutch lunch, it's a lotta assorted junk served cold an gets it's name on account your stomach is in dutch for two or three days after you eat it.

The night was set for Thursday and we decided what we was gonna feed 'em an how much jack was gonna be spent. In one way I was kinda glad they was coming cause I could get rid of my last batch wich turned out rotten. I have a hunch there is altogether too much water in our chlorine these days. Instead of turning out about 4 percent it was terrible per scent.

A DELIKATESSEN

My instructshuns was to pick up tha eats on the way home on acct. we're living in a new nayberhood I looked 3 or 4 delikatessens over an finally picked what looked like a reasonable one. After pricing a few articles I think I could of done better in a jewelry store. A piece of liver sausage that he wanted 42 cents for was about as big as what we kids got for nothing when we was sent after soup meat. Baked ham at 85 cents a pound must certainly show this bozo a terrific loss, but I suppose on acct. the sharp advance reported by the stock exchange on the clove market he is entitled to charge 85 and boost it higher without giving written notice. I'm very much surprised that some wise delikattessener don't start selling swiss cheese by tha inch instead of by tha pound and then slip you tha piece with the biggest holes. When I told him I wanted 10 cents worth of dill pickles he says, "Maybe you mean 10 cents worth of dill pickle," for a minute I thought he was gonna slice one on his rotary razor an give me a cupple thin slices for a dime. Before I got half of the items on tha list I was out of kale. If I'da had a cupple hundred dollars extra with me I might of been tempted to buy a can of caviar to eat after the company went home.

When I reach the house tha B. and C. instead of slipping me a little pleasant greeting of some kind, asks me what took me so long. Being in a very good frame of mind by this time I admitted that I was up at tha Vanderbilts having tea and they just wouldn' think of my leaving any earlier.

DUKE HAS ACCIDENT

All of a sudden we both started to sniff as there was a helova strange smell coming from somewhere, what happened was that the bucket of herring leaked all over my pants leg. My good suit was at the tailor's getting pressed and he was closed for the night. I found out where he lived and made him open up tha store. I had asked that damn cheese peddler if the paper bucket wouldn' leak an he wise-cracked me with, "I've been in tha business 40 yrs. and have still to find one that leaked," Tomorrow he will get a letter from a lawyer guy I know and if we can scare him into a settlement maybe tha party will show a profit. When I tole tha B. and C. what I was gonna do she pulls a funny crack somethin' about as how the lawyer should sue him for "Breaches of Herring juice," if that's her idea of a funny joke, maybe I'm wrong.

By tha time we do tha dishes it's 8 o'clock and tha food collectors start to arrive, on acct. most of 'em bring their kids it's no use tryin ta play cards so we just sit an talk, play tha home brew and tha radio. Of course they all see the new furniture and a lotta "How beautifuls," "How marvelous," "How stunning," are swung via the bunk route. Tha B. and C.'s face was lit up like State and Madison sts. and she pulls the ole stuff about as how it's not so expensive as we would like to get but it's practical and substantial. If she pulled that line once I herd it a dozen times. That gang coulda got a good laff if they knew it aint our stuff till March 1928 not counting maybe a few skips. When Mrs. Bolsum asked her what kind of a lamp it was she seys, "It's a French creation," how she figgers it I don't know as we bought it from an eyetallion. Now I'm wondering what breed our Swiss clock might be as this was bought from the firm of Murphy & Goldberg.

THA ENTERTAINMENT

Tha rest of tha evening was very enlightening, we had the extreme pleasure of listening to Mrs. Monroe [Tha Burton Holmes of Engelwood] tell us of her trip to Pikes Peak, this trip was took back to 1916 but to hear her tell it you would think she came back yesterday. I've heard tha damn story so often that if she ever goes again I will have every mule and guide bribed in tha way of a SHOVE OFF.

Mr. Gilbert gave a delightful discourse on insurance at the end of which his cards were passed among the guests. I once gave that boze my fire insurance and when the bill came in it looked to me like hold up insurance instead of fire.

A rare treat in tha way of music was Miss. Chalmers' piano selection entitled "Give me a rose," if she hadn't quit after tha 1st verse she woulda got a wreath of them which she would never have smelled. This chromo has got nerve enough to tell us she couldn' do justice to tha piece on acct. our piano is all out of tune.

One of Charley King's kids gave a imitation of Charley Chaplin and it was so natcheral youda sworn it was either Tom Mix or Harold Lloyd. Tha rest of tha kids were very well behaved, outside of throwing toys at tha chandeleers an pulling our hound's tail, you wouldn' want to see more perfect youngsters.

THA BIG STAMPEDE

When lunch was announced the people what live under us must of thought there was a stampede of horses and I suppose I'm gonna get me a lodda dirty looks from now on. What got me sore was these starving Armenians makin themselves 3 layer sandwiches, one bird was eating olives two at a time during tha course of his building programme. Being tha host I couldn' very well say ennything, but I woulda liked to have asked him to use a little bread with his butter. Right here I wanta offer a challenge to any "Dunker Club" in tha country. I will even bet that this organization can give a three dunk handicap to any other team and beat 'em in 5 minutes of play.

Right after tha eats they all pulled tha ole gag as how it wasn't polite to go home right after lunch but on acct. tha childrun, they had better. I'm afraid if they hadn't, somebody in the block would have called the wagon. After drying eight thousand three hundred and fifty-two dishes I was too weak to tell tha B. and C. what I had on my mind and went to bed.

The next morning on tha way to work I stood in front of a "JOIN THE NAVY" sign for ten minutes, an I think I will drop in at lunch time and sign up.

Why in hell do they call a guy what marrys you a justice of tha peace?

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

I think I will sign up.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

BY Snowshoe Al

Al Knows His Shakespeare.

YESTERDAY I didn't have nothing to do, so I goes down town an' trots into the public library. I picked up a book wich admitted on the cover that it contained all uv Bill Shakespeare's Broadway Failures, so I opened it an' read one uv William's heavy dramas, after wich I put the book back on the shelf because I hadda go home for supper.

Bill's stuff is easy for me, an' I'm going back in a day er two an' read another uv his 4 act spasms. Maybe the reader finds Shakespeare a trifle difficult. If so, lemme slip yew the plain dirt on:

HAMLET

Hamlet wuz King uv Denmark, an' bizness wuz good! He owned the controlling stock in The Amalgamated Snuff Corporation, an' his dividend checks enabled him to gallop around an' buy up all the corner lots within a ten mile radius uv the castle.

One morning the King failed to answer roll call, so a squad frum Police Headquarters rushed up to his boudoir an' discovered that his school girl complexion had turned to an unhealthy blue color. This, together with the fact that he wuzn't snoring, indicated that he wuz no longer a registered voter, so they buried him. The coroner's jury decided that His Highness had either soaked up too much bum gin er had smoked a nickle cigar.

The Queen wuz a fast working mama! She wuz as full uv sentiment as a dead horse, so before they had finished shoveling dirt on to her late husband's smile, this old gal wuz pulling necking parties with her brother-in-law. This caused the neighbors across the street to do a lot uv blabbing, an' the landlord warned Her Highness several times that if he found any more empty gin bottles on the frunt porch uv the castle he wood either break her lease er break her jaw.

About this time Claudius, the late King's brother, did sumthing wich got the queen peeved—he told her age—so she decided to git even with him. There's 2 ways a woman kin git even with a hombre; she kin shoot him er she kin marry him. So she married him, proving that she figured death wuz too good for him.

ENTER HAM JR.

Enter Hamlet Jr., Prince uv Denmark, Knight uv the Garter, Knight uv the Golden Fleece, Silent Night, Last Night, Tomorrow Night, an' Saturday until One P. M.!! This boy had a string of titles longer than Sunday afternoon in Philadelphia. He wuz a modest, bashful cuss—in fact, he had refused to write a testimonal for yeast. Also he had refused to go to college because he wuzn't strong enuff to be an ice man in the summer time. Anyhow he looked like hell in a raccoon coat. Also he didn't want nothing to do with the gals—especially after a few uv them had borrowed carfare off him. After he had agreed to lend them carfare home, he always discovered that they lived in Australia. Hamlet's idea uv a riotous evening wuz to go to bed an' leeve the radio turned on all night.

He didn't like the idea uv his mama hooking up with his uncle so soon after papa's last chapter. He thought she shood have waited at least until the flowers on the grave had started to wilt. On the uther hand, he wuz kinda peeved on account he got cheated out uv being King; due to his mother's second marriage. Yup, he didn't like the idea uv still being a minor face card. But there wuz nothing he kood do, so that's wot he did.

OMELET AND RIVULET

Among the soldiers in the castle wuz 2 very dear friends uv Hamlet's, named Omelet an' Rivulet. Omelet wuz more or less uv an egg, an' Rivulet was all wet, but anyhow they meant well. One day Omelet an' Rivulet kums up to Hamlet an' sez:

"Boy Friend, last night we wuz on guard up on the roof uv this castle, an' jist as the clock struck twelve we sure saw a sight for granulated eye-lids! A weird looking creature, wearing gray armor, galloped around on top the battlements, an' he didn't make a sound! We thought at first that it wuz sum bozo advertising a well known brand uv rubber heels, but we wuz wrong! We know dam well it wuzn't Lon Chaney. Therefore we is puzzled. Wot d'yuh make uv it, huh? Wot's the answer?"

"Here's the answer: buy me a pint uv that stuff!" sez Hamlet, slipping Rivulet 2 bucks.

A FAMILIAR GHOST

Rivulet bubbled over with protests to the effect that they wuzn't under the influence of hair tonic, so Hamlet agreed to go up on the castle walls with 'em that night to take a slant at this gink frum the land uv Static. Theez 3 buzzards wuz sitting on the roof that evening playing pinochle with a deck wich had the face cards missing, wen all uv a sudden the clock in the tower uv a nearby Chinese laundry fell to the sidewalk an' struck twelve, one uv which wuz a policeman.

Immediately a strange form in gray armor appeared on the battlements. Hamlet thought the ghost looked kinda familiar, in fact it looked a whole lot like his old man, so he walks up to it an' sez, in Danish:

"Bon joor, Sefior Papa!"

"Wee Gates, kiddo!" replied the ghost in the same language.

"Wot's the idea, Pop?" sez Hamlet. "We buried yew once. Why don't yew go an' stay put?"

"For the simple reason," sez the ghost, "that I didn't like the way I wuz hurried thru Death's Portal. We must all walk thru it sum day but, dammit, I was pushed."

"Slip me the dirt," sez Hamlet, "er, as Gene Tunney wood say, 'be more explicit—kindly elucidate'."

A VILE TRICK

"Alas, my boy," sighs the ghost, "it wuz none uther than my own brother Claudius who smacked me for the count uv ten, an' it happened thus: I had a quart bottle uv Haig & Haig, an' the label on the bottle stated that the contents wuz old enuff to vote. My brother Claudius, desiring to be rid uv me in order that he mite steal the throne, opened the bottle, threw away the contents an' substituted a vile, horrible poison called ginger ale. This fluid is so deadly that one glass uv it, if poured into a barrel uv red ink, wood make the entire mess unpalatable! Needless to say, the first time I allowed a jolt uv this Essence uv Liquid Boxing Gloves to slide past my tonsils I wuz knocked for a whole row uv Mongolian temple bells!"

"Kin this be true?" sez Ham Jr., elevating both eyebrows an' opening his mouth, thereby registering Incredulity.

"Nothin' different," sez the ghost; "therefore, my boy, I ask that yew avenge this bump-off they slipped yer papa! Git ahold uv thy uncle Claudius an' muss him up."

"Have no fear, old timer," sez Hamlet, "yew shall be avenged! I will git Claudius!"

"When?" thunders the ghost.

"Right near the end uv the 4th act!" howls Hamlet.

"Atta baby!" sez the ghost; "flop him into the foot-lights! It otta bring down the house! An now I must go. Auf Wiedersehen!"

"Adios," sez Hamlet, "crawl back into yer subway an' rest in peace!"

ALAS, POOR YORICK!

"Lissen," calls the ghost jist before he disappeared, "in order that nobody will suspect the dirty ideas yew have in yer mind why don't yew try to act haff-witted? It ought not to be hard for yew—everybody always said yew took after yer mother."

So Hamlet started acting as though he had rats in his garret, wich wuz very annoying to his mother, so she sent for him one day. The King heard her send for him so he told a bimbo named Yorick to find out wot the conversation wuz about. Yorick hid behind a curtain in the Queen's apartment.

"Lissen, Hamlet," sez the Queen, as Ham entered her apartment, "for several days yew have bin acting as though yew wuz an acorn. Are yew offering yer own conception uv a comic valentine? I'll put yew in a Nut College if yew don't stop acting so goofy! Wot's the idea uv acting like yew had sent yer brain on a 6 munths vacation?"

"Yew shood talk!" sez Hamlet, losing his temper; "yew're the goofy party. Don't yew know that yer new husband took the heavy-weight championship away frum papa on a foul?"

Jist then the curtain in the room did a little un-natural shaking, an' Ham noticed it. He also noticed that there wuzn't any breeze, so he concluded that sum bozo wuz trying to soak up a little scandal. Therefore he took his sword an' shoved it thru the curtain in an endeavor to vaccinate the party uv the third part. The operation wuz a great success, in fact, the gink behind the curtain did a nose-dive to the floor an' ruined the carpet.

"It wood seem," sez the Queen, yawning, "that yew have bumped off Yorick."

"Alas, poor Yorrick!" sez Hamlet, also yawning; "I never heard uv him!"

ENTIRE CAST EXPIRES

In the meantime the King wuz downtown in a department store looking at the latest styles in caskets. He found one wot struck his fancy an' he decided that it wood make a swell kitchette apartment for his stepson, so he went home, poisoned a bowl uv drinking water, dipped a sword into poison, sharpened an axe, loaded a sawed-off shotgun, an' mixed dynamite with the mashed potatoes. He figured he'd git this bird one way er another. Then he sent for Hamlet an' the Queen.

As Ham an' his mama entered the King's room, hell started popping! Sum buzzard tickled Ham in the ribs with the poisoned sword. Hamlet grabbed the sword an' tickled the uther baby right back with it. The Queen picked up the bowl uv poisoned water an' guzzled it. Hamlet grabs the sawed-off shotgun an' chases the King around the room so fast it looks like a game uv poker with the face cards wild. Jist then the shotgun goes off an' makes the King look like a platter uv hash.

"I didn't know it wuz loaded!" sobe Ham. Whereupon the entire cast lays down on the floor an' expires. This gink Shakespeare kood slaughter a whole stagefull uv people 30 seconds before they rang down the final curtain.

THE VICTIM.

With tears in his eyes the little boy ran up to a policeman.

"Would you come and lock a bad man up, please?" he asked between his sobs.

"What's he been doing?" said the other kindly.

"O," wailed the small boy, "he's broken my hoop with his rotten old bicycle."

The man in blue frowned. He had a boy of his own.

"You can easily catch him," insisted the little chap, plucking at the policeman's sleeve. "They carried him into that drug store."—Answers, London.

REALISTIC TEETH.

WINE BOOTLEGGERS

By Edward Burns.

Millions in Graft, But Game Has Died

WINE, of course, has been used for sacramental purposes since Old Testament days, and while there are many scholars who claim that not all potions called wine in Holy Writ were wine as we have known it in our generation, there is much evidence that the pious, ages ago, used port and other red wines in their religious celebrations.

It remained for that great modern American, Volstead, to bring out the full possibilities of wine as a ritualistic necessity.

After all the saloons had been ostensibly closed, at the start of the prohibition era, certain sanctimonious gentlemen speedily appraised the great field of piety, and figured up just what could be realized on the fact that Mr. Volstead had expressly excluded sacramental wines from his lists of tabooed concoctions.

A few cautious inquiries revealed that not only would it be possible to withdraw still wines such as port, sherry, angelica, and muscatel, but that an ecclesiastical innovation was possible in that sparkling wines such as champagne and burgundy could be used in the rites if proper arrangements were made.

UNANIMOUS FOR GIN

It was at about this time that one of the many early prohibition jokes came out—that one about the colored church committee that voted upon what the congregation should use for sacramental purposes and were unanimous for gin.

According to government statistics, Chicago reached a veritable frenzy of religious ardor during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923. In that period 1,138,507 gallons of still and sparkling wines were purchased in this city by persons who technically were forced to claim they needed the stuff in their drive to keep Satan behind them.

In the succeeding twelve months, due probably to the fact that the town was flooded during the period with good Scotch, this brand of piety dropped off to a mere 718,308 gallons of still wines, the sparkling rites having been ruled out by treasury department regulations.

While it may be sacrilegious to mention it, the merchandising of this great aid to spiritual uplift offers some illuminating statistics.

In the two years mentioned above 1,856,815 gallons of wine were released under what purported to be legal circumstances.

Port, because it requires the best grade of grapes for body and also for blending to give rich color, is the most expensive to produce (forgetting, for purposes of being conservative, the sparkling wines). Sherry is less expensive to make than port, and then comes muscatel and angelica.

MORE SPIRITUAL IN N. Y.

But the average cost of production, ranging from port at 75 cents a gallon down to angelica at 45 cents, is about 60 cents a gallon.

So it is apparent that it cost to produce the wine consumed in Chicago in these two years approximately $1,114,086.

Wine distributors in Chicago bought the wine at prices ranging from $2 to $3.25 a gallon laid down in Chicago, and were able to sell it at an average price of $6.50 a gallon, regardless of whether it was port, sherry, etc.

On this basis wine which cost $1,114,089 to produce was, in two years, sold for sacramental purposes in Chicago for $12,069,297, or at a gross profit of $10,955,208.

In the same period New York consumed about 50 per cent more wine than Chicago, so that in the first and second prohibition cities of the world paid approximately $30,000,000 for $2,750,000 worth of wine supposed to be legal.

During these times the wine rarely was cut or tampered with by distributers. The wine ran 21 per cent and was, for the most part, produced in the fine, big, clean wineries of California. A celebrant who was a good strong bourbon drinker could get about the same action on a water glass full of the wine as he could on a two ounce shot of liquor, and have the added satisfaction of believing himself well within the law.

CHEAPER THAN BOOZE

Sales in saloons came at 25 cents for a pony of good port, as compared to 75 cents for a dose of questionable red booze.

Although the Volstead act provided for withdrawals by various Christian denominations, the Jews were given the privilege of the large withdrawals. But the unusual feature of the whole thing was that a sincerely pious orthodox Jew wouldn't touch the socalled legalized sacramental wine, for the simple reason that it wasn't kosher, in that the stuff was produced and handled by persons of other faiths. At the wineries rabbis were employed to give the stuff the appearance of being kosher, but it was impossible to fool many good Jews with this routine. Most devout Jews make their own wine.

One friend of mine, who was a distributor, told me that on his list of actual customers there were only two Jews, and that both of them went to synagogue only on Yom Kuppur, and that even on that day they were so unorthodox as to ride to services just because it was raining. Men of that sort don't care whether their wine is kosher or not, my friend explained.

The wine was distributed through an illicit conspiracy for which twenty-five persons now are awaiting sentence in federal conspiracy. One of these is a former prohibition director. Another former director and a dry state senator recently were acquitted by a federal jury when the government prosecutors were unable to convince it that the pair were a part of the conspiracy.

DEAD MEN ON LISTS

Witnesses at the trial, who previously had confessed their own guilt, including two prohibition agents and a coterie of graft collectors, told how wine distributors had been forced to pay $300 and $400 graft for each 2,000 gallons of wine withdrawn under government permits.

Under the law the wine had to be taken out by an authorized distributor representing a religious congregation. It soon developed, at the outset of the scheme, that there weren't enough bona fide congregations to go around, so the wine wholesalers conceived the brilliant idea of selling fake congregation lists to prospective distributors.

In 1923, when the sacramental wine racket was at its height, there were in Chicago 260 distributors representing nonexistent congregations. Later, when these congregation lists were checked up, they were found to carry the name of nearly every Jew who had died in Chicago in thirty years. All were credited on the records with being current users of large quantities of wine for sacramental purposes.

The whole plot was, of course, thoroughly organized, with "a big three" of wholesalers in command of the situation. If a distributor got behind in his graft dues, it was discovered promptly that he was a ruthless law violator, and he could obtain no more withdrawal permits. The same technique applied to the distributor who could not resist the temptation to do a little shopping for some of his wine. He must pay the trust price, or his permit was a mere scrap of paper.

Strangely enough, there was scarcely any violence connected with the wine racket, except in clashes with hijackers who intercepted the stuff in transit. The gunman-salesman technique so largely in use in beer and whisky merchandising never was a part of the wine conspiracy.

But it was too good to last. The law relative to wine withdrawals has not been changed, but the government policy has been. Less than 10,000 gallons of sacramental wine has been withdrawn in Chicago in the last two years.

I was in a winery in California a year ago in which 500,000 gallons of wonderfully made wine was ageing in the vats. The owners of the establishment were reputable business men and had no idea of bootlegging the wine tied up by the change of policy on withdrawals.

HOME MADE WINES

There is no good wine in Chicago right now, and the wine in one vat room I visited would be if laid down in Chicago this week in the hands of bootleggers, snapped up by the retail trade at about $6,000,000, or double the price of sacramental racket days.

But there it is, getting better each hour—while the owners patiently wait for the millennium when light wines and beer return.

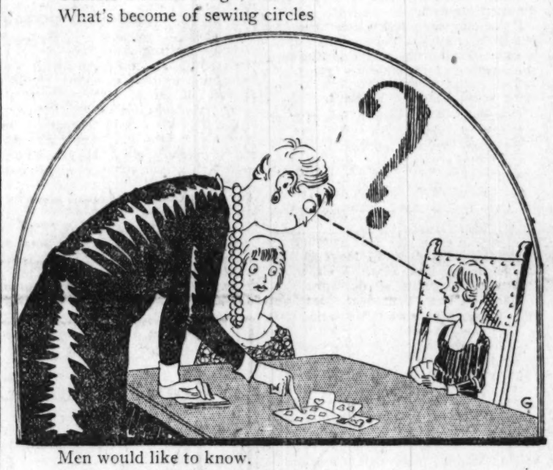
BRIDGE

By W. M. Schwimmer.

Ladies! Ladies! Join the happy throng,
Stop your teas, quit your golf, disregard mah jong.
If your hen-pecked hubby asks for dinner
When he's home,
Bounce him on the cranium,
He's dippy in the dome.
Drop your work, drop your child,
Here's a way to be beguiled,
Ev'ry femme is going wild
Over bridge.

Wimmin! Wimmin! No more cooking now,
London bridge, auction bridge, that's the cat's meow.
Well-bred janes with lots of crust
Gamble with the dough,
What's become of sewing circles



Men would like to know.
Ladies, it's a sad disgrace,
Setting such a dizzy pace,
Get parcheesi back in place
Of bridge.

Lotto? Bunko? Dearie, they are through,
Rhummy, whist, casino—now are all taboo.
Bridge is quite the simplest
And most peaceful game you've tried,
If you trump you partner's ace
Prepare for suicide.
Really it's a sorry sight,
Watching females half the night
Going cuckoo with delight
Over bridge.
Yes, mam!
Dumbbell dames are nutty over bridge!

Mussolini's Wife Is a Home Woman.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME.—Every leading American who visits Rome exerts all possible influence to gain entrance to Benito Mussolini's presence. Many succeed, and they leave Chigi palace with impressions that often find their way into the American press. However, it remained for an eastern woman to become curious about Mrs. Mussolini, or Donna Rachele Guidi Mussolini, as she is known here. She expected to find a leader of the feminist movement, an active, modern woman of our American club executive type, and her surprises she set down as follows:

The wife of Il Duce accords completely with her husband's belief that the place of the Fascist woman is with her children, which she holds is her mission in life. Her attitude has had a great deal to do with breaking up the last remnants of the woman suffrage movement in Italy, where the female vote now is so infrequent as to be quite ineffectual.

Donna Mussolini, like her husband, formerly taught school, and shared the hardships of his early life. She modestly adapted herself to his new position and, realizing that Sig. Mussolini could not devote as much time to his family as other fathers, she is spending all her time educating Edda, 16; Vittorio, 10, and Bruno, 7. She has kept herself and the children out of official and social life. Each evening father calls from his office to their modest home in the country, and every so often takes a flying trip to see his family. The premier's leadership, like the well known charity, appears to begin at home, and everybody is happy.

"Phone Fright" Troubles Tourists

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Parting words at the ship's gang plank before the trans-Atlantic liners sail from New York for Europe now are, "Call me up when you get to London," but many Americans who attempt to carry out this request are troubled by "phone fright." It seems that the idea of talking over the ocean affects the party the first time the service is used, and he usually stutters a few inane hellos and realizes his $75 is spent. Those who have tried it liken the effect to that of the stage fright one would experience upon facing a large audience for the first time.

A Sunday Tribune Advertisement Brought Largest Monday and Tuesday Sales in History of This Business!

EDGAR A. STEVENS has been in business a little more than three years. . . . Starting with one shop he now has four, one in each section of the city. . . . The Chicago Tribune is proud to have been an important factor in building Edgar A. Stevens' business. . . . For the Stevens shops have been almost exclusive Tribune advertisers since the opening of the first shop. The following letter testifies to results from one particular Tribune advertisement:

EDGAR A. STEVENS, INC.
SILK SHOP
19 EAST MADISON STREET
CHICAGO

March 23, 1927.

Mr. William E. Donahue,
Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Ill.

My dear Sir:

On Sunday, March 20th, in the North Side Metropolitan Section of the Tribune we advertised a special silk sale in our Evanston Shop. This was the only advertisement of this sale.

The result was the largest volume of sales we have ever enjoyed on any Monday and Tuesday in Evanston.

Yours truly,

Edgar A Stevens.

The advertisement referred to appeared in The Sunday Tribune North Side Metropolitan Section. . . . Outlying stores now have the advantage of Metropolitan circulation, paying only for that part of Sunday Tribune circulation from which they draw their customers.

SAM 'N' HENRY

The Boys Face a Mean Judge

By Correll & Gosden

[Sam and Henry were arrested for making a left turn contrary to traffic regulations and were given a ticket and told to report at Speeders' court. There is a line waiting to go before the judges as Sam and Henry enter the room.]

SAM—Whut are we gonna do now, Henry?

Henry (pointing to a policeman standing near)—Ask dat policeman standin' dere.

Sam—Dat's 'bout de only thing to do, I guess.

Henry—Take off yo' hat now an' act like yo' got some sense, 'cause yo' might as well be in jail as be in dis buildin'.

Sam—Well, I guess I'll ask him. (To policeman.) Say, mistah, a policeman gimme dis ticket up on State street yest'day an' tol' me to come down heah. Whut mus' I do wid it?

Policeman (in very gruff voice)—Get in that line over there!

Sam (scared)—Yessah, mistah, yessah—thank yo'. (Goes back and gets in line near Henry.) (To Henry.) Did you heah what he say?

Henry—Whut did de man tell yo'?

Sam—He tol' me to git back in dis line heah.

Henry—Well, 'tain't no ahgument 'bout it. Go on, git in de line.

Sam (as he gets in line)—Come on, git in heah wid me, Henry.

Henry—Whut I wanna git in dere wid yo' fo'? Ain't none o' my biz'ness.

Sam—Well, Henry, stick wid me heah. Heah whut de man say, anyway. I ain't got but fo'teen dollahs, an' I don' know whu de man's li'ble to fine me.

Henry—Whut evah he fines yo'—dat's yo' biz'ness—'tain't none o' mine.

Henry, say somepin'!

Sam—Come on—git in dis line anyway, Henry.

Henry (getting in line with Sam)—A' right, I'll git in de line wid yo', but I ain't even gonna be a witness.

Sam—Do yo' reckon de judge gonna let me go?

Henry—De judge gonna let yo' go to jail if yo' don' pay de fine, I know dat.

Sam—I wondah if all dese heah men in dis line done been 'rested fo' de same thing?

Henry—Don' worry 'bout nobody else. You'se de one yo' gotta worry 'bout—jus' worry 'bout yo'self.

Sam (as the line moves on)—It certainly don' take long to try de cases heah, do it? We'se movin' right 'long.

Henry—You'se lucky dat yo' evah got dat car back to de man.

Sam—If he hadn't come aftah it I'd nevah got it dere. Dat policeman done tol' me dat yo' couldn't make no lef'-han' turns in de Loop.

Henry—Yo' don' even know where de Loop is, do yo'?

Sam—Dat's de biz'ness part, ain't it? I wondah why dey calls it de Loop.

Henry—Dat don' make no diff'rence why dey call it de Loop—de thing you wanna do now is to git out o' dis mess dat's you'se in.

Sam—Well, whut is I gonna tell de judge now, Henry, when I git up dere? 'Spose de judge ask me is I guilty or not guilty—whut I goin' tell him?

HENRY OFFERS AID

Henry—Now I tell yo' whut I'll do. I goin' stand up in front o' de judge wid yo'——

Sam (interrupting)—Yeh, Henry—dat's right—you come up dere wid me, I want yo' to tell me whut to do.

Henry—Well, I tell yo' whut I'll do den. When you goes up in front o' de judge I'll walk up dere wid yo' an' I'll stan' right dere behin' yo' an' I'll listen to whut's goin' on, an' if I see you got a openin' dere I'll whisper to yo' whut to say.

Sam (delighted)—Dat's a good idea, Henry. You gonna tell me whut to say, huh?

Henry—Dat's it. We is li'ble to ketch de judge off his guard an' dat's when yo' wanna git in if yo' kin.

Sam—Henry, I ain't nevah seen no one man wid so much sense as you got.

Henry—Now, den, I gotta watch dis thing mighty close now, an' in case I git yo' out o' dis mess I'll let yo' buy my dinner, 'cause yo' know we done laid off today.

Sam—Dat's a' right, Henry. Yo' git rid o' dis heah mess an' I'll buy yo' dinnah an' suppah. Listen, Henry, yo' know we gotta lay off anothah day an' go out to de stockyards an' git dat job—dat's whut we gotta do.

Henry—Yeah, an' we gotta do it nex' week, too. We gotta git a job nearer home dan where we is now.

Sam—I tell yo' whut let's do, Henry. Let's go out to de stockyards Tuesday. Wanna do dat?

Henry—If we kin git one o' de brothers down at de lodge to take us out dere in his car dat's de thing we wanna do.

Sam—Yeah, one o' de brothers o' de Jewels o' de Crown. One o' de officers done promised to drive us out dere some time. I'd like to see de place, anyway. I done heard 'bout de stockyards evah since I was a little boy. I wonder how dey kill de cows out dere?

Henry (in his egotistical manner)—Don' be so ig'nant—dey chlorofo'ms dem.

Sam—Whut yo' mean, dey chlorofo'ms dem, Henry?

Henry (seeing the line moving toward the judge's stand)—Move up dere. Move up in line dere. We's gittin' closer to de judge all de time.

Sam—Tell me 'bout dem chlorofo'min' de cows—dat's whut I wanna know.

Henry—Dey chlorofo'ms de cows jus' like dey chlorofo'ms anything else—de firs' thing to do is to git a bull fighter——

Sam (interrupting)—I done seen pitchahs of de bull fighter. He carries a red table cloth on his arm, don' he?

Henry—Dat's it. He's got a bottle o' chlorofo'm under dat red thing.

Sam—Well, tell me how dey do it, Henry.

Henry—Well, dis man gits de cow cornered, an' when de cow is in de corner he throws dis red thing ovah his head. Den de cow can't see. Dat's whut it means when yo' heah people say dey got red in dey're eyes.

Sam—Dat red makes de cow mad, too, don't it?

MEAN LOOKING JUDGE

Henry—Yeah, whenevah you blindfol' a cow dat makes him mad. [As the line moves on]: Move up dere in line—it won't be long now.

Sam (moving along)—Dat's right. Go ahead, Henry, finish tellin' me 'bout dis cow.

Henry—Den when de cow is blindfolded dey have a lot o' men to run up behin' him an' throw him down. Den dey tie his han's an' feets——

Sam—What do dey do den?

Henry—Den de bull fighter pours de chlorofo'm up de cow's nose an' while he's unconscious dey cut him up.

Sam—Den when de cow wakes up he don' know whut happened, do he?

Henry—Dat's right. (Seeing the line moving along again)—Move up in line dere now. Dese people is certainly goin' fas'.

Sam (nearing the judge's stand)—Henry, look at de judge. Dis is de firs' time we been able to see him. Dat's a mean lookin' judge.

Henry—Dey all mean lookin'.

Sam—I thought we was gonna see de same judge we saw befo' when we was 'rested fo' shootin' craps. I didn't know dey had two judges.

Henry—Dis place is full o' judges. Dey got mo' judges dan dey got policemen.

Sam—I heard some men talkin' once 'bout 'pealin' de case to a higher cou't—whut floor is dat cou't on?

Henry—Dis cou't's plen'y high 'nuf fo' yo'.

Sam—Henry, I know a man dat was 'rested once down in Bummin'ham an' he got hisself a lawyer. Do yo' reckon I need a lawyer?

Henry—You gonna git me mad in a minute. A lawyer can't do no mo' fo' yo' dan I kin do. Move up dere in line. Why don't yo' brush yo' clothes off befo' yo' come up heah dis mornin'. You look like a ash can.

Sam—I didn't have no brush. Listen, Henry. Tell me once mo' whut yo' goin' do 'bout dis thing when we git up dere in front o' de judge.

Henry—Looh heah—dere's a man takin' up tickets heah—git out yo' ticket.

Sam—Heah 'tis, right heah in my han'.

Man (collecting tickets)—Give me your ticket.

Sam—Yessah, mistah—heah 'tis.

Man collecting tickets (to Henry)—Have you got a ticket?

Henry—No sah, mistah, I'se jus' wid Sam dere.

Sam—Ev'rybody look like dey'se mad 'round heah dis mornin', don' dey?

HENRY HELPS LOTS!

Henry—Dey'se gettin' ready to make de charge 'gainst yo' now. Move up dere in line. It ain't but a couple mo' men ahead o' yo' now.

Sam—(getting nervous)—Henry, I wish you'd 'splain to me again whut yo' gonna do now when we git up in front o' de judge.

Henry—Now, heah's whut I goin' do. I goin' walk up dere in front o' him wid yo', an' when de judge staht askin' yo' questions I goin' tell you whut to say. If I see de judge is off his guard I goin' tell yo' whut to say dat will git de judge e'cited, but I goin' do it on one condition.

Sam—Whut's dat, Henry?

Henry—Dat if I tell yo' to say one thing yo' goin' say it an' ain't goin' say nothin' else. I'se li'ble to tell yo to say, "Yo honor, yo' is mistaken,"

Den de bull fighter pours de chlorofo'm on de cow's nose.

an' dat's what yo wanna say if I tell yo' to.

Sam—Dat's a'right, Henry. I'll do jus' whut yo' say to.

Henry—Now git ready to go up dere.

Sam (getting excited)—Now don' fo'git, Henry, to stan' right behin' me an' whisper in my ear whut yo' want me to say.

Henry—Yo' wanna have yo' ears open now when I talk, 'cause I can't talk but so loud in de cou't room heah. Some o' dese judges is almos' as slick as I is.

Sam (as man starts toward him to take him before the judge)—Heah dey come—dey's gettin' ready fo' us now.

Court Officer (to Sam)—Is your name Sam Smith?

Sam—Yessah, mistah.

Court Officer—You're next. Come on in front of the judge.

Sam—Come on, Henry, go wid me. (To court officer) Dis heah boy is my witness, mistah.

Court Officer—All right, both of you, come on along.

Sam—Come on, Henry. Stick wid me heah.

Court Officer (to judge)—Your honor, Sam Smith's charged with reckless driving, violating traffic regulations, making a left turn in the Loop, and deliberately blocking traffic. Charges preferred by Officer Walsh.

Judge (in stern voice)—You have heard the charges preferred against you by Officer Walsh. Are you guilty or not guilty?

Sam—Awa—awa—— (to Henry in whisper) Henry, say somepin'.

Judge (impatient)—GUILTY OR NOT GUILTY?

Sam (hardly able to talk in whisper)—Whut mus' I say, Henry? Whut mus' I say?

Judge—Ten dollars and costs!

Henry—Don' argue wid de gent'man—don't argue wid de gent'man.

LITTLE SISTER WINS.

The youth was just home from school, and, wishing to show his little sister what a lot he knew, pointed to a star and said:

"Do you see that bright little dot? It's bigger than the whole world."

"No, it isn't," declared his sister.

"Yes, it is," said the youth, beaming with pride at his knowledge.

"Then why doesn't it keep the rain off?" was the triumphant rejoinder.—London Tit-Bits.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

By Sara Moore

TRY AND DO IT.

The ad men speak with a mighty shout
To make us "conscious" of sauerkraut;
They count and list little calories
In macaroni or milk or cheese;
They say tomatoes and tangerines
Are full of the jiggers called vitamines,
And some insist we are underfed
Without bananas and whole wheat bread.
Huh!
Wanted, an advertising man
To write out a food promotion plan.
One needs professional help to sell
Milk or spinach to Arabel.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

STANDARDIZED.

One looks ahead. The die is cast,
This way it has to be—
A matinee, a bridge, some golf,
A dinner, dance, and tea.

The things girls do are so alike
We should be thankful that
Our friends can still distinguish us
By gown—or shoes—or hat.

THE GIRL HE LEFT BEHIND HIM.

I took my share of the sleet and mud;
Waded in gauze and drugs and blood;
I'd sneak him a light and a cigaret
(Were I not there then he'd be there yet).
He's back in Paris, my soldier fair—
And here I sit in the beaucoup air.

I carried his heavy bedside tray
Day after drizzling, murky day;
I eased up his bandage, wiped his nose,
And sat on his head when his fever rose;
Now off to Paris the Legions wind——
And I am the girl that he leaves behind.

Well, let him go play on his jamboree,
Leaving the world, of course, to me.
All by himself! Do you get my tone?
Next war—he can go off and fight alone!

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Tribune.

NAVY blue or one of the tan shades in crêpe satin will make an attractive dress, using pattern No. 709 for its development. The skirt is cut in two parts, and while there is some fullness at the top, it is not too full and gores out towards the bottom, getting the necessary width there without being too full at the opposite end.

The waist opens in the center front, and as you can easily see, it is cut in a deep square opening, this being filled in by an attached vest. The fullness on the shoulders on the front is followed by fullness at the underarm seams on the front, the front being slashed in there, the lower edges gathered and sewed to the upper slashed edges.

There is a narrow belt of the dress material, and the sleeves are in one piece, with the lower edges gathered into a six inch cuff. These deep cuffs could be made of the reverse side of the satin, as could the vest also, using a binding or piping of the same side of the satin to finish the neck.

Cut the vest double, having a fold of the material across the top and seam it together down the sides. Where it sets into the right side of the front, it should be tacked in place under the binding or facing. Then at three-quarter inch intervals set small sized snaps down the left edge, fastening it to the dress. Below the vest the waist buttons together, a much more agreeable way of getting into and out of a dress than slipping it on over the head.

Where waist and skirt join there could be a wrong side seam, overcasting both edges together, laying up towards the waist and then stitching twice from the outside, once close to the seam, and the second row one quarter inch above.

Pattern No. 710 is for a long waisted dress having a short circular skirt. A prettily shaped collar finishes the neck and the slashed opening in the front is finished with a binding. The full length one piece sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands.

Why not make this a "composé" dress—only be careful that the two or three shades of the same color blend perfectly. The shops show so many shades in all the colors that it should be easy choosing. Bind the neck opening and bottom of the dress with a shade contrasting with the dress and make the collar and wrist bands of a third shade. Cut the binding strips on a true bias and measure accurately, making them one and a half or one and three-quarters of an inch wide. Then run the binding on by hand and before turning in the opposite edge to hem down baste the binding close to the seam on the right side so it will stay in place when you make the turning. Of course the skirt should be allowed to hang several days before finishing—evening it off where it has stretched.

Pattern No. 711 is suitable for many different materials and among them one of the washable crêpe de chines would be a wise choice. This comes in the loveliest colors and is a good weight. The front of the underblouse could be made of a printed crêpe and to this under part the front of the two piece skirt is joined. Then the real front of the waist comes over this under part and is held in place by a single button. The sleeves are quite large at the bottom and there is an inset there of the printed material. They are gathered into narrow bands at the wrists made from the dress material.

Another combination of colors would be black satin made up either with white or with a printed material. Black and white is shown in many of the New York shops made into charming dresses for young women as well as older ones.

709—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

710—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

711—Woman's and misses' dress. Size 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 40 inch material, with ⅛ yard of printed material.

BEAUTY ANSWERS by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MOLLY: WHERE THE LIPS ARE wrinkled and chapped there is often a condition of inward fever. I would suggest that you look well into the condition of your digestive tract and see it is kept in proper order. Soften the lips with cold cream or spirits of camphor.

K. B. D.: AS THE COLD WINTER winds cause a dryness of the skin of the face and chapping, it is well to apply cold cream before going out. After massaging the cold cream into the skin, powder with a good face powder, which acts as a further protection. I have a formula for a good cold cream, which you may have for a stamped addressed envelope.

MISS G.: MILD CASES OF EXCESsive perspiration are benefited by bathing the affected parts with hot water to which either boric acid or alum has been added. Too much cannot be said about the need of frequent changing of clothing. After each wearing a dress should be hung up to air before an open window. When possible let the sun get at the dress that is being aired.

J. R. E.: WARTS ARE DUE TO INfection of the skin. The warts on the face may be removed without leaving a scar, when the work is done by a reputable physician.

H. Z. T.: TO REDUCE THE SIZE of the pores, I would suggest the ice treatment. At night cleanse the face with cold cream, then wash with soap and warm water, and rinse in cold water. Take a small piece of ice and put it in a piece of cheesecloth and rub over the affected parts for several minutes.

N. S. C.: AFTER A PERSON HAS attained full growth it would be necessary to resort to an operation to change the shape of the legs, that is, where the bone structure is at fault. If their shapelessness is due to excess weight, send along a stamped addressed envelope and I'll give you some exercises and diets which will do much to improve their appearance, if adhered to faithfully.

MOTHER: THE MOST SATISFACtory work in the straightening of teeth is done when the child is between the sixth and twelth years. Done later, the work must be done slowly to avoid too much absorption of the bone, or the teeth will not again become tight. You may help the dentist by making sure the child brushes her teeth regularly. He will do the rest.

MISS Q.: SKIN WHICH PEELS and chaps constantly is in need of oil. It is excessively dry. Cleanse the face with cold cream instead of water, or if you use water, let it be at night, and after it massage a little cream into the skin. You may leave some on over night. Before going out massage a little cream into the skin and dust with powder, as a protection against the wind and cold.

H. M. H.: WHEN THE FLESH under the chin begins to sag it is necessary to start exercising. I have some neck exercises I shall be glad to send you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope. Always hold the head up. After doing the exercises, massage with a good cold cream, followed by an ice rub. If impossible to obtain ice, use a cloth wrung out of cold water.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Getting a Suit Free.

The cheekiest person I know came into a store one Saturday afternoon in summer and after looking through the pile of bathing suits asked if she could take one home on approval to see if it fit. She took a suit and a pair of bathing slippers.

Monday morning she came in, laid a package on the counter, and simply said she didn't want the suit. Then she left.

On opening the package, it was found she had worn both the suit and slippers in bathing. D. H.

A Selfish Giver.

The cheekiest person I ever knew was a girl friend of mine. About a week before Christmas she asked me if I was going to give her a present. "Because," said she, "if you give me a present I'll give you one."

I replied in the negative. On Christmas, when I gave her a present she did not say thanks, but said: "I'll have to go out and buy you something."

Isn't that cheek? A. D. B.

Solid Brass.

Merely to be accommodating I lent a new dress to a friend. She wore it several times and after she had had it two weeks I asked her to return it so I might wear it to a bridge party.

She said, "O, I'm going to wear it there myself. Can't you wear some other one?" E. R.

Cash and Carry.

Our neighbor kept boarders' and one day, when her pantry was bare, she sent her flapper daughter to our house to borrow some money to buy groceries. I couldn't spare the cash, so told her I would let her charge the groceries she needed on my account at the store. She said, "Will you please go and get them for me? I do so hate to carry packages."

Well, so do I, for any one so cheeky. J. C. B.

And Walked Off.

I have a friend who calls me often. One evening just as she was ready to go home, she saw me with two decks of cards. Picking up the newest deck she said, "We haven't any cards at home, so I'll take one of yours." R. S.

Worrying Over a Penny.

After a short visit I was taking a friend to the train. Two blocks from home he said he had left a penny on top of matches on the living room table. I kept driving. He said it was a penny box, and he had only used three matches out of it.

Finally, I offered him a penny for another box. To my surprise he accepted it and was greatly relieved of his worry. P. S. C.

Letting George Do It.

The cheekiest person I know is an employer who, when he is in need of help, waits until his competitor next door puts an ad in the paper and then stands near his competitor's door to hire the applicants. J. D. VAN D.

During an Intermission.

While at the theater, my girl friend and I left our seats during the intermission. When we returned, we found them occupied by two women and our wraps thrown on seats from which the stage view was poor.

How's that for cheek? M. E.

LOOK PLEASANT, PLEASE

by Antoinette Donnelly

These Tips Will Prove Useful on Your Next Trip to the Photographer.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—In the interests of birthday conservation, let the German women give a subtle tip. In a Berlin woman's magazine warnings about the style of dress and coiffure that "date" a woman are given. "Never have your full figure photographed, lest the fashion of your dress give away your age at some future date.

"For the same reason never have your hair dressed in any characteristic or conspicuous style, and, if wearing a hat, select one that might be appropriate for almost any fashion."

The first suggestion may be applied more advantageously for future reference, we think, than the second, relative to hat and coiffure. The hat can be eliminated as a future give-away by the simple process of leaving it in the photographer's dressing room, where it really belongs when one is having a photograph made. A hat unquestionably is the current year's trademark which you can't laugh off three, five or ten years hence. I don't suppose

If you have old family daguerreotypes in your possession you can see how the coiffure survives generations, though a hat will scarcely outlive a season. Simple coiffures they are, always. The huge pompadours, of course, have dated many a poor darling daughter into hurried explanations that they were being worn when her hair first went up, which was along about her fourteenth birthday.

Looked Like Her Own Daughter.

One of the metropolitan dailies ran a series of photographs of personages of twenty years ago. An up to date photograph appeared along with the "old timers" in a number of cases. With one internationally known actress, particularly, her present day photograph made her appear as the debby daughter of herself twenty years ago.

If you go through the files of any photographic library, picking out women's photographs at random, you will see this identical rejuvenation principle. Men do not suffer so markedly the comparison of intervening years.

If we return to long hair, the present day bobbed headed photographs can hardly escape being dated. But, of course, the alibi that "I was one of the first to have it done" may be brought into service. With persons of sharp memories this alibi will not serve, because in its ten or twelve years of life the bob has gone through its own evolution process from the bushy floor mop to the 1927 sleek outline of head.

For Steady Wearing Qualities.

For steady wearing qualities photographs tell me the picture that best survives the years shows a simple coiffure and hands that fall gracefully into the lap, if the hands are shown at all. It is conceded best to reveal just the upper part of the body. Evening dress, since time permits no great latitude in its neck line, or dress along classic Greek lines, and a face pleasant, but without a wide dentifrice display, are items that make for a photograph which will not "date."

One of the great temptations revealed to me by photographic operators hinges on woman's inherent belief that, given a stage or a camera, she can act. And in order to prove herself an actress she believes she has first to dispossess herself of her own personality and assume a foreign one.

I have sat in as judge on a good many beauty contests in which photographs were submitted and if there is any one thing that will send a contestant's picture into the discard quickly it is the artificial pose. Unaffected simplicity is the telling feature of prize winning pictures.

Feel natural, act natural, and be natural when you are being photographed. No borrowed pose will make one better looking.

The Berlin authority offers valuable advice in this: "Avoid assuming the much mooted romantic upward look and the frequently seen ingénue expression, both of which are apt to appear ridiculous in a picture."

Fatigue Always Registers.

Another point to observe is a restful night preceding the day of registering before the camera. Fatigue about the eyes is caught by the lens. Or, if one feels indisposed at all, it is better to postpone the engagement until one is in tip-top shape.

Making up for the camera requires skilled hands. If one is not sure of her mastery of the cosmetic art, she had better leave makeup off entirely. Rouge should never be used on the cheeks, because red photographs black and there is danger of making the cheeks look like sunken areas. Heavily rouged lips will blacken and coarsen them, but a thin coating of a light shade to define the lips is permissible.

Powder has to be dusted on smoothly. Eyebrows may be touched up if they are indefinitely curved. They should be trimmed and shaped before the photograph is made, as the scraggly hairs spoil the picture. Eye makeup, particularly, must be done skillfully. If there is any "spotting," the effect is damaging. A little hand whitener will keep the hands from looking dark.

Solid colors in dress are better than patterned ones, for patterns of certain colors stand out stronger than others and the frock may emerge hard and ugly. Light blue and light yellow photograph white. Pink will look darker. Red, brown, navy, dark green, and purple will be dark in the picture. Light colors add a little more bulk to the figure.

IMMEDIATELY END GRAY HAIR

In five minutes tint your hair at home to any beautiful shade you desire. No fuss—no mixing—guaranteed harmless—BROWNATONE is immediately effective. Penetrates all the hair—one application only required. Buy BROWNATONE at drug and toilet counters, 50c. and $1.50. Any shade from two colors. For trial first, send 10c. The Kenton Pharmacal Co., 1836 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky.

For advice on hair thinner, visit the Brownatone Shop, 1833 Stevens Bldg.

RED PEPPER HEAT STOPS BACKACHE

The heat of red peppers takes the "ouch" from a sore, lame back. It cannot hurt you, and it certainly ends the torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub, and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers.

Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

The Whitehall Pharmacal Co., New York, N. Y.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray.

Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

In the Smart World of Sport GOSSARD SILHOUETTES meet every challenge

Your corsetiere will be glad to show you a selection of new Gossards, designed to meet the needs of your figure and various costumes.

The critical eyes of the observing gallery—growing steadily keener as women's athletic prowess increases—concern themselves as much with appearance as with skill. She whose figure lines are naturally, softly supported is assured of a lithe, graceful silhouette. She attends her game undistracted because every movement is in harmony with her costume, and her costume in complete harmony with the fine, important lines of fashion. Her appearance brings joy to observers, assurance to her game.

Gossard Foundations are Scientifically Smart

Gossard garments of each variation—step-ins, combinations, girdles, front-lacing corsets, are scientifically designed to support the muscles of the figure, to free them from fatigue—and to bring the smartest lines of the natural figure to the fashionable world of sport.

A LOVE OF THE TRUTH

by Doris Blake

Child Expert Stresses the Importance of Teaching Boys and Girls Honesty and Accuracy.

ONE of the problems faced by conscientious parents is how to establish standards of truth in their children. What is called "lying" is very general in childhood. And the lies of children differ greatly in kind and in degree. Some parents ignore the problem with an indifferent shrug and the excuse that it is simply childish imagination out of which the youngsters will grow eventually.

In order to inculcate right habits and right thinking, since civilized life in any kind of community life is possible only if people are dependable—that is, if truth is in them—these early manifestations of falsehood in children should be met with a sympathetic understanding by every parent and the ideal of truthfulness should be implanted as early as possible in the young mind.

The Child Study Association of America, in one of its pamphlets issued for parents and teachers interested in the development and education of children, treats the subject of truth and falsehood in the young, and stresses the importance of inculcating the principles of honesty and truthfulness early in life.

Blanche M. Gruenberg, author of this particular study, realizes the limitations of the childish mind and its inability to grasp the adult understanding of truth.

An Expert's Ideas.

"All who have to deal with children realize that truthfulness is attained slowly," she says. "We must not condemn the child for every false statement he makes, but rather use each occasion as an opportunity for enlarging his understanding and increasing his appreciation of truth."

While the child is learning to talk and for some time thereafter there is not sufficient development to distinguish between the creations of fancy, memories, dreams, on the one hand, and actual occurrences on the other. He is unable to differentiate the fleeting images aroused by his wishes from actual situations. Under these circumstances Miss Gruenberg believes it worse than useless to reprove the child for saying that he saw a flower fly off the bush like a butterfly, or that the cat spoke to him. He may have misinterpreted what he saw—or his wish may have been father to the thought. What he sees is certainly not true, but he is not "lying," for everything he tells you has a proper place in his own mind and he is not concerned beyond that. Discrediting his inventions will not cure him of lying, in Miss Gruenberg's opinion, since he has not realized his "lie," but our ill considered reproof may discourage his efforts at putting into words what does come into his mind and destroy his confidence in our sympathy and understanding.

However, our child training authority warns that the child cannot go on forever confusing the imagined with the real. Parents can help him bridge this period by showing him patiently that some thoughts do correspond to the tangible world outside, whereas others exist only within his mind. Playing with him in his make believe games is recommended as the measure to lead him gradually to distinguish between one class of experience and the other

Inventing Excuses.

"Often children invent excuses or justification for their acts, or give reasons which we feel are not altogether genuine," says this child authority "In fact, the more numerous the reasons are which a child gives in urging the granting of his desires, the more likely it is that his real reason is withheld."

Parents must show children all along the line that to be honest with one's self requires scrupulous investigation of one's own motives.

Another type of problem Miss Gruenberg calls attention to as met frequently by parents is that of the child learning to get what he wants by word or act which an adult may classify as "untrue" The child who, after being put to bed calls for water because in this way he gets his mother's company, is not conscious of the fact that he is lying He does not begin with a conscious desire to deceive, but simply uses the word or gesture which he has found effective.

"To the child it is not a question of truth or falsehood, or right or wrong; it is only a question of getting what he wants—and he learns that some methods work" says Miss Gruenberg. "Or it may be a question of avoiding something disagreeable and again he learns that certain methods bring the desired result."

Anxious for Attention.

It is not always a seeking of some material satisfaction which induces the child to lie, Miss Gruenberg observes. Just to cause a sensation he may brag of having done something which he really did not do, or tell a story that will astonish or mystify. He sees other people draw attention, even admiration, by the telling of wonderful tales. So he is tempted to tell a good one, himself.

Here again, says the child educator, there is in the child's mind no question of truth or falsehood—there is only the wish to produce an effect. His creativeness is challenged and he does his best.

Dealing with all kinds of "lies" in the same way is not the solution. Parents should know whether the child lies because he is too timid and too weak, or because he lies to show off. In the latter case he can be encouraged to make up a story as a story and have it receive due recognition on its merits and he can be supplied legitimate ways of expressing himself and of receiving the favorable attention which, at this period, the child really needs. Removing the temptation to improvise is part of the parents' job.

The commonest lies among children, Miss Gruenberg further observes, are those designed to save them from punishment.

"Certainly the lies that are prompted by fear of punishment will not be eradicated by more punishment or by giving the child more reason to fear," she argues. "It is necessary to help him realize that lying is an unworthy and weak evasion; it is necessary to help him feel that it is in every way better and more satisfactory to face the consequences of wrongdoing. A challenge to self-respect will be more constructive than an appeal to fear."

Voice Is Important.

The manner of approaching a situation and the tone of voice the parent uses may frighten or challenge a child into making false statements. With proper handling he might have spoken confidingly and truthfully.

A large factor in a child's normal development, the author of this child study treatise declares to be the confidence which he is made to feel in his own ability to do what is right, to overcome temptations, and to outgrow childish faults. Looking for the causes instead of stressing results will help parents to remove the childish temptations to resort to falsehood.

No miracle of sudden reformation or conversion should be expected from the child, the educator concludes. But the ideal of truthfulness should be before the child and before parents as something toward which to strive.

A Small Social Drama

In Which Mrs. Harry Uncovers a Petty Bit of Deceit That Good Form Considers Out of Bounds

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Friday Room, Chicago Tribune.

SOME months ago Mrs. Harry was invited to a tea given for a woman from Philadelphia. The visitor was the house guest of a friend of one of Mrs. Harry's dearest friends, and Mrs. Harry was naturally asked to pour. Also she was bidden to stay and Harry asked to come later and a very informal supper was eaten and then there was bridge. So naturally, also, Mrs. Harry had a chance to talk to the Philadelphian.

Philadelphia had been the home of Mrs. Harry's mother, too, before she married Mrs. Harry's father and some of her family still live there. But those things Mrs. Harry didn't mention, because they did not seem interesting as conversational offerings to a stranger. But in the course of talk the visitor, whom we shall call Margaret Brown, mentioned the name of a certain woman of national prominence who lives in Philadelphia. She didn't actually say she knew her as Mrs. Harry afterward remembered, but implied it, and Mrs. Harry, who had inherited her friendship from her mother, said: "Mrs. Blank is a charming person, isn't she? I remember my first meeting with her when I was a child. She came to see my mother on one of her visits here and though she hadn't seen her for several years, at once my mother's marriage, she remembered that, as a girl, mother had been fond of jasmine, so she came to surprise her carrying an armful of white blossoms. She was most beautiful then, and I remember hanging onto mother's skirts and adoring this beautiful creature, who dumped all the flowers in my mother's lap."

As Beautiful as Ever.

"She is still as beautiful as ever," Mrs. Harry continued, "and I think she has one of the finest voices in the world, don't you?"

Margaret Brown said yes, that she thought so, too. Then they talked of other things. But when Mrs. Harry was leaving she bade Miss Brown good-night and said: "If you see Mrs. Blank before I do, please give her my best love and Harry's, too, won't you?"

Margaret Brown said: "O, I shall probably see her next week when I go back to Philadelphia."

It happened that Mrs. Blank decided to go to California and was passing through Mrs. Harry's city, so she wired saying: "If you are not already engaged save Tuesday and Wednesday for me."

Mrs. Harry was delighted. Mrs. Blank never stayed at Mrs. Harry's house because Mrs. Harry had the good taste not to ask her. She knows that Mrs. Blank travels with a maid and a secretary and that a six room apartment is no place for three extra women. But she always has Mrs. Blank to dinner—as well as to breakfast and luncheon, and sometimes to tea.

Mrs. Blank liked meeting some of the Harrys' friends and so Mrs. Harry planned a little tea for her—just ten or twelve chosen spirits, young women who one way or another are accomplishing something. Then she remembered Margaret Brown, so she invited her, and, of course, the latter's hostess. It was to the hostess she spoke over the phone, saying: "Will you and Miss Brown come to tea next Wednesday? I'm so glad you can. By the way, tell Miss Brown I am having a friend of her's."

A Surprise Indeed.

So they came—into Mrs. Harry's charming little drawing room, more charming than ever with its bright spring flowers and the several pretty young women gathered about a dignified and beautiful elderly woman who seemed to be making them all laugh. Mrs. Harry drew them into the group. "Mrs. Blank," she said, "this is Mrs. Harrison and here is my little surprise for you——"

Mrs. Harry would never have known that anything was wrong by looking at Mrs. Blank, but Margaret Brown gave herself away. She blushed and stammered painfully Mrs. Blank came to the rescue.

"How nice," she said. "I'm awfully glad to see you," then smiled very sweetly at her a moment before she turned away to continue what she had been saying when they came in.

After her guests had all gone and she and Mrs. Blank sat waiting for Harry to come home, Mrs. Harry told Mrs. Blank the story of Margaret Brown and how she had given her to understand that she knew Mrs. Blank well.

She ended the story by saying: "And you were so wonderful, Aunt Lally. I don't think a soul there knew you'd never seen her before — I wouldn't have known it if I hadn't been looking at her face, instead of yours. She didn't deserve it, you know. I shouldn't have minded if you'd snubbed her in my house. I think it was most annoying!"

Mrs. Blank only laughed, her laugh that seemed so young, that was always infectious. "My dear," she said, "when one gets to be as old as I am one learns to be amused, instead of annoyed!" That was all.

Then Harry came in and after a lovely dinner, just the three of them, they took Mrs. Blank to her California train where her maid and her secretary and several friends were awaiting her.

Talking It Over.

On the way home Mrs. Harry told Harry all about it. When she finished the story she said: "That horrid little snob, Margaret Brown, committed one of the unpardonable social sins—claiming acquaintanceship with some one she didn't know because that person is influential and prominent, and all she got for it was a charming smile, because Aunt Lally wouldn't insult her in my house!"

"O, no," said Harry, "you're wrong this time, my dear. She got something much worse. She was punished by having the lie discovered by you and by Aunt Lally. She got coals of fire heaped upon her head. She knows you both scorned to expose her and she has learned something about human nature. What she has learned is a bitter lesson, namely that a person can be so big that some people look too small for them to bother to despise.

"Besides, a woman like Mrs. Blank meets lots of Margaret Browns, of course. I venture to say that there are probably a hundred unidentified women claiming some sort of acquaintanceship with her everywhere she goes. She has just learned to jangle their nerves instead of letting them jangle hers."

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Following her 45 mile hike from Providence to Boston recently, Miss Eleanor Sears, society leader, without showing any signs of fatigue, entertained a group of friends at a dinner in her home.

Besides being president of the Fairmount bank at Fairmount, Ga., Mrs. Edna Tate finds time to look after her 2,500 acre farm.

Victoria Drummond, first woman to be granted a seagoing engineer's license by the British board of trade, is a goddaughter of the late Queen Victoria.

Though it is alleged that Kensington Palace in London is haunted, it did not deter Queen Victoria of Spain from observing her thirty-ninth birthday in the palace.

All the leech doctors of Austria now are women, who go about with their leeches, kept in moist earth, to draw blood from those who have faith in that sort of treatment.

In an effort to diminish the number of accidents due to careless driving, Turkey has passed a law forbidding women under age to drive automobiles in Constantinople.

At the age of 18 years Miss Irma Ward of Los Angeles, Cal., so far outclasses in feats of strength all others of her sex that she is claiming to be the strongest woman in the world.

For financial wizardry, Anne Nichols, who produced her own play, "Able's Irish Rose," has beaten the record of any man for money making in the theater, having become a millionaire through one play.

Mrs. Ella Bushnell-Hamlin, independent candidate for congress from Davenport, Ia., favors the elimination of all sex lines and abolishing women's clubs.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Geometry Plays a Leading Role in Solving the Problem Play and Varying the Appearance of the Straight-Line Silhouette.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris fashions are more than ever mathematical. They are problems, the correct answer to which, individually solved, is chic. Spring styles have graduated out of the simplicities of addition and subtraction, because most of the lines of the silhouette remain as they were last season, or several seasons ago. Skirt lengths have neither been added to, nor subtracted from, and the same thing can be said about the other linear items that make up what we call the smart silhouette. This is probably because, no matter how much Paris added or subtracted to slender lines, the answer that women gave to this was always the same, so the city of styles had to work out something that would be more interesting to us all.

So, this spring, couturiers are going in for the higher mathematics of geometry, which isn't nearly so involved as it sounds. Take the square, for instance, or the oblong, and introduce curved corners instead of the rigid angles that characterize these two geometric figures, and you have one of the important points of spring styles. As you know, the straight line silhouette is nothing but a rectangle in cloth. Well, by curving the corners, and at times one or two edges, Paris produces variations in this popular line that are extremely pleasing.

I think most of us are fed up with the straight long coat, and yet we don't know how to better it without going in for some other kind of lines that aren't nearly so youthful or so slender. Paris gives us the change we are craving and still leaves us our straight lines, by this curving process. In tailoring terms it is called a "cutaway" effect, but the way it is done this spring is scarcely recognizable under this familiar name.

The first model sketched is the best kind of illustration of how, by rounding corners, you come upon chic. You don't have to be a learned student of styles to recognize this Premet coat as the simple straight line coat, but for all of that it has an air of novelty, given by its cutaway edges, which are accentuated by borders of kid printed in an old rose spotted calf design, and by an inner border of plain old rose crepella set against the rose and white mixed friska of the coat proper. Also the wide revers and the rolling collar are different. Collar and cuffs are edged with calf printed kid, and a small cluster of cherries hangs from the edge of the collar, replacing the usual single flower.

By using curved edges on the jumper waist of this ensemble, Premet has given us something new in the two piece sports dress, and something which is vastly more graceful than the straight around lower edge. Analyzed, this is a straight jumper overblouse, with its lower edge cut to the normal waist line at the center front and emphasized by the addition of a curved two inch tuck. Above this Premet places a narrow band of spotted kid, in a series of curves, and the kid also outlines the round neck.

In order to keep the lines of this dress quite straight, Premet stitches the box plaited skirt down from its normal waist line commencement to the hips. The waist of this frock, to the kid band, is rose crepella and below that is friska, while the skirt is of friska, that very thin mixed woolen that looks something like the old time etamine.

Not so very hard to understand, this new mathematics of chic, is it? It consists of using any of the geometric figures that are the basis of geometry or of children's building blocks in breaking up the oblong line of the regulation silhouette.

One of the easiest and most attractive ways of creating this kind of cachet is shown in our second model, which is a tennis or general summer sports dress from Jane Regny. This frock is made of white crêpe de chine, combined with white crêpe georgette by means of star pointed pieces. The straight waist has a yoke of white georgette, and the waist body of white crêpe de chine is joined to this yoke by irregular star point triangles that are stitched flat, extending around both front and back. This relieves the straight outlines, and so does the irregular waist line that curves up in front above the wide plaits of the skirt.

Without changing in the slightest way the regulation silhouette lines, this use of thin and heavy silk crêpe in such striking figures makes a novel sports dress, and one which couldn't be mistaken for any model of last season. The absence of sleeves is a detail of the season, as I have told you before.

Jane Regny, who specializes in sports clothes, and in this type only, is creating some striking fashion novelties this season by adapting flowers, geometrically conceived, to dress decoration. Our fourth model shows one of these Regny sports costumes, this one inspired by the chrysanthemum. It is really a patchwork dress, made up of alternating patches of green-blue jersey and the same colored crêpe de chine. The jumper waist is made of jersey, and is the regulation jumper cut, with the exception of the neck line, which is fitted by a series of small bladelike tucks. On this jumper Regny sews large leaf motifs of green-blue crêpe de chine, placed as shown in the sketch on the body of the blouse and on the sleeves. A large green and white chrysanthemum is placed on the left shoulder.

The skirt is plaited in diagonal stitched plaits that are loose from an angle that is placed just above the knees, and this angle, or really series of small angles, also follows a diagonal line. A narrow belt made of links of silver completes this unusual but highly wearable and charming sports dress.

Our third model from the left is a Premet afternoon frock which varies the straight line silhouette by means of triangles that make panels. The material of this gown is one of the season's novelties, being a thin wool voile printed with tiny pink flowers. Premet makes the waist rather blousy, gathering it in front and back from the square neck, and the sleeves, too, are rather full. Pink crêpe de chine bands finish the neck line and the cuffs, making the little bows at the wrists. The big voile scarf on the left shoulder is also banded with pink crepe.

A draped girdle of voile makes a fitted hip line, and ties in a bow at the center front. The lower edge of the jumper waist forms a supple yoke at the top of the skirt, and triangular crêpe edged floating panels hang from the girdle at the center front and the sides. The skirt is itself rather narrow and edged in pink crêpe de chine at the hem line.

Introducing curves into the borders of the straight line coat and jumper give novelty to this Premet ensemble in old rose crepella trimmed with printed kid, sketched at the extreme left.

A yoke of white georgette is joined to a straight blouse of white crepe de chine by star pointed edges. The crepe de chine skirt is plaited in front only. Second from the left.

Next, pink flowered wool voile makes this afternoon frock from Premet, with its triangular panels and pink crepe de chine band trimmings.

This blue jersey sports dress from Jane Regny, sketched last, presents a new kind of chic in big patches of self colored crepe de chine.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Probably an Old Line.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a boy in another city who, when he comes to see me, makes violent love to me, but refuses to keep company with me because he says he doesn't want any special girl friend.

"BRIGHT EYES."

Pay no attention to his love making. It's probably the line he hands every girl, Bright Eyes.

Unreliable.

"Dear Miss Blake: I met a girl and we made a date. She did not keep it. Should I call her up? LONESOME."

You'd subject yourself to similar disappointments were you to phone her. She's too unreliable.

Loves Only One.

"Dear Miss Blake: We both love a fellow whose initials are A. W. K. He told us he loves one of us and regards the other as a friend.

"ROSE AND HELEN."

The invitations and special attentions will naturally go to the favored one—the other must accept the situation.

Let Him Call You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a fellow who cares for me. He asked me to call him up. Is it proper?

"BLUE EYES."

It's unwise to make a practice of calling boys, Blue Eyes, even though they may suggest it. They'll ask for your telepone number and use it if they're in earnest.

One Out of Three.

"Dear Miss Blake: I invite a girl out every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday. She only accepts for Saturday. Is she going with some one else on the other nights? G. P. H."

There's some one else or she does not get sufficient enjoyment out of the time spent with you, either of which is good reason for eliminating further invitations, don't you think?

Eight Years' Difference.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl eight years older than I. She likes me. What shall I do? CURLY."

Watch your step, Curly. Eight years is quite a difference when the woman is the older. Compare her with the younger girls and see how she measures up.

Lonesome.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16. I have no girl and never went out with one yet. How can I get a girl?

"HANDSOME."

Aren't there some nice girls at school who would qualify and who would be glad to go out with a handsome young chap like you? Ask your pals to present you to some of their friends.

Foolish to Consider It Now.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping company for two years and love the girl dearly. I am only making $32 a week, which I know we cannot live on.

"She is 18 and I am 20, but she does not want to wait any longer, if I don't give her the engagement ring by the 1st of next year. BLUE."

You're not yet in a position to consider engagement rings and marriage, Blue. Don't let her scare you into it, either. Use your own good judgment and wait until you can well assume such responsibilities.

HE Makes No Returns.

"Dear Miss Blake: My fellow comes to see me once a week, but never takes me out. I love him. Do you think he cares for me?

"ELIZABETH."

He's imposing when he accepts your hospitality and makes no return, Elizabeth. Let him spend his evenings elsewhere when he is so unappreciative.

Clothes Hangers Make Pretty Gifts When Padded and Covered with Satin Ribbon

A SET of clothes hangers, covered with different colored satin ribbon, makes a most acceptable gift. The hanger hook should be tightly wound with matching narrow ribbon, and securely fastened. Then for one of the prettiest kind I have seen, five or six inch wide ribbon was used and one yard and a is folded through the center on its length, and shirred one-half inch from the edges on both sides. A tiny hole is made in the center of the length on this fold to slip the hook through; then the ribbon is turned in at each end and the gathered places drawn up to the right length and sewed carefully together, through the gathers.

At the bottom of the hook part, the ribbon used to wind the hook with is tied in a small bow. And in the center of the hanger a half wreath of tiny silk flowers is sewed.

Another pretty hanger was made of ribbon half the width of the one just described and two strips or pieces of ribbon, each one the length of the first quarter of three-eighths was used to cover with.

The hanger was well padded first with cotton wadding, then the ribbon one described. These strips are shirred one-half inch from each edge — the hanger covered with the wadding and then the shirred ribbon set in place. Instead of flowers to trim this one there are large French knots through the center at intervals of about two inches.

Sachet powders should be used inside the wadding and the ribbon bow tied at the bottom of the hook like the other one.

Drawn, Tired Complexions Instantly Refreshed

As a tired body relaxes and freshens after a warm bath at night, so drawn, "tired" faces freshen and relax after a Calonite bath. But that is not all. They glow with healthy color and utter cleanliness. For lack of these, faces grow dull, oily, sallow, "tired" burdened with blackheads; sluggish; old-looking. Soaps and creams cannot stimulate them sufficiently. Calonite can and will—instantly. Calonite is a pure white powder that you apply with a damp cloth. Instantly you feel the drawn facial tissues relax, freshen. You feel the hidden oils and powder that clog the pores, that rotted other cleansing methods, bubblingly dissolve. You feel the warm, reviving, youthifying blood come tingling to the surface.

How clear and clean and new your skin looks then! How fresh and young it feels! And how it responds to night cream and rest! From the very first time you use Calonite you look and feel a new person. Because your skin is clean as it never was before, and healthfully stimulated with nature's own beautifier.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it—this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness, exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh! Lift off hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes and calluses. It doesn't hurt a bit!

Seems Magic! Just drop "Freezone" on any tender, touchy corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you just lift that old bothersome corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store—Try it!

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

YOU CAN FILL CHILD'S HEART WITH JOY.

LAST week, among the offers I printed was that of a talking doll, and it brought me a deluge of requests that came all week—all asking that they be considered for the one doll offered. Just a few of these letters will give you an idea of the depth and intensity of this longing for playthings among children deprived of them:

"Dear Miss Brown: When I saw your offer of a doll I immediately thought how wonderful it would be to give to a little child who met with an automobile accident recently and has been in the hospital. She has no mother and it would make her so happy to get it.—M. G."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I know of a little girl who is sick. She broke her doll and just grieves about it all the time. Her mother cannot afford to buy her one and I know she'd love to have the one you are offering.—Mrs. B."

"Dear Sally: I have two little orphan girls I got through the Juvenile court. They are two little sisters. One is 6 and the other is 3. Couldn't you see fit to give me the doll for them?—Mrs. A. G."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: My little girl's birthday is the 28th of this month and her father has been out of work for months. She will be 5 and wants a doll and I can't afford to buy one for her. Dear Miss Brown, would you please make my little girl happy on her birthday?—Mrs. W. J."

Now, can't we do something about all these children who were so keenly disappointed? If we have girls and boys in the family, how many dolls, toys, games, and other playthings are lying about because the children have lost interest and grown tired of these particular toys. And how much happiness these discarded playthings would give if they were presented to girls and boys who haven't any and whose parents cannot afford to buy them.

The young owners will be glad, once they know how others will be made happy by their generosity, to part with them—and think what joy we'll bring into the lives of these children and all the other little applicants!

Nurse's Uniform Needed.

"I am a widow and I have been in the hospital for some time. I am able to work again and have obtained employment in a sanitarium, but I need a nurse's uniform, size 40. I would like a black coat, size 38 or 40, also. Do you think one of your readers might have these things to give me?

"Mrs. M. M."

There must be a nurse, somewhere, with a uniform she is about to discard. I can think of no better way to put it to use than this.

Cripple Asks Help.

"I am a cripple and must make my living by selling articles on the street. I need a small satchel, a camp chair, and a suit of clothes, size 42. I am 58 and have no friends. If you could get these things for me, I would appreciate it greatly. J. M. L."

Have you any of the articles this poor fellow needs in his struggle for a livelihood?

A Worthy Case.

"Would some one be interested in giving Mrs. L. some furniture for her living room? She has only one broken chair. Mrs. L. is a frail little woman with three tiny youngsters and a husband who has a crippled leg and who is not able to support his family as he wishes. She needs especially two comfortable chairs, a library table and a rug.

H. J. A."

Spring cleaning and moving usually finds us with a lot of surplus furniture on our hands. This request may solve your problem of disposing of such articles and enable you to make a poor family extremely happy and comfortable.

Ex-Service Man Needs Help.

"I am married with two children, 5 and 2. My husband is a disabled ex-service man, living with his family because he can't afford a home for us. We are living in a charitable institution. He is without a job and could probably get one as salesman if he had presentable clothing. You might be in a position to find some one who has a suit, size 38, and a spring overcoat for him. Mrs. J. S."

Can you resist this plea from the wife of an ex-service man? Surely, a bit of clothing is small compensation for what he has sacrificed.

Boy Wants Microscope.

"I wonder if someone among your readers has a microscope they no longer want and would give to me. I am a boy, 12, and have wanted one for a long time. R. C. M."

You will make this boy immensely happy if you have the microscope he has been wanting for such a long time.

Day Bed Needed.

"I wonder if you could help me to obtain a day bed for my husband. He has tuberculosis and will not be able to get in the hospital for about three months. The doctor says he must sleep alone and I don't earn enough money to buy an extra bed.

"Mrs. J. H."

Can you befriend this family in the misfortune which has befallen them? A day bed—they cannot use one of larger dimensions—would help enormously.

Ambitious to Earn More.

"I am the sole support of my mother and myself, and I am going to try to earn a few more dollars by teaching French at home. For this reason I should like to have our room looking more like a living room and will need two bed coverings of dark material and a leather couch. Do you think your readers have some they might no longer want. Mrs J. V."

Truly, this ambitious woman is deserving of any assistance we may be able to give her. If you have the coverings she needs, or a couch of some kind, she will be most appreciative for them.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Harum-Scarum.

The strangest wedding I ever saw, wasn't! The groom was a serious-minded, devout young college professor, handsome and intellectual. The bride was a small town flapper vamp, about 18. The ceremony was to be performed in the office of a magistrate in a neighboring town. The bride was so much amused at the whole affair that she kept delaying it with laughing, and during each recess that had to be called for her "to get her face straight" she kept up a rapid fire flirtation with the magistrate, who, we had learned, was a widower.

At last, on pretense that he had forgotten the lines of his ceremony, he went into the hall, she following. When we called to them after a few minutes they had disappeared. Inquiring on the street we found they had gone away in his car—where no one knew.

It later developed that the magistrate and the other man's bride drove to the nearest city and were married within two hours after they left us. W. B.

His Customary Expense.

In one of our Kentucky mining camps a minister friend of mine was called to perform a wedding ceremony at 6 o'clock in the evening. His religious scruples forbade his marrying couples if either party had been divorced. This time he hurriedly overlooked the matter when he consented to go. At the appointed hour he was there.

Briefly, noting the license certificate he discovered they had both been divorced, but resolved it was too late to speak of it then.

At the close of the ceremony the elderly gentleman awkwardly asked: "Well, how much do I owe you?" To which the preacher replied: "Well, that's just with you. We do not make any charges. Just whatever you care to give me."

The man paused, looked at his blushing bride of some 45 years, then presented a greenback, saying: "Well, I've been a-payin' a dollar."

B. H. K.

Masterful Bride.

The bride, a foreign born woman of rather forceful mind, lived in a small town but desired to be married and spend her honeymoon in a big city, so several weeks previous to the wedding she came into the city and purchased the wedding ring, her wedding outfit, inquired about the license, engaged the minister, hired a taxi to take her to the church on the wedding day, and, in fact, made all arrangements for the eventful day.

The happy couple were to have their wedding breakfast at the home of a friend, so flowers for the bride, also ordered by that lady, were delivered there on the previous day. The wedding day dawned clear and cold, so cold that the bride's flowers were frozen stiff, and to make matters worse the taxi had been ordered too soon by the farseeing lady and we arrived at the big church an hour too early and had to wait through services for a deceased man with the only other occupant of the church the man's widow, heavily decked in mourning weeds.

Never will I forget the long walk down the aisle of that church with the accompanying music as the four of us were all the wedding party, guests and all.

The hotel selected as the domicile for the honeymoon was a carefully guarded secret until, unfortunately, the place was raided and the poor elderly couple were haled to the police court.

I believe that cured the bride of "officiating," as her husband afterward called it, and now she lets him do some of the planning, deeming it the better thing to do. H. S.

Mock Wedding, Legal.

There was a bashful couple in our town who had been going together for several years, so one night when they were both going to a Valentine party, a mock wedding was arranged. One man went to the license bureau and got the wedding license, and the person who filled it being in on the joke, and, having a sense of humor, filled it out properly, together with a certificate. At the party a young man was selected to perform the ceremony. All were masked so there was no telling who the young man was. He went through the ceremony, and after the blessing the masks were removed.

Imagine the surprise when the young couple saw that it was a minister. The wedding was legal, and the task of proposing being off the bashful young man's hands, he decided to let matters stand, and they are now a happy married couple. L. H. O.

After the Ancient Greeks.

There's a family in this town who attempt to live like the ancient Greeks. Their house is a large temple set in a eucalyptus grove, and consists of ceiling and floor connected by pillars. There are no walls; they simply pull down heavy canvas curtains in rainy or cold weather.

One of the daughters announced her engagement just before the Berkeley fire, about three years ago. The temple was badly damaged, the roof being completely burned, and only a few of the pillars remaining. Undaunted by this catastrophe, the "would-be Greeks" decided to hold the ceremony in the charred ruins. So some of us ordinary mortals wandered through the grove that night, to see what we could see. And we surely got an eyeful.

An altar had been erected in the ruined temple with a painting of the Madonna above it. Sacrificial fires burned in braziers, while the wedding march consisted of music made by clashing cymbals and wind instruments—"the pipes of Pan!"

The minister wore an Oxford gown, while the bride and bridesmaids were garbed in flowing Greek draperies, with bare legs and sandals. The bridesmaids, moreover, carried flaming torches instead of conventional bouquets, and danced to and from the altar. After the ceremony they and the bride favored the audience with more "esthetic" dancing.

Only the bridegroom and his best man were "out of the picture," as they were in black evening dress. Being "rising young business men," I suppose they refused to take part in the masquerade, even to make a Grecian holiday.

The wedding supper, I was told later, consisted of honey, unleavened bread, and milk, a la an Athenian repast. A. K.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial clutch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Let Him Suffer.

Wifey—John, there is some one in the pantry and I've just made a pie.

John—Well, it's all right with me as long as he doesn't die in the house. E. G.

Her Hair Was Red.

Red Headed Wife—Gee, old man, you're getting so bald I can use your head for a looking glass.

Hubby—The reason I am bald is this: When they passed around the hair in our family, the only color left was red, and I had rather be bald than take it. MRS. O. S.

Now It's Blankety-Blank.

Husband—Jones calls a spade a spade, you know.

Wife—Well, you used to before you tried to dig up the garden. F. H. K.

Right Back at Him.

Husband [sourly, after his wife had spilled a cup of coffee on the breakfast table]—"I've seen men shot for less than that!"

Wife [sweetly]—"Yes, and I've seen men half shot do worse than that." H. A. B.

The Reason Why.

I was returning from a trip to Chicago. A nice looking young man sat down beside me. As I was beyond the flirting age, I let him talk to me. He told me of the important position he held.

On reaching home I repeated the conversation to my husband.

"Just think," I said, "he had 400 men under him."

"Humph!" replied my husband, "I suppose he works in a cemetery." MRS. J. G.

Funny Ideas.

Hubby—You've certainly got funny ideas of what's funny and what isn't!

Wife—Well, have you ever heard of any one having serious ideas of what's funny? MRS. B. T.

Doubts Him.

Wife—George, I don't believe you put the cat out.

Hubby—Well, if you think I'd lie about a little thing like that go and put her out yourself. F. H. K.

I do my own wash
—yet my hands stay soft, white

I USED to hate Monday, for my week's wash was always very heavy. But washday is now so easy for me.

I just use Rinso. It's great in our water—makes wonderfully thick, lasting suds.

I soak the whole wash in these suds for about two hours—then rinse. The dirt soaks right out and everything becomes spotless without a bit of hard rubbing. And oh, so much whiter than ever before. Sterilized, too!

And with Rinso my hands never get red and parboiled any more. They stay white and soft.

Why not try Rinso next washday? You'll see why the makers of 30 leading washers endorse it.

Take the Short Cut

YOU can go from one corner to the next by traveling one block. Or you can go around three sides of a square to reach the next corner.

You can buy things on the same basis, or you can buy at the Sears-Roebuck department store. There you get the short cut on the price path. Sears, Roebuck and Co. eliminate all the expensive extra steps in production and distribution.

The reason for the low prices is that nothing is allowed to happen which makes bigger prices necessary. Take the short cut. It makes your money go a long way.

Women's Sports Coats

Straight lines, perhaps broken by a belt or relieved by an unusual pocket, in every instance fulfill the demands of fashion. The sports mode is at its best in these attractive models.

Tweeds, homespuns, plaids and striped materials are the fabrics of the moment used, and very effectively, too. They come in all the new colors with many dashing black and white combinations included.

Many of them are trimmed with such furs as fluffy mouffion, fox, and twin beaver (dyed rabbit). If you favor the sports mode this season you will be wise to come in and see our version of it. The styles are more attractive than ever as are the colors and materials. Splendid workmanship is employed and the price is very low for coats of such quality.

Women's Dress Coats

Beautiful kashas, satins, poiret sheens, poiret twills and Luela cloth are made into some of the smartest coats we have ever offered. Right up to the minute in every respect.

Pin tucks are used profusely in every possible manner and rich embroidery in intricate designs worked in colorful threads also enhances many of these models. An attractive bow on the shoulder is another distinctive feature of some of them.

These coats are also trimmed in fur in many instances—such as American broadtail, pieced squirrel and twin beaver (dyed rabbit). You will like the clever usages of imitation lizard for trimming, too. Linings are of plain or fancy crepe and often taffeta. Every coat is finely finished and a real value at this low sale price.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

A Reasoned Out Beverage Regimen Is More Vital to Our Well Being than a Financial Budget

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

WATER that is hot, water that is cold, man must have his daily half gallon whether young or old. And we would like to be a jolly hydromancer, warning people constantly of what will surely happen to them if they do not watch out and get that half gallon. A hydromancer, by the way, is one who tells the future by means of water, and we are telling you, giving our own twist to the word—a physiological one which we admit it did not originally have.

Now, we are not advising that you become a hydromaniac, that is, have a craze for water, but only a near craze, because real craziness over anything is something to be avoided. To go that far is not pleasant. Indeed, it is a mighty serious thing.

And then there is hydrotherapy, or water doctoring. It has been in vogue 2,000 years or more, and never quite out. Systems of this sort have occupied thousands of printed pages, and with it have gone hydrotherapeutic cook books, etc. The geography of the world is dotted over with places where people seek waters for their health. Around them has flourished a life unique in the way it has dominated and entertained humanity—with doctors and gaming casinos, baths and scenery, food and play.

At this season "watering places" the world over begin to fill up with folk who want rest or "treatment" for their ills, ills so often due in large part to a scant water regimen. So people go to them to be washed and rinsed out, to bathe, etc., when, if these things had been adequately attended to every single day in the year, those people would not now be having to combine disagreeableness with agreeableness. The promoters of these waters see to it that there is much of the latter to balance the former.

It is a strange thing, is it not, that man with his marvelous aqueducts and piping of water even to the top of skyscrapers, and with bottles and thermos carafes to keep water agreeable, should, like the beasts, need to get to a watering trough and fairly swill this liquid? Age after age has preached against this folly, and even the Bible beatifies water. You may read Isaiah—58:11 and elsewhere—and get the idea that a spring of water is a noble institution. And we have a perfect right, in fact, we believe it highly reasonable to do so, to put a physiological interpretation on the biblical expressions which exalt and glorify water, not only as a cleanser externally, but internally. If we believe greatly in a water salvation other than that of holy baptism, we may wish we were Isaiahs trying to turn erring humanity from its careless, indifferent ways as regards its water needs.

Water Service.

A waitress places a glass of water before you as you sit down to table, and she does well. It is not a mere convention. The wise mother provides her bairns and her beloved with a glass of cool and fresh water as soon as they are out of bed, and again when they retire. It does for their bodies what sunlight may do for their spirits, and more. Being a wise mother, she knows that these glasses of cold water—or sometimes it may be hot—are more needed for the health, beauty and happiness of her flock than any other single or simple thing she can do for them. (As an aside, let us say that we know she can largely keep away old age wrinkles from herself if she provides in this way for her own beverage needs, while she dashes cold water on her face and chest every morning of her life—as a beauty, health and energy measure.) One-fourth the daily requirement having been secured by the morning and evening glass, almost any human being who will reasonably attend to the call of thirst will get the other three-fourths through the hours of the day, since a considerable proportion comes in the foods we eat.

Good digestion is nearly assured and elimination certain without a laxative when a human being will give definite thought to maintaining his water balance. He has but to do a little common sense reasoning to know what that is. The many kinds of work water does in a man's body are so vital, and imperative, that racial common sense is always combating some individual's folly in going against the deep rooted reasoning of humanity. There are classic instances of it. A cup of cold water is an ideal of true charity.

The learned author of a cook book printed by Harper & Bros. in 1865 quotes a famous doctor in her chapter "On Selecting Food and Drinks," whose words sound extremely pedantic—his span of life was from 1803-1853—but he was a great medical authority in his day and was perhaps sound for all time on the water question.

He said: "Water is probably the natural drink of all adults. It serves several important purposes in the animal economy. Firstly, it repairs the loss of the aqueous part of the blood, caused by evaporation, and the action of the secreting and exhaling organs; secondly, it is a solvent of various alimentary substances, and, therefore, assists the stomach in digestion." In short, we lose water with every breath and in quantity in other physiological acts; therefore we must definitely, systematically, and all the time repair the loss.

Our Specific Water Requirement.

It is terribly monotonous, and so often fails to make the slightest impression on an individual, this repetition of the fact that we need every day eight glasses, which is four pints, or two quarts, or one-half gallon. It is on honest records that human beings who have evaded systematic water drinking have gone to springs or spas, and for several weeks under presumably medical supervision or some domination have taken seven quarts a day, or fifty-six glasses. What a flood! And what folly to think they can get their water drinking for the year done up in three or four weeks. Because they got on with half their real water requirements now they go through the actual punishment of making oceans of themselves.

We need pure water even to keep our bones clean, as well as to keep our skin from shrinking and to hinder many an internal struggle wholly due to its lack, which shows itself in pain and sometimes even more spectacularly.

Hot Water.

Turning from cold water to hot we find the cook at our elbow. We get our hot water in soups, in gravies, and sauces, in hot fruit compotes and in nutritive or merely stimulating and comforting beverages. It is cooking to prepare these and even to boil water requires some intelligence. Tepid water is an emetic, and if we are taking plain heated water we need to remember that.

Perhaps you have heard people complain of the meals at a given place as being "so dry," no soups, no gravies, no delicious fruit compotes, and being served with only poor or wretched teas and coffee. Man not only needs but craves the food liquids. Waters flavored in various ways approximate nature's best in liquids, the fruits, which are from eighty to ninety-five per cent water, but water that is aromatic, mineralized, filtered, and sterilized. They are great and agreeable agents in this business of keeping the body cisterns filled. And we must not forget that the tomato and cucumber carry the same water load, wonderfully flavored.

Boiling Water.

Boiling water need not be a mere prosaic task, and it is cooking in a real sense. In fiction, where tea has figured so greatly, there are no end of pictures of boiling water, the chief, perhaps, in "The Cricket on the Hearth," by Charles Dickens. To complete the cheerfulness of an open fire there must be a teakettle on the hob and in action. Devices have even been employed to make the sound of the boiling a pleasant one, by using an iron kettle with pieces of iron so arranged in the bottom "as to produce a peculiar melody in which one may hear the echo of cataracts muffled by clouds, of a distant sea breaking among the rocks, a rainstorm sweeping through a bamboo forest, or of the soughing of pines on some faraway hill."

People isolated from the world have devised entertainment like this for themselves, or for their soul's salvation. The cook who can get glorious entertainment from her cooking will cook, compelled or not. And people of a more laboratory mind have found interest in boiling water, watching the bubbles form and break.

Liquid Diets.

A liquid diet and a copious one is the greatest means of getting the necessary water. This is because people are but careless water drinkers and then some persons actually suffer extreme discomfort from drinking more than a quart of plain water a day. Think what the water drinking punishment of old times would have been to them, the horrible agony of it so often resulting in death. But that is no reason for going to the opposite extreme.

Though there was some folly connected with it, the best results I ever saw in the case of some one "reducing," came from a diet consisting almost exclusively of tomatoes and watermelon, each of which are 95 per cent water, or average that. The woman did this without anybody's advice and so risked injury to herself, but since science tells us that hunger sensations come because the walls of an empty stomach contracting hit or knock and cause pain she avoided that ache by eating the bulky watermelon. And the liquid of these two things helped her in more ways than she could guess in her summer martyrizing of herself.

Ices.

Of course one bent on getting a sufficiently liquid diet, though the heavens fall, may easily go to extremes, but that is a danger that is ever betraying humanity in every path of action. The ices, if taken in moderation, and eaten slowly or almost sipped, are worth while in a meal planned according to the ideas we have been exploiting. As to the sipping, there are those who beleive we get the best results and the most desirable alimentary action if we sip all liquids, and thus prolong the exercise the total digestive canal gets when we eat or drink. In other words, we keep our muscles in shape by directly and consciously exercising them. When it is our body proper we may do this with dumb bells, by bending, etc. When it is our digestive canal—an extremely vital muscle—we must apply reasonable methods of exercising it, or refine our methods of getting up action in it.

Pineapple Ice.

Many years ago a fascinating writer of the interesting things of life said that a pineapple ice was a combination of the pine and the palm, of ice and tropical luxury—in other words, of equator and pole, so excellent for our imagination which, with most people, needs more exercise than it gets, and in too many cases none at all is given to food.

For two people, make a pineapple ice or sherbert as follows: Shred or cut up enough of a juicy pineapple to make one-fourth cup. Cook one-half cup of sugar with one-fourth cup of water until it spins a thread, or to 238 degrees. Pour this over the pineapple and let stand till cool. Add to it a little lemon juice to strengthen the flavor, being careful not to use enough to make the whole lack sweetness. Beat the white of one egg till stiff and fold the pineapple and sugar mixture into it. To the fruit may be added a pinch of salt to strengthen the flavor, but adding it to the egg makes its complete fluffing difficult—it may be wet underneath. This may be frozen in a freezer and another egg white added when it is partly frozen, or it may be packed like a mousse and served when it is but half frozen, which makes it a true sherbet.

Lemon Granites.

The Italian granites are often nothing but flavored water half frozen. A little lemon juice in a great deal of water and without any sugar when so treated may be an agreeable thing to sip.

Water Argument.

No more wonderful water argument is to be found in print than that about saving a sick baby, by the means of water, to be found in an article entitled "The Gay Adventure," by Woods Hutchinson, in the Saturday Evening Post, July 29, 1922. The baby had lost water by cups or quarts and with diarrhea which was being restored by spoonfuls only. It is a story to wring the hardest heart, that of the poor baby literally wilting and melting away as a lettuce leaf might from loss and from lack of water, even his skin beginning to hang in folds. Then with water treatment he began to flush, to take up the lack of the wrinkles, and "in twenty-four hours he had swelled up like a tick, and in forty he was well."

If you are an almost violent advocate of water drinking in order to live well, and even for life-saving, this article will be meat to you.

One of our leading dietitians, Flora Rose, has devoted one of her "Easy Lessons in Nutrition" to "The Truth About Water," mentioning the fact that "for some disorders, such as types of heart trouble and high blood pressure, it is necessary to cut down water at all times," but there are certainly doctors who disagree on this.

Disappointed.

Four of us girls (all teachers) rent a furnished apartment and keep house. A week ago my brother phoned he was duck hunting down here and was coming up with a mess of canvas backs that day for dinner. We had all the dinner fixed except the ducks, which the four of us were going to clean and dress in a hurry, and cream, so we invited three hungry chaps to dinner.

My brother arrived just in time for dinner, with all stores closed, and with one puny mudhen which scarcely made a satisfying meal for the family cat. Embarrassed? O! M. K.

The Man in Gray.

My sister-in-law paid us a visit. As she was about to go, I urged her to stay and dine with us, expecting my husband's arrival any moment. While waiting for him we gathered some flowers.

Then impatiently looking down the street, we saw a man in gray and waved at him in a very familiar way, which he acknowledged. We then rushed in to serve dinner, but no John arrived. We dined alone.

When he came we asked why the delay. Suddenly I recalled he had changed his suit to a brown one that morning. Now, then, who was the other man?

Later in the evening, when sprinkling the lawn, four doors away I saw the man in gray, which makes it most embarrassing, because we are not on speaking terms. MRS. J. S.

Next to a Loud Speaker.

Having a considerable distance to travel to school I had acquired the habit of reading my French assignment on the elevated cars. One morning the entire chapter was difficult and required more concentration than was usual.

I regret that a voluble woman and a quiet well mannered man took seats next to me. The woman became more voluble and agitated as she related the details of a trial at which she had appeared in some capacity.

Needless to say, she attracted the attention of several persons close by, as well as my own, which caused me a deal of irritation. Several times I forced myself to reread the passage I had begun, but it seemed impossible to understand with a perpetual "loud speaker" at my side.

In a desperate attempt to grasp the meaning, I inhaled a deep breath and read aloud with a determined voice: "Monsieur Carot a prit un jour de congé," etc.

Almost at the same instant I was aware of my faux pas, as well as the general amusement of the jostling passengers. Even the long suffering man smiled wryly, which added to my embarrassment. B. E. W.

Why He Remained Aloof.

One night at a dance I was introduced to a stranger. He did not speak, but bowed very low and then withdrew. All evening he seemed to stay aloof from the crowd. The girls thought him "stuck up." When ladies' choice came, the girls dared me to ask him to dance. I tripped up to him and with a roguish twinkle in my eye, stammered, "M-m-m-ay I have the p-p-p-leasure of this d-d-d-ance?

He answered, "The p-p-p-leasure is all m-m-m-mine."

Instantly I recognized his stammering as a natural affliction. You may be sure that I did not enjoy that polka. 'Tis years! But that moment of awful embarrassment to this day sends red floods of shame into my cheeks. L. P.

When Child Doesn't Laugh and Play,—Look at Tongue

Hurry, Mother! Give "California Fig Syrup" at once. It can't harm children and they love it

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Eat your fill . . . and Sleep like a top

HUNGRY . . . all tired out? A good healthy feeling. But it's also nature's warning that energy is running low; that you must be careful what you eat.

A fully ripe banana—whether you're two, twenty-two, or twenty times two—will both relieve that hungry feeling and permit you to drop off into a sound, dreamless sleep. Why?

Because the thoroughly ripened banana is packed with rich sugars—energy elements that hungry, tired bodies can easily assimilate.

How can you tell when this all-food fruit is ripe? That's easy. When the skin is a golden yellow generously flecked with brown, then the banana is so easy to digest that it actually melts in your mouth.

The next time you feel hungry and tired, try a fully ripe banana. In the meantime, we shall be glad to send you a most unusual recipe book that tells of over eighty different ways of serving this nourishing fruit from the tropics. Just fill out and mail the coupon below for a copy.

DANGER LURKS WITHIN US

Do you know that in our bodies are dangers as great as contagion? Many disease germs enter the system with the food, lodge in the stomach and intestinal tract, multiplying by millions—ready to strike down their victim at the first opportunity. They bring about system poisoning, known as Toxemia!

The symptoms are legion — sleepless nights, lack of appetite, headache, nerves on edge—constant fatigue—any one of them may be a sign of Toxemia — a warning to drive out the poisons that are gradually ruining your health. Partola cleanses the system, rids it of life-destroying poisons—sterilizes the intestinal tract—ends constipation—and prevents Toxemia.

Take Partola—a mild, effective tonic laxative—pleasant to take in mint wafer form. At all good drug stores. Regular box, 30c—double size, 60c.

ZIP COON STORIES

—BY KEMBLE—

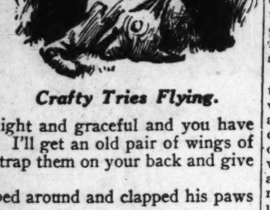
Crafty Fox Thinks He's a Bird.

I MET Zip Coon yesterday and he was laughing all over the place. He told me this story of something that had just happened:

"Golly me! O, golly my! If I had wings, how I could fly.
I'd fly so high I'd bump the sky. Golly me! O, golly my!"

Crafty Fox sang this song as he came skipping down the road one day last week.

Turkey Buzzard heard him from the top of the dead oak and squawked back at him:



Crafty Tries Flying.

"Golly me! O, golly my! I'll bet a nickle you can't fly. Just take my wings, let's see you try. Golly me! O,' golly my!"

Crafty Fox stopped short and sniffed.

"Gracious me," he grinned. "I smell music and if it isn't my old friend Turkey Buzzard's beautiful voice."

Turkey Buzzard couldn't sing a note, but he was so tickled at what Crafty said about him that he flopped down from the tree and bowed several times.

"Come to think of it, Crafty," said he, "I don't see why you shouldn't be able to fly. You are light and graceful and you have such a nice bushy tail to steer with. I'll get an old pair of wings of mine that I don't use any more and strap them on your back and give you a few lessons."

Crafty was delighted. He jumped around and clapped his paws and sang again:

"Golly me! O, golly my! I'll soon have wings and then I'll fly.
I'll fly so high I'll bump the sky. Golly me! O, golly my!"

TURKEY BUZZARD laughed and winked his old red eye as he strapped the wings on Crafty's back. He knew that Crafty would never fly to amount to anything, but he wanted to have some fun with the old sinner, so he just urged him on.

"Now, then, watch me," he squawked as he stood on a stump and spread his wings. "A little jump and—see—how easy it is?"

"Who couldn't do that?" grinned Crafty as he climbed on the Wings Spread Out and Head Still Wabbling.

stump and spread his wings. Then he gave a little jump, turned three or four somersaults, and landed on his left ear.

Just at that moment Benny Bunny came hopping along.

"What was that pretty little song you were singing, Crafty, about bumping the sky? Won't you sing it again for me, please?"

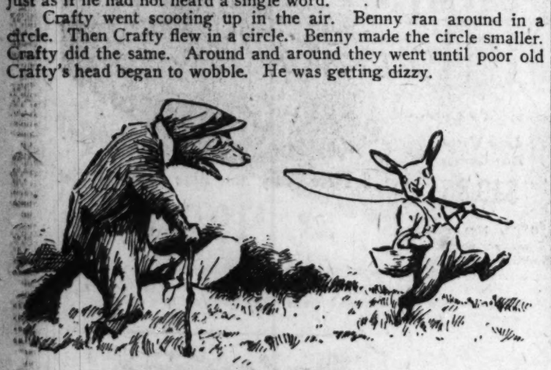
My, but Crafty was mad as he gathered himself together after the wreck. "Never mind," he snapped, "I'm going to learn and when I do fly you won't think it's so funny. Remember that funny Bunny."

Benny blew a kiss to Crafty, winked at Turkey Buzzard, and skipped along down the road. As soon as he was out of sight Crafty called to Turkey Buzzard: "When I learn to fly I'm going to catch him the first thing and give him the worst spanking he ever had. I am that."

CRAFTY kept at it, however, and soon he could rise quite a few feet in the air.

"Now I'm ready, old friend Buzzard," he shouted. "Call Benny Bunny." But Benny did not need to be called. He was hiding in the nearby thicket and saw all that was going on. Out he hopped just as if he had not heard a single word.

Crafty went scooting up in the air. Benny ran around in a circle. Then Crafty flew in a circle. Benny made the circle smaller. Crafty did the same. Around and around they went until poor old Crafty's head began to wobble. He was getting dizzy.



Poor Old Crafty Bumped a Tree.

"Now catch me," squeaked Benny as he scampered for a clump of little trees and darted beneath them. Crafty, with his wings spread out and his head still wobbling, sailed between the branches and hung there, making his old legs go as if he were riding a bicycle. Turkey Buzzard finally had to help him down.

Benny Bunny saw him the next day hobbling around with a cane. His best clothes were full of rips and tears.

"Golly my! O, golly me!" laughed Benny. "Poor old Crafty bumped a tree."

Crafty Fox just stood still and shook all over, he was so mad.

My next story will tell how Judge Bear gets hunk with Crafty Fox.

Yours truly, BUDDY FUDGE.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

Children's Rooms May Have as Much Originality and Charm Nowadays as Grownups'.

An attractive room for the little girl.

CHILDREN'S rooms of the present day involve a great deal more than mere sanitation. Not so long ago practicality and cleanliness were the only factors taken into consideration. Modern mothers, however, realize the importance of color and artistic surroundings, in addition to these fundamental requirements. They know the development of the child's growing personality may be greatly aided or hindered by environment. From a sanitary point of view it is no longer necessary that the playroom or nursery resemble a hospital ward. All sorts of fascinating and interesting fabrics, furnishings, and decoration are procurable nowadays in styles well suited and adaptable to use in the child's room. Bright color schemes, decorative but washable fabrics, and furnishings of simple, sturdy lines are the best choice.

Shown in today's illustration is a section of an unusually attractive room which has been especially planned for a little girl. Cream colored walls are decorated with many colored circles, cut out from paper and glued on. The whole surface is then proptected with a coat of washable shellac. On the metal shelf is an amusing set of figures imported from France. They are cut out in wood and enameled black and white. The two central figures hold a clock, by which the little girl has learned to tell time. The pair of end figures are electrically wired and fitted inside the lamps with small bulbs. The mantel is black and white marble.

Two little arm chairs at each side of the fireplace are upholstered, one in tiny flowered calico on a turquoise blue ground, the other in glazed chintz, showing clusters of flowers on a cream ground. Long, straight hanging window curtains are of turquoise blue sunfast, lined with cream colored sateen. They are arranged with pulley cords so they may be drawn together at night. A small four post bed, a bureau, and a pair of ladder back chairs are made of maple.

The bed cover is of the same material which hangs at the windows. A lamp on a little table beside the bed is made of a china Dutch girl holding an umbrella shade over the electric light bulb. Cupboards for books and toys are built into two corners. The rug is a deep peacock blue, with a border in two tones of the same color.

Dotted Swiss, delightfully fresh and crisp and so well suited, is used in another little girl's room. Casement windows have curtains of rose colored dotted Swiss, ruffled at the edges and caught back just above the sill with cuffs of the same. They are topped by ruffled valanaces. A cover on the bed is made of the same material, with deep full side flounces finished with a double row of narrow ruffles. An under cover is made of rose colored cotton rep. Runners on the dressing table, bureau, chiffonier, and bedside table are of the dotted Swiss simply hemmed. Deep mulberry, wool chenille rugs are used on the floor. The walls are done in a white paper sprinkled all over with tiny pink rosebuds. Woodwork and built-in shelves are painted white.

Flowered cretonne makes another child's room gay. Recessed windows are fitted with built-in seats, beneath which there is ample storage space for many youthful treasures. The windows are curtained with a peach colored, sunfast voile topped by cretonne valanaces, showing floral motifs on an ivory ground. The curtains are bound with two inch bands of the cretonne and are caught back with cuffs of the same. Boxed cushions, made to fit the window seats, are covered with cretonne. These cushions may be dragged onto the floor easily, where they may serve as magic carpets, or ships at sea, or whatever vehicle young fancy may convert them into.

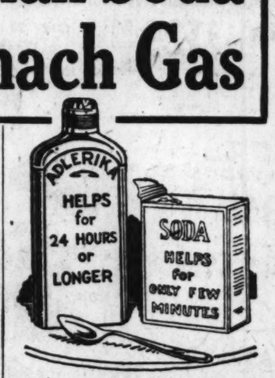
Twin beds in the room have deep flounced covers of the flowered cretonne. On a small table between the beds is a lamp with a parchment shade decorated to match the flowers in the cretonne. Two little low armchairs are upholstered in deep green diaper patterned denim. A squatty low table set between these chairs holds a sturdy tea set, so that the young hostess may serve afternoon tea of the cambric variety to her favored guests. A warm, pleasing glow is spread over the room by means of peach colored walls, finished with a washable paint. Two toned, green braided rugs are used on the floor.

Checked or plaid ginghams are particularly good in a boy's room. One small boy has a bright, sunny room, with sash curtains at the windows of gay blue and yellow sunfast gingham. The walls are painted clear corn yellow and the woodwork blue to match the color in the gingham. A boxed cover on the bed is made of the same gingham, finished with narrow blue upholsterer's fringe, all washable. Sturdy wooden benches, painted blue, may be put to innumerable uses. A deep midnight blue wool rug almost completely covers the floor.

Another little boy's room has white walls, spangled with many gold stars of various sizes. Woodwork is painted white, with depressions done in vermilion. At the windows are ruffled white organdy curtains, with fine vermilion bindings. All of the furniture is painted brilliant blue. Three wide, low benches are fitted with boxed cushions—army mattresses in disguise. These mattresses are covered with rep, one green, one blue, and one red. The covers fasten along one edge with snaps, so that they may be removed for laundering. The upper parts of built-in corner cupboards are filled with open shelves and the lower parts are concealed behind doors, so that things may be kept in order. A bed cover is made of sapphire blue rep piped with emerald green. The floor is covered with deep blue and white linoleum in large, alternating squares.

Striped sunfast in sage green, copper color, old gold and black, makes the window hangings in an older boy's room. Glass curtains are of old gold theatrical gauze. Panels in the walls are filled with decorative and vividly colorful ship posters. Built-in, open shelves hold the boy's tools, books, and his rapidly growing collection of ship models. A recessed windowed niche at one end of the room makes a happy setting for his work table and bench. The bed cover is made of striped sunfast, matching the window draperies. A comfortable armchair near one window is upholstered in copper colored wool rep, piped with black. Beside it stands a wrought iron reading lamp with parchment shade. A similar lamp is placed near the bed. Black and ecru linoleum on the floor is supplemented by two black fur rugs.

Better than Soda for Stomach Gas



PEOPLE who use soda or magnesia for gas on the stomach, sour stomach and indigestion know that these give but very temporary relief. The gas and sourness may be removed for a short time, but soon returns because the cause still remains. Recent discoveries made by medical specialists show that gas and sour stomach are nearly always due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis.

Intestinal Stasis

THIS insidious disease, specialists tell us, is caused by faulty diet and lack of proper exercise, and afflicts three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. By remaining too long in the bowels, this matter ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of gas bloating and pains, sour stomach, dyspepsia, dizzy spells and nervousness.

Even if the bowels move daily, enough old matter may be left to ferment, cause stomach gas, and poison the system. Only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing of both upper and lower bowel can lasting relief be secured.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, perfected and first used the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. Adlerika is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other gas-expelling and detergent elements. Unlike other medicines, it acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Relieves Gas Quickly

RELIEF from stomach gas, gas pains and bloating, is felt almost instantly after Adlerika is taken, unless due to malformations or other deep-seated causes. ONE spoonful often brings out an amazing amount of old poisonous matter which you never thought was in your system, and which may have been the hidden cause of gas, indigestion, nervousness or sleeplessness.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika frequently brings out an astonishing amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Adlerika is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for Intestinal Stasis and stomach gas, or whenever a thorough bowel cleansing is needed. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

"In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."—Dr. James Weaver.

"I suffered with intestinal stasis and gas. Soda or magnesia helped me very little. I got relief from the first dose of Adlerika, and since taking it, I eat almost anything, sleep well and gained weight."—Mrs. Chas. Rhodes, Yakima, Wash.

"Both my wife and myself suffered a great deal from indigestion and gas. Soda would give some relief, but Adlerika has done us more good than anything we have tried."—Charles Slaven, Terre Haute, Ind.

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the fly, which has five eyes and is so hard to catch, should be able to see a distance of not more than two or three feet!

These eyes of the fly, tiny as they are, are not nearly so simple as are those of man. They are likewise nowhere near as useful. The fly, like all the insects, depends on smell to find its way in the world much more than it does on eyes.

Two of the fly's eyes are called compound eyes. They are the big round fellows that sit up on the front of its head and seem to look out so wonderingly. If man's eyes were as big in proportion to his size as are those of the fly they would stand out like grapefruit.

These fly eyes have no lids on them and so are always open. They cannot be turned from side to side. It is because of this that they must be made "compound." Man's eyes have a single lens like a camera. That lens must be pointed at the thing at which the eye is looking. Man can do this by turning his eye. The eye of the fly has 4,000 lenses, each pointing in a different direction. In this way the fly's does not need to turn its head. It does not need to turn its head. So it can see any enemy that would try to catch it. It cannot see it, however, until it is within two or three feet and so must be quick to dodge.

Besides these two big, round eyes the fly has three tiny ones on top of its head. These are little more than skylights looking up. It is the big eyes that do most of the business.

The fly can see better than most insects. The ant, for instance, has but 50 lenses in its eyes and sees very little. Bees and wasps have average eyes and can see two feet. Certain butterflies have the best of insect eyes and can see as much as six feet. The eye of the dragon fly is among the most complicated and has 20,000 lenses. There is, however, a moth which has 27,000 lenses in its eye. These lenses are all packed together and, under the microscope, look like honeycomb. It is by measuring them that scientists can find out where they focus and so can tell how far the insect can see.

Billy was the only boy in the family with four older sisters. A caller at the house asked him how he ever managed to get along with so many girls. Billy hesitated a moment, and then, walking over to the caller, said very quietly, "I just simply fights 'em."

David and Bobby, both 4, were great pals, but often had fights which ended in tears. One morning David came in from play looking rather downcast, and being asked whether he and Bobby had been fighting again, he answered, "Well, no, we haven't been fighting, but we sure had a lot of conversation about somethin'."

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Too Ambitious.

When small children, my brother and I were constantly vieing with each other to be our father's pet. We were both of a jealous disposition and were really angered if father paid more attention to one than the other.

One day my father bought a pony for brother, which I could not ride because I was too small. Seeing him ride before my father's admiring eyes was too much, so I decided to gain father's admiration by learning to ride, too.

Father forbade this, so one day I went to the stable unobserved and took the pony. I finally mounted, gave the horse a cut with the whip, but when he started running I fell off, breaking my shoulder blade. I still have an ugly protusion on that bone to remind me of the folly of jealousy.

A. J.

Spoiling the Fun.

I was going to a grand party, where every one dressed wonderfully.

My girl friend and I went up to get new shoes. Imagine my dismay when arriving home to find mine were too small.

She offered to take them back for me. Knowing my clothes were much nicer than hers, she got my shoes a size too large this time.

Being time to go, I had to wear my old shoes, and my whole evening was spoiled on account of a jealous heart.

Women the World Over

Night work for women is gradually being done away with by law in Japan.

Changing about of women from job to job in industry is now easy, since most of the factory work done by women today requires little skill or experience.

The Missouri State Board of League of Women Voters has begun a campaign to have that state join the 22 other states which have jury service for women.

By husking more than 1,500 bushels of corn in 23 days, Miss Mary Franzen of Kingsley, Ia., set what is believed to be a new record. Her daily average was 68¾ bushels.

Mrs. L. M. Foster Welch, J. P., recently appointed sheriff of the county of the town of Southampton, is England's first sheriff since the creation of the office in 1477.

In Atlantic City recently a circuit court suit was tried by an entirely female jury, the first time in the history of the state that a jury entirely of women had heard a case.

This was Never Suspected

A BEAUTY parlor may have one of seventeen imitations of Nestle permanent wave machines. But few women suspect that many of these have been given away gratis or sold at cheap prices simply to obtain a footing. Sometimes the hair treated is of good quality and a satisfactory wave results. But more often, the patron is not so fortunate. More often, the results are unsatisfactory and she gives up the thought of having a second wave when the time comes.

With the new Nestle Circuline method, your hair is tested in advance to assure perfect results in the end, either by the Nestle Text-o-meter or by sample waves on the back of your head.

"Famous for silks"—we just repeat it—our customers said it first many years ago and do today; for you will find here the loveliest silks of the new season. The prices? Well—assortment, quality and low price are the predominant trio in this pre-Easter sale.

Featuring a most remarkable offering of 12,000 yards 39-inch all-silk "suede" crepe, 1.78

Fifty shades suited for sports, lingerie, formal or informal use, in this firm, souple silk of brilliant sheen. A color for every occasion, a quality to please the most exacting, and a price that invites instant action.

54-inch printed chiffon and georgette, 1.98

Sheer, supple silks printed in border or all-over patterns. A wide choice in color and design, the 54-inch width permitting the assembling of a complete frock from only 2 to 2½ yards, the width making the length.

32-inch all-silk fast color "tub crepes," 1.95 and 2.45

A washable sport silk that comes in stripe, check, or plaid patterns, in shades suitable for frocks, pajamas, blouses, and men's shirts. Its firm weave and fast coloring will withstand many washings.

40-inch all-silk mellow canton crepe, 2.90

Extra weight silk, in black, white, pastel, sport and street shades. Only 1800 yards at this price.

40-inch all-silk satin crepe—washable, 1.98

Pure silk, pure dye, and washable glove finish, for high colors, medium and dark shades. Black and white included. Especially suited for lingerie and frocks as it preserves a firm luster and pliable texture after many washings.

36 and 40-inch black silk coatings, 3.95 yard

Soft and pliable silks in a weight especially adapted to the new spring coats.

The Superba cutting and fitting service will cut, pin, and fit any coat or dress for $3 and up from materials purchased here.

Fur-collared kashmir coats and trim tailleurs further promote the success of the strictly tailored outline

The coats, $85

Straight and undeviating is the line decreed by the new mode for frock and coat alike. Soft cashmere, that readily lends supple folds to tucks or pleats, comprises this entirely new and exclusive collection of coats.

At left—a model fashioned of jorella weave, body of the coat being tucked diagonally and a tuxedo of squirrel forming an unusual note.

Center—a model of kasha weave with tuckings is trimmed with the flat American broadtail (sheared dyed lamb) much in demand.

At right—a coat of soft kashmir has a deep shawl collar of monkey fur, again sponsored by Paris as most chic. Fourth floor.

Tailleurs, $50

Like the first harbinger of spring the tailleur reappears and meets an enthusiastic greeting, true tribute to its unfailing success. The newest suits combine a plain hip length jacket with striped or matching skirt as the model sketched.

In the Lady Joan Shop hats are youthful—head sizes large

15

And crochet viscas—perle viscas—novelty straws, felts and fabric combinations present an alluring choice—in all the lovely tints and tones favored by the smartly dressed for immediate wear.

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL

by WESTBROOK PEGLER

On Police Records, and the Case of Friend William

He now lives at the country club with his old lady.

I WAS reading an article in the papers this morning where it stated that a young man was arrested for shooting some people, and the article stated that the young man had a police record as long as a day in church. It stated that, because of his police record, the young man probably would get an extra long housing in the penitentiary for shooting these people, and it disgusted me to read such a narrow minded article in the papers.

Of course, I do not think that young men should go around town shooting people unduly, because if you do not regulate shooting you will not have anybody left to watch parades or vote on election day, and then you will have a very serious situation, as there will be nobody for the coppers to shove around.

SUCCESSFUL ARRESTS

But I do not think that a young man who shoots somebody now and again should be put into prison where he will have to associate with dog poisoners and welfare workers and dishonest wardens, because you would be likely to spoil his character and make a criminal of him.

It disgusts me to read an article about a young man's police record being held against him, as I know some very fine people with police records, and I realize that the friendships and personal contacts that a young man establishes in this way sometimes help him to become a useful citizen and a leader in worthy public movements.

I have a friend named William who was arrested every Thursday night and arraigned in court every Friday morning for two years and a half, and he tells me that his success in the last few years has been almost entirely due to the ground work of his career that was laid in the bull house of the 72d precinct. He was just a young chump when he started his police record, but he was a smartish young fellow at that, and, in the course of time, he made friends, and now he has retired and lives at a country club with his old lady.

The coppers used to put the finger on William for running a joint called a membership fight club in the days when everybody that went to the bouts was supposed to be a member of the club in good standing. The coppers were supposed to raid these joints on fight nights and take the worthy president, and my friend William was greatly excited the first few times because he thought it was a disgrace to get arrested.

A $300 LAWYER

At first he hired an expensive lawyer to go to court with him and explain to the judge that the members were just holding their regular weekly meetings and that some of the members liked to fight and they were just fighting sociably. The lawyer would get up in court and he would tell the judge a lot of information about habeas corpus and he would state that a gentleman's club was his castle like it was over in England in the old days when the soldiers would come in and toss people around and turn things upside down and drink up everything in the bar and the king, who was running for reelection, finally said an Englishman's home was like the king's castle and the soldiers were just like a lot of gorillas breaking into places that way and drinking up everything in the bar.

The judge would listen to William's lawyer and then he would say, "All right, that will cost you $10; pay the clerk on the right and no checks cashed; next case." So William would pay the clerk $10 and he would pay the lawyer $300 and the next Thursday night the cops would bust into the joint again and cause a lot of disturbance in the midst of the fights.

JUDGE AIDS HIM

After a while the judge called William into his office one day and he said, "William, it is none of my business, but I think you are a chump to be paying that fellow $300 to be your lawyer every Friday and I have a young friend who is just out of law school and he has not got much business yet so he will take your work for $50 a crack."

So William changed lawyers and the judge scaled the fine down to $5 and it got so that he would let William sign tabs with the clerk and run the bill up to $50 or so before paying off.

Then one day the judge called William into his office again and told William that he ought to quit loping around and get into some good business where he could make some dough and be respectable, as the fight business was a low business and full of bums.

"Since they closed the saloons in this town," the judge said, "it has been very hard for the leading citizens to get good material and I have an idea that you would be a success in this business as you are a smart young fellow and are well known to the bulls and the bondsmen and the courts.

"So," the judge told William, "if you want me to I will put you in touch with a couple of prominent gentlemen who have a warehouse full of material and if you will call at my house this evening I will introduce you to the gentlemen."

A TRIUMVIRATE

So William called at the judge's house that evening, and the judge said, "William, I wish to introduce you to Sheriff So-and-So, who is one of the prominent gentlemen that I spoke about in my office."

Of course, William was glad to meet the sheriff, but he said to the judge, "Judge, who is the other prominent gentleman?" and the judge said, "I am the other prominent gentleman, and the sheriff and I wish to have some smart business man hoist this material out of the warehouse and put it on the market in a quiet way, and we will do business three ways with the dough."

So William resigned from the worthy presidency of the fight club and retired from the prize fight business, which is really a low business and full of bums, and became a rich and respectable member of the community, and he now lives at the country club with his old lady.

HE MIGHT SUCCEED

Therefore, as I say, it is very disgusting to me to read a narrow minded article in the papers stating that a young man's police record will be held against him and that he will probably get extra long housement for shooting those people.

You cannot tell why the young man shot those people, because, for all you know, the young man may not have been feeling good at the time, and when a man is not feeling good he is likely to do things that he will apologize for afterward, and I have no doubt that if you put it up to this young man in the right way he would promise not to shoot those people any more.

And if his police record is all that the article says it is, I don't see why he shouldn't become a substantial and respectable member of the community like my friend William.

LADIES IN CRIME

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Kitty Malm, the Tiger Woman

IF ever a 19 year old girl had reason to be a cynic about men, it seems to me that Kitty Malm—the Tiger Woman, they called her—had that right.

Now Kitty, understand, was no saint. Maybe she did carry a gun where most girls hide their love letters. But perhaps she wasn't altogether wrong, from her arc of the circle of experience, when she mumbled to the bailiff at her own trial for murder:

"Men are quitters. They're long on talk, but, Lord, when it comes to the showdown, they're yellow."

MARRIES AT 15

Kitty, or rather Katherine Walter, was born in Austria-Hungary; she came here in the steerage when she was 7 years old. She finished the fifth grade when her mother, in a moment of philosophy, reflected:

"No need for girls to go far in school. You just spend a lot of money on them, then they get married. But fine for the boys."

So Kitty went to work in a machine factory. And grew more the cynic, if we can trust her words:

"Fellows, always fellows. I didn't want to marry 'em. Then they'd try to scare me, saying they'd scar me and spoil my looks with a razor or a gun if I wouldn't marry 'em."

Finally one of the men in the factory, Max Baluk, the Russian, married her. She was 15. Four years later, when she is on trial, she can still remember the ugly names her husband called her. Her baby was coming, she recalls, but she couldn't go back home to her mother's, for her stepfather called her worse names than her husband did.

LOVED HER BABY

Kitty, it is very possible, was too busy "prowling joints" ever to belong to a mothers' club; and she phrased a colorful oath much more easily than she mouthed a sentiment about the "nobility of maternal sacrifice." But she did love the baby.

"Lord," she exclaimed in her jail cell one day, and of course part of it was rhetoric, "I could kill a woman who'd rather have a dog than a kid."

She loved the baby, "Tootsie," and worked for her, fought for her.

"I had to hurt my baby's leg once," she told me, "gettin' her over a barbed wire fence to get her away from a man who stoled her to try to get me to marry him. I hurt her, but it was to get her away from a bad joint."

Once more a man crossed her path. This time, as she tells it, she asked Otto Malm to pose as her husband for half an hour and "smash the face of a dirty man down the street who's trying to steal my kid."

Malm, an ex-convict, played the part for half an hour, and the two went into partnership.

A KILLING

Which brings us to the night of Nov. 4, 1923, when Kitty and Malm and a man named Eric Noren drove to the Delson Knitting company, 3051 Lincoln avenue. They were there to "pull a job," but they were surprised by Edward Lehman, night watchman. There was shooting. Lehman was killed; Kitty was shot, by a stray bullet from Malm's gun, it is believed.

The wrong couple, brought in by the police, were indicted through the confession of the girl, Ethel Beck, who vaguely and dumbly offered no rebuttal when the police fastened the crime upon her and a man. But later Malm was arrested, and once more the men she knew played Kitty false. About the first, and surely the last thing, Malm said to the police was: "It was the shot from her gun that killed the watchman; she done it."

For a brief, restless, futile time Kitty Walter Baluk Malm had the satisfaction of besting several men. The police, dispatched by Malm's ungallant and, it seemed from later evidence, untrue shifting of the blame, to a house at 1531 North La Salle street, were refused admittance by a woman whom they didn't know and who knew they didn't know she was Kitty. One of the men went back to headquarters for instructions, leaving two others guarding the place.

KITTY GETS AWAY

Kitty slipped quietly out the back door, leaving her young sister there to receive the officers with their new orders and instructions. The coup caused the suspension of several policemen and enabled Kitty to get away to a boarding house in Indianapolis.

But this pasty-faced, hard talking, strangely emotional Austro-Hungarian girl who said, with many a violent expression, that she loved her baby, really did. She got lonesome for the child.

And one afternoon, perhaps a week after her disappearance, a stolidly built young woman in a near seal coat walked up to the desk sergeant at the Hudson avenue police station and said, casually enough:

"Do you want me? I'm Mrs. Malm. I wanted to see my baby."

They locked her up. They took a statement from her, in which she declared that she had been merely the lookout at the robbery, that she had had no gun that night, that her own husband had accidentally shot her, and that she didn't bear him any particular malice for having insisted that she did it.

It wasn't his fault so much as it was all men's weakness, she explained.

"They must'a made him do it," she said over and over. "When I seen him just now, I could see that, God, he looked so bad, it got me. Men, say, they're brave as the devil but they can't hold out the way a woman can. Now me, say, they coulda beat hell outta me and I wouldn't a-squealed. Say, listen, they could of built a fire under me and I'd never of squawked."

And I rather imagine she wouldn't. Not for a long time, anyway.

KITTY MALM AND HER BABY—The mother, called "The Tiger Woman" by jail officers, surrendered so she could see her child again. Kitty was given a life term after her husband insisted she was the one who killed a watchman during an attempted robbery.

(TRIBUNE Photo.)

ETHEL BECK was arrested with a man companion, and strangely confessed a murder in which neither was implicated. This was proven later, and she was freed.

(TRIBUNE Photo.)

A CURIOUS MOTHER

Then they brought the baby to her. Crying, swearing, sobbing, kissing, yelling, she was a curious mother; fierce, sincere, inconsistent, earnest, impassioned, pathetic.

"There ain't nobody can be as good to her as me," she cried.

"May God help me to kill her if they ever try to take her away from me. And if I get out and the judge says I can't have her, I'll kill her first. There's only one person in this whole world I'd let take her and that's my mother. But I'd never want my mother to tell the baby who her mother was. Not a word."

Her face at this point sagged into lines of cruel desperation, and she worked her mouth in ugly wrinkles to keep from crying. It wasn't play-acting. Then, just before the tears came, she looked over at the child.

"She'll be three years old the 29th of July. They're cute at that age, ain't they?"

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

The police matron warmed up a bottle of milk; the police sergeant sent out for some bread, and the baby feasted with her mother. Next day the youngster's grandmother came and took her away and Kitty went over to the county jail. Beneath her sturdy, stolid peasant figure was a whirligig of emotions, the authorities soon found out. There were scenes, terrible outbursts of temper and postscripts of weeping.

Once she tried to commit suicide by hanging herself with a bed sheet. Upon being revived she was savage in her rebukes of her rescuers. They called her the "Tiger Woman," and so she was, some of the time. Other times she was twice as "scare't," in spite of denials, as any of the more suave, beguiling ladies who had sat behind the bars and thought up naive phrases. Kitty had no nice phrases, no silken syllables.

The trial began before Judge Walter P. Steffen, on Feb. 18, 1924.

Kitty, none too stylish with her rather greasy black hair cut straight and square, sat near her lawyer, Attorney J. J. McCarthy, that opening day and saw her co-defendants desert her and leave her alone. "Blonde Kitty" and the man she had implicated in her foolish confession had long since been dismissed.

KITTY LEFT ALONE

Earlier that day Malm, ever the same gallant, had pleaded guilty to the charge of murder, but placed the actual killing on some one else when he said, "There were three shots fired and I fired only one." Earlier, too, Eric Noren entered a technical plea of guilty, but swore that he had driven the car the night of the murder and had remained in it.

That left Kitty alone in the defendant's chair. She tried to buoy herself up with remarks such as this:

"Say, I have about as much chance of gettin' the rope as Malm has of gettin' angel wings when he croaks."

Or this:

"Any fool could tell it wasn't me. There was only one gun. And, suppose I had of had a gun, would I of shot myself? Huh? Say, that's a hot one."

And this:

"It's always ladies' day when it comes to shovin' some one up before the cops."

As the state qualified the jurors for the death penalty, Kitty, assuming a bravado that didn't fit in so well with her pallor, her ice cold hands, and the shaky way she reached for the glass of water, asked this question:

"Say, would anybody in the world hang a girl for bein' in the alley with a guy who pulls a gun and shoots? And she even gets a piece of lead in her own head."

LITTLE ONE ON HAND

The evidence did show that a bullet lodged in Kitty's head; that Malm pitched her, head first, into the car; that one doctor refused to dress the wound; that the second doctor did, and that she had an ugly and dangerous hurt for many days.

There was present in the courtroom, too, that first day of the trial, a tiny girl sucking a lollypop. In the midst of the judicial proceedings there was an unjudicial sound, and the plump little girl, well rounded out with leggins and a puffy blue coat, stumbled over to a bench in the front of the court. As she spied the back of Kitty's head and shoulders she stuttered out, around the lollypop, "There's mommie. I want to go to mommie," and started over.

THE UNGALLANT HUSBAND, Otto Malm, who blamed the murder of the watchman on his 19 year old wife. The young mother's answer was that all men are weak.

(TRIBUNE Photo.)

Of course the bailiff intercepted the tiny figure and instructed the child's grandmother that it was against the law for "Tootsie" to communicate with her mother, on trial for murder, when the jury was present.

A SURPRISE WITNESS

The child in the blue coat kept her distance; the twelve men were selected; the witnesses took the stand. Through the days Kitty kept saying, "I ain't scare't." But one afternoon, it was the day after Washington's birthday, the state put on a surprise witness, a Blanche King, who had roomed in the Indianapolis boarding house. One day, Miss King declared, the landlord had escorted her to "the Chicago girl's room."

"Then what happened?" queried the prosecutor.

"She was combing her hair"—it is Miss King speaking of Kitty now—"and I saw a scar on her head and asked about it. She said, 'My husband shot me; we were doing a job at a sweater factory.'"

The prosecutor wanted to know about guns. Miss King was glad to tell him.

"Yes, sir, she had two guns; a 'Big Bertha' and a 'Little Betsy.' She had the big one strapped around her waist. When any one knocked at the door, she would take out the gun and run down the hallway."

Then, growing more gleeful the more she said she remembered, Miss King thought a moment, then almost shouted out a triumphant epilogue to her surprise testimony, "She used to say, 'I hate coppers, and I'll kill any one who comes to take me.'"

FALLS IN FAINT

Miss King was through presently. Presently, too, the day's session was concluded. As she got up to walk across the bridge from the Criminal court building to the county jail, Kitty grew whiter than ever. The next moment she had sprawled in an ugly, helpless flop on the floor of the courtroom. She lay there, insensible, for two minutes.

A few feet away, barred only by legal technicalities from coming to throw water on the girl's ashen face, stood Kitty's mother, holding Kitty's daughter. The child kept on sucking the inevitable lollypop.

After a bit the girl on the floor was revived into an incoherent, trembling woman. Idlers in the courtroom went their way, speculating on her faint.

"Sure, it was real. Didn't you see her go? Besides, the jury had gone out, so it wouldn't have done any good to fake one," some mused.

"She's thinking of her kid," others ventured.

"Naw, it's the rope she's thinking of," another insisted.

Next day Kitty was sitting up straight and square. And the next day after that she took the stand to tell her story. Otto Malm, she declared, ordered her to come with him as a lookout. Suddenly, from the dark night, Lehman, the watchman, flashed a light on Malm. Malm fired and the man with the light fell.

SCREAMS AND RUNS

"I screamed and ran," said Kitty. "Then Otto fired at me. I felt a shot in the head and fell. Otto pulled me along the alley and shoved me into the car; then we went to a doctor and I got fixed up."

The jury was out an hour and twenty minutes. The twelve men took four ballots. The verdict was life imprisonment in the state penitentiary at Joliet.

When she heard it Kitty, the Tiger Woman, flew into a frenzy, waved her arms about and yelled, "Keep away. I don't want to see anybody." But the fury was quickly spent and for the second time during the trial Kitty fainted. And came to, only to faint again. And was revived and led back to her cell, where she again fainted.

Stepfather, boys in the factory, husband, more men, the gallant Malm, and the 12 men who sent her to the penitentiary for the rest of her natural life, while those other ladies of uglier crimes and less ugly faces and figures were given a smile and an acquittal.

If ever a 19 year old girl had reason to be a cynic about men, it seems to me that Kitty Malm—the Tiger Woman, they called her—has that right.

London Women Wear Less Clothing

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—A statistician with a set of scales and an aptitude for that sort of thing has made the discovery that the average woman in London wears 15 ounces of clothes when indoors, and when dressed for the rigors of a wintry day carries raiment that tips the scales at 3 pounds 4 ounces.

He attributes this tendency to lighter clothing to the Americans, who have given the somewhat stolid English girls something to take off, putting the good, substantial woolens on the shelf next to the bustles and high shoes.

Pursuing his subject further, the statistician found that the average well dressed business man usually wears around 12 pounts 11 ounces of clothing, and dared anybody, even a Yank, to try to change that.

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakwak

A House Warming in tha New Place

ONE night lass week tha B. and C. interrupts my after supper snooze with tha following grief. "Honey, don't you think, now that we're settled down we oughta have a house warming?" I politely informed her that I wood not ask that janitor again for more heat as tha last time I rapped on tha pipes he comes up an tells me those radiators aint Xelophones an' if I didn' quit playing them he wood make it so dam hot for me that I wouldn' appreciate hell when I got there.

About now I get told that her girl friends advised her not to marry a boob as you can't change them. For once in my life I fully agreed that I was a boob cause if I wasn't I'd still be single. She wants to know how come I was dumb enough not to know what a "house-warming" was, then I get a edjucational lecture entitled "Social Funkshuns."

SETTLE DOWN AND UP

The idea is that when you either start a new place or move into new quarters you are supposed to throw a party. Lots of times it's poor policy to argue but this time I know my onions and told her in plain Inglish that she's got her wires crossed cause that shindig has always been known as a "Grand Opening."

Also she gets informed by me that tha proper thing to do first, after settling down, is to settle up. Between the 2d and 3d round of the bout I said, "Wouldn' it be fine to have a lotta company an have the Phonograph Company guy walk in with an attachment." Her answer to that is so funny I made off that I was thirsty an beat it to tha kitchin so's I could laff. Whadda you think she pulls? She seys, "Well, if he does I will just tell him tha last attachment we bought don't work so good an we wasn't interested."

Women ain't fooling me much these days, I am hip to a lot of their ideas. The thing that is uppermost in her noodle is to get tha gang over so's she can show off our new furniture an incidentally ritz them a bit. I suggested instead of having them come over we could save a lotta kale by having the guys we bought it from give us a cupple dozen catalogues and we could mark "X" on what we bought and mail them to tha girl friends. To this clever thought I got a very high-brow retort, in fact one might call it brilliant repartee; namely, "AIN'T CHU FUNNY."

VERDICT IN DUTCH

After talking till I was blue in the face against her plan I finally saw there was no use prolonging tha agony, but I get my way as to their not gonna arrive for 6 o'clock supper. Those sea lions are all through getting fat on my pay check. From now on my slogan is "Don't feed the animals."

I could of done better in a jewelry store.

A compromise verdict was reached and they will arrive at 8 o'clock and get a "Dutch Lunch" before they go home. For those of you what don't know what is a dutch lunch, it's a lotta assorted junk served cold an gets it's name on account your stomach is in dutch for two or three days after you eat it.

The night was set for Thursday and we decided what we was gonna feed 'em an how much jack was gonna be spent. In one way I was kinda glad they was coming cause I could get rid of my last batch wich turned out rotten. I have a hunch there is altogether too much water in our chlorine these days. Instead of turning out about 4 percent it was terrible per scent.

A DELIKATESSEN

My instructshuns was to pick up tha eats on the way home on acct. we're living in a new nayberhood I looked 3 or 4 delikatessens over an finally picked what looked like a reasonable one. After pricing a few articles I think I could of done better in a jewelry store. A piece of liver sausage that he wanted 42 cents for was about as big as what we kids got for nothing when we was sent after soup meat. Baked ham at 85 cents a pound must certainly show this bozo a terrific loss, but I suppose on acct. the sharp advance reported by the stock exchange on the clove market he is entitled to charge 85 and boost it higher without giving written notice. I'm very much surprised that some wise delikattessener don't start selling swiss cheese by tha inch instead of by tha pound and then slip you tha piece with the biggest holes. When I told him I wanted 10 cents worth of dill pickles he says, "Maybe you mean 10 cents worth of dill pickle," for a minute I thought he was gonna slice one on his rotary razor an give me a cupple thin slices for a dime. Before I got half of the items on tha list I was out of kale. If I'da had a cupple hundred dollars extra with me I might of been tempted to buy a can of caviar to eat after the company went home.

When I reach the house tha B. and C. instead of slipping me a little pleasant greeting of some kind, asks me what took me so long. Being in a very good frame of mind by this time I admitted that I was up at tha Vanderbilts having tea and they just wouldn' think of my leaving any earlier.

DUKE HAS ACCIDENT

All of a sudden we both started to sniff as there was a helova strange smell coming from somewhere, what happened was that the bucket of herring leaked all over my pants leg. My good suit was at the tailor's getting pressed and he was closed for the night. I found out where he lived and made him open up tha store. I had asked that damn cheese peddler if the paper bucket wouldn' leak an he wise-cracked me with, "I've been in tha business 40 yrs. and have still to find one that leaked." Tomorrow he will get a letter from a lawyer guy I know and if we can scare him into a settlement maybe tha party will show a profit. When I tole tha B. and C. what I was gonna do she pulls a funny crack somethin' about as how the lawyer should sue him for "Breaches of Herring juice," if that's her idea of a funny joke, maybe I'm wrong.

By tha time we do tha dishes it's 8 o'clock and tha food collectors start to arrive, on acct. most of 'em bring their kids it's no use tryin ta play cards so we just sit an talk, play tha home brew and tha radio. Of course they all see the new furniture and a lotta "How beautifuls," "How marvelous," "How stunning," are swung via the bunk route. Tha B. and C.'s face was lit up like State and Madison sts. and she pulls the ole stuff about as how it's not so expensive as we would like to get but it's practical and substantial. If she pulled that line once I herd it a dozen times. That gang coulda got a good laff if they knew it aint our stuff till March 1928 not counting maybe a few skips. When Mrs. Bolsum asked her what kind of a lamp it was she seys, "It's a French creation," how she figgers it I don't know as we bought it from an eyetalion. Now I'm wondering what breed our Swiss clock might be as this was bought from the firm of Murphy & Goldberg.

THA ENTERTAINMENT

Tha rest of tha evening was very enlightening, we had the extreme pleasure of listening to Mrs. Monroe [Tha Burton Holmes of Engelwood] tell us of her trip to Pikes Peak, this trip was took back to 1916 but to hear her tell it you would think she came back yesterday. I've heard tha damn story so often that if she ever goes again I will have every mule and guide bribed in tha way of a SHOVE OFF.

Mr. Gilbert gave a delightful discourse on insurance at the end of which his cards were passed among the guests. I once gave that bozo my fire insurance and when the bill came in it looked to me like he'd got insurance instead of fire.

A rare treat in tha way of music was Miss. Chalmers' piano selection entitled "Give me a rose," if she hadn't quit after tha 1st verse she would got a wreath of them which she would never have smelled. This chrome has got nerve enough to tell us she couldn do justice to tha piece on acct. our piano is all out of tune.

One of Charley King's kids gave a imitation of Charley Chaplin and it was so natcheral youda sworn it was either Tom Mix or Harold Lloyd. The rest of tha kids were very well behaved, outside of throwing toys at the chandeleers an pulling our hound's tail, you wouldn' want to see more perfect youngsters.

THA BIG STAMPEDE

When lunch was announced the people what live under us must of thought there was a stampede of horses and I suppose I'm gonna get me a lotta dirty looks from now on. What got me sore was these starving Armenians makin themselves 3 layer sandwiches, one bird was eating olives two at a time during tha course of his buffet programme. Being tha host I couldn very well say ennything, but I would liked to have asked him to use a little bread with his butter. Right here I wanta offer a challenge to any "Dunker Club" in tha country. I will even bet that this organization can give a three dunk handicap to any other team and beat 'em in 5 minutes of play.

Right after tha eats they all pulled tha ole gag as how it wasn't polite to go home right after lunch but on acct. tha childrun, they had better. I'm afraid if they hadn't, somebody in the block would have called the wagon. After drying eight thousand three hundred and fifty-two dishes I was too weak to tell tha B. and C. what I had on my mind and went to bed.

The next morning on tha way to work I stood in front of a "JOIN THE NAVY" sign for ten minutes, an I think I will drop in at lunch time an sign up.

Why in hell do they call a guy who marrys you a justice of tha peace?

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

I think I will sign up.

Spring Cleaning?

Let us do the hardest work

We can lighten your housecleaning labors by half! Anything that's washable, we'll launder—and launder faultlessly. NO shrinking of woolens, NO tearing of curtains, NO discoloring of covers. Everything that goes through our model plant comes back lovely, clean and fresh. You'll be delighted, and the cost is really small.

Blankets

In constant use, these cold weather coverings need a frequent bath in pure rain soft water with suds of mild soap, such as we give them. And Remember, they're guaranteed not to shrink.

Bedspreads

Probably nothing is more in evidence in your bedroom than your bed spread, and bright sunshiny weather is quick to reveal dirt. You may send them to us with every assurance that they will be perfectly laundered.

Curtains

Soiled and discolored from weeks of Winter soot. Bundle them up and phone us to call, and in just a little while we'll return them as crisp and fresh and clean as new.

Covers and Awnings

We will remove all the dust and dirt and restore them to their original freshness. Unfailing care prevents discoloration or fading.

Washable Rugs

You'll be surprised how we can renew dust-laden rugs to fresh attractive colors. For the sake of sanitation, as well as appearance, phone us to call for them at once.

Complete Laundry Service

Send us your laundry this week, and just see how much more satisfied you will be. Not only good work, but quick, too! We can give you 24-hour service.

WINE BOOTLEGGERS

By Edward Burns

Millions in Graft but Game Has Died

WINE, of course, has been used for sacramental purposes since Old Testament days, and while there are many scholars who claim that not all potions called wine in Holy Writ were wine as we have known it in our generation, there is much evidence that the pious, ages ago, used port and other red wines in their religious celebrations.

It remained for that great modern American, Volstead, to bring out the full possibilities of wine as a ritualistic necessity.

After all the saloons had been ostensibly closed, at the start of the prohibition era, certain sanctimonious gentlemen speedily appraised the great field of piety, and figured up just what could be realized on the fact that Mr. Volstead had expressly excluded sacramental wines from his lists of tabooed concoctions.

A few cautious inquiries revealed that not only would it be possible to withdraw still wines such as port, sherry, angelica, and muscatel, but that an ecclesiastical innovation was possible in that sparkling wines such as champagne and burgundy could be used in the rites if proper arrangements were made.

UNANIMOUS FOR GIN

It was at about this time that one of the many early prohibition jokes came out—that one about the colored church committee that voted upon what the congregation should use for sacramental purposes and were unanimous for gin.

According to government statistics, Chicago reached a veritable frenzy of religious ardor during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923. In that period 1,138,507 gallons of still and sparkling wines were purchased in this city by persons who technically were forced to claim they needed the stuff in their drive to keep Satan behind them.

In the succeeding twelve months, due probably to the fact that the town was flooded during the period with good Scotch, this brand of piety dropped off to a mere 718,308 gallons of still wines, the sparkling rites having been ruled out by treasury department regulations.

While it may be sacrilegious to mention it, the merchandising of this great aid to spiritual uplift offers some illuminating statistics.

In the two years mentioned above 1,856,815 gallons of wine were released under what purported to be legal circumstances.

Port, because it requires the best grade of grapes for body and also for blending to give rich color, is the most expensive to produce (forgetting, for purposes of being conservative, the sparkling wines). Sherry is less expensive to make than port, and then comes muscatel and angelica.

MORE SPIRITUAL IN N. Y.

But the average cost of production, ranging from port at 75 cents a gallon down to angelica at 45 cents, is about 60 cents a gallon.

So it is apparent that it cost to produce the wine consumed in Chicago in these two years approximately $1,114,086.

Wine distributors in Chicago bought the wine at prices ranging from $2 to $3.25 a gallon laid down in Chicago, and were able to sell it at an average price of $6.50 a gallon, regardless of whether it was port, sherry, etc.

On this basis wine which cost $1,114,089 to produce was, in two years, sold for sacramental purposes in Chicago for $12,069,297, or at a gross profit of $10,955,208.

In the same period New York consumed about 50 per cent more wine than Chicago, so that in the first and second prohibition cities of the world paid approximately $30,000,000 for $2,750,000 worth of wine supposed to be legal.

During these times the wine rarely was cut or tampered with by distributers. The wine ran 21 per cent and was, for the most part, produced in the fine, big, clean wineries of California. A celebrant who was a good strong bourbon drinker could get about the same action on a water glass full of the wine as he could on a two ounce shot of liquor, and have the added satisfaction of believing himself well within the law.

CHEAPER THAN BOOZE

Sales in saloons came at 25 cents for a pony of good port, as compared to 75 cents for a dose of questionable red booze.

Although the Volstead act provided for withdrawals by various Christian denominations, the Jews were given the privilege of the large withdrawals. But the unusual feature of the whole thing was that a sincerely pious orthodox Jew wouldn't touch the socalled legalized sacramental wine, for the simple reason that it wasn't kosher, in that the stuff was produced and handled by persons of other faiths. At the wineries rabbis were employed to give the stuff the appearance of being kosher, but it was impossible to fool many good Jews with this routine. Most devout Jews make their own wine.

One friend of mine, who was a distributor, told me that on his list of actual customers there were only two Jews, and that both of them went to synagogue only on Yom Kuppur, and that even on that day they were so unorthodox as to ride to services just because it was raining. Men of that sort don't care whether their wine is kosher or not, my friend explained.

The wine was distributed through an illicit conspiracy for which twenty-five persons now are awaiting sentence in federal conspiracy. One of these is a former prohibition director. Another former director and a dry state senator recently were acquitted by a federal jury when the government prosecutors were unable to convince it that the pair were a part of the conspiracy.

DEAD MEN ON LISTS

Witnesses at the trial, who previously had confessed their own guilt, including two prohibition agents and a coterie of graft collectors, told how wine distributors had been forced to pay $300 and $400 graft for each 2,000 gallons of wine withdrawn under government permits.

Under the law the wine had to be taken out by an authorized distributor representing a religious congregation. It soon developed, at the outset of the scheme, that there weren't enough bona fide congregations to go around, so the wine wholesalers conceived the brilliant idea of selling fake congregation lists to prospective distributors.

In 1923, when the sacramental wine racket was at its height, there were in Chicago 200 distributors representing nonexistent congregations. Later, when these congregation lists were checked up, they were found to carry the name of nearly every Jew who had died in Chicago in thirty years. All were credited on the records with being current users of large quantities of wine for sacramental purposes.

The whole plot was, of course, thoroughly organized, with "a big three" of wholesalers in command of the situation. If a distributor got behind in his graft dues, it was discovered promptly that he was a ruthless law violator, and he could obtain no more withdrawal permits. The same technique applied to the distributor who could not resist the temptation to do a little shopping for some of his wine.

A TRUCK LOAD OF BEER seized in a liquor raid. Note how the barrels in the auto were camouflaged with boxes and tarpaulins. The trick failed to fool the dry agents, however. (TRIBUNE Photo.)

He must pay the trust price, or his permit was a mere scrap of paper.

Strangely enough, there was scarcely any violence connected with the wine racket, except in clashes with hijackers who intercepted the stuff in transit. The gunman-salesman technique so largely in use in beer and whisky merchandising never was a part of the wine conspiracy.

But it was too good to last. The law relative to wine withdrawals has not been changed, but the government policy has been. Less than 10,000 gallons of sacramental wine has been withdrawn in Chicago in the last two years.

I was in a winery in California a year ago in which 500,000 gallons of wonderfully made wine was ageing in the vats. The owners of the establishment were reputable business men and had no idea of bootlegging the wine tied up by the change of policy on withdrawals.

HOME MADE WINES

There is no good wine in Chicago right now, and the wine in one vat room I visited would be if hid down in Chicago this week in the hands of bootleggers, snapped up by the retail trade at about $6,000,000, or double the price of sacramental racket days.

But there it is, getting better each hour—while the owners patiently wait for the millennium when light wines and beer return.

Chicago is not without other kinds of wine, however. Hundreds of tons of grapes were shipped into this city last year and immediately went to the presses, most of which are located on the near west and near north sides.

These wines are mostly of the sour variety, both red and white, and have, colloquially speaking, a wicked wallop. This beverage, though it is powerful and less liable than port or sherry to make the patient ill, is not particularly popular with the former sacramental wine drinkers. It is merchandized in quarts rather than gallons, a quart, on the average, bringing $2.

There has been an increase in fig wines and a falling off in the dandelion product. Housewives are said to consider fig wine the most satisfactory home beverage now that good gin alcohol is hard to get. But most experienced drinkers find it much too sweet.

It does not appear that the California rains have hurt the current grape crop.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

By Snowshoe Ag

Al Knows His Shakespeare.

YESTERDAY I didn't have nothing to do, so I goes down town an' trots into the public library. I picked up a book wich admitted on the cover that it contained all uv Bill Shakespeare's Broadway Failures, so I opened it an' read one uv William's heavy dramas, after wich I put the book back on the shelf because I hadda go home for supper.

Bill's stuff is easy for me, an' I'm going back in a day er two an' read another uv his 4 act spasms. Maybe the reader finds Shakespeare a trifle difficult. If so, lemme slip yew the plain dirt on:

HAMLET

Hamlet wuz King uv Denmark, an' bizness wuz good! He owned the controlling stock in The Amalgamated Snuff Corporation, an' his dividend checks enabled him to gallop around an' buy up all the corner lots within a ten mile radius uv the castle.

One morning the King failed to answer roll call, so a squad frum Police Headquarters rushed up to his boudoir an' discovered that his school girl complexion had turned to an unhealthy blue color. This, together with the fact that he wuzn't snoring, indicated that he wuz no longer a registered voter, so they buried him. The coroner's jury decided that His Highness had either soaked up too much bum gin er had smoked a nickle cigar.

The Queen wuz a fast working mama! She wuz as full uv sentiment as a dead horse, so before they had finished shoveling dirt on to her late husband's smile, this old gal wuz pulling necking parties with her brother-in-law. This caused the neighbors across the street to do a lot uv blabbing, an' the landlord warned Her Highness several times that if he found any more empty gin bottles on the frunt porch uv the castle he wood either break her lease er break her jaw.

About this time Claudius, the late King's brother, did sumthing wich got the queen peeved—he told her age—so she decided to git even with him. There's 2 ways a woman kin git even with a hombre; she kin shoot him er she kin marry him. So she married him, proving that she figured death wuz too good for him.

ENTER HAM JR.

Enter Hamlet Jr., Prince uv Denmark, Knight uv the Garter, Knight uv the Golden Fleece, Silent Night,, Last Night, Tomorrow Night, an' Saturday until One P. M.!! This boy had a string of titles longer than Sunday afternoon in Philadelphia. He wuz a modest, bashful cuss—in fact, he had refused to write a testimonal for yeast. Also he had refused to go to college because he wuzn't strong snuff to be an ice man in the summer time. Anyhow he looked like hell in a raccoon coat. Also he didn't want nothing to do with the gals—especially after a few uv them had borrowed carfare off him. After he had agreed to lend them carfare home, he always discovered that they lived in Australia. Hamlet's idea uv a riotous evening wuz to go to bed an' leeve the radio turned on all night.

He didn't like the idea uv his mama hooking up with his uncle so soon after papa's last chapter. He thought she shood have waited at least until the flowers on the grave had started to wilt. On the uther hand, he wuz kinda peeved on account he got cheated out uv being King, due to his mother's second marriage. Yup, he didn't like the idea uv still being a minor face card. But there wuz nothing he kood do, so that's wot he did.

OMELET AND RIVULET

Among the soldiers in the castle wuz 2 very dear friends uv Hamlet's, named Omelet an' Rivulet. Omelet wuz more or less uv an egg, an' Rivulet was all wet, but anyhow they meant well. One day Omelet an' Rivulet kums up to Hamlet an' sez:

"Boy Friend, last night we wuz on guard up on the roof uv this castle, an' jist as the clock struck twelve we sure saw a sight for granulated eye-lids! A weird looking creature, wearing gray armor, galloped around on top the battlements, an' he didn't make a sound! We thought at first that it wuz sum bozo advertising a well known brand uv rubber heels, but we wuz wrong! We know dam well it wuzn't Lon Chaney. Therefore we is puzzled. Wot d'yuh make uv it, huh? Wot's the answer?"

"Here's the answer: buy me a pint uv that stuff!" sez Hamlet, slipping Rivulet 2 bucks.

A FAMILIAR GHOST

Rivulet bubbled over with protests to the effect that they wuzn't under the influence of hair tonic, so Hamlet agreed to go up on the castle walls with 'em that night to take a slant at this gink frum the land uv Static. Theez 3 buzzards wuz sitting on the roof that evening playing pinochle with a deck wich had the face cards missing, wen all uv a sudden the clock in the tower uv a nearby Chinese laundry fell to the sidewalk an' struck twelve, one uv which wuz a policeman.

Immediately a strange form in gray armor appeared on the battlements. Hamlet thought the ghost looked kinda familiar, in fact it looked a whole lot like his old man, so he walks up to it an' sez, in Danish:

"Bon joor, Señor Papa!"

"Wee Gates, kiddo!" replied the ghost in the same language.

"Wot's the idea, Pop?" sez Hamlet. "We buried yew once. Why don't yew go an' stay put?"

"For the simple reason," sez the ghost, "that I didn't like the way I wuz hurried thru Death's Portal. We must all walk thru it sum day but, dammit, I was pushed."

"Slip me the dirt," sez Hamlet, "er, as Gene Tunney wood say, 'be more explicit—kindly elucidate'."

A VILE TRICK

"Alas, my boy," sighs the ghost, "it wuz none uther than my own brother Claudius who smacked me for the count uv ten, an' it happened thus: I had a quart bottle uv Haig & Haig, an' the label on the bottle stated that the contents wuz old enuff to vote. My brother Claudius, desiring to be rid uv me in order that he mite steal the throne, opened the bottle, threw away the contents an' substituted a vile, horrible poison called ginger ale. This fluid is so deadly that one glass uv it, if poured into a barrel uv red ink, wood make the entire mess unpalatable! Needless to say, the first time I allowed a jolt uv this Essence uv Liquid Boxing Gloves to slide past my tonsils I wuz knocked for a whole row uv Mongolian temple bells!"

"Kin this be true?" sez Ham Jr., elevating both eyebrows an' opening his mouth, thereby registering Incredulity.

"Nothin' different," sez the ghost; "therefore, my boy, I ask that yew avenge this bump-off they slipped yer papa! Git ahold uv thy uncle Claudius an' muss him up."

"Have no fear, old timer," sez Hamlet, "yew shall be avenged! I will git Claudius!"

"When?" thunders the ghost.

"Right near the end uv the 4th act!" howls Hamlet.

"Atta baby!" sez the ghost; "flop him into the foot-lights! It otta bring down the house! An now I must go. Auf Wiedersehen!"

"Adios," sez Hamlet, "crawl back into yer subway an' rest in peace!"

ALAS, POOR YORICK!

"Lissen," calls the ghost jist before he disappeared, "in order that nobody will suspect the dirty ideas yew have in yer mind why don't yew try to act haff-witted? It ought not to be hard for yew—everybody always said yew took after yer mother."

So Hamlet started acting as though he had rats in his garret, wich wuz very annoying to his mother, so she sent for him one day. The King heard her send for him so he told a bimbo named Yorick to find out wot the conversation wuz about. Yorick hid behind a curtain in the Queen's apartment.

"Lissen, Hamlet," sez the Queen, as Ham entered her apartment, "for several days yew have bin acting as though yew wuz an acorn. Are yew offering yer own conception uv a comic valentine? I'll put yew in a Nut College if yew don't stop acting so goofy! Wot's the idea uv acting like yew had sent yer brain on a 6 months vacation?"

"Yew shood talk!" sez Hamlet, losing his temper; "yew're the goofy party. Don't yew know that yer new husband took the heavy-weight championship away frum papa on a foul?"

Jist then the curtain in the room did a little un-natural shaking, an' Ham noticed it. He also noticed that there wuzn't any breeze, so he concluded that sum bozo wuz trying to soak up a little scandal. Therefore he took his sword an' shoved it thru the curtain in an endeavor to vaccinate the party uv the third part. The operation wuz a great success, in fact, the gink behind the curtain did a nose-dive to the floor an' ruined the carpet.

"It wood seem," sez the Queen, yawning, "that yew have bumped off Yorick."

"Alas, poor Yorrick!" sez Hamlet, also yawning; "I never heard uv him!"

ENTIRE CAST EXPIRES

In the meantime the King wuz downtown in a department store looking at the latest styles in caskets. He found one wot struck his fancy an' he decided that it wood make a swell kitchette apartment for his stepson, so he went home, poisoned a bowl uv drinking water, dipped a sword into poison, sharpened an axe, loaded a sawed-off shotgun, an' mixed dynamite with the mashed potatoes. He figured he'd git this bird one way er another. Then he sent for Hamlet an' the Queen.

As Ham an' his mama entered the King's room, hell started popping. Sum buzzard tickled Ham in the ribs with the poisoned sword. Hamlet grabbed the sword an' tickled the uther baby right back with it. The Queen picked up the bowl uv poisoned water an' guzzled it. Hamlet grabs the sawed-off shotgun an' chases the King around the room so fast it looks like a game uv poker with the flea cards wild. Jist then the shotgun goes off an' makes the King look like a platter uv hash.

"I didn't know it wuz loaded!" sobs Ham. Whereupon the entire cast lays down on the floor an' expires. This gink Shakespeare kood slaughter a whole stagefull uv people 30 seconds before they rang down the final curtain.

Cabbies Thrive on Arguments

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—Many Americans here get their most vivid impressions of French fervor from the taxicab drivers. The Parisian cabbies thrive on argument and even seem to encourage it. They appear to expect a complaint, and when the passenger takes exception to the bill, which he will do if he has been properly advised, the cabby's countenance lights up and a stream of vituperative language bursts forth, while his face assumes in turn expressions of amazement, disgust, incredulity, and amusement.

It is like a well rehearsed scene, and when the American wears out his few most scathing verbs the Frenchman's arms gesticulate wildly and he storms, entreats, and is sarcastic all in the same breath. Then the bill is paid and peace reigns until the next fare.

A favorite expression among the pedestrians is "Assassin!" which they hiss at the Paris chauffeurs who just miss them. The chauffeurs, regardless of their limited English, all seem to know the words "pig," "old package," "kind of a thief," "sort of dirt," and "fathead," which they scream into the ears of startled persons who are not alert enough in getting out of their way.

POLITE.

"Now then, what should a polite little boy say to a lady who has given him a penny for carrying her parcels?"

"I am too polite to say it, madam."—Table Talk, Melbourne.

SAM 'N' HENRY

By Correll & Gosden

[Sam and Henry were arrested for making a left turn contrary to traffic regulations and were given a ticket and told to report at Speeders' court. There is a line waiting to go before the judges as Sam and Henry enter the room.]

Henry, say somepin'!

SAM—Whut are we gonna do now, Henry?

Henry (pointing to a policeman standing near)—Ask dat policeman standin' dere.

Sam—Dat's 'bout de only thing to do, I guess.

Henry—Take off yo' hat now an' act like yo' got some sense, 'cause yo' might as well be in jail as be in dis buildin'.

Sam—Well, I guess I'll ask him. (To policeman.) Say, mistah, a policeman gimme dis ticket up on State street yest'day an' tol' me to come down heah. Whut mus' I do wid it?

Policeman (in very gruff voice)—Get in that line over there!

Sam (scared)—Yessah, mistah, yessah—thank yo'. (Goes back and gets in line near Henry.) (To Henry.) Did you heah what he say?

Henry—Whut did de man tell yo'?

Sam—He tol' me to git back in dis line heah.

Henry—Well, 'tain't no ahgument 'bout it. Go on, git in de line.

Sam (as he gets in line)—Come on, git in heah wid me, Henry.

Henry—Whut I wanna git in dere wid yo' fo'? Ain't none o' my biz'ness.

Sam—Well, Henry, stick wid me heah. Heah whut de man say, anyway. I ain't got but fo'teen dollahs, an' I don' know whut de man's li'ble to fine me.

Henry—Whut evah he fines yo'—dat's yo' biz'ness—'tain't none o' mine.

Sam—Come on—git in dis line anyway, Henry.

Henry (getting in line with Sam)—A' right, I'll git in de line wid yo', but I ain't even gonna be a witness.

Sam—Do yo' reckon de judge gonna let me go?

Henry—De judge gonna let yo' go to jail if yo' don' pay de fine, I know dat.

Sam—I wondah if all dese heah men in dis line done been 'rested fo' de same thing?

Henry—Don' worry 'bout nobody else. You'se de one yo' gotta worry 'bout—jus' worry 'bout yo'self.

Sam (as the line moves on)—It certainly don' take long to try de cases heah, do it? We'se movin' right 'long.

Henry—You'se lucky dat yo' evah got dat car back to de man.

Sam—If he hadn't come aftah it I'd nevah got it dere. Dat policeman done tol' me dat yo' couldn't make no lef'han' turns in de Loop.

Henry—Yo' don' even know where de Loop is, do yo'?

Sam—Dat's de biz'ness part, ain't it? I wondah why dey calls it de Loop.

HENRY OFFERS AID

Henry—Dat don' make no diff'rence why dey call it de Loop—de thing you wanna do now is to git out o' dis mess dat's you'se in.

Sam—Well, whut is I gonna tell de judge now, Henry, when I git up dere? 'Spose de judge ask me is I guilty or not guilty—whut I goin' tell him?

Henry—Now I tell yo' whut I'll do, I goin' stand up in front o' de judge wid yo'—

Sam (interrupting)—Yeh, Henry—dat's right—you come up dere wid me. I want yo' to tell me whut to do.

Henry—Well, I tell yo' whut I'll do den. When you goes up in front o' de judge I'll walk up dere wid yo' an' I'll stan' right dere behin' yo' an' I'll listen to whut's goin' on, an' if I see you got a openin' dere I'll whisper to yo' whut to say.

Sam (delighted)—Dat's a good idea, Henry. You gonna tell me whut to say, huh?

Henry—Dat's it. We is li'ble to ketch de judge off his guard an' dat's when yo' wanna git in if yo' kin.

Sam—Henry, I ain't nevah seen no one man wid so much sense as you got.

Henry—Now, den, I gotta watch dis thing mighty close now, an' in case I git yo' out o' dis mess I'll let yo' buy my dinner, 'cause yo' know we done laid off today.

Sam—Dat's a' right, Henry. Yo' git rid o' dis heah mess an' I'll buy yo' dinnah an' suppah. Listen, Henry, yo' know we gotta lay off anothah day an' go out to de stockyards an' git dat job—dat's whut we gotta do.

Henry—Yeah, an' we gotta do it nex' week, too. We gotta git a job nearer home dan where we is now.

Sam—I tell yo' whut let's do, Henry. Let's go out to de stockyards Tuesday. Wanna do dat?

Henry—If we kin git one o' de brothers down at de lodge to take us out dere in his car dat's de thing we wanna do.

Sam—Yeah, one o' de brothers o' de Jewels o' de Crown. One o' de officers done promised to drive us out dere some time. I'd like to see de place, anyway. I done heard 'bout de stockyards evah since I was a little boy. I wonder how dey kill de cows out dere?

Henry (in his egotistical manner)—Don' be so ig'nant—dey chlorofo'ms dem.

Sam—Whut yo' mean, dey chlorofo'ms dem, Henry?

Henry (seeing the line moving toward the judge's stand)—Move up dere. Move up in line dere. We's gittin' closer to de judge all de time.

Sam—Tell me 'bout dem chlorofo'min' de cows—dat's whut I wanna know.

Henry—Dey chlorofo'ms de cows jus' like dey chlorofo'ms anything else—de firs' thing to do is to git a bull fighter——

Sam (interrupting)—I done seen pitchahs of de bull fighter. He carries a red table cloth on his arm, don' he?

Henry—Dat's it. He's got a bottle o' chlorofo'm under dat red thing.

Sam—Well, tell me how dey do it, Henry.

Henry—Well, dis man gits de cow cornered, an' when de cow is in de corner he throws dis red thing ovah his head. Den de cow can't see. Dat's whut it means when yo' heah people say dey got red in dey're eyes.

Sam—Dat red makes de cow mad, too, don't it?

MEAN LOOKING JUDGE

Henry—Yeah, whenevah you blindfol' a cow dat makes him mad. [As the line moves on]: Move up dere in line—it won't be long now.

Sam (moving along)—Dat's right. Go ahead, Henry, finish tellin' me 'bout dis cow.

Henry—Den when de cow is blindfolded dey have a lot o' men to run up behin' him an' throw him down. Den dey tie his han's an' feets——

Sam—What do dey do den?

Henry—Den de bull fighter pours de chlorofo'm up de cow's nose an' while he's unconscious dey cut him up.

Sam—Den when de cow wakes up he don' know whut happened, do he?

Henry—Dat's right. (Seeing the line moving along again)—Move up in line dere now. Dese people is certainly goin' fas'.

Sam (nearing the judge's stand)—Henry, look at de judge. Dis is de firs' time we been able to see him. Dat's a mean lookin' judge.

Henry—Dey all mean lookin'.

Sam—I thought we was gonna see de same judge we saw befo' when we was 'rested fo' shootin' craps. I didn't know dey had two judges.

Henry—Dis place is full o' judges. Dey got mo' judges dan dey got policemen.

Sam—I heard some men talkin' once 'bout 'pealin' de case to a higher cou't—whut floor is dat cou't on?

Henry—Dis cou't's plen'y high 'nuf fo' yo'.

Sam—Henry, I know a man dat was 'rested once down in Bummin'ham an' he got hisself a lawyer. Do yo' reckon I need a lawyer?

Henry—You gonna git me mad in a minute. A lawyer can't do no mo' fo' yo' dan I kin do. Move up dere in line. Why don't yo' brush yo clothes off befo' yo' come up heah dis mornin'. You look like a ash can.

Sam—I didn't have no brush. Listen, Henry. Tell me once mo' whut yo' goin' do 'bout dis thing when we git up dere in front o' de judge.

Henry—Looh heah—dere's a man takin' up tickets heah—git out yo' ticket.

Sam—Heah 'tis, right heah in my han'.

Man (collecting tickets)—Give me your ticket.

Sam—Yessah, mistah—heah 'tis.

Man collecting tickets (to Henry)—Have you got a ticket?

Henry—No sah, mistah, I'se jus' wid Sam dere.

Sam—Ev'rybody look like dey'se mad 'round heah dis mornin', don' dey?

HENRY HELPS LOTS!

Henry—Dey'se gettin' ready to make de charge 'gainst yo' now. Move up dere in line. It ain't but a couple mo' men ahead o' yo' now.

Sam—(getting nervous)—Henry, I wish you'd 'splain to me again whut yo' gonna do now when we git up in front o' de judge.

Henry—Now, heah's whut I goin' do. I goin' walk up dere in front o' him wid yo', an' when de judge staht askin' yo' questions I goin' tell you whut to say. If I see de judge is off his guard I goin' tell yo' whut to say dat will git de judge e'cited, but I goin' do it on one condition.

Sam—Whut's dat, Henry?

Henry—Dat if I tell yo' to say one thing yo' goin' say it an' ain't goin' say nothin' else. I'se li'ble to tell yo to say, "Yo honor, yo' is mistaken," an' dat's what yo wanna say if I tell yo' to.

Sam—Dat's a'right, Henry. I'll do jus' whut yo' say to.

Henry—Now git ready to go up dere.

Sam (getting excited)—Now don' fo'git, Henry, to stan' right behin' me an' whisper in my ear whut yo' want me to say.

Henry—Yo' wanna have yo' ears

Den de bull fighter pours de cholorofo'm on de cow's nose.

(To court officer) Dis heah boy is my witness, mistah.

Court Officer—All right, both of you, come on along.

Sam—Come on, Henry. Stick wid me heah.

Court Officer (to judge)—Your honor, Sam Smith's charged with reckless driving, violating traffic regulations, making a left turn in the Loop, and deliberately blocking traffic. Charges preferred by Officer Walsh.

Judge (in stern voice)—You have heard the charges preferred against you by Officer Walsh. Are you guilty or not guilty?

Sam—Awa—awa—— (to Henry in whisper) Henry, say sompin'.

Judge (impatient)—GUILTY OR NOT GUILTY?

Sam (hardly able to talk in whisper)—Whut mus' I say, Henry? Whut mus' I say?

Judge—Ten dollars and costs!

Henry—Don' argue wid de gent'man—don't argue wid de gent'man.

Little Tales of Big Heads

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

Still at It.

Arnold was putting himself through college by reading gas meters. He was quite a gifted orator, and was well aware of the fact. At the big oratorical contest of the year, for which all the other competitors had been preparing for months, he was so self-confident that he made an extemporaneous speech.

Now, twenty-five years later, he is still reading gas meters. R. G. M.

He Knew Why.

Every one wondered why the minister appointed such a lackadaisical person as Mr. T. as head usher of the church. Rumors must have reached him that people wondered about him, so one day he said, "The Rev. Jones appointed me head usher because I would lend dignity to the scene." L. P.

Satisfied.

Brother preened before the mirror, visibly pleased with the reflection. When I brought the fresh shirt he'd asked for, he coolly observed, "Gee, Sis, you're good to me. Why don't THE TRIBUNE hold a male Peaches contest, so I could pay you up?" F. A. S.

WHEN AMERICANS GO ABROAD

Mussolini's Wife Is a Home Woman.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME.—Every leading American who visits Rome exerts all possible influence to gain entrance to Benito Mussolini's presence. Many succeed, and they leave Chigi palace with impressions that often find their way into the American press. However, it remained for an eastern woman to become curious about Mrs. Mussolini, or Donna Rachele Guidi Mussolini, as she is known here. She expected to find a leader of the feminist movement, an active, modern woman of our American club executive type, and her surprises she set down as follows:

The wife of Il Duce accords completely with her husband's belief that the place of the Fascist woman is with her children, which she holds is her mission in life. Her attitude has had a great deal to do with breaking up the last remnants of the woman suffrage movement in Italy, where the female vote now is so infrequent as to be quite ineffectual.

Donna Mussolini, like her husband, formerly taught school, and shared the hardships of his early life. She modestly adapted herself to his new position and, realizing that Sig. Mussolini could not devote as much time to his family as other fathers, she is spending all her time educating Edda, 16; Vittorio, 10, and Bruno, 7. She has kept herself and the children out of official and social life. Each evening father calls from his office to their modest home in the country, and every so often takes a flying trip to see his family. The premier's leadership, like the well known charity, appears to begin at home, and everybody is happy.

Yanks Astound Lonely Islanders

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa.—A party of American tourists recently returned here after having visited the world's loneliest island, where they proved more of a novelty to the inhabitants than the inhabitants did to them. For the first time in their lives the 137 people on the island of Tristan de Cunha, a desolate volcanic mass in the south Atlantic, heard jazz music, saw furs, and ate ice cream.

The boat stopped for only four hours, but in that time civilization on this little spot moved ahead many hundred years. The Yankee passengers showered the islanders with gifts and were kept busy answering naive questions put to them by these people, who scarcely see a strange face for two years at a time.

One American woman took off her fur coat and handed it to one of the men for his wife, who had never seen a fur coat. Another passenger gave the surprised islanders $250 worth of the ship's provisions.

Then the ship's jazz band played the newest selections for the fascinated folk. But their biggest thrill was a treat of American ice cream. They were amazed and delighted with the confection.

This island is out of communication with the rest of the world at least eighteen months at a time; then a small steamer leaves provisions. Radio is impossible, for there is no way to charge the batteries or replace the parts. Electricity, and even gas and such necessities of our world, are unknown.

The inhabitants of the island are descendants of William Glass, a member of a company of soldiers sent there when Napoleon was exiled at St. Helena, to prevent the French leader from using the island to make an escape, with the aid of would be rescuers. Glass and his wife remained there.

BRIDGE

By W. M. Schwimmer.

Ladies! Ladies! Join the happy throng,
Stop your teas, quit your golf, disregard mah jong.
If your hen-pecked hubby asks for dinner
When he's home,
Bounce him on the cranium,
He's dippy in the dome.
Drop your work, drop your child,
Here's a way to be beguiled,
Ev'ry femme is going wild
Over bridge.

Wimmin! Wimmin! No more cooking now,
London bridge, auction bridge, that's the cat's meow.
Well-bred janes with lots of crust
Gamble with the dough,
What's become of sewing circles

Men would like to know.
Ladies, it's a sad disgrace,
Setting such a dizzy pace,
Get parcheesi back in place
Of bridge.

Lotto? Bunko? Dearie, they are through,
Rhummy, whist, casino—now are all taboo.
Bridge is quite the simplest
And most peaceful game you've tried,
If you trump you partner's ace
Prepare for suicide.
Really it's a sorry sight,
Watching females half the night
Going cuckoo with delight
Over bridge.
Yes, mam!
Dumbbell dames are nutty over bridge!

THE CAVE WOMAN

A Story of a Unique Kidnaping

LIKE the lilies of the field, Martin Lansing toiled not, neither did he spin. He did not need to, thanks to an inherited fortune. On this evening that he strolled down Park avenue he was attired in the modest modern replica of Solomon's glory. Expensive tailors had fashioned the perfection of his overcoat. A king among haberdashers had provided his white silk scarf. And his soft gray hat had but recently made a trans-Atlantic passage from Bond street. Therefore, Martin was pleasantly conscious of his impeccable appearance, but he was also unpleasantly conscious of other things not so enjoyable.

He was on his way to the weekly duty of dinner with his mother. Doubtless she would also have the girl she had chosen in her own motherly mind as the proper wife for him. Alicia White was a good scout. Martin had to admit that. Rather pretty in a tanned, boyish way. She went in for golf and riding; held a collection of silver cups for her prowess. Martin did not care for athletics, save as practiced on the dance floor. And his preference in girls veered toward the more fragile specimens.

Even this short walk down the avenue tired him. He decided to hail a taxi. The cold wind set him coughing. The coughing made him think of another disagreeable prospect. His mother would inquire what the specialist had said whom she had forced Martin to visit because of her solicitude over that cough.

A DISAGREEMENT

Martin knew why he coughed. Fifty cigarets a day. But the fool doctor had pulled a long face and ordered a lot of nonsense like Saranac and open air, and had made dire prophecies about lungs. Of course he was thin and nervous. He'd been hitting the cabarets too much. And cigarets—cut down on them, that was all. Martin lighted one, got into the taxi, and decided not to tell his mother what the physician had said.

Unfortunately the physician had already telephoned her his report and she made a terrible fuss about it. She talked hysterically about his poor Uncle William dying of tuberculosis; insisted that Martin hop a train immediately for Saranac or New Mexico. Alicia butted in and took his mother's side. At last Martin grew angry. He had a mind to tell Alicia that his pallor wasn't as noticeable as her sunburn with an evening dress.

He said: "Well, I'm not leaving New York and that's final. If I die I'll do it in a cabaret and not in some God forsaken wilderness. So that's that."

But his mother whimpered furtively all evening. Alicia offered to drive him home. Too bad he couldn't fall in love with her, Martin reflected. She seemed to like him, flushed when he paid her compliments or held her hand. Nice eyes she had, clear and blue like winter skies, outdoor eyes, though, without parlor tricks. She was too independent, too capable. Look at the capable way her gloved hands held the steering wheel. The roadster purred forward with none of that jerkiness of the usual woman driver. Martin shivered.

WILD RIDE

"Cold for an open car," he muttered.

"There's a coonskin coat in the rumble set," she told him. "Fish it out."

"O, we've only a short distance."

"I don't want to be responsible for your getting pneumonia," she said curtly. "Better put it on."

He did, reluctantly. He hated to admit that he was weaker than she with her squirrel cape flung open at the throat and the healthy flush in her cheeks. The cliff dwellings of Park avenue spun dizzily; she was driving at terrific speed, taking advantage of the late hour and meager traffic. The wind cut in rapier thrusts.

Martin tried to shout to her to slow down; she was passing his bachelor hotel. She nodded but did not look at him; they went on.

The car turned on one wheel and found the straight course of Central park west. The girl was crazy; bending over the wheel with her hair flying, smiling ahead. Martin was angry.

"Look here!" he shouted. "If you want to take a pleasure ride on a night like this, go ahead. But let me out first. I don't like it."

She gave no sign of hearing him and the car did not slacken speed. They crossed the Harlem and took the Grand concourse in a roar. Martin grasped her hand and the car lurched.

"What are you trying to do? Kidnap me?"

"Yes," she flung at him.

"Well, I'll be damned," he said.

Snow began to fall in great slow flakes and thickened to a white curtain about them. Alicia did not cut her speed for it; marvelous driver she was. They had left the road and were climbing now into the hills back of the Hudson. Martin was tense with rage, but he was also amused. He turned the collar of the coonskin coat up and hoped that Alicia would freeze, which she showed no signs of doing. She seemed to like it; now and then she smiled at him and he returned the smile viciously through chattering teeth.

Pretty soon she'd have to stop in a snowdrift and a pretty mess they'd be in. Martin waited, grimly. Instead they paused in the heart of what looked like a white wilderness. Alicia jumped out.

"Here we are," she said brightly.

She led the way and directly ahead a misty outline of a log hewn camp building appeared black through the moolit snow. Alicia unlocked the door, and lighted candles showed a room furnished in rough camp style. She clapped her hands together briskly and set about building a fire in the great stone fireplace.

STERN ORDERS

Martin watched her, too stubborn to assist. When the flames burst into a cheery blaze, he said: "I'm glad you're comfortable. I'm going back to the car now. I'll try to find my way back to a lunatic asylum and send a keeper after you."

He turned toward the door.

"O, no you don't," said Alicia, crisply. In her hand she held an object that glistened ominously in the firelight. "If you try to go I'll pull this trigger. I won't kill you, but I'll hurt you."

"What in the devil do you mean?"

"I mean that you're a spineless, weak kneed lounge lizard. If you haven't nerve enough to fight for your own life I'll do it for you. I mean you're going to stay in this camp according to orders until you're a well man instead of a coughing, coddled fool."

"All right, shoot," said Martin, calmly, and went toward the door.

"I've the key to the car in my pocket," she reminded him.

TRUCE IS MADE

He dropped his hands in despair. He was dog tired and sleepy from the cold air. He sat down on the couch. He was conscious of the drowsiness creeping over him to quench his wrath. Hours later he awakened and saw Alicia, still sitting there by the fire. She was asleep, her head rested wearily against the wall. Thus she looked feminine and helpless for the first time. Martin arose cautiously, tiptoed to her side. The glittering object lay in her lap. He picked it up and laughed. It was a patent nickel cigaret lighter. Alicia opened her eyes. Instantly she was awake and on her feet.

Martin returned the lighter to her with a grave bow. "I'll promise not to make a break," he said. "It—say, aren't there any other rooms to this place?"

"Plenty," said Alicia. "And loads of blankets. But I was afraid you'd run away."

"I give you my word not to," said Martin. "You may take the couch and rest in peace." He marched into the next room.

LONELY OUTLOOK

The bleak sun of the winter morning revealed a world wrapped in white. The camp lay on the crest of a hill, and there was no sign of other habitation within the far flung view—only the snow covered trees, the snow drenched hills, a frozen stream.

Martin clenched his teeth in grim determination. He would show Alicia that he was no weakling. He foraged through the chest in the room and found a sweater, corduroy trousers, heavy shoes too large for him. He knocked at the door to the living room and received a cheery, "Come in."

Alicia was setting steaming coffee and eggs on the table. She was slim in a boy's knickers and a gray flannel shirt. If he hadn't hated her so much Martin might have discovered that she looked charming.

"There's plenty of food in the camp for a long siege," she told him briskly. "Dad always keeps it stocked in case we want to week-end up here for the winter sports. I'm afraid you'll have to chop some wood, though, after breakfast. There's an ax in the kitchen."

For three weeks Martin chopped wood and went skiing and skating with Alicia. They tobogganed down the hillsides; they built snowmen; in the evening they smoked and read across the fire.

A CAVE MAN

Three weeks and the snow turned to slush and the icicles dripped from the roofs. Three weeks and Martin's cough was forgotten.

One morning he bore an armful of logs into the kitchen, where Alicia was preparing breakfast.

She smiled at him a bit ruefully. "The last can of beans is gone," she said. "We will use the last can of milk for breakfast."

"This morning," said Martin, pleasantly, "I picked up a pine tree and balanced it on the tip of my little finger with perfect ease."

"You are as tough as the tree," observed Alicia irrelevantly.

"In other words," said Martin, "the cure is completed."

She said nothing; her hands busy over the oil stove. Suddenly he caught her hands and pinioned them in his own.

"Why did you do it?" he asked brusquely.

CAPTIVE TURNS

She struggled for release.

"You can't get away," he told her. "You might have once, but I could break you into little bits now. You ought to feel my muscles. I asked why you did it."

"Because—because I felt sorry for your mother. She was so worried. I left a little note telling her what I'd done. I felt sorry for you——"

"You liar," said Martin. "You don't dare look at me, you cave woman. You're afraid to. You love me."

"I do not," she said. "I hate you."

"That's too bad," he said, "because you're going to marry me."

"I am not."

"You've compromised us, darling. Do you think anybody in New York will believe that——"

"You beast!"

"You darling!" He kissed her. "Put on your old blue bonnet, Alicia. We're driving to New York today and we'll stop at Greenwich on the way."

"You—you cave man," she said and kissed him.

Society's Wedding Gifts

By Mildred Jaklon.

THE wedding gift problem, that bane of many a woman's existence, is, surprisingly enough, rather more of a trial to those who can spend as much as they want for nuptial tokens than to those who must rearrange the budget in order to wedge in the $7.50 they paid for the silver plated bonbon dish for Mame and Al.

In the first place, the former group is called upon to give many more gifts than their less opulent neighbors, because their circles include a wide fringe of acquaintances, who, for reasons social, political, or economical, must be remembered at marriage. A wedding invitation, one such as is issued to a thousand or so other folk, practically calls for a gift. Of course, the intimacy of the donor with the recipient determines the character and cost of the gift.

A STANDARD GIFT

One prominent woman who is invited to almost every smart wedding in Chicago has decided that she is going to eliminate the worry and bother of selecting gifts by giving a standard gift always. So each bride and groom from now on may expect to receive a card tray.

The quantity and obvious quality of the gifts at most fashionable weddings are often staggering. And when it is remembered that usually there is a wedding trip abroad or a little house in the country, or a car or a piano from the bride's immediate family in addition to the lavish display of glass and dishes and furniture, it can be seen that the amount of merchandise with which such newlyweds set up shop is enough to equip a small department store.

The proprietor of one of the smart shops which specialize in gifts told me that during a certain three days previous to a smart wedding his store had sold more than 125 gifts, each of them costing at least $100 and many of them two or three times that much. The larger and best patronized of the stores now aids its patrons by tabulating the gifts purchased for each well known belle and informing donors of the styles and patterns preferred by the bride-to-be.

A clerk at a silver counter once named over to me without consulting even a notebook the style of silver which each of five brides was to have in her new ménage. This was at a time of year when there were a large number of weddings scheduled.

GIFTS EXCHANGED

Until recently it wasn't considered just the thing to return any wedding gift, except in those cases where the final checkup revealed half a dozen cocktail shakers and a couple of grandfather's clocks, but it is matter of record now that many a bride returns any or all of the donations and has the fun of reselecting substitutes herself or leaves the amount in credit. One china store was requested to send a large truck to haul back to its shelves the articles which had been sent for a splurgy wedding and weren't desired.

Another store returned hundreds of dollars in cash to a certain bride who preferred usable cash to the varied assortment of expensive knicknacks which she had drawn.

Society has chuckled for several years over the story of the bride who received four silver pitchers for wedding gifts. She returned one of them to its source, suggesting that the monogram might be erased. The jeweler was forced to inform her that the marking already had been removed and done over four times, leaving the metal worn so thin that it could not possibly be done again.

I remember counting eight dozen glass salad plates, with four identical sets, at the wedding of Barbara Scott to Donald P. Welles. Her gifts filled a large suite of rooms and were piled high on tables lining the commodious hall of the upper floor of the Scott residence. There were three or four tables set with complete outfits of glasses, silver, napery, and china, each in a different color. There were solid silver coffee cups, and any number of expensive leather articles. There were small tables and smoking stands, pictures and a number of elaborate books, as well as a large doll made to represent a broom and decorated with such scullery aids as mops, bottle washers, can openers, dish cloths, and towels.

MRS. DONALD P. WELLES, who received eight dozen glass salad plates as wedding gifts. Her many presents filled a large suite of rooms.

STRONG BOY.

Employer—I advertised for a strong boy. Do you think you'd do?

Boy—Well, I just finished licking nineteen other applicants out in the street.—Answers.

Brief Biographies of Movie Folk—

Clara Bow

CLARA BOW was born in Brooklyn and lived there when, in her junior year at Bay Ridge High school, she won a magazine beauty contest which entitled her to a screen test. This test resulted in a small part in "Beyond the Rainbow," featuring Billie Dove.

Clara didn't know how to put on makeup, and when her chance to act came she was told to cry and the tears made a complete mess of her face. When the scene was shown on the screen, Director Christy Cabanne cut Clara out of the picture.

This caused Clara to forsake motion picture plans and she entered a business school. Three month later Director Elmer Clifton telephoned her, said he was about to make a picture, and offered her $50 a week if she would play in it.

She fitted so well into "Down to the Sea in Ships" that, following this part, she played the lead opposite Glen Hunter in "Grit." Since then she has played in more than a score of pictures, including "Maytime," "Black Oxen," "The Plastic Age," "Dancing Mothers," "Mantrap," "Kid Boots," and "It."

Clara is a good athlete, but not an expert. She likes horseback riding, swimming, and dancing. She has auburn hair and brown eyes, and weighs 109 pounds without dieting.

Colleen Moore

COLLEEN MOORE was born in Port Huron, Mich., but spent most of her childhood in Tampa, Fla., where she became interested in theatricals, organizing an impromptu neighborhood stock company, playing principal roles from heroine to villain and acting as property man. Her family wanted her to become a concert pianist, but a course in a musical conservatory failed to swerve her love for histrionics.

Colleen's movie career began with the old Essanay company eight years ago. She sat on an extra bench there for six months before she was given any work at all. Finally the chance came—three days on the set at $5 a day. After that she managed to get bits without a great deal of trouble. Then D. W. Griffith chanced to meet her and immediately he saw possibilities in her and told her to go to Hollywood.

She played small, unimportant rôles there for a long time before a First National contract came along. "Flaming Youth" brought her stardom. Since then she has made "So Big," "Irene," "Twinkletoes," and "Orchids and Ermine."

Colleen is married to John McCormick, First National film executive. They have a beautiful home in Hollywood.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST TIRE

The new type Goodyear is outstandingly the greatest tire Goodyear ever made. The big advantage of this new type Goodyear is traction—safe, surefooted, skidless, the sharp-edged diamond-shaped blocks in the tread's center seize, grip and hang on.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

By Sara Moore

TRY AND DO IT.

The ad men speak with a mighty shout
To make us "conscious" of sauerkraut;
They count and list little calories
In macaroni or milk or cheese;
They say tomatoes and tangerines
Are full of the jiggers called vitamines,
And some insist we are underfed
Without bananas and whole wheat bread.
Huh!
Wanted, an advertising man
To write out a food promotion plan.
One needs professional help to sell
Milk or spinach to Arabel.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

STANDARDIZED.

One looks ahead. The die is cast,
This way it has to be—
A matinee, a bridge, some golf,
A dinner, dance, and tea.

The things girls do are so alike
We should be thankful that
Our friends can still distinguish us
By gown—or shoes—or hat.

THE GIRL HE LEFT BEHIND HIM.

I took my share of the sleet and mud;
Waded in gauze and drugs and blood;
I'd sneak him a light and a cigaret
(Were I not there then he'd be there yet).
He's back in Paris, my soldier fair—
And here I sit in the beaucoup air.

I carried his heavy bedside tray
Day after drizzling, murky day;
I eased up his bandage, wiped his nose,
And sat on his head when his fever rose;
Now off to Paris the Legions wind——
And I am the girl that he leaves behind.

Well, let him go play on his jamboree,
Leaving the world, of course, to me.
All by himself! Do you get my tone?
Next war—he can go off and fight alone!

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Tribune.

NAVY blue or one of the tan shades in crêpe satin will make an attractive dress, using pattern No. 709 for its development. The skirt is cut in two parts, and while there is some fullness at the top, it is not too full and gores out towards the bottom, getting the necessary width there without being too full at the opposite end.

The waist opens in the center front, and as you can easily see, it is cut in a deep square opening, this being filled in by an attached vest. The fullness on the shoulders on the front is followed by fullness at the underarm seams on the front, the front being slashed in there, the lower edges gathered and sewed to the upper slashed edges.

There is a narrow belt of the dress material, and the sleeves are in one piece, with the lower edges gathered into a six inch cuff. These deep cuffs could be made of the reverse side of the satin, as could the vest also, using a binding or piping of the same side of the satin to finish the neck.

Cut the vest double, having a fold of the material across the top and seam it together down the sides. Where it sets into the right side of the front, it should be tacked in place under the binding or facing. Then at three-quarter inch intervals set small sized snaps down the left edge, fastening it to the dress. Below the vest the waist buttons together, a much more agreeable way of getting into and out of a dress than slipping it on over the head.

Where waist and skirt join there could be a wrong side seam, overcasting both edges together, laying up towards the waist and then stitching twice from the outside, once close to the seam, and the second row one quarter inch above.

Pattern No. 710 is for a long waisted dress having a short circular skirt. A prettily shaped collar finishes the neck and the slashed opening in the front is finished with a binding. The full length one piece sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands.

Why not make this a "composé" dress—only be careful that the two or three shades of the same color blend perfectly. The shops show so many shades in all the colors that it should be easy choosing. Bind the neck opening and bottom of the dress with a shade contrasting with the dress and make the collar and wrist bands of a third shade. Cut the binding strips on a true bias and measure accurately, making them one and a half or one and three-quarters of an inch wide. Then run the binding on by hand and before turning in the opposite edge to hem down baste the binding close to the seam on the right side so it will stay in place when you make the turning. Of course the skirt should be allowed to hang several days before finishing—evening it off where it has stretched.

Pattern No. 711 is suitable for many different materials and among them one of the washable crêpe de chines would be a wise choice. This comes in the loveliest colors and is a good weight. The front of the underblouse could be made of a printed crêpe and to this under part the front of the two piece skirt is joined. Then the real front of the waist comes over this under part and is held in place by a single button. The sleeves are quite large at the bottom and there is an inset there of the printed material. They are gathered into narrow bands at the wrists made from the dress material.

Another combination of colors would be black satin made up either with white or with a printed material. Black and white is shown in many of the New York shops made into charming dresses for young women as well as older ones.

709—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

710—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

711—Woman's and misses' dress. Size 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 40 inch material, with ½ yard of printed material.

BEAUTY ANSWERS by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MOLLY: WHERE THE LIPS ARE wrinkled and chapped there is often a condition of inward fever. I would suggest that you look well into the condition of your digestive tract and see it is kept in proper order. Soften the lips with cold cream or spirits of camphor.

K. B. D.: AS THE COLD WINTER winds cause a dryness of the skin of the face and chapping, it is well to apply cold cream before going out. After massaging the cold cream into the skin, powder with a good face powder, which acts as a further protection. I have a formula for a good cold cream, which you may have for a stamped addressed envelope.

MISS G.: MILD CASES OF EXCESsive perspiration are benefited by bathing the affected parts with hot water to which either boric acid or alum has been added. Too much cannot be said about the need of frequent changing of clothing. After each wearing a dress should be hung up to air before an open window. When possible let the sun get at the dress that is being aired.

J. R. E.: WARTS ARE DUE TO INfection of the skin. The warts on the face may be removed without leaving a scar, when the work is done by a reputable physician.

H. Z. T.: TO REDUCE THE SIZE of the pores, I would suggest the ice treatment. At night cleanse the face with cold cream, then wash with soap and warm water, and rinse in cold water. Take a small piece of ice and put it in a piece of cheesecloth and rub over the affected parts for several minutes.

N. S. C.: AFTER A PERSON HAS attained full growth it would be necessary to resort to an operation to change the shape of the legs, that is, where the bone structure is at fault. If their shapelessness is due to excess weight, send along a stamped addressed envelope and I'll give you some exercises and diets which will do much to improve their appearance, if adhered to faithfully.

MOTHER: THE MOST SATISFACtory work in the straightening of teeth is done when the child is between the sixth and twelth years. Done later, the work must be done slowly to avoid too much absorption of the bone, or the teeth will not again become tight. You may help the dentist by making sure the child brushes her teeth regularly. He will do the rest.

MISS Q.: SKIN WHICH PEELS and chaps constantly is in need of oil. It is excessively dry. Cleanse the face with cold cream instead of water, or if you use water, let it be at night, and after it massage a little cream into the skin. You may leave some on over night. Before going out massage a little cream into the skin and dust with powder, as a protection against the wind and cold.

H. M. H.: WHEN THE FLESH under the chin begins to sag it is necessary to start exercising. I have some neck exercises I shall be glad to send you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope. Always hold the head up. After doing the exercises, massage with a good cold cream, followed by an ice rub. If impossible to obtain ice, use a cloth wrung out of cold water.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Getting a Suit Free.

The cheekiest person I know came into a store one Saturday afternoon in summer and after looking through the pile of bathing suits asked if she could take one home on approval to see if it fit. She took a suit and a pair of bathing slippers.

Monday morning she came in, laid a package on the counter, and simply said she didn't want the suit. Then she left.

On opening the package, it was found she had worn both the suit and slippers in bathing. D. H.

A Selfish Giver.

The cheekiest person I ever knew was a girl friend of mine. About a week before Christmas she asked me if I was going to give her a present. "Because," said she, "if you give me a present I'll give you one."

I replied in the negative. On Christmas, when I gave her a present she did not say thanks, but said: "I'll have to go out and buy you something."

Isn't that cheek? A. D. B.

Solid Brass.

Merely to be accommodating I lent a new dress to a friend. She wore it several times and after she had had it two weeks I asked her to return it so I might wear it to a bridge party.

She said, "O, I'm going to wear it there myself. Can't you wear some other one?" E. R.

Cash and Carry.

Our neighbor kept boarders and one day, when her pantry was bare, she sent her flapper daughter to my house to borrow some money to buy groceries. I couldn't spare the money so told her I would let her charge the groceries she needed on my account at the store. She said, "Would you please go and get them for me? I do do hate to carry packages."

Well, so do I, for any one so cheeky. J. C. H.

And Walked Off.

I have a friend who calls quite often. One evening just as she was ready to go home, she saw we had two decks of cards. Picking up the newest deck she said, "We haven't any cards at home, so I'll take one of yours." E. L.

Worrying Over a Penny.

After a short visit I was taking a friend to the train. Two blocks from home he said he had left a penny box of matches on the living room table. I kept driving. He said it was a new box, and he had only used three matches out of it.

Finally, I offered him a penny for another box. To my surprise he took it and was greatly relieved of his worry. P. S. C.

Letting George Do It.

The cheekiest person I know is an employer who, when he is in need of help, waits until his competitor next door puts an ad in the paper and then stands near his competitor's door to hire the applicants. J. D. VAN B.

During an Intermission.

While at the theater, my girl friend and I left our seats during the intermission. When we returned, we found them occupied by two women and our wraps thrown on seats from which the stage view was poor.

How's that for cheek? M. K.

LOOK PLEASANT, PLEASE

These Tips Will Prove Useful on Your Next Trip to the Photographer.

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—In the interests of birthday conservation, let the German women give a subtle tip. In a Berlin woman's magazine warnings about the style of dress and coiffure that "date" a woman are given. "Never have your full figure photographed, lest the fashion of your dress give away your age at some future date.

"For the same reason never have your hair dressed in any characteristic or conspicuous style, and, if wearing a hat, select one that might be appropriate for almost any fashion."

The first suggestion may be applied more advantageously for future reference, we think, than the second, relative to hat and coiffure. The hat can be eliminated as a future give-away by the simple process of leaving it in the photographer's dressing room, where it really belongs when one is having a photograph made. A hat unquestionably is the current year's trademark which you can't laugh off three, five or ten years hence. I don't suppose

If you have old family daguerreotypes in your possession you can see how the coiffure survives generations, though a hat will scarcely outlive a season. Simple coiffures they are, always. The huge pompadours, of course, have dated many a poor darling daughter into hurried explanations that they were being worn when her hair first went up, which was along about her fourteenth birthday.

Looked Like Her Own Daughter.

One of the metropolitan dailies ran a series of photographs of personages of twenty years ago. An up to date photograph appeared along with the "old timers" in a number of cases. With one internationally known actress, particularly, her present day photograph made her appear as the daddy daughter of herself twenty years ago.

If you go through the files of any photographic library, picking out women's photographs at random, you will see this identical rejuvenation principle. Men do not suffer so markedly the comparison of intervening years.

If we return to long hair, the present day bobbed headed photographs can hardly escape being dated. But, of course, the alibi that "I was one of the first to have it done" may be brought into service. With persons of sharp memories this alibi will not serve, because in its ten or twelve years of life the bob has gone through its own evolution process from the bushy floor mop to the 1927 sleek outline of head.

For Steady Wearing Qualities.

For steady wearing qualities photographers tell me the picture that best survives the years shows a simple coiffure and hands that fall gracefully into the lap, if the hands are shown at all. It is conceded best to reveal just the upper part of the body. Evening dress, since time permits no great latitude in its neck line, or dress along classic Greek lines, and a face pleasant, but without a wide dentifrice display, are items that make for a photograph which will not "date."

One of the great temptations revealed to me by photographic operators hinges on woman's inherent belief that, given a stage or a camera, she can act. And in order to prove herself an actress she believes she has first to dispossess herself of her own personality and assume a foreign one.

I have sat in as judge on a good many beauty contests in which photographs were submitted and if there is any one thing that will send a contestant's picture into the discard quickly it is the artificial pose. Unaffected simplicity is the telling feature of prize winning pictures.

Feel natural, act natural, and be natural when you are being photographed. No borrowed pose will make one better looking.

The Berlin authority offers valuable advice in this: "Avoid assuming the much mooted romantic upward look and the frequently seen ingénue expression, both of which are apt to appear ridiculous in a picture."

Fatigue Always Registers.

Another point to observe is a restful night preceding the day of registering before the camera. Fatigue about the eyes is caught by the lens. Or, if one feels indisposed at all, it is better to postpone the engagement until one is in tip-top shape.

Making up for the camera requires skilled hands. If one is not sure of her mastery of the cosmetic art, she had better leave makeup off entirely. Rouge should never be used on the cheeks, because red photographs black and there is danger of making the cheeks look like sunken areas. Heavily rouged lips will blacken and coarsen them, but a thin coating of a light shade to define the lips is permissible.

Powder has to be dusted on smoothly. Eyebrows may be touched up if they are indefinitely curved. They should be trimmed and shaped before the photograph is made, as the scraggly hairs spoil the picture. Eye makeup, particularly, must be done skillfully. If there is any "spotting," the effect is damaging. A little hand whitener will keep the hands from looking dark.

Solid colors in dress are better than patterned ones, for patterns of certain colors stand out stronger than others and the frock may emerge hard and ugly. Light blue and light yellow photograph white. Pink will look darker. Red, brown, navy, dark green, and purple will be dark in the picture. Light colors add a little more bulk to the figure.

IMMEDIATELY END GRAY HAIR

In five minutes tint your hair at home to any beautiful shade you desire. No fuss—no mixing—guaranteed harmless—BROWNATONE is immediately effective. Penetrates all the hair—one application only required. Buy BROWNATONE at drug and toilet counters, 60c. and $1.50. Any shade from two colors. For trial first, send 10c. The Kenton Pharmacal Co., 1536 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky.

For advice on hair dyeing, visit the Brownatone Shop, 1033 Stevens Bldg.

RED PEPPER HEAT STOPS BACKACHE

The heat of red peppers takes the "ouch" from a sore, lame back. It cannot hurt you, and it certainly ends the torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub, and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers.

Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

The Whitehall Pharmacal Co., New York, N. Y.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray.

Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

The GOSSARD Line of Beauty

Above, a charming combination forming a complete undercostume. The figure garment is of satin tricot, finished with a brassiere and pantie frill of Georgette crepe. Gossard Tedetite 6608, $10.

Model 6607, designed of the miraculous, pliant, triple-wear Charmosette elastic, which is found only in Gossard figure garments, is shown here. Charmosette step-ins are unbelievably soft-supporting and durable. $10.

In the Smart World of Sport GOSSARD SILHOUETTES meet every challenge

Your corsetiere will be glad to show you a selection of new Gossards, designed to meet the needs of your figure and various costumes.

The critical eyes of the observing gallery—growing steadily keener as women's athletic prowess increases—concern themselves as much with appearance as with skill. She whose figure lines are naturally, softly supported is assured of a lithe, graceful silhouette. She attends her game undistracted because every movement is in harmony with her costume, and her costume in complete harmony with the fine, important lines of fashion. Her appearance brings joy to observers, assurance to her game.

Gossard Foundations are Scientifically Smart

Gossard garments of each variation—step-ins, combinations, girdles, front-lacing corsets, are scientifically designed to support the muscles of the figure, to free them from fatigue—and to bring the smartest lines of the natural figure to the fashionable world of sport.

A LOVE OF THE TRUTH

by Doris Blake

Child Expert Stresses the Importance of Teaching Boys and Girls Honesty and Accuracy.

ONE of the problems faced by conscientious parents is how to establish standards of truth in their children. What is called "lying" is very general in childhood. And the lies of children differ greatly in kind and in degree. Some parents dismiss the problem with an indifferent shrug and the excuse that it is simply childish imagination out of which the youngsters will grow eventually.

In order to inculcate right habits and right thinking, since civilized life or any kind of community life is possible only if people are dependable—that is, if truth is in them—these early manifestations of falsehood in children should be met with a sympathetic understanding by every parent and the ideal of truthfulness should be implanted as early as possible in the young mind.

The Child Study Association of America, in one of its pamphlets issued for parents and teachers interested in the development and education of children, treats the subject of truth and falsehood in the young, and stresses the importance of inculcating the principles of honesty and truthfulness early in life.

Sidonie M. Gruenberg, author of this particular study, realizes the limitations of the childish mind and its inability to grasp the adult understanding of truth.

An Expert's Ideas.

"All who have to deal with children realize that truthfulness is attained slowly," she says. "We must not condemn the child for every false statement he makes, but rather use each occasion as an opportunity for enlarging his understanding and increasing his appreciation of truth."

While the child is learning to talk and for some time thereafter there is not sufficient development to distinguish between the creations of fancy, memories, dreams, on the one hand, and actual occurrences on the other. He is unable to differentiate the fleeting images aroused by his wishes from actual situations. Under these circumstances Miss Gruenberg believes it worse than useless to reprove the child for saying that he saw a flower fly off the bush like a butterfly, or that the cat spoke to him. He may have misinterpreted what he saw—or his wish may have been father to the thought. What he sees is certainly not true, but he is not "lying," for everything he tells you has a proper place in his own mind and he is not concerned beyond that. Discrediting his inventions will not cure him of lying, in Miss Gruenberg's opinion, since he has not realized his "lie," but our ill considered reproof may discourage his efforts at putting into words what does come into his mind and destroy his confidence in our sympathy and understanding.

However, our child training authority warns that the child cannot go on forever confusing the imagined with the real. Parents can help him bridge this period by showing him patiently that some thoughts do correspond to the tangible world outside, whereas others exist only within his mind. Playing with him in his make believe games is recommended as the measure to lead him gradually to distinguish between one class of experience and the other

Inventing Excuses.

"Often children invent excuses or justification for their acts, or give reasons which we feel are not altogether genuine," says this child authority. "In fact, the more numerous the reasons are which a child gives in urging the granting of his desires, the more likely it is that his real reason is withheld."

Parents must show children all along the line that to be honest with one's self requires scrupulous investigation of one's own motives.

Another type of problem Miss Gruenberg calls attention to as met frequently by parents is that of the child learning to get what he wants by word or act which an adult may classify as "untrue." The child who, after being put to bed calls for water because in this way he gets his mother's company, is not conscious of the fact that he is lying. He does not begin with a conscious desire to deceive, but simply uses the word or gesture which he has found effective.

"To the child it is not a question of truth or falsehood, or right or wrong; it is only a question of getting what he wants—and he learns that some methods work," says Miss Gruenberg. "Or it may be a question of avoiding something disagreeable and again he learns that certain methods bring the desired result."

Anxious for Attention.

It is not always a seeking of some material satisfaction which induces the child to lie, Miss Gruenberg observes. Just to cause a sensation he may brag of having done something which he really did not do, or tell a story that will astonish or mystify. He sees other people draw attention, even admiration, by the telling of wonderful tales. So he is tempted to tell a good one, himself.

Here again, says the child educator, there is in the child's mind no question of truth or falsehood—there is only the wish to produce an effect. His creativeness is challenged and he does his best.

Dealing with all kinds of "lies" in the same way is not the solution. Parents should know whether the child lies because he is too timid and too weak, or because he lies to show off. In the latter case he can be encouraged to make up a story as a story and have it receive due recognition on its merits and he can be supplied legitimate ways of expressing himself and of receiving the favorable attention which, at this period, the child really needs. Removing the temptation to improvise is part of the parents' job.

The commonest lies among children, Miss Gruenberg further observes, are those designed to save them from punishment.

"Certainly the lies that are prompted by fear of punishment will not be eradicated by more punishment or by giving the child more reason to fear," she argues. "It is necessary to help him realize that lying is an unworthy and weak evasion; it is necessary to help him feel that it is in every way better and more satisfactory to face the consequences of wrongdoing. A challenge to self-respect will be more constructive than an appeal to fear."

Voice Is Important.

The manner of approaching a situation and the tone of voice the parent uses may frighten or challenge a child into making false statements. With proper handling he might have spoken confidingly and truthfully.

A large factor in a child's normal development, the author of this child study treatise declares to be the confidence which he is made to feel in his own ability to do what is right, to overcome temptations, and to outgrow childish faults. Looking for the causes instead of stressing results will help parents to remove the childish temptations to resort to falsehood.

No miracle of sudden reformation or conversion should be expected from the child, the educator concludes. But the ideal of truthfulness should be before the child and before parents as something toward which to strive.

A Small Social Drama

In Which Mrs. Harry Uncovers a Petty Bit of Deceit That Good Form Considers Out of Bounds

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.

SOME months ago Mrs. Harry was invited to a tea given for a woman from Philadelphia. The visitor was the house guest of a friend of one of Mrs. Harry's dearest friends, and Mrs. Harry was naturally asked to pour. Also she was bidden to stay and Harry asked to come later and a very informal supper was eaten and then there was bridge. So naturally, also, Mrs. Harry had a chance to talk to the Philadelphian.

Philadelphia had been the home of Mrs. Harry's mother, too, before she married Mrs. Harry's father and some of her family still live there. But these things Mrs. Harry didn't mention, because they did not seem interesting as conversational offerings to a stranger. But in the course of talk the visitor, whom we shall call Margaret Brown, mentioned the name of a certain woman of national prominence who lives in Philadelphia. She didn't actually say she knew her as Mrs. Harry afterward remembered, but implied it, and Mrs. Harry, who had inherited her friendship from her mother, said: "Mrs. Blank is a charming person, isn't she? I remember my first meeting with her when I was a child. She came to see my mother on one of her visits here and though she hadn't seen her for several years, not since my mother's marriage, she remembered that, as a girl, mother had been fond of jasmine, so she came to surprise her carrying an armful of white blossoms. She was most beautiful then, and I remember hanging onto mother's skirts and adoring this beautiful creature, who dumped all the flowers in my mother's lap."

As Beautiful as Ever.

"She is still as beautiful as ever," Mrs. Harry continued, "and I think she has one of the finest voices in the world, don't you?"

Margaret Brown said yes, that she thought so, too. Then they talked of other things. But when Mrs. Harry was leaving she bade Miss Brown good-night and said: "If you see Mrs. Blank before I do, please give her my best love and Harry's, too, won't you?"

Margaret Brown said: "O, I shall probably see her next week when I go back to Philadelphia."

It happened that Mrs. Blank decided to go to California and was passing through Mrs. Harry's city, so she wired saying: "If you are not already engaged save Tuesday and Wednesday for me."

Mrs. Harry was delighted. Mrs. Blank never stayed at Mrs. Harry's house because Mrs. Harry had the good taste not to ask her. She knows that Mrs. Blank travels with a maid and a secretary and that a six room apartment is no place for three extra women. But she always has Mrs. Blank to dinner—as well as to breakfast and luncheon, and sometimes to tea.

Mrs. Blank liked meeting some of the Harrys' friends and so Mrs. Harry planned a little tea for her—just ten or twelve chosen spirits, young women who one way or another are accomplishing something. Then she remembered Margaret Brown, so she invited her, and, of course, the latter's hostess. It was to the hostess she spoke over the phone, saying: "Will you and Miss Brown come to tea next Wednesday? I'm so glad you can. By the way, tell Miss Brown I am having a friend of her's."

A Surprise Indeed.

So they came—into Mrs. Harry's charming little drawing room, more charming than ever with its bright spring flowers and the several pretty young women gathered about a dignified and beautiful elderly woman who seemed to be making them all laugh. Mrs. Harry drew them into the group. "Mrs. Blank," she said, "this is Mrs. Harrison and here is my little surprise for you——"

Mrs. Harry would never have known that anything was wrong by looking at Mrs. Blank, but Margaret Brown gave herself away. She blushed and stammered painfully. Mrs. Blank came to the rescue.

"How nice," she said. "I'm awfully glad to see you," then smiled very sweetly at her a moment before she turned away to continue what she had been saying when they came in.

After her guests had all gone and she and Mrs. Blank sat waiting for Harry to come home, Mrs. Harry told Mrs. Blank the story of Margaret Brown and how she had given her to understand that she knew Mrs. Blank well.

She ended the story by saying: "And you were so wonderful, Aunt Lally. I don't think a soul there knew you'd never seen her before — I wouldn't have known it if I hadn't been looking at her face, instead of yours. She didn't deserve it, you know. I shouldn't have minded if you'd snubbed her in my house. I think it was most annoying!"

Mrs. Blank only laughed, her laugh that seemed so young, that was always infectious. "My dear," she said, "when one gets to be as old as I am one learns to be amused, instead of annoyed!" That was all.

Then Harry came in and after a lovely dinner, just the three of them, they took Mrs. Blank to her California train where her maid and her secretary and several friends were awaiting her.

Talking It Over.

On the way home Mrs. Harry told Harry all about it. When she finished the story she said: "That horrid little snob, Margaret Brown, committed one of the unpardonable social sins—claiming acquaintanceship with some one she didn't know because that person is influential and prominent, and all she got for it was a charming smile, because Aunt Lally wouldn't insult her in my house!"

"O, no," said Harry, "you're wrong this time, my dear. She got something much worse. She was punished by having the lie discovered by you and by Aunt Lally. She got coals of fire heaped upon her head. She knows you both scorned to expose her and she has learned something about human nature. What she has learned is a bitter lesson, namely that a person can be so big that some people look too small for them to bother to despise.

"Besides, a woman like Mrs. Blank meets lots of Margaret Browns, of course. I venture to say that there are probably a hundred unidentified women claiming some sort of acquaintanceship with her everywhere she goes. She has just learned to jangle their nerves instead of letting them jangle hers."

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Following her 45 mile hike from Providence to Boston recently, Miss Eleanor Sears, society leader, without revealing any signs of fatigue, entertained a group of friends at a dinner in her home.

Besides being president of the Fairmount bank at Fairmount, Ga., Mrs. Edna Tate finds time to look after her 2,500 acre farm.

Victoria Drummond, first woman to be granted a seagoing engineer's license by the British board of trade, is a goddaughter of the late Queen Victoria.

Though it is alleged that Kensington palace in London is haunted, it did not deter Queen Victoria of Spain from observing her thirty-ninth birthday in the palace.

All the leech doctors of Austria now are women, who go about with their leeches, kept in moist earth, to draw blood from those who have faith in that sort of treatment.

In an effort to diminish the number of accidents due to careless driving, Turkey has passed a law forbidding women under age to drive automobiles in Constantinople.

At the age of 18 years Miss Irma Ward of Los Angeles, Cal., so far outclasses in feats of strength all others of her sex that she is claiming to be the strongest woman in the world.

For financial wizardry, Anne Nichols, who produced her own play, "Abie's Irish Rose," has beaten the record of any man for money making in the theater, having become a millionaire through one play.

Mrs. Ella Bushnell-Hamlin, independent candidate for congress from Davenport, Ia., favors the elimination of all sex lines and abolishing women's clubs.

Patient receiving treatment on the cheek.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Geometry Plays a Leading Role in Solving the Problem Play and Varying the Appearance of the Straight-Line Silhouette.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris fashions are more than ever mathematical. They are problems, the correct answer to which, individually solved, is chic. Spring styles have graduated out of the simplicities of addition and subtraction, because most of the lines of the silhouette remain as they were last season, or several seasons ago. Skirt lengths have neither been added to, nor subtracted from, and the same thing can be said about the other linear items that make up what we call the smart silhouette. This is probably because, no matter how much Paris added or subtracted to slender lines, the answer that women gave to this was always the same, so the city of styles had to work out something that would be more interesting to us all.

So, this spring, couturiers are going in for the higher mathematics of geometry, which isn't nearly so involved as it sounds. Take the square, for instance, or the oblong, and introduce curved corners instead of the rigid angles that characterize these two geometric figures, and you have one of the important points of spring styles. As you know, the straight line silhouette is nothing but a rectangle in cloth. Well, by curving the corners, and at times one or two edges, Paris produces variations in this popular line that are extremely pleasing.

I think most of us are fed up with the straight long coat, and yet we don't know how to better it without going in for some other kind of lines that aren't nearly so youthful or so slender. Paris gives us the change we are craving and still leaves us our straight lines, by this curving process. In tailoring terms it is called a "cutaway" effect, but the way it is done this spring is scarcely recognizable under this familiar name.

The first model sketched is the best kind of illustration of how, by rounding corners, you come upon chic. You don't have to be a learned student of styles to recognize this Premet coat as the simple straight line coat, but for all of that it has an air of novelty, given by its cutaway edges, which are accentuated by borders of kid printed in an old rose spotted calf design, and by an inner border of plain old rose crepella set against the rose and white mixed friska of the coat proper. Also the wide revers and the rolling collar are different. Collar and cuffs are edged with calf printed kid, and a small cluster of cherries hangs from the edge of the collar, replacing the usual single flower.

By using curved edges on the jumper waist of this ensemble, Premet has given us something new in the two piece sports dress, and something which is vastly more graceful than the straight around lower edge. Analyzed, this is a straight jumper overblouse, with its lower edge cut to the normal waist line at the center front and emphasized by the addition of a curved two inch tuck. Above this Premet places a narrow band of spotted kid, in a series of curves, and the kid also outlines the round neck.

In order to keep the lines of this dress quite straight, Premet stitches the box plaited skirt down from its normal waist line commencement to the hips. The waist of this frock, to the kid band, is rose crepella and below that is friska, while the skirt is of friska, that very thin mixed woolen that looks something like the old time etamine.

Not so very hard to understand, this new mathematics of chic, is it? It consists of using any of the geometric figures that are the basis of geometry or of children's building blocks in breaking up the oblong line of the regulation silhouette.

One of the easiest and most attractive ways of creating this kind of cachet is shown in our second model, which is a tennis or general summer sports dress from Jane Regny. This frock is made of white crêpe de chine, combined with white crêpe georgette by means of star pointed pieces. The straight waist has a yoke of white georgette, and the waist body of white crêpe de chine is joined to this yoke by irregular star point triangles that are stitched flat, extending around both front and back. This relieves the straight outlines, and so does the irregular waist line that curves up in front above the wide plaits of the skirt.

Without changing in the slightest way the regulation silhouette lines, this use of thin and heavy silk crêpe in such striking figures makes a novel sports dress, and one which couldn't be mistaken for any model of last season. The absence of sleeves is a detail of the season, as I have told you before.

Jane Regny, who specializes in sports clothes, and in this type only, is creating some striking fashion novelties this season by adapting flowers, geometrically conceived, to dress decoration. Our fourth model shows one of these Regny sports costumes, this one inspired by the chrysanthemum. It is really a patchwork dress, made up of alternating patches of green-blue jersey and the same colored crêpe de chine. The jumper waist is made of jersey, and is the regulation jumper cut, with the exception of the neck line, which is fitted by a series of small bladelike tucks. On this jumper Regny sews large leaf motifs of green-blue crêpe de chine, placed as shown in the sketch on the body of the blouse and on the sleeves. A large green and white chrysanthemum is placed on the left shoulder.

The skirt is plaited in diagonal stitched plaits that are loose from an angle that is placed just above the knees, and this angle, or really series of small angles, also follows a diagonal line. A narrow belt made of links of silver completes this unusual but highly wearable and charming sports dress.

Our third model from the left is a Premet afternoon frock which varies the straight line silhouette by means of triangles that make panels. The material of this gown is one of the season's novelties, being a thin wool voile printed with tiny pink flowers. Premet makes the waist rather blousy, gathering it in front and back from the square neck, and the sleeves, too, are rather full. Pink crêpe de chine bands finish the neck line and the cuffs, making the little bows at the wrists. The big voile scarf on the left shoulder is also banded with pink crepe.

A draped girdle of voile makes a fitted hip line, and ties in a bow at the center front. The lower edge of the jumper waist forms a supple yoke at the top of the skirt, and triangular crêpe edged floating panels hang from the girdle at the center front and the sides. The skirt is itself rather narrow and edged in pink crêpe de chine at the hem line.

Introducing curves into the borders of the straight line coat and jumper give novelty to this Premet ensemble in old rose crepella trimmed with printed kid, sketched at the extreme left.

A yoke of white georgette is joined to a straight blouse of white crepe de chine by star pointed edges. The crepe de chine skirt is plaited in front only. Second from the left.

Next, pink flowered wool voile makes this afternoon frock from Premet, with its triangular panels and pink crepe de chine band trimmings.

This blue jersey sports dress from Jane Regny, sketched last, presents a new kind of chic in big patches of self colored crepe de chine.

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Probably an Old Line.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a boy in another city who, when he comes to see me, makes violent love to me, but refuses to keep company with me because he says he doesn't want any special girl friend.

"BRIGHT EYES."

Pay no attention to his love making. It's probably the line he hands every girl, Bright Eyes.

Unreliable.

"Dear Miss Blake: I met a girl and we made a date. She did not keep it. Should I call her up? LONESOME."

You'd subject yourself to similar disappointments were you to phone her. She's too unreliable.

Loves Only One.

"Dear Miss Blake: We both love a fellow whose initials are A. W. K. He told us he loves one of us and regards the other as a friend.

"ROSE AND HELEN."

The invitations and special attentions will naturally go to the favored one—the other must accept the situation.

Let Him Call You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a fellow who cares for me. He asked me to call him up. Is it proper?

"BLUE EYES."

It's unwise to make a practice of calling boys, Blue Eyes, even though they may suggest it. They'll ask for your telepone number and use it if they're in earnest.

One Out of Three.

"Dear Miss Blake: I invite a girl out every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday. She only accepts for Saturday. Is she going with some one else on the other nights? G. P. H."

There's some one else or she does not get sufficient enjoyment out of the time spent with you, either of which is good reason for eliminating further invitations, don't you think?

Eight Years' Difference.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl eight years older than I. She likes me. What shall I do? CURLY."

Watch your step, Curly. Eight years is quite a difference when the woman is the older. Compare her with the younger girls and see how she measures up.

Lonesome.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16. I have no girl and never went out with one yet. How can I get a girl?

"HANDSOME."

Aren't there some nice girls at school who would qualify and who would be glad to go out with a handsome young chap like you? Ask your pals to present you to some of their friends.

Foolish to Consider It Now.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping company for two years and love the girl dearly. I am only making $32 a week, which I know we cannot live on.

"She is 18 and I am 20, but she does not want to wait any longer, if I don't give her the engagement ring by the 1st of next year. BLUE."

You're not yet in a position to consider engagement rings and marriage, Blue. Don't let her scare you into it, either. Use your own good judgment and wait until you can well assume such responsibilities.

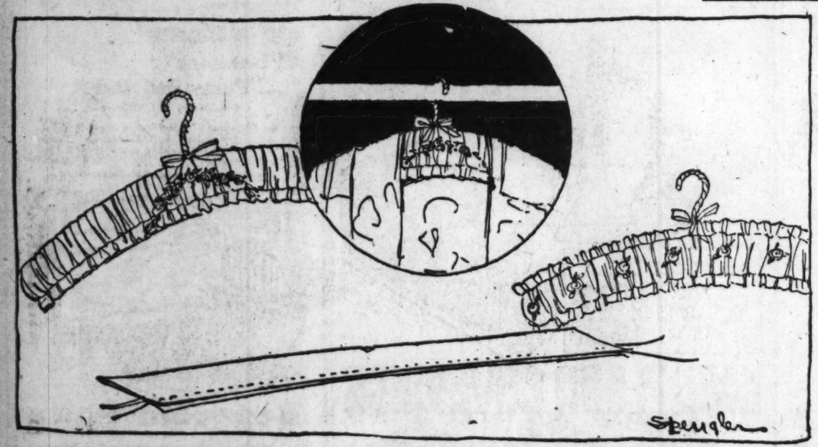
HE Makes No Returns.

"Dear Miss Blake: My fellow comes to see me once a week, but never takes me out. I love him. Do you think he cares for me?

"ELIZABETH."

He's imposing when he accepts your hospitality and makes no return, Elizabeth. Let him spend his evenings elsewhere when he is so unappreciative.

Practical and Fancy Needlework - - - By Clotilde



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

Clothes Hangers Make Pretty Gifts When Padded and Covered with Satin Ribbon

A SET of clothes hangers, covered with different colored satin ribbon, makes a most acceptable gift. The hanger hook should be tightly wound with matching narrow ribbon, and securely fastened. Then for one of the prettiest kind I have seen, five or six inch wide ribbon was used and one yard and a is folded through the center on its length, and shirred one-half inch from the edges on both sides. A tiny hole is made in the center of the length on this fold to slip the hook through; then the ribbon is turned in at each end and the gathered places drawn up to the right length and sewed carefully together, through the gathers.

At the bottom of the hook part, the ribbon used to wind the hook with is tied in a small bow. And in the center of the hanger a half wreath of tiny silk flowers is sewed.

Another pretty hanger was made of ribbon half the width of the one just described and two strips or pieces of ribbon, each one the length of the first quarter of three-eighths was used to cover with.

The hanger was well padded first with cotton wadding, then the ribbon one described. These strips are shirred one-half inch from each edge — the hanger covered with the wadding and then the shirred ribbon set in place. Instead of flowers to trim this one there are large French knots through the center at intervals of about two inches.

Sachet powders should be used inside the wadding and the ribbon bow tied at the bottom of the hook like the other one.

Drawn, Tired Complexions Instantly Refreshed

As a tired body relaxes and freshens after a warm bath at night, so drawn, "tired" faces freshen and relax after a Calonite bath. But that is not all. They glow with healthy color and utter cleanliness. For lack of these, faces grow dull, oily, sallow, "tired"; burdened with blackheads; sluggish; old-looking. Soaps and creams cannot stimulate them sufficiently. Calonite can and will—instantly.

Calonite is a pure white powder that you apply with a damp cloth. Instantly you feel the drawn facial tissues relax, freshen. You feel the hidden oils and powder that clog the pores, that resist other cleansing methods, bubblingly dissolve. You feel the warm, reviving, youthfiring blood come tingling to the surface.

How clear and clean and new your skin looks then! How fresh and young it feels! And how it responds to nightcream and rest! From the very first time you use Calonite you look and feel a new person. Because your skin is clean as it never was before, and healthfully stimulated with nature's own beautifier.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it—this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh! Lift off hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes and calluses. It doesn't hurt a bit!

Seems Magic! Just drop "Freezone" on any tender, touchy corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you just lift that old bothersome corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store—Try it!

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

YOU CAN FILL CHILD'S HEART WITH JOY.

LAST week, among the offers I printed was that of a talking doll, and it brought me a deluge of requests that came all week—all asking that they be considered for the one doll offered. Just a few of these letters will give you an idea of the depth and intensity of this longing for playthings among children deprived of them:

"Dear Miss Brown: When I saw your offer of a doll I immediately thought how wonderful it would be to give to a little child who met with an automobile accident recently and has been in the hospital. She has no mother and it would make her so happy to get it.—M. G."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I know of a little girl who is sick. She broke her doll and just grieves about it all the time. Her mother cannot afford to buy her one and I know she'd love to have the one you are offering.—Mrs. B."

"Dear Sally: I have two little orphan girls I got through the Juvenile court. They are two little sisters. One is 6 and the other is 3. Couldn't you see fit to give me the doll for them?—Mrs. A. G."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: My little girl's birthday is the 28th of this month and her father has been out of work for months. She will be 5 and wants a doll and I can't afford to buy one for her. Dear Miss Brown, would you please make my little girl happy on her birthday?—Mrs. W. J."

Now, can't we do something about all these children who were so keenly disappointed? If we have girls and boys in the family, how many dolls, toys, games, and other playthings are lying about because the children have lost interest and grown tired of these particular toys. And how much happiness these discarded playthings would give if they were presented to girls and boys who haven't any and whose parents cannot afford to buy them.

The young owners will be glad, once they know how others will be made happy by their generosity, to part with them—and think what joy we'll bring into the lives of these children and all the other little applicants!

Nurse's Uniform Needed.

"I am a widow and I have been in the hospital for some time. I am able to work again and have obtained employment in a sanitarium, but I need a nurse's uniform, size 40. I would like a black coat, size 38 or 40, also. Do you think one of your readers might have these things to give me?

"Mrs. M. M."

There must be a nurse, somewhere, with a uniform she is about to discard. I can think of no better way to put it to use than this.

Cripple Asks Help.

"I am a cripple and must make my living by selling articles on the street. I need a small satchel, a camp chair, and a suit of clothes, size 42. I am 50 and have no friends. If you could get these things for me, I would appreciate it greatly. J. M. L."

Have you any of the articles this poor fellow needs in his struggle for a livelihood?

A Worthy Case.

"Would some one be interested in giving Mrs. L. some furniture for her living room? She has only one broken chair. Mrs. L. is a frail little woman with three tiny youngsters and a husband who has a crippled leg and who is not able to support his family as he wishes. She needs especially two comfortable chairs, a libary table and a rug. H. J. A."

Spring cleaning and moving usually finds us with a lot of surplus furniture on our hands. This request may solve your problem of disposing of such articles and enable you to make a poor family extremely happy and comfortable.

Ex-Service Man Needs Help.

"I am married with two children, 5 and 2. My husband is a disabled ex-service man, living with his family because he can't afford a home for us. We are living in a charitable institution. He is without a job and could probably get one as salesman if he had presentable clothing. You might be in a position to find some one who has a suit, size 38, and a spring overcoat for him. Mrs. J. S."

Can you resist this plea from the wife of an ex-service man? Surely, a bit of clothing is small compensation for what he has sacrificed.

Boy Wants Microscope.

"I wonder if someone among your readers has a microscope they no longer want and would give to me. I am a boy, 12, and have wanted one for a long time. R. C. M."

You will make this boy immensely happy if you have the microscope he has been wanting for such a long time.

Day Bed Needed.

"I wonder if you could help me to obtain a day bed for my husband. He has tuberculosis and will not be able to get in the hospital for about three months. The doctor says he must sleep alone and I don't earn enough money to buy an extra bed. "Mrs. J. H."

Can you befriend this family in the misfortune which has befallen them? A day bed—they cannot use one of larger dimensions—would help enormously.

Ambitious to Earn More.

"I am the sole support of my mother and myself, and I am going to try to earn a few more dollars by teaching French at home. For this reason I should like to have our room looking more like a living room and will need two bed coverings of dark material and a leather couch. Do you think your readers have some they might no longer want. Mrs J. V."

Truly, this ambitious woman is deserving of any assistance we may be able to give her. If you have the coverings she needs, or a couch of some kind, she will be most appreciative for them.

The Tintex way is the easiest way to tint

. . . . So simple that you always get perfect results, so quick that it takes only a minute or two. And what economy! That's tinting with Tintex.

. . . . faded "undies", stockings, frocks, etc., become just-like-new in color—or you can change their color—by just "tinting as you rinse" with the long-lasting Tintex pastel shades.

. . . . then there are the fast, lustrous Tintex dark colors—for dyeing heavier materials. And Tintex (in the Blue Box) for tinting lace-trimmed silks without coloring the lace. In fact, Tintex gives you tints and dyes for every home-tinting or dyeing need. See the season's smartest colors on the Tintex Color Card.

Blue Box—for lace-trimmed silks (tints the silk—lace remains white). Gray Box—for tinting and dyeing all materials (silk, cotton, mixed goods).

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Harum-Scarum.

The strangest wedding I ever saw, wasn't! The groom was a serious-minded, devout young college professor, handsome and intellectual. The bride was a small town flapper vamp, about 18. The ceremony was to be performed in the office of a magistrate in a neighboring town. The bride was so much amused at the whole affair that she kept delaying it with laughing, and during each recess that had to be called for her "to get her face straight" she kept up a rapid fire flirtation with the magistrate, who, we had learned, was a widower.

At last, on pretense that he had forgotten the lines of his ceremony, he went into the hall, she following. When we called to them after a few minutes they had disappeared. Inquiring on the street we found they had gone away in his car—where no one knew.

It later developed that the magistrate and the other man's bride drove to the nearest city and were married within two hours after they left us. W. B.

His Customary Expense.

In one of our Kentucky mining camps a minister friend of mine was called to perform a wedding ceremony at 6 o'clock in the evening. His religious scruples forbade his marrying couples if either party had been divorced. This time he hurriedly overlooked the matter when he consented to go. At the appointed hour he was there.

Briefly, noting the license certificate he discovered they had both been divorced, but resolved it was too late to speak of it then.

At the close of the ceremony the elderly gentleman awkwardly asked: "Well, how much do I owe you?" To which the preacher replied: "Well, that's just with you. We do not make any charges. Just whatever you care to give me."

The man paused, looked at his blushing bride of some 45 years, then presented a greenback, saying: "Well, I've been a-payin' a dollar."

B. H. K.

Masterful Bride.

The bride, a foreign born woman of rather forceful mind, lived in a small town but desired to be married and spend her honeymoon in a big city, so several weeks previous to the wedding she came into the city and purchased the wedding ring, her wedding outfit, inquired about the license, engaged the minister, hired a taxi to take her to the church on the wedding day, and, in fact, made all arrangements for the eventful day.

The happy couple were to have their wedding breakfast at the home of a friend, so flowers for the bride, also ordered by that lady, were delivered there on the previous day. The wedding day dawned clear and cold, so cold that the bride's flowers were frozen stiff, and to make matters worse the taxi had been ordered too soon by the farseeing lady and we arrived at the big church an hour too early and had to wait through services for a deceased man with the only other occupant of the church the man's widow, heavily decked in mourning weeds.

Never will I forget the long walk down the aisle of that church with the accompanying music as the four of us were all the wedding party, guests and all.

The hotel selected as the domicile for the honeymoon was a carefully guarded secret until, unfortunately, the place was raided and the poor elderly couple were haled to the police court.

I believe that cured the bride of "officiating," as her husband afterward called it, and now she lets him do some of the planning, deeming it the better thing to do. H. S.

Mock Wedding, Legal.

There was a bashful couple in our town who had been going together for several years, so one night when they were both going to a Valentine party, a mock wedding was arranged. One man went to the license bureau and got the wedding license, and the person who filled it being in on the joke, and, having a sense of humor, filled it out properly, together with a certificate. At the party a young man was selected to perform the ceremony. All were masked so there was no telling who the young man was. He went through the ceremony, and after the blessing the masks were removed.

Imagine the surprise when the young couple saw that it was a minister. The wedding was legal, and the task of proposing being off the bashful young man's hands, he decided to let matters stand, and they are now a happy married couple. L. H. O.

After the Ancient Greeks.

There's a family in this town who attempt to live like the ancient Greeks. Their house is a large temple set in a eucalyptus grove, and consists of ceiling and floor connected by pillars. There are no walls; they simply pull down heavy canvas curtains in rainy or cold weather.

One of the daughters announced her engagement just before the Berkeley fire, about three years ago. The temple was badly damaged, the roof being completely burned, and only a few of the pillars remaining. Undaunted by this catastrophe, the "would-be Greeks" decided to hold the ceremony in the charred ruins. So some of us ordinary mortals wandered through the grove that night, to see what we could see. And we surely got an eyeful.

An altar had been erected in the ruined temple with a painting of the Madonna above it. Sacrificial fires burned in braziers, while the wedding march consisted of music made by clashing cymbals and wind instruments—"the pipes of Pan!"

The minister wore an Oxford gown, while the bride and bridesmaids were garbed in flowing Greek draperies, with bare legs and sandals. The bridesmaids, moreover, carried flaming torches instead of conventional bouquets, and danced to and from the altar. After the ceremony they and the bride favored the audience with more "æsthetic" dancing.

Only the bridegroom and his best man were "out of the picture," as they were in black evening dress. Being "rising young business men," I suppose they refused to take part in the masquerade, even to make a Grecian holiday.

The wedding supper, I was told later, consisted of honey, unleavened bread, and milk, a la an Athenian repast.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Let Him Suffer.

Wifey—John, there is some one in the pantry and I've just made a pie.

John—Well, it's all right with me as long as he doesn't die in the house.

E. G.

Her Hair Was Red.

Red Headed Wife—Gee, old man, you're getting so bald I can use your head for a looking glass.

Hubby—The reason I am bald is this: When they passed around the hair in our family, the only color left was red, and I had rather be bald than take it. Mrs. O. S.

Now It's Blankety-Blank.

Husband—Jones calls a spade a spade, you know.

Wife—Well, you used to before you tried to dig up the garden. F. H. K.

Right Back at Him.

Husband [sourly, after his wife had spilled a cup of coffee on the breakfast table]—"I've seen men shot for less than that!"

Wife [sweetly]—"Yes, and I've seen men half shot do worse than that."

H. A. B.

The Reason Why.

I was returning from a trip to Chicago. A nice looking young man sat down beside me. As I was beyond the flirting age, I let him talk to me. He told me of the important position he held.

On reaching home I repeated the conversation to my husband.

"Just think," I said, "he had 400 men under him."

"Humph!" replied my husband, "I suppose he works in a cemetery."

Mrs. J. G.

Funny Ideas.

Hubby—You've certainly got funny ideas of what's funny and what isn't!

Wife—Well, have you ever heard of any one having serious ideas of what's funny?

Mrs. B. T.

Doubts Him.

Wife—George, I don't believe you put the cat out.

Hubby—Well, if you think I'd lie about a little thing like that go and put her out yourself. F. H. K.

I do my own wash

—yet my hands stay soft, white

I USED to hate Monday, for my week's wash was always very heavy. But washday is now so easy for me.

I just use Rinso. It's great in our water—makes wonderfully thick, lasting suds.

I soak the whole wash in these suds for about two hours—then rinse. The dirt soaks right out and everything becomes spotless without a bit of hard rubbing. And oh, so much whiter than ever before. Sterilized, too!

And with Rinso my hands never get red and parboiled any more. They stay white and soft.

Why not try Rinso next washday? You'll see why the makers of 30 leading washers endorse it.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

A Reasoned Out Beverage Regimen Is More Vital to Our Well Being than a Financial Budget

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

WATER that is hot, water that is cold, man must have his daily half gallon whether young or old. And we would like to be a jolly hydromancer, warning people constantly of what will surely happen to them if they do not watch out and get that half gallon. A hydromancer, by the way, is one who tells the future by means of water, and we are telling you, giving our own twist to the word—a physiological one which we admit it did not originally have.

Now, we are not advising that you become a hydromaniac, that is, have a craze for water, but only a near craze, because real craziness over anything is something to be avoided. To go that far is not pleasant. Indeed, it is a mighty serious thing.

And then there is hydrotherapy, or water doctoring. It has been in vogue 2,000 years or more, and never quite out. Systems of this sort have occupied thousands of printed pages, and with it have gone hydrotherapeutic cook books, etc. The geography of the world is dotted over with places where people seek waters for their health. Around them has flourished a life unique in the way it has dominated and entertained humanity—with doctors and gaming casinos, baths and scenery, food and play.

At this season "watering places" the world over begin to fill up with folk who want rest or "treatment" for their ills, ills so often due in large part to a scant water regimen. So people go to them to be washed and rinsed out, to bathe, etc., when, if these things had been adequately attended to every single day in the year, those people would not now be having to combine disagreeableness with agreeableness. The promoters of these waters see to it that there is much of the latter to balance the former.

It is a strange thing, is it not, that man with his marvelous aqueducts and piping of water even to the top of skyscrapers, and with bottles and thermos carafes to keep water agreeable, should, like the beasts, need to get to a watering trough and fairly swill this liquid? Age after age has preached against this folly, and even the Bible beatifies water. You may read Isaiah—58:11 and elsewhere—and get the idea that a spring of water is a noble institution. And we have a perfect right, in fact, we believe it highly reasonable to do so, to put a physiological interpretation on the biblical expressions which exalt and glorify water, not only as a cleanser externally, but internally. If we believe greatly in a water salvation other than that of holy baptism, we may wish we were Isaiahs trying to turn erring humanity from its careless, indifferent ways as regards its water needs.

Water Service.

A waitress places a glass of water before you as you sit down to table, and she does well. It is not a mere convention. The wise mother provides her bairns and her beloved with a glass of cool and fresh water as soon as they are out of bed, and again when they retire. It does for their bodies what sunlight may do for their spirits, and more. Being a wise mother, she knows that these glasses of cold water—or sometimes it may be hot—are more needed for the health, beauty and happiness of her flock than any other single or simple thing she can do for them. (As an aside, let us say that we know she can largely keep away old age wrinkles from herself if she provides in this way for her own beverage needs, while she dashes cold water on her face and chest every morning of her life—as a beauty, health and energy measure.) One-fourth the daily requirement having been secured by the morning and evening glass, almost any human being who will reasonably attend to the call of thirst will get the other three-fourths through the hours of the day, since a considerable proportion comes in the foods we eat.

Good digestion is nearly assured and elimination certain without a laxative when a human being will give definite thought to maintaining his water balance. He has but to do a little common sense reasoning to know what that is. The many kinds of work water does in a man's body are so vital, and imperative, that racial common sense is always combating some individual's folly in going against the deep rooted reasoning of humanity. There are classic instances of it. A cup of cold water is an ideal of true charity.

The learned author of a cook book printed by Harper & Bros. in 1865 quotes a famous doctor in her chapter "On Selecting Food and Drinks," whose words sound extremely pedantic—his span of life was from 1803-1853—but he was a great medical authority in his day and was perhaps sound for all time on the water question.

He said: "Water is probably the natural drink of all adults. It serves several important purposes in the animal economy. Firstly, it repairs the loss of the aqueous part of the blood, caused by evaporation, and the action of the secreting and exhaling organs; secondly, it is a solvent of various alimentary substances, and, therefore, assists the stomach in digestion." In short, we lose water with every breath and in quantity in other physiological acts; therefore we must definitely, systematically, and all the time repair the loss.

Our Specific Water Requirement.

It is terribly monotonous, and so often fails to make the slightest impression on an individual, this repetition of the fact that we need every day eight glasses, which is four pints, or two quarts, or one-half gallon. It is on honest records that human beings who have evaded systematic water drinking have gone to springs or spas, and for several weeks under presumably medical supervision or some domination have taken seven quarts a day, or fifty-six glasses. What a flood! And what folly to think they can get their water drinking for the year done up in three or four weeks. Because they got on with half their real water requirements now they go through the actual punishment of making oceans of themselves.

We need pure water even to keep our bones clean, as well as to keep our skin from shrinking and to hinder many an internal struggle wholly due to its lack, which shows itself in pain and sometimes even more spectacularly.

Hot Water.

Turning from cold water to hot we find the cook at our elbow. We get our hot water in soups, in gravies, and sauces, in hot fruit compotes and in nutritive or merely stimulating and comforting beverages. It is cooking to prepare these and even to boil water requires some intelligence. Tepid water is an emetic, and if we are taking plain heated water we need to remember that.

Perhaps you have heard people complain of the meals at a given place as being "so dry," no soups, no gravies, no delicious fruit compotes, and being served with only poor or wretched teas and coffee. Man not only needs but craves the food liquids. Waters flavored in various ways approximate nature's best in liquids, the fruits, which are from eighty to ninety-five per cent water, but water that is aromatic, mineralized, filtered, and sterilized. They are great and agreeable agents in this business of keeping the body cisterns filled. And we must not forget that the tomato and cucumber carry the same water load, wonderfully flavored.

Boiling Water.

Boiling water need not be a mere prosaic task, and it is cooking in a real sense. In fiction, where tea has figured so greatly, there are no end of pictures of boiling water, the chief, perhaps, in "The Cricket on the Hearth," by Charles Dickens. To complete the cheerfulness of an open fire there must be a teakettle on the hob and in action. Devices have even been employed to make the sound of the boiling a pleasant one, by using an iron kettle with pieces of iron so arranged in the bottom "as to produce a peculiar melody in which one may hear the echo of cataracts muffled by clouds, of a distant sea breaking among the rocks, a rainstorm sweeping through a bamboo forest, or of the soughing of pines on some faraway hill."

People isolated from the world have devised entertainment like this for themselves, or for their soul's salvation. The cook who can get glorious entertainment from her cooking will cook, compelled or not. And people of a more laboratory mind have found interest in boiling water, watching the bubbles form and break.

Liquid Diets.

A liquid diet and a copious one is the greatest means of getting the necessary water. This is because people are but careless water drinkers and then some persons actually suffer extreme discomfort from drinking more than a quart of plain water a day. Think what the water drinking punishment of old times would have been to them, the horrible agony of it so often resulting in death. But that is no reason for going to the opposite extreme.

Though there was some folly connected with it, the best results I ever saw in the case of some one "reducing," came from a diet consisting almost exclusively of tomatoes and watermelon, each of which are 95 per cent water, or average that. The woman did this without anybody's advice and so risked injury to herself, but since science tells us that hunger sensations come because the walls of an empty stomach contracting hit or knock and cause pain she avoided that ache by eating the bulky watermelon. And the liquid of these two things helped her in more ways than she could guess in her summer martyrizing of herself.

Ices.

Of course one bent on getting a sufficiently liquid diet, though the heavens fall, may easily go to extremes, but that is a danger that is ever betraying humanity in every path of action. The ices, if taken in moderation, and eaten slowly or almost sipped, are worth while in a meal planned according to the ideas we have been exploiting. As to the sipping, there are those who beleive we get the best results and the most desirable alimentary action if we sip all liquids, and thus prolong the exercise the total digestive canal gets when we eat or drink. In other words, we keep our muscles in shape by directly and consciously exercising them. When it is our body proper we may do this with dumb bells, by bending, etc. When it is our digestive canal—an extremely vital muscle—we must apply reasonable methods of exercising it, or refine our methods of getting up action in it.

Pineapple Ice.

Many years ago a fascinating writer of the interesting things of life said that a pineapple ice was a combination of the pine and the palm, of ice and tropical luxury—in other words, of equator and pole, so excellent for our imagination which, with most people, needs more exercise than it gets, and in too many cases none at all is given to food.

For two people, make a pineapple ice or sherbert as follows: Shred or cut up enough of a juicy pineapple to make one-fourth cup. Cook one-half cup of sugar with one-fourth cup of water until it spins a thread, or to 238 degrees. Pour this over the pineapple and let stand till cool. Add to it a little lemon juice to strengthen the flavor, being careful not to use enough to make the whole lack sweetness. Beat the white of one egg till stiff and fold the pineapple and sugar mixture into it. To the fruit may be added a pinch of salt to strengthen the flavor, but adding it to the egg makes its complete fluffing difficult—it may be wet underneath. This may be frozen in a freezer and another egg white added when it is partly frozen, or it may be packed like a mousse and served when it is but half frozen, which makes it a true sherbet.

Lemon Granites.

The Italian granites are often nothing but flavored water half frozen. A little lemon juice in a great deal of water and without any sugar when so treated may be an agreeable thing to sip.

Water Argument.

No more wonderful water argument is to be found in print than that about saving a sick baby, by the means of water, to be found in an article entitled "The Gay Adventure," by Woods Hutchinson, in the Saturday Evening Post, July 29, 1922. The baby had lost water by cups or quarts and with diarrhea which was being restored by spoonfuls only. It is a story to wring the hardest heart, that of the poor baby literally wilting and melting away as a lettuce leaf might from loss and from lack of water, even his skin beginning to hang in folds. Then with water treatment he began to flush, to take up the lack of the wrinkles, and "in twenty-four hours he had swelled up like a tick, and in forty he was well."

If you are an almost violent advocate of water drinking in order to live well, and even for life-saving, this article will be meat to you.

One of our leading dietitians, Flora Rose, has devoted one of her "Easy Lessons in Nutrition" to "The Truth About Water," mentioning the fact that "for some disorders, such as types of heart trouble and high blood pressure, it is necessary to cut down water at all times," but there are certainly doctors who disagree on this.

STRANGE WEDDINGS

DANGER LURKS WITHIN US

Do you know that in our bodies are dangers as great as contagion? Many disease germs enter the system with the food, lodge in the stomach and intestinal tract, multiplying by millions—ready to strike down their victim at the first opportunity. They bring about system poisoning, known as Toxemia!

The symptoms are legion—sleepless nights, lack of appetite, headache, nerves on edge—constant fatigue—any one of them may be a sign of Toxemia—a warning to drive out the poisons that are gradually ruining your health. Partola cleanses the system, rids it of life-destroying poisons—sterilizes the intestinal tract—ends constipation—and prevents Toxemia.

Take Partola—a mild, effective tonic laxative—pleasant to take in mint wafer form. At all good drug stores. Regular box, 30c—double size, 50c.

Disappointed.

Four of us girls (all teachers) rent a furnished apartment and keep house. A week ago my brother phoned he was duck hunting down here and was coming up with a mess of canvas backs that day for dinner. We had all the dinner fixed except the ducks, which the four of us were going to clean and dress in a hurry, and cream, so we invited three hungry chaps to dinner.

My brother arrived just in time for dinner, with all stores closed, and with one puny mudhen which scarcely made a satisfying meal for the family cat. Embarrassed? O! M. K.

The Man in Gray.

My sister-in-law paid us a visit. As she was about to go, I urged her to stay and dine with us, expecting my husband's arrival any moment. While waiting for him we gathered some flowers.

Then impatiently looking down the street, we saw a man in gray and waved at him in a very familiar way, which he acknowledged. We then rushed in to serve dinner, but no John arrived. We dined alone.

When he came we asked why the delay. Suddenly I recalled he had changed his suit to a brown one that morning. Now, then, who was the other man?

Later in the evening, when sprinkling the lawn, four doors away I saw the man in gray, which makes it most embarrassing, because we are not on speaking terms. MRS. J. S.

Next to a Loud Speaker.

Having a considerable distance to travel to school I had acquired the habit of reading my French assignment on the elevated cars. One morning the entire chapter was difficult and required more concentration than was usual.

I regret that a voluble woman and a quiet well mannered man took seats next to me. The woman became more voluble and agitated as she related the details of a trial at which she had appeared in some capacity.

Needless to say, she attracted the attention of several persons close by, as well as my own, which caused me a deal of irritation. Several times I forced myself to reread the passage I had begun, but it seemed impossible to understand with a perpetual "loud speaker" at my side.

In a desperate attempt to grasp the meaning, I inhaled a deep breath and read aloud with a determined voice: "Monsieur Carot a prit un jour de congé," etc.

Almost at the same instant I was aware of my faux pas, as well as the general amusement of the jostling passengers. Even the long suffering man smiled wryly, which added to my embarrassment. B. E. W.

Why He Remained Aloof.

One night at a dance I was introduced to a stranger. He did not speak, but bowed very low and then withdrew. All evening he seemed to stay aloof from the crowd. The girls thought him "stuck up." When ladies' choice came, the girls dared me to ask him to dance. I tripped up to him and with a roguish twinkle in my eye, stammered, "M-m-m-ay I have the p-p-p-leasure of this d-d-d-ance?

He answered, "The p-p-p-leasure is all m-m-m-mine."

Instantly I recognized his stammering as a natural affliction. You may be sure that I did not enjoy that polka. 'Tis years! But that moment of awful embarrassment to this day sends red floods of shame into my cheeks. L. P.

When Child Doesn't Laugh and Play,—Look at Tongue

Hurry, Mother! Give "California Fig Syrup" at once. It can't harm children and they love it

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Eat your fill . . . and Sleep like a top

HUNGRY . . . all tired out? A good healthy feeling. But it's also nature's warning that energy is running low; that you must be careful what you eat.

A fully ripe banana—whether you're two, twenty-two, or twenty times two—will both relieve that hungry feeling and permit you to drop off into a sound, dreamless sleep. Why?

Because the thoroughly ripened banana is packed with rich sugars—energy elements that hungry, tired bodies can easily assimilate.

How can you tell when this all-food fruit is ripe? That's easy. When the skin is a golden yellow generously flecked with brown, then the banana is so easy to digest that it actually melts in your mouth.

The next time you feel hungry and tired, try a fully ripe banana. In the meantime, we shall be glad to send you a most unusual recipe book that tells of over eighty different ways of serving this nourishing fruit from the tropics. Just fill out and mail the coupon below for a copy.

Our Spring Opening

More than a mere style event!—It is "another reason for typical Thrift Corner Value-Giving!"

So effectively does it emphasize the value-giving power of Chicago's Famous Thrift Corner that, in spite of the semi-formal atmosphere throughout the store, PRICE plays an important part you will appreciate.

No matter what the occasion—no matter how elaborately prepared—value-giving predominates to such an extent one wonders at our consistent ability to undersell. With Easter but three weeks away our Spring Opening takes on an importance you will appreciate.

Featuring:
A Sale of Women's Newest Spring Dresses, $15.
A Sale of Women's Newest Spring Coats, 21.75.
A Sale of Women's Newest Spring Hats, $3 and 4.98.

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

Crafty Fox Thinks He's a Bird.

I MET Zip Coon yesterday and he was laughing all over the place. He told me this story of something that had just happened:

"Golly me! O, golly my! If I had wings, how I could fly. I'd fly so high I'd bump the sky. Golly me! O, golly my!"

Crafty Fox sang this song as he came skipping down the road one day last week.

Turkey Buzzard heard him from the top of the dead oak and squawked back at him:

"Golly me! O, golly my! I'll bet a nickle you can't fly. Just take my wings, let's see you try. Golly me! O, golly my!"

Crafty Tries Flying.

Crafty Fox stopped short and sniffed.

"Gracious me," he grinned. "I smell music and if it isn't my old friend Turkey Buzzard's beautiful voice."

Turkey Buzzard couldn't sing a note, but he was so tickled at what Crafty said about him that he flopped down from the tree and bowed several times.

"Come to think of it, Crafty," said he, "I don't see why you shouldn't be able to fly. You are light and graceful and you have such a nice bushy tail to steer with. I'll get an old pair of wings of mine that I don't use any more and strap them on your back and give you a few lessons."

Crafty was delighted. He jumped around and clapped his paws and sang again:

"Golly me! O, golly my! I'll soon have wings and then I'll fly. I'll fly so high I'll bump the sky. Golly me! O, golly my!"

TURKEY BUZZARD laughed and winked his old red eye as he strapped the wings on Crafty's back. He knew that Crafty would never fly to amount to anything, but he wanted to have some fun with the old sinner, so he just urged him on.

"Now, then, watch me," he squawked as he stood on a stump and spread his wings. "A little jump and—see—how easy it is?"

"Who couldn't do that?" grinned Crafty as he climbed on the Wings Spread Out and Head Still Wabbling.

stump and spread his wings. Then he gave a little jump, turned three or four somersaults, and landed on his left ear.

Just at that moment Benny Bunny came hopping along.

"What was that pretty little song you were singing, Crafty, about bumping the sky? Won't you sing it again for me, please?"

My, but Crafty was mad as he gathered himself together after the wreck. "Never mind," he snapped, "I'm going to learn and when I do fly you won't think it's so funny. Remember that funny Bunny."

Benny blew a kiss to Crafty, winked at Turkey Buzzard, and skipped along down the road. As soon as he was out of sight Crafty called to Turkey Buzzard: "When I learn to fly I'm going to catch him the first thing and give him the worst spanking he ever had. I am that."

CRAFTY kept at it, however, and soon he could rise quite a few feet in the air.

"Now I'm ready, old friend Buzzard," he shouted. "Call Benny Bunny." But Benny did not need to be called. He was hiding in the nearby thicket and saw all that was going on. Out he hopped just as if he had not heard a single word.

Crafty went scooting up in the air. Benny ran around in a circle. Then Crafty flew in a circle. Benny made the circle smaller. Crafty did the same. Around and around they went until poor old Crafty's head began to wobble. He was getting dizzy.

Poor Old Crafty Bumped a Tree.

"Now catch me," squeaked Benny as he scampered for a clump of little trees and darted beneath them. Crafty, with his wings spread out and his head still wobbling, sailed between the branches and hung there, making his old legs go as if he were riding a bicycle. Turkey Buzzard finally had to help him down.

Benny Bunny saw him the next day hobbling around with a cane. His best clothes were full of rips and tears.

"Golly my! O, golly me!" laughed Benny. "Poor old Crafty bumped a tree."

Crafty Fox just stood still and shook all over, he was so mad.

My next story will tell how Judge Bear gets hunk with Crafty Fox. Yours truly, BUDDY FUDGE.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

Children's Rooms May Have as Much Originality and Charm Nowadays as Grownups'.

An attractive room for the little girl.

CHILDREN'S rooms of the present day involve a great deal more than mere sanitation. Not so long ago practicality and cleanliness were the only factors taken into consideration. Modern mothers, however, realize the importance of color and artistic surroundings, in addition to these fundamental requirements. They know the development of the child's growing personality may be greatly aided or hindered by environment. From a sanitary point of view it is no longer necessary that the playroom or nursery resemble a hospital ward. All sorts of fascinating and interesting fabrics, furnishings, and decoration are procurable nowadays in styles well suited and adaptable to use in the child's room. Bright color schemes, decorative but washable fabrics, and furnishings of simple, sturdy lines are the best choice.

Shown in today's illustration is a section of an unusually attractive room which has been especially planned for a little girl. Cream colored walls are decorated with many colored circles, cut out from paper and glued on. The whole surface is then proptected with a coat of washable shellac. On the metal shelf is an amusing set of figures imported from France. They are cut out in wood and enameled black and white. The two central figures hold a clock, by which the little girl has learned to tell time. The pair of end figures are electrically wired and fitted inside the lamps with small bulbs. The mantel is black and white marble.

Two little arm chairs at each side of the fireplace are upholstered, one in tiny flowered calico on a turquoise blue ground, the other in glazed chintz, showing clusters of flowers on a cream ground. Long, straight hanging window curtains are of turquoise blue sunfast, lined with cream colored sateen. They are arranged with pulley cords so they may be drawn together at night. A small four post bed, a bureau, and a pair of ladder back chairs are made of maple.

The bed cover is of the same material which hangs at the windows. A lamp on a little table beside the bed is made of a china Dutch girl holding an umbrella shade over the electric light bulb. Cupboards for books and toys are built into two corners. The rug is a deep peacock blue, with a border in two tones of the same color.

Dotted Swiss, delightfully fresh and crisp and so well suited, is used in another little girl's room. Casement windows have curtains of rose colored dotted Swiss, ruffled at the edges and caught back just above the sill with cuffs of the same. They are topped by ruffled valanaces. A cover on the bed is made of the same material, with deep full side flounces finished with a double row of narrow ruffles. An under cover is made of rose colored cotton rep. Runners on the dressing table, bureau, chiffonier, and bedside table are of the dotted Swiss simply hemmed. Deep mulberry, wool chenille rugs are used on the floor. The walls are done in a white paper sprinkled all over with tiny pink rosebuds. Woodwork and built-in shelves are painted white.

Flowered cretonne makes another child's room gay. Recessed windows are fitted with built-in seats, beneath which there is ample storage space for many youthful treasures. The windows are curtained with a peach colored, sunfast voile topped by cretonne valanaces, showing floral motifs on an ivory ground. The curtains are bound with two inch bands of the cretonne and are caught back with cuffs of the same. Boxed cushions, made to fit the window seats, are covered with cretonne. These cushions may be dragged onto the floor easily, where they may serve as magic carpets, or ships at sea, or whatever vehicle young fancy may convert them into.

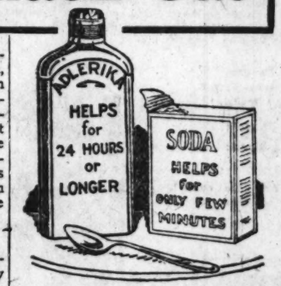
Twin beds in the room have deep flounced covers of the flowered cretonne. On a small table between the beds is a lamp with a parchment shade decorated to match the flowers in the cretonne. Two little low armchairs are upholstered in deep green diaper patterned denim. A squatty low table set between these chairs holds a sturdy tea set, so that the young hostess may serve afternoon tea of the cambric variety to her favored guests. A warm, pleasing glow is spread over the room by means of peach colored walls, finished with a washable paint. Two toned, green braided rugs are used on the floor.

Checked or plaid ginghams are particularly good in a boy's room. One small boy has a bright, sunny room, with sash curtains at the windows of gay blue and yellow sunfast gingham. The walls are painted clear corn yellow and the woodwork blue to match the color in the gingham. A boxed cover on the bed is made of the same gingham, finished with narrow blue upholsterer's fringe, all washable. Sturdy wooden benches, painted blue, may be put to innumerable uses. A deep midnight blue wool rug almost completely covers the floor.

Another little boy's room has white walls, spangled with many gold stars of various sizes. Woodwork is painted white, with depressions done in vermilion. At the windows are ruffled white organdy curtains, with fine vermilion bindings. All of the furniture is painted brilliant blue. Three wide, low benches are fitted with boxed cushions—army mattresses in disguise. These mattresses are covered with rep, one green, one blue, and one red. The covers fasten along one edge with snaps, so that they may be removed for laundering. The upper parts of built-in corner cupboards are filled with open shelves and the lower parts are concealed behind doors, so that things may be kept in order. A bed cover is made of sapphire blue rep piped with emerald green. The floor is covered with deep blue and white linoleum in large, alternating squares.

Striped sunfast in sage green, copper color, old gold and black, makes the window hangings in an older boy's room. Glass curtains are of old gold theatrical gauze. Panels in the walls are filled with decorative and vividly colorful ship posters. Built-in, open shelves hold the boy's tools, books, and his rapidly growing collection of ship models. A recessed windowed niche at one end of the room makes a happy setting for his work table and bench. The bed cover is made of striped sunfast, matching the window draperies. A comfortable armchair near one window is upholstered in copper colored wool rep, piped with black. Beside it stands a wrought iron reading lamp with parchment shade. A similar lamp is placed near the bed. Black and ecru linoleum on the floor is supplemented by two black fur rugs.

Better than Soda for Stomach Gas



PEOPLE who use soda or magnesia for gas on the stomach, sour stomach and indigestion know that these give but very temporary relief. The gas and sourness may be removed for a short time, but soon returns because the cause still remains. Recent discoveries made by medical specialists show that gas and sour stomach are nearly always due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis.

Intestinal Stasis

THIS insidious disease, specialists tell us, is caused by faulty diet and lack of proper exercise, and afflicts three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. By remaining too long in the bowels, this matter ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of gas bloating and pains, sour stomach, dyspepsia, dizzy spells and nervousness.

Even if the bowels move daily, enough old matter may be left to ferment, cause stomach gas, and poison the system. Only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing of both upper and lower bowel can lasting relief be secured.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, perfected and first used the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. Adlerika is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other gas-expelling and detergent elements. Unlike other medicines, it acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Relieves Gas Quickly

RELIEF from stomach gas, gas pains and bloating, is felt almost instantly after Adlerika is taken, unless due to malformations or other deep-seated causes. ONE spoonful often brings out an amazing amount of old poisonous matter which you never thought was in your system, and which may have been the hidden cause of gas, indigestion, nervousness or sleeplessness.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika frequently brings out an astonishing amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Adlerika is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for Intestinal Stasis and stomach gas, or whenever a thorough bowel cleansing is needed. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

"In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."—Dr. James Weaver.

"I suffered with intestinal stasis and gas. Soda or magnesia helped me very little. I got relief from the first dose of Adlerika, and since taking it, I eat almost anything, sleep well and gained weight."—Mrs. Chas. Rhodes, Yakima, Wash.

"Both my wife and myself suffered a great deal from indigestion and gas. Soda would give some relief, but Adlerika has done us more good than anything we have tried."—Charles Staven, Terre Haute, Ind.

Kill the Chill of Spring

with a Gas Radiantfire and a "Unified" Range

THIS is the hardest time of year to control a furnace fire. The sun shines brightly, the house gets uncomfortably hot—so you let the fire die—then, at evening, it's uncomfortably cool.

There's a far better way. Have us install a Radiantfire in your fireplace and a "Unified" Gas Range in your kitchen. Then you'll be comfortable day and evening—never too warm, never too cool. Just turn on these gas-fired servants when needed—shut them off when warm enough. Clean, odorless, economical.

You won't need a furnace fire at all. Save yourself that bother—know that spring is really here!

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the fly, which has five eyes and is so hard to catch, should be able to see a distance of not more than two or three feet!

These eyes of the fly, tiny as they are, are not nearly so simple as are those of man. They are likewise nowhere near as useful. The fly, like all the insects, depends on smell to find its way in the world much more than it does on eyes.

Two of the fly's eyes are called compound eyes. They are the big round globes that sit up on the front of its head and seem to look out so wonderingly. If man's eyes were as big in proportion to his size as are those of the fly they would stand out like grapefruit.

These fly eyes have no lids on them and so are always open. They cannot be turned from side to side. It is because of this that they must be made "compound." Man's eyes have a single lens like a camera. That lens must be pointed at the thing at which the eye is looking. Man can do this by turning his eye. The eye of the fly has 4,000 lenses, each pointing in a different direction. In this way the fly's does not need to turn its head. It does not need to turn its head. So it can see any enemy that would try to catch it. It cannot see it, however, until it is within two or three feet and so must be quick to dodge.

Besides these two big, round eyes the fly has three tiny ones on top of its head. These are little more than skylights looking up. It is the big eyes that do most of the business.

The fly can see better than most insects. The ant, for instance, has but 50 lenses in its eyes and sees very little. Bees and wasps have average eyes and can see two feet. Certain butterflies have the best of insect eyes and can see as much as six feet. The eye of the dragon fly is among the most complicated and has 20,000 lenses. There is, however, a moth which has 27,000 lenses in its eye. These lenses are all packed together and, under the microscope, look like honeycomb. It is by measuring them that scientists can find out where they focus and so can tell how far the insect can see.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Billy was the only boy in the family with four older sisters. A caller at the house asked him how he ever managed to get along with so many girls. Billy hesitated a moment, and then, walking over to the caller, said very quietly, "I just simply fights 'em."

J. W.

Mary, 3½ years old, had been given permission to stay for lunch at a neighbor's. She stayed all afternoon and while auntie was preparing dinner, she said, "Auntie, your lunch was so good, I guess I will stay for dinner."

V. E. B.

David and Bobby, both 4, were great pals, but often had fights which ended in tears. One morning David came in from play looking rather downcast, and being asked whether he and Bobby had been fighting again, he answered, "Well, no, we haven't been fighting, but we sure had a lot of conversation about somethin'."

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation whose jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Too Ambitious.

When small children, my brother and I were constantly vieing with each other to be our father's pet. We were both of a jealous disposition and were really angered if father paid more attention to one than the other.

One day my father bought a pony for brother, which I could not ride because I was too small. Seeing him ride before my father's admiring eyes was too much, so I decided to gain father's admiration by learning to ride, too.

Father forbade this, so one day I went to the stable unobserved and took the pony. I finally mounted, gave the horse a cut with the whip, but when he started running I fell off, breaking my shoulder blade. I still have an ugly protusion on that bone to remind me of the folly of jealousy.

Spoiling the Fun.

I was going to a grand party, where every one dressed wonderfully.

My girl friend and I went up to get new shoes. Imagine my dismay when arriving home to find mine were too small.

She offered to take them back for me. Knowing my clothes were much finer than hers, she got my shoes a size too large this time.

Being time to go, I had to wear my old shoes, and my whole evening was spoiled on account of a jealous heart.

Women the World Over

Night work for women is gradually being done away with by law in Japan.

Changing about of women from job to job in industry is now easy, since most of the factory work done by women today requires little skill or experience.

The Missouri State Board of League of Women Voters has begun a campaign to have that state join the 22 other states which have jury service for women.

By husking more than 1,500 bushels of corn in 23 days, Miss Mary Franzen of Kingsley, Ia., set what is believed to be a new record. Her daily average was 68¾ bushels.

Mrs. L. M. Foster Welch, J. P., recently appointed sheriff of the county of the town of Southampton, is England's first sheriff since the creation of the office in 1477.

In Atlantic City recently a circuit court suit was tried by an entirely female jury, the first time in the history of the state that a jury entirely of women had heard a case.

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

This was Never Suspected

A BEAUTY parlor may have one of seventeen imitations of Nestle permanent wave machines. But few women suspect that many of these have been given away gratis or sold at cheap prices simply to obtain a footing. Sometimes the hair treated is of good quality and a satisfactory wave results. But more often, the patron is not so fortunate. More often, the results are unsatisfactory and she gives up the thought of having a second wave when the time comes.

With the new Nestle Circuline method, your hair is tested in advance to assure perfect results in the end, either by the Nestle Text-o-meter or by sample waves on the back of your head.

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL — by WESTBROOK PEGLER

On Police Records, and the Case of Friend William

I WAS reading an article in the papers this morning where it stated that a young man was arrested for shooting some people, and the article stated that the young man had a police record as long as a day in church. It stated that, because of his police record, the young man probably would get an extra long housing in the penitentiary for shooting these people, and it disgusted me to read such a narrow minded article in the papers.

Of course, I do not think that young men should go around town shooting people unduly, because if you do not regulate shooting you will not have anybody left to watch parades or vote on election day, and then you will have a very serious situation, as there will be nobody for the coppers to shove around.

SUCCESSFUL ARRESTS

But I do not think that a young man who shoots somebody now and again should be put into prison where he will have to associate with dog poisoners and welfare workers and dishonest wardens, because you would be likely to spoil his character and make a criminal of him.

It disgusts me to read an article about a young man's police record being held against him, as I know some very fine people with police records, and I realize that the friendships and personal contacts that a young man establishes in this way sometimes help him to become a useful citizen and a leader in worthy public movements.

He now lives at the country club with his old lady.

I have a friend named William who was arrested every Thursday night and arraigned in court every Friday morning for two years and a half, and he tells me that his success in the last few years has been almost entirely due to the ground work of his career that was laid in the bull house of the 72d precinct. He was just a young chump when he started his police record, but he was a smartish young fellow at that, and, in the course of time, he made friends, and now he has retired and lives at a country club with his old lady.

The coppers used to put the finger on William for running a joint called a membership fight club in the days when everybody that went to the bouts was supposed to be a member of the club in good standing. The coppers were supposed to raid these joints on fight nights and take the worthy president, and my friend William was greatly excited the first few times because he thought it was a disgrace to get arrested.

A $300 LAWYER

At first he hired an expensive lawyer to go to court with him and explain to the judge that the members were just holding their regular weekly meetings and that some of the members liked to fight and they were just fighting sociably. The lawyer would get up in court and he would tell the judge a lot of information about habeas corpus and he would state that a gentleman's club was his castle like it was over in England in the old days when the soldiers would come in and toss people around and turn things upside down and drink up everything in the bar and the king, who was running for reelection, finally said an Englishman's home was like the king's castle and the soldiers were just like a lot of gorillas breaking into places that way and drinking up everything in the bar.

The judge would listen to William's lawyer and then he would say, "All right, that will cost you $10; pay the clerk on the right and no checks cashed; next case." So William would pay the clerk $10 and he would pay the lawyer $300 and the next Thursday night the cops would bust into the joint again and cause a lot of disturbance in the midst of the fights.

JUDGE AIDS HIM

After a while the judge called William into his office one day and he said, "William, it is none of my business, but I think you are a chump to be paying that fellow $300 to be your lawyer every Friday and I have a young friend who is just out of law school and he has not got much business yet so he will take your work for $50 a crack."

So William changed lawyers and the judge scaled the fine down to $5 and it got so that he would let William sign tabs with the clerk and run the bill up to $50 or so before paying off.

Then one day the judge called William into his office again and told William that he ought to quit loping around and get into some good business where he could make some dough and be respectable, as the fight business was a low business and full of bums.

"Since they closed the saloons in this town," the judge said, "it has been very hard for the leading citizens to get good material and I have an idea that you would be a success in this business as you are a smart young fellow and are well known to the bulls and the bondsmen and the courts.

"So," the judge told William, "if you want me to I will put you in touch with a couple of prominent gentlemen who have a warehouse full of material and if you will call at my house this evening I will introduce you to the gentlemen."

A TRIUMVIRATE

So William called at the judge's house that evening, and the judge said, "William, I wish to introduce you to Sheriff So-and-So, who is one of the prominent gentlemen that I spoke about in my office."

Of course, William was glad to meet the sheriff, but he said to the judge, "Judge, who is the other prominent gentleman?" and the judge said, "I am the other prominent gentleman, and the sheriff and I wish to have some smart business man hoist this material out of the warehouse and put it on the market in a quiet way, and we will do business three ways with the dough."

So William resigned from the worthy presidency of the fight club and retired from the prize fight business, which is really a low business and full of bums, and became a rich and respectable member of the community, and he now lives at the country club with his old lady.

HE MIGHT SUCCEED

Therefore, as I say, it is very disgusting to me to read a narrow minded article in the papers stating that a young man's police record will be held against him and that he will probably get extra long housement for shooting those people.

You cannot tell why the young man shot those people, because, for all you know, the young man may not have been feeling good at the time, and when a man is not feeling good he is likely to do things that he will apologize for afterward, and I have no doubt that if you put it up to this young man in the right way he would promise not to shoot those people any more.

And if his police record is all that the article says it is, I don't see why he shouldn't become a substantial and respectable member of the community like my friend William.

LADIES IN CRIME

Kitty Malm, the Tiger Woman

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

IF ever a 19 year old girl had reason to be a cynic about men, it seems to me that Kitty Malm —the Tiger Woman, they called her—had that right.

Now Kitty, understand, was no saint. Maybe she did carry a gun where most girls hide their love letters. But perhaps she wasn't altogether wrong, from her arc of the circle of experience, when she mumbled to the bailiff at her own trial for murder:

"Men are quitters. They're long on talk, but, Lord, when it comes to the showdown, they're yellow."

MARRIES AT 15

Kitty, or rather Katherine Walter, was born in Austria-Hungary; she came here in the steerage when she was 7 years old. She finished the fifth grade when her mother, in a moment of philosophy, reflected:

"No need for girls to go far in school. You just spend a lot of money on them, then they get married. But fine for the boys."

So Kitty went to work in a machine factory. And grew more the cynic, if we can trust her words:

"Fellows, always fellows. I didn't want to marry 'em. Then they'd try to scare me, saying they'd scar me and spoil my looks with a razor or a gun if I wouldn't marry 'em."

Finally one of the men in the factory, Max Baluk, the Russian, married her. She was 15. Four years later, when she is on trial, she can still remember the ugly names her husband called her. Her baby was coming, she recalls, but she couldn't go back home to her mother's, for her stepfather called her worse names than her husband did.

LOVED HER BABY

Kitty, it is very possible, was too busy "prowling joints" ever to belong to a mothers' club; and she phrased a colorful oath much more easily than she mouthed a sentiment about the "nobility of maternal sacrifice." But she did love the baby.

"Lord," she exclaimed in her jail cell one day, and of course part of it was rhetoric, "I could kill a woman who'd rather have a dog than a kid."

She loved the baby, "Tootsie," and worked for her, fought for her.

"I had to hurt my baby's leg once," she told me, "gettin' her over a barbed wire fence to get her away from a man who stoled her to try to get me to marry him. I hurt her, but it was to get her away from a bad joint."

Once more a man crossed her path. This time, as she tells it, she asked Otto Malm to pose as her husband for half an hour and "smash the face of a dirty man down the street who's trying to steal my kid."

Malm, an ex-convict, played the part for half an hour, and the two went into partnership.

A KILLING

Which brings us to the night of Nov. 4, 1923, when Kitty and Malm and a man named Eric Noren drove to the Delson Knitting company, 3051 Lincoln avenue. They were there to "pull a job," but they were surprised by Edward Lehman, night watchman. There was shooting. Lehman was killed; Kitty was shot, by a stray bullet from Malm's gun, it is believed.

The wrong couple, brought in by the police, were indicted through the confession of the girl, Ethel Beck, who vaguely and dumbly offered no rebuttal when the police fastened the crime upon her and a man. But later Malm was arrested, and once more the men she knew played Kitty false. About the first, and surely the last thing, Malm said to the police was: "It was the shot from her gun that killed the watchman; she done it."

For a brief, restless, futile time Kitty Walter Baluk Malm had the satisfaction of besting several men. The police, dispatched by Malm's ungallant and, it seemed from later evidence, untrue shifting of the blame, to a house at 1531 North La Salle street, were refused admittance by a woman whom they didn't know and who knew they didn't know she was Kitty. One of the men went back to headquarters for instructions, leaving two others guarding the place.

KITTY GETS AWAY

Kitty slipped quietly out the back door, leaving her young sister there to receive the officers with their new orders and instructions. The coup caused the suspension of several policemen and enabled Kitty to get away to a boarding house in Indianapolis.

But this pasty-faced, hard talking, strangely emotional Austro-Hungarian girl who said, with many a violent expression, that she loved her baby, really did. She got lonesome for the child.

And one afternoon, perhaps a week after her disappearance, a stolidly built young woman in a near seal coat walked up to the desk sergeant at the Hudson avenue police station and said, casually enough:

"Do you want me? I'm Mrs. Malm. I wanted to see my baby."

They locked her up. They took a statement from her, in which she declared that she had been merely the lookout at the robbery, that she had had no gun that night, that her own husband had accidentally shot her, and that she didn't bear him any particular malice for having insisted that she did it.

It wasn't his fault so much as it was all men's weakness, she explained.

KITTY MALM AND HER BABY—The mother, called "The Tiger Woman" by jail officers, surrendered so she could see her child again. Kitty was given a life term after her husband insisted she was the one who killed a watchman during an attempted robbery.

A CURIOUS MOTHER

"They must'a made him do it," she said over and over. "When I seen him just now, I could see that, God, he looked so bad, it got me. Men, say, they're brave as the devil but they can't hold out the way a woman can. Now me, say, they coulda beat hell outta me and I wouldn't a-squealed. Say, listen, they could of built a fire under me and I'd never of squawked."

And I rather imagine she wouldn't. Not for a long time, anyway.

Then they brought the baby to her. Crying, swearing, sobbing, kissing, yelling, she was a curious mother; fierce, sincere, inconsistent, earnest, impassioned, pathetic.

"There ain't nobody can be as good to her as me," she cried.

"May God help me to kill her if they ever try to take her away from me. And if I get out and the judge says I can't have her, I'll kill her first. There's only one person in this whole world I'd let take her and that's my mother. But I'd never want my mother to tell the baby who her mother was. Not a word."

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Her face at this point sagged into lines of cruel desperation, and she worked her mouth in ugly wrinkles to keep from crying. It wasn't playacting. Then, just before the tears came, she looked over at the child.

"She'll be three years old the 29th of July. They're cute at that age, ain't they?"

The police matron warmed up a bottle of milk; the police sergeant sent out for some bread, and the baby feasted with her mother. Next day the youngster's grandmother came and took her away and Kitty went over to the county jail. Beneath her sturdy, stolid peasant figure was a whirligig of emotions, the authorities soon found out. There were scenes, terrible outbursts of temper and postscripts of weeping.

Once she tried to commit suicide by hanging herself with a bed sheet. Upon being revived she was savage in her rebukes of her rescuers. They called her the "Tiger Woman," and so she was, some of the time. Other times she was twice as "scare't," in spite of denials, as any of the more suave, beguiling ladies who had sat behind the bars and thought up naive phrases. Kitty had no nice phrases, no silken syllables.

The trial began before Judge Walter P. Steffen, on Feb. 18, 1924.

Kitty, none too stylish with her rather greasy black hair cut straight and square, sat near her lawyer, Attorney J. J. McCarthy, that opening day and saw her co-defendants desert her and leave her alone. "Blonde Kitty" and the man she had implicated in her foolish confession had long since been dismissed.

Earlier that day Malm, ever the same gallant, had pleaded guilty to the charge of murder, but placed the actual killing on some one else when he said, "There were three shots fired and I fired only one." Earlier, too, Eric Noren entered a technical plea of guilty, but swore that he had driven the car the night of the murder and had remained in it.

That left Kitty alone in the defendant's chair. She tried to buoy herself up with remarks such as this:

"Say, I have about as much chance of gettin' the rope as Malm has of gettin' angel wings when he croaks."

Or this:

"Any fool could tell it wasn't me. There was only one gun. And, suppose I had of had a gun, would I of shot myself? Huh? Say, that's a hot one."

And this:

"It's always ladies' day when it comes to shovin' some one up before the cops."

As the state qualified the jurors for the death penalty, Kitty, assuming a bravado that didn't fit in so well with her pallor, her ice cold hands, and the shaky way she reached for the glass of water, asked this question:

"Say, would anybody in the world hang a girl for bein' in the alley with a guy who pulls a gun and shoots? And she even gets a piece of lead in her own head."

LITTLE ONE ON HAND

The evidence did show that a bullet lodged in Kitty's head; that Malm pitched her, head first, into the car; that one doctor refused to dress the wound; that the second doctor did, and that she had an ugly and dangerous hurt for many days.

There was present in the courtroom, too, that first day of the trial, a tiny girl sucking a lollypop. In the midst of the judicial proceedings there was an unjudicial sound, and the plump little girl, well rounded out with leggins and a puffy blue coat, stumbled over to a bench in the front of the court. As she spied the back of Kitty's head and shoulders she stuttered out, around the lollypop, "There's mommie. I want to go to mommie," and started over.

Of course the bailiff intercepted the tiny figure and instructed the child's grandmother that it was against the law for "Tootsie" to communicate with her mother, on trial for murder, when the jury was present.

A SURPRISE WITNESS

The child in the blue coat kept her distance; the twelve men were selected; the witnesses took the stand. Through the days Kitty kept saying, "I ain't scare't." But one afternoon, it was the day after Washington's birthday, the state put on a surprise witness, a Blanche King, who had roomed in the Indianapolis boarding house. One day, Miss King declared, the landlord had escorted her to "the Chicago girl's room."

"Then what happened?" queried the prosecutor.

"She was combing her hair"—it is Miss King speaking of Kitty now—"and I saw a scar on her head and asked about it. She said, 'My husband shot me; we were doing a job at a sweater factory.'"

The prosecutor wanted to know about guns. Miss King was glad to tell him.

"Yes, sir, she had two guns; a 'Big Bertha' and a 'Little Betsy.' She had the big one strapped around her waist. When any one knocked at the door, she would take out the gun and run down the hallway."

FALLS IN FAINT

Then, growing more gleeful the more she said she remembered, Miss King thought a moment, then almost shouted out a triumphant epilogue to her surprise testimony, "She used to say, 'I hate coppers, and I'll kill any one who comes to take me.'"

ETHEL BECK was arrested with a man companion, and strangely confessed a murder in which neither was implicated. This was proven later, and she was freed.

(TRIBUNE Photo.)

THE UNGALLANT HUSBAND, Otto Malm, who blamed the murder of the watchman on his 19 year old wife. The young mother's answer was that all men are weak.

(TRIBUNE Photo.)

Miss King was through presently. Presently, too, the day's session was concluded. As she got up to walk across the bridge from the Criminal court building to the county jail, Kitty grew whiter than ever. The next moment she had sprawled in an ugly, helpless flop on the floor of the courtroom. She lay there, insensible, for two minutes.

A few feet away, barred only by legal technicalities from coming to throw water on the girl's ashen face, stood Kitty's mother, holding Kitty's daughter. The child kept on sucking the inevitable lollypop.

After a bit the girl on the floor was revived into an incoherent, trembling woman. Idlers in the courtroom went their way, speculating on her faint.

"Sure, it was real. Didn't you see her go? Besides, the jury had gone out, so it wouldn't have done any good to fake one," some mused.

"She's thinking of her kid," others ventured.

SCREAMS AND RUNS

"Naw, it's the rope she's thinking of," another insisted.

Next day Kitty was sitting up straight and square. And the next day after that she took the stand to tell her story. Otto Malm, she declared, ordered her to come with him as a lookout. Suddenly, from the dark night, Lehman, the watchman, flashed a light on Malm. Malm fired and the man with the light fell.

"I screamed and ran," said Kitty. "Then Otto fired at me. I felt a shot in the head and fell. Otto pulled me along the alley and shoved me into the car; then we went to a doctor and I got fixed up."

The jury was out an hour and twenty minutes. The twelve men took four ballots. The verdict was life imprisonment in the state penitentiary at Joliet.

When she heard it Kitty, the Tiger Woman, flew into a frenzy, waved her arms about and yelled, "Keep away. I don't want to see anybody." But the fury was quickly spent and for the second time during the trial Kitty fainted. And came to, only to faint again. And was revived and led back to her cell, where she again fainted.

Stepfather, boys in the factory, husband, more men, the gallant Malm, and the 12 men who sent her to the penitentiary for the rest of her natural life, while those other ladies of uglier crimes and less ugly faces and figures were given a smile and an acquittal.

If ever a 19 year old girl had reason to be a cynic about men, it seems to me that Kitty Malm—the Tiger Woman, they called her—has that right.

O, Horrors!
I worry steadily day and night,
I'm filled with nervous fear,
For Jim's Aunt Hannah wants to come
And make a visit here.

That's the Trouble.
I worried because with the flight of time
I never was able to save a dime.
Then I struck oil, and could you believe it,
I worry because I must die and leave it.

BRIDGE

By W. M. Schwimmer.

Ladies! Ladies! Join the happy throng,
Stop your teas, quit your golf, disregard mah jong.
If your hen-pecked hubby asks for dinner
When he's home,
Bounce him on the cranium,
He's dippy in the dome.
Drop your work, drop your child,
Here's a way to be beguiled,
Ev'ry femme is going wild
Over bridge.

Wimmin! Wimmin! No more cooking now,
London bridge, auction bridge, that's the cat's meow.
Well-bred janes with lots of crust
Gamble with the dough,
What's become of sewing circles

Men would like to know.
Ladies, it's a sad disgrace,
Setting such a dizzy pace,
Get parcheesi back in place
Of bridge.

Lotto? Bunko? Dearie, they are through,
Rhummy, whist, casino—now are all taboo.
Bridge is quite the simplest
And most peaceful game you've tried,
If you trump you partner's ace
Prepare for suicide.
Really it's a sorry sight,
Watching females half the night
Going cuckoo with delight
Over bridge.
Yes, mam!
Dumbbell dames are nutty over bridge!

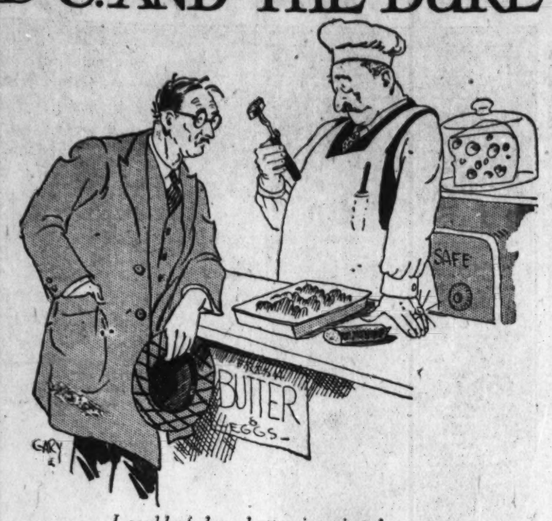
THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

A House Warming in tha New Place



I could of done better in a jewelry store.

ONE night lass week tha B. and C. interrupts my after supper snooze with tha following grief. "Honey, don't you think, now that we're settled down we oughta have a house warming?" I politely informed her that I wood not ask that janitor again for more heat as tha last time I rapped on tha pipes he comes up an tells me those radiators aint Xelophones an' if I didn' quit playing them he wood make it so dam hot for me that I wouldn' appreciate hell when I got there.

About now I get told that her girl friends advised her not to marry a boob as you can't change them. For once in my life I fully agreed that I was a boob cause if I wasn't I'd still be single. She wants to know how come I was dumb enough not to know what a "house-warming" was, then I get a edjucational lecture entitled "Social Funkshuns."

SETTLE DOWN AND UP

The idea is that when you either start a new place or move into new quarters you are supposed to throw a party. Lots of times it's poor policy to argue but this time I know my onions and told her in plain Inglish that she's got her wires crossed cause that shindig has always been known as a "Grand Opening."

Also she gets informed by me that tha proper thing to do first, after settling down, is to settle up. Between the 2d and 3d round of the bout I said, "Wouldn' it be fine to have a lotta company an have the Phonograph Company guy walk in with an attachment." Her answer to that is so funny I made off that I was thirsty an beat it to tha kitchin so's I could laff. Whadda you think she pulls? She seys, "Well, if he does I will just tell him tha last attachment we bought don't work so good an we wasn't interested."

Women ain't fooling me much these days, I am hip to a lot of their ideas. The thing that is uppermost in her noodle is to get tha gang over so's she can show off our new furniture an incidentally ritz them a bit. I suggested instead of having them come over we could save a lotta kale by having the guys we bought it from give us a cupple dozen catalogues and we could mark "X" on what we bought and mail them to tha girl friends. To this clever thought I got a very high-brow retort, in fact one might call it brilliant repartee; namely, "AIN'T CHU FUNNY."

VERDICT IN DUTCH

After talking till I was blue in the face against her plan I finally saw there was no use prolonging tha agony, but I get my way as to their not gonna arrive for 6 o'clock supper. Those sea lions are all through getting fat on my pay check. From now on my slogan is "Don't feed the animals."

A compromise verdict was reached and they will arrive at 8 o'clock and get a "Dutch Lunch" before they go home. For those of you what don't know what is a dutch lunch, it's a lotta assorted junk served cold an gets it's name on account your stomach is in dutch for two or three days after you eat it.

The night was set for Thursday and we decided what we was gonna feed 'em an how much jack was gonna be spent. In one way I was kinda glad they was coming cause I could get rid of my last batch wich turned out rotten. I have a hunch there is altogether too much water in our chlorine these days. Instead of turning out about 4 percent it was terrible per scent.

A DELIKATESSEN

My instructshuns was to pick up tha eats on the way home on acct. we're living in a new nayberhood I looked 3 or 4 delikatessens over an finally picked what looked like a reasonable one. After pricing a few articles I think I could of done better in a jewelry store. A piece of liver sausage that he wanted 42 cents for was about as big as what we kids got for nothing when we was sent after soup meat. Baked ham at 85 cents a pound must certainly show this bozo a terrific loss, but I suppose on acct. the sharp advance reported by the stock exchange on the clove market he is entitled to charge 85 and boost it higher without giving written notice. I'm very much surprised that some wise delikattessener don't start selling swiss cheese by tha inch instead of by tha pound and then slip you tha piece with the biggest holes. When I told him I wanted 10 cents worth of dill pickles he says, "Maybe you mean 10 cents worth of dill pickle," for a minute I thought he was gonna slice one on his rotary razor an give me a cupple thin slices for a dime. Before I got half of the items on tha list I was out of kale. If I'da had a cupple hundred dollars extra with me I might of been tempted to buy a can of caviar to eat after the company went home.

When I reach the house tha B. and C. instead of slipping me a little pleasant greeting of some kind, asks me what took me so long. Being in a very good frame of mind by this time I admitted that I was up at tha Vanderbilts having tea and they just wouldn' think of my leaving any earlier.

DUKE HAS ACCIDENT

All of a sudden we both started to sniff as there was a helova strange smell coming from somewhere, what happened was that the bucket of herring leaked all over my pants leg. My good suit was at the tailor's getting pressed and he was closed for the night. I found out where he lived and made him open up tha store. I had asked that damn cheese peddler if the paper bucket wouldn' leak an he wise-cracked me with, "I've been in tha business 40 yrs. and have still to find one that leaked." Tomorrow he will get a letter from a lawyer guy I know and if we can scare him into a settlement maybe tha party will show a profit. When I tole tha B. and C. what I was gonna do she pulls a funny crack somethin' about as how the lawyer should sue him for "Breaches of Herring juice," if that's her idea of a funny joke, maybe I'm wrong.

By tha time we do tha dishes it's 8 o'clock and tha food collectors start to arrive, on acct. most of 'em bring their kids it's no use tryin ta play cards so we just sit an talk, play tha home brew and tha radio. Of course they all see the new furniture and a lotta "How beautifuls," "How marvelous," "How stunning," are swung via the bunk route. Tha B. and C.'s face was lit up like State and Madison sts. and she pulls the ole stuff about as how it's not so expensive as we would like to get but it's practical and substantial. If she pulled that line once I herd it a dozen times. That gang coulda got a good laff if they knew it aint our stuff till March 1928 not counting maybe a few skips. When Mrs. Bolsum asked her what kind of a lamp it was she seys, "It's a French creation," how she figgers it I don't know as we bought it from an eyetalion. Now I'm wondering what breed our Swiss clock might be as this was bought from the firm of Murphy & Goldberg.

THA ENTERTAINMENT

Tha rest of tha evening was very enlightening, we had the extreme pleasure of listening to Mrs. Monroe [Tha Burton Holmes of Engelwood] tell us of her trip to Pikes Peak, this trip was took back to 1916 but to hear her tell it you would think she came back yesterday. I've heard tha damn story so often that if she ever goes again I will have every mule and guide bribed in tha way of a SHOVE OFF.

Mr. Gilbert gave a delightful discourse on insurance at the end of which his cards were passed among the guests. I once gave that bozo my fire insurance and when the bill came in it looked to me like hold up insurance instead of fire.

A rare treat in tha way of music was Miss. Chalmers' piano selection entitled "Give me a rose," if she hadn't quit after tha 1st verse she woulda got a wreath of them which she would never have smelled. This chromo has got nerve enough to tell us she couldn'

I think I will sign up.

do justice to tha piece on acct. our piano is all out of tune.

One of Charley King's kids gave a imitation of Charley Chaplin and it was so natcheral youda sworn it was either Tom Mix or Harold Lloyd. Tha rest of tha kids were very well behaved, outside of throwing toys at tha chandeleers an pulling our hound's tail, you wouldn' want to see more perfect youngsters.

THA BIG STAMPEDE

When lunch was announced the people what live under us must of thought there was a stampede of horses and I suppose I'm gonna get me a lodda dirty looks from now on. What got me sore was these starving Armenians makin themselves 3 layer sandwiches, one bird was eating olives two at a time during tha course of his building programme. Being tha host I couldn' very well say ennything, but I woulda liked to have asked him to use a little bread with his butter. Right here I wanta offer a challenge to any "Dunker Club" in tha country. I will even bet that this organization can give a three dunk handicap to any other team and beat 'em in 5 minutes of play.

Right after tha eats they all pulled tha ole gag as how it wasn't polite to go home right after lunch but on acct. tha childrun, they had better. I'm afraid if they hadn't somebody in the block would have called the wagon. After drying eight thousand three hundred and fifty-two dishes I was too weak to tell tha B. and C. what I had on my mind and went to bed.

The next morning on tha way to work I stood in front of a "JOIN THE NAVY" sign for ten minutes, an I think I will drop in at lunch time and sign up.

Why in hell do they call a guy what marrys you a justice of tha peace?

THE CAVE WOMAN

A Story of a Unique Kidnaping

"I mean that you're a spineless, weak-kneed lounge lizard."

LIKE the lilies of the field, Martin Lansing toiled not, neither did he spin. He did not need to, thanks to an inherited fortune. On this evening that he strolled down Park avenue he was attired in the modest modern replica of Solomon's glory. Expensive tailors had fashioned the perfection of his overcoat. A king among haberdashers had provided his white silk scarf. And his soft gray hat had but recently made a trans-Atlantic passage from Bond street. Therefore, Martin was pleasantly conscious of his impeccable appearance, but he was also unpleasantly conscious of other things not so enjoyable.

He was on his way to the weekly duty of dinner with his mother. Doubtless she would also have the girl she had chosen in her own motherly mind as the proper wife for him. Alicia White was a good scout. Martin had to admit that. Rather pretty in a tanned, boyish way. She went in for golf and riding; held a collection of silver cups for her prowess. Martin did not care for athletics, save as practiced on the dance floor. And his preference in girls veered toward the more fragile specimens.

DIRE PROPHECIES

Even this short walk down the avenue tired him. He decided to hail a taxi. The cold wind set him coughing. The coughing made him think of another disagreeable prospect. His mother would inquire what the specialist had said whom she had forced Martin to visit because of her solicitude over that cough.

Martin knew why he coughed. Fifty cigarets a day. But the fool doctor had pulled a long face and ordered a lot of nonsense like Saranac and open air, and had made dire prophecies about lungs. Of course he was thin and nervous. He'd been hitting the cibarets too much. And cigarets—cut down on them, that was all. Martin lighted one, got into the taxi, and decided not to tell his mother what the physician had said.

A DISAGREEMENT

Unfortunately the physician had already telephoned her his report and she made a terrible fuss about it. She talked hysterically about his poor Uncle William dying of tuberculosis; insisted that Martin hop a train immediately for Saranac or New Mexico. Alicia butted in and took his mother's side. At last Martin grew angry. He had a mind to tell Alicia that his pallor wasn't as noticeable as her sunburn with an evening dress.

He said: "Well, I'm not leaving New York and that's final. If I die I'll do it in a cabaret and not in some God forsaken wilderness. So that's that."

But his mother whimpered furtively all evening. Alicia offered to drive him home. Too bad he couldn't fall in love with her, Martin reflected. She seemed to like him, flushed when he paid her compliments or held her hand. Nice eyes she had, clear and blue like winter skies, outdoor eyes, though, without parlor tricks. She was too independent, too capable. Look at the capable way her gloved hands held the steering wheel. The roadster purred forward with none of that jerkiness of the usual woman driver. Martin shivered.

WILD RIDE

"Cold for an open car," he muttered.

"There's a coonskin coat in the rumble set," she told him. "Fish it out."

"O, we've only a short distance."

"I don't want to be responsible for your getting pneumonia," she said curtly. "Better put it on."

He did, reluctantly. He hated to admit that he was weaker than she with her squirrel cape flung open at the throat and the healthy flush in her cheeks. The cliff dwellings of Park avenue spun dizzily; she was driving at terrific speed, taking advantage of the late hour and meager traffic. The wind cut in rapier thrusts.

Martin tried to shout to her to slow down; she was passing his bachelor hotel. She nodded but did not look at him; they went on.

The car turned on one wheel and found the straight course of Central park west. The girl was crazy; bending over the wheel with her hair flying, smiling ahead. Martin was angry.

"Look here!" he shouted. "If you want to take a pleasure ride on a night like this, go ahead. But let me out first. I don't like it."

She gave no sign of hearing him and the car did not slacken speed. They crossed the Harlem and took the Grand concourse in a roar. Martin grasped her hand and the car lurched.

KIDNAPED

"Don't do that," she said fiercely. "You'll only cause an accident."

"What are you trying to do? Kidnap me?"

"Yes," she flung at him.

"Well, I'll be damned," he said.

Snow began to fall in great slow flakes and thickened to a white curtain about them. Alicia did not cut her speed for it; marvelous driver she was. They had left the road and were climbing now into the hills back of the Hudson. Martin was tense with rage, but he was also amused. He turned the collar of the coonskin coat up and hoped that Alicia would freeze, which she showed no signs of doing. She seemed to like it; now and then she smiled at him and he returned the smile viciously through chattering teeth.

Pretty soon she'd have to stop in a snowdrift and a pretty mess they'd be in. Martin waited, grimly. Instead they paused in the heart of what looked like a white wilderness. Alicia jumped out.

"Here we are," she said brightly.

STERN ORDERS

She led the way and directly ahead a misty outline of a log hewn camp building appeared black through the moolit snow. Alicia unlocked the door, and lighted candles showed a room furnished in rough camp style. She clapped her hands together briskly and set about building a fire in the great stone fireplace.

Martin watched her, too stubborn to assist. When the flames burst into a cheery blaze, he said: "I'm glad you're comfortable. I'm going back to the car now. I'll try to find my way back to a lunatic asylum and send a keeper after you."

He turned toward the door.

"O, no you don't," said Alicia, crisply. In her hand she held an object that glistened ominously in the firelight. "If you try to go I'll pull this trigger. I won't kill you, but I'll hurt you."

"What in the devil do you mean?"

"I mean that you're a spineless, weak kneed lounge lizard. If you haven't nerve enough to fight for your own life I'll do it for you. I mean you're going to stay in this camp according to orders until you're a well man instead of a coughing, coddled fool."

TRUCE IS MADE

"All right, shoot," said Martin, calmly, and went toward the door.

"I've the key to the car in my pocket," she reminded him.

He dropped his hands in despair. He was dog tired and sleepy from the cold air. He sat down on the couch. He was conscious of the drowsiness creeping over him to quench his wrath. Hours later he awakened and saw Alicia, still sitting there by the fire. She was asleep, her head rested wearily against the wall. Thus she looked feminine and helpless for the first time. Martin arose cautiously, tiptoed to her side. The glittering object lay in her lap. He picked it up and laughed. It was a patent nickel cigaret lighter. Alicia opened her eyes. Instantly she was awake and on her feet.

"I still have the key," she said.

"You'll have to fight me to get it."

Martin returned the lighter to her with a grave bow. "I'il promise not to make a break," he said. "If—say, aren't there any other rooms to this place?"

"Plenty," said Alicia. "And loads of blankets. But I was afraid you'd run away."

"I give you my word not to," said Martin. "You may take the couch and rest in peace." He marched into the next room.

LONELY OUTLOOK

The bleak sun of the winter morning revealed a world wrapped in white. The camp lay on the crest of a hill, and there was no sign of other habitation within the far flung view—only the snow covered trees, the snow drenched hills, a frozen stream. Even the road by which they had come was undiscernible now, and the roadster showed only its top above a drift.

Martin clenched his teeth in grim determination. He would show Alicia that he was no weakling. He foraged through the chest in the room and found a sweater, corduroy trousers, heavy shoes too large for him. He knocked at the door to the living room and received a cheery, "Come in."

Alicia was setting steaming coffee and eggs on the table. She was slim in a boy's knickers and a gray flannel shirt. If he hadn't hated her so much Martin might have discovered that she looked charming.

"There's plenty of food in the camp for a long siege," she told him briskly. "Dad always keeps it stocked in case we want to week-end up here for the winter sports. I'm afraid you'll have to chop some wood, though, after breakfast. There's an ax in the kitchen."

A CAVE MAN

For three weeks Martin chopped wood and went skiing and skating with Alicia. They tobogganed down the hillsides; they built snowmen; in the evening they smoked and read across the fire.

Three weeks and the snow turned to slush and the icicles dripped from the roofs. Three weeks and Martin's cough was forgotten.

One morning he bore an armful of logs into the kitchen, where Alicia was preparing breakfast.

She smiled at him a bit ruefully. "The last can of beans is gone," she said. "We will use the last can of milk for breakfast."

"This morning," said Martin, pleasantly, "I picked up a pine tree and balanced it on the tip of my little finger with perfect ease."

"You are as tough as the tree," observed Alicia irrelevantly.

"In other words," said Martin, "the cure is completed."

She said nothing; her hands busy over the oil stove. Suddenly he caught her hands and pinioned them in his own.

"Why did you do it?" he asked brusquely.

CAPTIVE TURNS

She struggled for release.

"You can't get away," he told her. "You might have once, but I could break you into little bits now. You ought to feel my muscles. I asked why you did it."

"Because—because I felt sorry for your mother. She was so worried. I left a little note telling her what I'd done. I felt sorry for you——"

"You liar," said Martin. "You don't dare look at me, you cave woman. You're afraid to. You love me."

"I do not," she said. "I hate you."

"That's too bad," he said, "because you're going to marry me."

"I am not."

"You've compromised us, darling. Do you think anybody in New York will believe that——"

"You beast!"

"You darling!" He kissed her. "Put on your old blue bonnet, Alicia. We're driving to New York today and we'll stop at Greenwich on the way."

"You—you cave man," she said and kissed him.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

By Snowshoe Al

Al Knows His Shakespeare.

YESTERDAY I didn't have nothing to do, so I goes down town an' trots into the public library. I picked up a book wich admitted on the cover that it contained all uv Bill Shakespeare's Broadway Failures, so I opened it an' read one uv William's heavy dramas, after wich I put the book back on the shelf because I hadda go home for supper.

Bill's stuff is easy for me, an' I'm going back in a day er two an' read another uv his 4 act spasms. Maybe the reader finds Shakespeare a trifle difficult. If so, lemme slip yew the plain dirt on:

HAMLET

Hamlet wuz King uv Denmark, an' bizness wuz good! He owned the controlling stock in The Amalgamated Snuff Corporation, an' his dividend checks enabled him to gallop around an' buy up all the corner lots within a ten mile radius uv the castle.

One morning the King failed to answer roll call, so a squad frum Police Headquarters rushed up to his boudoir an' discovered that his school girl complexion had turned to an unhealthy blue color. This, together with the fact that he wuzn't snoring, indicated that he wuz no longer a registered voter, so they buried him. The coroner's jury decided that His Highness had either soaked up too much bum gin er had smoked a nickle cigar.

The Queen wuz a fast working mama! She wuz as full uv sentiment as a dead horse, so before they had finished shoveling dirt on to her late husband's smile, this old gal wuz pulling necking parties with her brother-in-law. This caused the neighbors across the street to do a lot uv blabbing, an' the landlord warned Her Highness several times that if he found any more empty gin bottles on the frunt porch uv the castle he wood either break her lease er she kin marry him. So she married him, proving that she figured death wuz too good for him.

ENTER HAM JR.

Enter Hamlet Jr., Prince uv Denmark, Knight uv the Garter, Knight uv the Golden Fleece, Silent Night, Last Night, Tomorrow Night, an' Saturday until One P. M.!! This boy had a string of titles longer than Sunday afternoon in Philadelphia. He wuz a modest, bashful cuss—in fact, he had refused to write a testimonal for yeast. Also he had refused to go to college because he wuzn't strong snuff to be an ice man in the summer time. Anyhow he looked like hell in a raccoon coat. Also he didn't want nothing to do with the gals—especially after a few uv them had borrowed carfare off him. After he had agreed to lend them carfare home, he always discovered that they lived in Australia. Hamlet's idea uv a riotous evening wuz to go to bed an' leeve the radio turned on all night.

He didn't like the idea uv his mama hooking up with his uncle so soon after papa's last chapter. He thought she shood have waited at least until the flowers on the grave had started to wilt. On the uther hand, he wuz kinda peeved on account he got cheated out uv being King, due to his mother's second marriage. Yup, he didn't like the idea uv still being a minor face card. But there wuz nothing he kood do, so that's wot he did.

OMELET AND RIVULET

Among the soldiers in the castle wuz 2 very dear friends uv Hamlet's, named Omelet an' Rivulet. Omelet wuz more or less uv an egg, an' Rivulet was all wet, but anyhow they meant well. One day Omelet an' Rivulet kums up to Hamlet an' sez:

"Boy Friend, last night we wuz on guard up on the roof uv this castle, an' jist as the clock struck twelve we sure saw a sight for granulated eye-lids! A weird looking creature, wearing gray armor, galloped around on top the battlements, an' he didn't make a sound! We thought at first that it wuz sum bozo advertising a well known brand uv rubber heels, but we wuz wrong! We know dam well it wuzn't Lon Chaney. Therefore we is puzzled. Wot d'yuh make uv it, huh? Wot's the answer?"

"Here's the answer: buy me a pint uv that stuff!" sez Hamlet, slipping Rivulet 2 bucks.

A FAMILIAR GHOST

Rivulet bubbled over with protests to the effect that they wuzn't under the influence of hair tonic, so Hamlet agreed to go up on the castle walls with 'em that night to take a slant at this gink frum the land uv Static. Theez 3 buzzards wuz sitting on the roof that evening playing pinochle with a deck wich had the face cards missing, wen all uv a sudden the clock in the tower uv a nearby Chinese laundry fell to the sidewalk an' struck twelve, one uv which wuz a policeman.

Immediatly a strange form in gray armor appeared on the battlements. Hamlet thought the ghost looked kinda familiar, in fact it looked a whole lot like his old man, so he walks up to it an' sez, in Danish:

"Bon joor, Señor Papa!"

"Wee Gates, kiddo!" replied the ghost in the same language.

"Wot's the idea, Pop?" sez Hamlet. "We buried yew once. Why don't yew go an' stay put?"

"For the simple reason," sez the ghost, "that I didn't like the way I wuz hurried thru Death's Portal. We must all walk thru it sum day but, dammit, I was pushed."

"Slip me the dirt," sez Hamlet, "er, as Gene Tunney wood say, 'be more explicit—kindly elucidate'."

A VILE TRICK

"Alas, my boy," sighs the ghost, "it wuz none uther than my own brother Claudius who smacked me for the count uv ten, an' it happened thus: I had a quart bottle uv Haig & Haig, an' the label on the bottle stated that the contents wuz old enuff to vote. My brother Claudius, desiring to be rid uv me in order that he mite steal the throne, opened the bottle, threw away the contents an' substituted a vile, horrible poison called ginger ale. This fluid is so deadly that one glass uv it, if poured into a barrel uv red ink, wood make the entire mess unpalatable! Needless to say, the first time I allowed a jolt uv this Essence uv Liquid Boxing Gloves to slide past my tonsils I wuz knocked for a whole row uv Mongolian temple bells!"

"Kin this be true?" sez Ham Jr., elevating both eyebrows an' opening his mouth, thereby registering Incredulity.

"Nothin' different," sez the ghost; "therefore, my boy, I ask that yew avenge this bump-off they slipped yer papa! Git ahold uv thy uncle Claudius an' muss him up."

"Have no fear, old timer," sez Hamlet, "yew shall be avenged! I will git Claudius!"

"When?" thunders the ghost.

"Right near the end uv the 4th act!" howls Hamlet.

"Atta baby!" sez the ghost; "flop him into the foot-lights! It otta bring down the house! An now I must go. Auf Wiedersehen!"

"Adios," sez Hamlet, "crawl back into yer suit-way an' rest in peace!"

ALAS, POOR YORICK!

"Lissen," calls the ghost jist before he disappeared, "in order that nobody will suspect the dirty ideas yew have in yer mind why don't yew try to act half-witted? It ought not to be hard for yew—everybody always said yew took after yer mother."

So Hamlet started acting as though he had rats in his garret, wich wuz very annoying to his mother, so she sent for him one day. The King heard her send for him so he told a bimbo named Yorick to find out wot the conversation wuz about. Yorick hid behind a curtain in the Queen's apartment.

"Lissen, Hamlet," sez the Queen, as Ham entered her apartment, "for several days yew have bin acting as though yew wuz an acorn. Are yew offering yer own conception uv a comic valentine? I'll put yew in a Nut College if yew don't stop acting so goofy! Wot's the idea uv acting like yew had sent yer brain on a 6 munths vacation?"

"Yew shood talk!" sez Hamlet, losing his temper; "yew're the goofy party. Don't yew know that yer new husband took the heavy-weight championship away frum papa on a foul?"

Jist then the curtain in the room did a little un-natural shaking, an' Ham noticed it. He also noticed that there wuzn't any breeze, so he concluded that sum boso wuz trying to soak up a little scandal. Therefore he took his sword an' shoved it thru the curtain in an endeavor to vaccinate the party uv the third part. The operation wuz a great success, in fact, the gink behind the curtain did a nose-dive to the floor an' ruined the carpet.

ENTIRE CAST EXPIRES

"It wood seem," sez the Queen, yawning, "that yew have bumped off Yorick."

"Alas, poor Yorrick!" sez Hamlet, also yawning; "I never heard uv him!"

In the meantime the King wuz downtown in a department store looking at the latest styles in caskets. He found one wot struck his fancy an' he decided that it wood make a swell kitchette apartment for his stepson, so he went home, poisoned a bowl uv drinking water, dipped a sword into poison, sharpened an axe, loaded a sawed-off shotgun, an' mixed dynamite with the mashed potatoes. He figured he'd git this bird one way er another. Then he sent for Hamlet an' the Queen.

As Ham an' his mama entered the King's room, hell started popping! Sum buzzard tickled Ham in the ribs with the poisoned sword. Hamlet grabbed the sword an' tickled the uther baby right back with it. The Queen picked up the bowl uv poisoned water an' guzzled it. Hamlet grabs the sawed-off shotgun an' chases the King around the room so fast it looks like a game uv poker with the face cards wild. Jist then the shotgun goes off an' makes the King look like a platter uv hash.

"I didn't know it wuz loaded!" sobs Ham. Whereupon the entire cast lays down on the floor an' expires. This gink Shakespeare kood slaughter a whole stagefull uv people 30 seconds before they rang down the final curtain.

THE VICTIM.

With tears in his eyes the little boy ran up to a policeman.

"Would you come and lock a bad man up, please?" he asked between his sobs.

"What's he been doing?" said the other kindly.

"O," wailed the small boy, "he's broken my hoop with his rotten old bicycle."

The man in blue frowned. He had a boy of his own.

"You can easily catch him," insisted the little chap, plucking at the policeman's sleeve. "They carried him into that drug store."—Answers, London.

NO SUCH CAR.

The teacher was trying to illustrate the meaning of the word "perseverance."

"What is it," she asked, "that carries a man along rough roads, and smooth roads, up hills and down, through jungles and swamps, and raging torrents?"

The class was silent. Then Willie, whose father was a motor car dealer, said, "There isn't such a car."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

AMERICAN INTEREST.

America may be truthful when she asserts that she takes little interest in the world, but she takes a good deal of interest from it.—London Ideas.

THE DEMI-BRIDE

EMILE AND NORMA SHEARER have a little fencing bout in "The Demi-Bride" that the picture will have to tell you about. Suffice to say that the lady acquits herself in remarkable—and unexpected—fashion. Fillum's at the Chicago.

ROHMING 'ROUND with Harland Rohm

ONE of these very self-esteemed young girls who so often drift into social work, where they can patronize unfortunates by the process of going to a training school for three months and then get paid a dollar or dollar and a half an hour to stand around and watch children play, was telling a group of young Polish children in a west side settlement house Kipling's story of why the rhinoceros' skin is wrinkled. She went through it with much inflection and much facial expression, but the faces of her young audience were blank, even after she had finished. Finally one of the bolder boys spoke up: "Teacher, what's a rhinoceros?"

Going to work in the middle of the afternoon, I often wait for a bus on Sheridan road. Many times I've been picked up for a ride downtown, but in nine cases out of ten it's a chauffeur driving a huge limousine or a mechanic who waves his hand in invitation to ride down to the loop—seldom the chap who drives his own car.

The traveling auditor of one of these chains of groceries—there are several thousand in this string, and they've just opened some new ones in China—says that every store is laid out exactly as every other store. The floor plan must be varied to fit the building, of course, but relatively every kind of food they carry is in the same position. If the housewife is accustomed to taking a bottle of lemon extract off the third shelf from the left of the door, she can find the lemon extract on that shelf in every one of the string's stores. The theory is that the purchaser grows to feel at home in the stores, and regardless of where she moves, the chain's neighborhood store will be familiar.

At a recital of Percy Grainger a week or so ago the chap sitting in front of me obviously was bored, and to keep himself amused he kept the time of each number played and the time between the start and finish of the next selection. I was amazed from his figures to learn that the average playing time of each selection was only about three minutes. He forgot the figures when the pianist, in response to prolonged applause, began to play some lighter bits, and later, as we were leaving, I overheard him say to the woman with him: "I really come to hear the encores. Most of this stuff I don't enjoy because I don't know enough music, but it's worth while coming for the half dozen lighter things."

I can't vouch for this story, but it was told me by a chap who ought to know, and he swears it's true. A Chicago jazz orchestra was leaving to play for a dance in a small town where the beer is bad. My friend says he was commiserating with them on the four hour wait they'd have after the dance to get a train back, but the trombone player answered it wouldn't be so bad, as they would get sandwiches and sit around and drink beer. "But the beer there is too bad to drink," said our mutual friend. "Not for us it isn't," grinned the trombonist. "See that bass drum case? It hasn't had a bass drum in it for two years."

One of the most pathetic views in Chicago is the back yards seen from a train, particularly the Rock Island. As you roll away from the loop two dingy rows of back yards unroll, littered with ashes, tin cans, backed on each side by ramshackle, unpainted houses, which depress one merely to look at them. Just south of 36th street a dejected horse looks apathetically at the train. But the saddest bits are the back porches of two and three story frame tenements; all dirty gray-black, except for pathetic efforts to brighten them with a potted plant.

Even there, I suppose, beauty is where you see it. Walking with an artist we passed an ash pile on which were two discarded hulls of grape fruit, brilliant yellow against the ash, and next to them a tin can red with rust. The eye of the artist caught the beauty. "What a marvelous color combination," he said.

GALLANTRY.

She came from an office building on Grand avenue with a wan smile on her lips and a twinkle in her eyes.

"Make it? Then why the mirth?" asked her waiting friend.

"Gallantry such as his," announced the Tired Business Woman, "sweetens even the bitter cup of failure."

She had been trying to swing an important deal. She had called on her client so often that she knew the elderly elevator "boy" by name. It was "Good-morning, William," "Howdy do, Miss," between them several times a week.

That day the deal fell through. Turning to the waiting elevator, feeling old, stooped, and wrinkled like William, she met a radiant young creature, fair and cherished. Once she had been young like that, though never so fair.

"Who was that pretty girl?" the Tired Business Woman asked William.

"Who? Where?" He came slowly from his far visions. "I don't know, Miss. I didn't see her. But she ain't one bit prettier than you are!"—Kansas City Star.

LITTLE SISTER WINS.

The youth was just home from school, and, wishing to show his little sister what a lot he knew, pointed to a star and said:

"Do you see that bright little dot? It's bigger than the whole world."

"No, it isn't," declared his sister.

"Yes, it is," said the youth, beaming with pride at his knowledge.

"Then why doesn't it keep the rain off?" was the triumphant rejoinder.—London Tit-Bits.

SAM 'N' HENRY

The Boys Face a Mean Judge

By Correll & Gosden

[Sam and Henry were arrested for making a left turn contrary to traffic regulations and were given a ticket and told to report at Speeders' court. There is a line waiting to go before the judges as Sam and Henry enter the room.]

SAM—Whut are we gonna do now, Henry?

Henry (pointing to a policeman standing near)—Ask dat policeman standin' dere.

Sam—Dat's 'bout de only thing to do, I guess.

Henry—Take off yo' hat now an' act like yo' got some sense, 'cause yo' might as well be in jail as be in dis buildin'.

Sam—Well, I guess I'll ask him. (To policeman.) Say, mistah, a policeman gimme dis ticket up on State street yest'day an' tol' me to come down heah. Whut mus' I do wid it?

Policeman (in very gruff voice)—Get in that line over there!

Sam (scared)—Yessah, mistah, yessah—thank yo'. (Goes back and gets in line near Henry.) (To Henry.) Did you heah what he say?

Henry—Whut did de man tell yo'?

Sam—He tol' me to git back in dis line heah.

Henry—Well, 'tain't no ahgument 'bout it. Go on, git in de line.

Sam (as he gets in line)—Come on, git in heah wid me, Henry.

Henry—Whut I wanna git in dere wid yo' fo'? Ain't none o' my biz'ness.

Sam—Well, Henry, stick wid me heah. Heah whut de man say, anyway. I ain't got but fo'teen dollahs, an' I don' know whut de man's li'ble to fine me.

Henry—Whut evah he fines yo'—dat's yo' biz'ness—'tain't none o' mine.

Sam—Come on—git in dis line anyway, Henry.

Henry (getting in line with Sam)—A' right, I'll git in de line wid yo', but I ain't even gonna be a witness.

Sam—Do yo' reckon de judge gonna let me go?

Henry—De judge gonna let yo' go to jail if yo' don' pay de fine, I know dat.

Sam—I wondah if all dese heah men in dis line done been 'rested fo' de same thing?

Henry—Don' worry 'bout nobody else. You'se de one yo' gotta worry 'bout—jus' worry 'bout yo'self.

Sam (as the line moves on)—It certainly don' take long to try de cases heah, do it? We'se movin' right 'long.

Henry—You'se lucky dat yo' evah got dat car back to de man.

Sam—If he hadn't come aftah it I'd nevah got it dere. Dat policeman done tol' me dat yo' couldn't make no lef'-han' turns in de Loop.

Henry—Yo' don' even know where de Loop is, do yo'?

Sam—Dat's de biz'ness part, ain't it? I wondah why dey calls it de Loop.

HENRY OFFERS AID

Henry—Dat don' make no diff'rence why dey call it de Loop—de thing you wanna do now is to git out o' dis mess dat's you'se in.

Sam—Well, whut is I gonna tell de judge now, Henry, when I git up dere? 'Spose de judge ask me is I guilty or not guilty—whut I goin' tell him?

Henry—Now I tell yo' whut I'll do. I goin' stand up in front o' de judge wid yo'——

Sam (interrupting)—Yeh, Henry—dat's right—you come up dere wid me. I want yo' to tell me whut to do.

Henry—Well, I tell yo' whut I'll do den. When you goes up in front o' de judge I'll walk up dere wid yo' an' I'll stan' right dere behin' yo' an' I'll listen to whut's goin' on, an' if I see you got a openin' dere I'll whisper to yo' whut to say.

Sam (delighted)—Dat's a good idea, Henry. You gonna tell me whut to say, huh?

Henry—Dat's it. We is li'ble to ketch de judge off his guard an' dat's when yo' wanna git in if yo' kin.

Henry, say somepin'!

Sam—Henry, I ain't nevah seen no one man wid so much sense as you got.

Henry—Now, den, I gotta watch dis thing mighty close now, an' in case I git yo' out o' dis mess I'll let yo' buy my dinner, 'cause yo' know we done laid off today.

Sam—Dat's a' right, Henry. Yo' git rid o' dis heah mess an' I'll buy yo' dinnah an' suppah. Listen, Henry, yo' know we gotta lay off anothah day an' go out to de stockyards an' git dat job—dat's whut we gotta do.

Henry—Yeah, an' we gotta do it next week, too. We gotta git a job nearer home dan where we is now.

Sam—I tell yo' whut let's do, Henry. Let's go out to de stockyards Tuesday. Wanna do dat?

Henry—If we kin git one o' de brothers down at de lodge to take us out dere in his car dat's de thing we wanna do.

Sam—Yeah, one o' de brothers o' de Jewels o' de Crown. One o' de officers done promised to drive us out dere some time. I'd like to see de place, anyway. I done heard 'bout de stockyards evah since I was a little boy. I wonder how dey kill de cows out dere?

Henry (in his egotistical manner)—Don' be so ig'nant—dey chlorofo'ms dem.

Sam—Whut yo' mean, dey chlorofo'ms dem, Henry?

Henry (seeing the line moving toward the judge's stand)—Move up dere. Move up in line dere. We's gittin' closer to de judge all de time.

Sam—Tell me 'bout dem chlorofo'min' de cows—dat's whut I wanna know.

Henry—Dey chlorofo'ms de cows jus' like dey chlorofo'ms anything else—de firs' thing to do is to git a bull fighter——

Sam (interrupting)—I done seen pitchahs of de bull fighter. He carries a red table cloth on his arm, don' he?

Henry—Dat's it. He's got a bottle o' chlorofo'm under dat red thing.

Sam—Well, tell me how dey do it, Henry.

Henry—Well, dis man gits de cow cornered, an' when de cow is in de corner he throws dis red thing ovah his head. Den de cow can't see. Dat's whut it means when yo' heah people say dey got red in dey're eyes.

Sam—Dat red makes de cow mad, too, don't it?

Den de bull fighter pours de chlorofo'm on de cow's nose.

MEAN LOOKING JUDGE

Henry—Yeah, whenevah you blindfol' a cow dat makes him mad. [As the line moves on]: Move up dere in line—it won't be long now.

Sam (moving along)—Dat's right. Go ahead, Henry, finish tellin' me 'bout dis cow.

Henry—Den when de cow is blindfolded dey have a lot o' men to run up behin' him an' throw him down. Den dey tie his han's an' feets——

Sam—What do dey do den?

Henry—Den de bull fighter pours de chlorofo'm up de cow's nose an' while he's unconscious dey cut him up.

Sam—Den when de cow wakes up he don' know whut happened, do he?

Henry—Dat's right. (Seeing the line moving along again)—Move up in line dere now. Dese people is certainly goin' fas'.

Sam (nearing the judge's stand)—Henry, look at de judge. Dis is de firs' time we been able to see him. Dat's a mean lookin' judge.

Henry—Dey all mean lookin'.

Sam—I thought we was gonna see de same judge we saw befo' when we was 'rested fo' shootin' craps. I didn't know dey had two judges.

Henry—Dis place is full o' judges. Dey got mo' judges dan dey got policemen.

Sam—I heard some men talkin' once 'bout 'pealin' de case to a higher cou't—whut floor is dat cou't on?

Henry—Dis cou't's plen'y high 'nuf fo' yo'.

Sam—Henry, I know a man dat was 'rested once down in Bummin'ham an' he got hisself a lawyer. Do yo' reckon I need a lawyer?

Henry—You gonna git me mad in a minute. A lawyer can't do no mo' fo' yo' dan I kin do. Move up, dere in line. Why don't yo' brush yo' clothes off befo' yo' come up heah dis mornin'. You look like a ash can.

Sam—I didn't have no brush. Listen, Henry. Tell me once mo' whut yo' goin' do 'bout dis thing when we git up dere in front o' de judge.

Henry—Looh heah—dere's a man takin' up tickets heah—git out yo' ticket.

Sam—Heah 'tis, right heah in my han'.

Man (collecting tickets)—Give me your ticket.

Sam—Yessah, mistah—heah 'tis.

Man collecting tickets (to Henry)—Have you got a ticket?

Henry—No sah, mistah, I'se jus' wid Sam dere.

Sam—Ev'rybody look like dey'se mad 'round heah dis mornin', don' dey?

HENRY HELPS LOTS!

Henry—Dey'se gettin' ready to make de charge 'gainst yo' now. Move up dere in line. It ain't but a couple me' men ahead o' yo' now.

Sam—(getting nervous)—Henry, I wish you'd 'splain to me again whut yo' gonna do now when we git up in front o' de judge.

Henry—Now, heah's whut I goin' do. I goin' walk up dere in front o' him wid yo', an' when de judge staht askin' yo' questions I goin' tell you whut to say. If I see de judge is off his guard I goin' tell yo' whut to say dat will git de judge e'cited, but I goin' do it on one condition.

Sam—Whut's dat, Henry?

Henry—Dat if I tell yo' to say one thing yo' goin' say it an' ain't goin' say nothin' else. I'se li'ble to tell yo to say, "Yo honor, yo' is mistaken," an' dat's what yo wanna say if I tell yo' to.

Sam—Dat's a'right, Henry. I'll do jus' whut yo' say to.

Henry—Now git ready to go up dere.

Sam (getting excited)—Now don' fo'git, Henry, to stan' right behin' me an' whisper in my ear whut yo' want me to say.

Henry—Yo' wanna have yo' ears open now when I talk, 'cause I can't talk but so loud in de cou't room heah. Some o' dese judges is almos' as slick as I is.

Sam (as man starts toward him to take him before the judge)—Heah dey come—dey's gettin' ready fo' us now.

Court Officer (to Sam)—Is your name Sam Smith?

Sam—Yessah, mistah.

Court Officer—You're next. Come on in front of the judge.

Sam—Come on, Henry, go wid me. (To court officer) Dis heah boy is my witness, mistah.

Court Officer—All right, both of you, come on along.

Sam—Come on, Henry. Stick wid me heah.

Court Officer (to judge)—Your honor, Sam Smith's charged with reckless driving, violating traffic regulations, making a left turn in the Loop, and deliberately blocking traffic. Charges preferred by Officer Walsh.

Judge (in stern voice)—You have heard the charges preferred against you by Officer Walsh. Are you guilty or not guilty?

Sam—Awa—awa—— (to Henry in whisper) Henry, say somepin'.

Judge (impatient)—GUILTY OR NOT GUILTY?

Sam (hardly able to talk in whisper)—Whut mus' I say, Henry? Whut mus' I say?

Judge—Ten dollars and costs!

Henry—Don' argue wid de gent'man—don't argue wid de gent'man.

London Women Wear Less Clothing

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—A statistician with a set of scales and an aptitude for that sort of thing has made the discovery that the average woman in London wears 15 ounces of clothes when indoors, and when dressed for the rigors of a wintry day carries raiment that tips the scales at 3 pounds 4 ounces.

He attributes this tendency to lighter clothing to the Americans, who have given the somewhat stolid English girls something to take off, putting the good, substantial woolens on the shelf next to the bustles and high shoes.

Pursuing his subject further, the statistician found that the average well dressed business man usually wears around 12 pounds 11 ounces of clothing, and dared anybody, even a Yank, to try to change that.

SOCIETY'S WEDDING GIFTS

By Mildred Jaklon

THE wedding gift problem, that bane of many a woman's existence, is, surprisingly enough, rather more of a trial to those who can spend as much as they want for nuptial tokens than to those who must rearrange the budget in order to wedge in the $7.50 they paid for the silver plated bonbon dish for Mame and Al.

In the first place, the former group is called upon to give many more gifts than their less opulent neighbors, because their circles include a wide fringe of acquaintances, who, for reasons social, political, or economical, must be remembered at marriage. A wedding invitation, one such as is issued to a thousand or so other folk, practically calls for a gift. Of course, the intimacy of the donor with the recipient determines the character and cost of the gift.

A STANDARD GIFT

One prominent woman who is invited to almost every smart wedding in Chicago has decided that she is going to eliminate the worry and bother of selecting gifts by giving a standard gift always. So each bride and groom from now on may expect to receive a card tray.

The quantity and obvious quality of the gifts at most fashionable weddings are often staggering. And when it is remembered that usually there is a wedding trip abroad or a little house in the country, or a car or a piano from the bride's immediate family, in addition to the lavish display of glass and dishes and furniture, it can be seen that the amount of merchandise with which such newlyweds set up shop is enough to equip a small department store.

The proprietor of one of the smart shops which specialize in gifts told me that during a certain three days previous to a smart wedding his store had sold more than 125 gifts, each of them costing at least $100 and many of them two or three times that much. The larger and best patronized of the stores now aids its patrons by tabulating the gifts purchased for each well known belle and informing donors of the styles and patterns preferred by the bride-to-be.

A clerk at a silver counter once named over to me without consulting even a notebook the style of silver which each of five brides was to have in her new menage. This was at a time of year when there were a large number of weddings scheduled.

MRS. DONALD P. WELLES, who received eight dozen glass salad plates as wedding gifts. Her many presents filled a large suite of rooms.

GIFTS EXCHANGED

Until recently it wasn't considered just the thing to return any wedding gift, except in those cases where the final checkup revealed half a dozen cocktail shakers and a couple of grandfather's clocks, but it is matter of record now that many a bride returns any or all of the donations and has the fun of reselecting substitutes herself or leaves the amount in credit. One china store was requested to send a large truck to haul back to its shelves the articles which had been sent for a splurgy wedding and weren't desired.

Another store returned hundreds of dollars in cash to a certain bride who preferred usable cash to the varied assortment of expensive knicknacks which she had drawn.

Society has chuckled for several years over the story of the bride who received four silver pitchers for wedding gifts. She returned one of them to its source, suggesting that the monogram might be erased. The jeweler was forced to inform her that the marking already had been removed and done over four times, leaving the metal worn so thin that it could not possibly be done again.

AWKWARD SITUATIONS

I remember counting eight dozen glass salad plates, with four identical sets, at the wedding of Barbara Scott to Donald P. Welles. Her gifts filled a large suite of rooms and were piled high on tables lining the commodious hall of the upper floor of the Scott residence. There were three or four tables set with complete outfits of glasses, silver, napery, and china, each in a different color. There were solid silver coffee cups and any number of expensive leather articles. There were small tables and smoking stands, pictures and a number of elaborate books, as well as a large doll made to represent a broom and decorated with such scullery aids as mops, bottle washers, can openers, dish cloths, and towels.

When one well known Chicago girl chanced to have a change of mind about marrying the gentleman of her announced choice, one of the complexities of the affair was the problem of returning the hundreds of gifts. As a solution the fickle young woman had cards printed, thanking the respective donors for the presents, and regretting the necessity of returning them. Many an unsuspecting soul, not knowing of the presence of the explanatory card, yet knowing why the gift came back, straightaway dispatched it to yet another bride. For many months thereafter the brides were receiving the tokens intended for the ill starred couple.

One prominent and recent bride was surprised when she received from an elderly woman, not even a distant relative, an order for $1,000 and a check for $14,000. Presently the lawyer for the elderly and slightly absent minded lady communicated with the bride, asking her to hold the check and intimating the possibility of an error. The bride was tactful enough to realize the situation and promptly returned the lavish piece of paper.

TREATING 'EM ROUGH.

"My dear," said the host to his wife, on her finding him in the bedroom with a damp towel clasped to his head, "I can't possibly stand those people any longer. I've got a splitting headache."

"But," said his wife, "I can't possibly ask them to go home. They are our guests, remember."

"Certainly you can't put them out," he agreed, "but don't you think you could go and seat yourself at the piano?"—Scotsman.

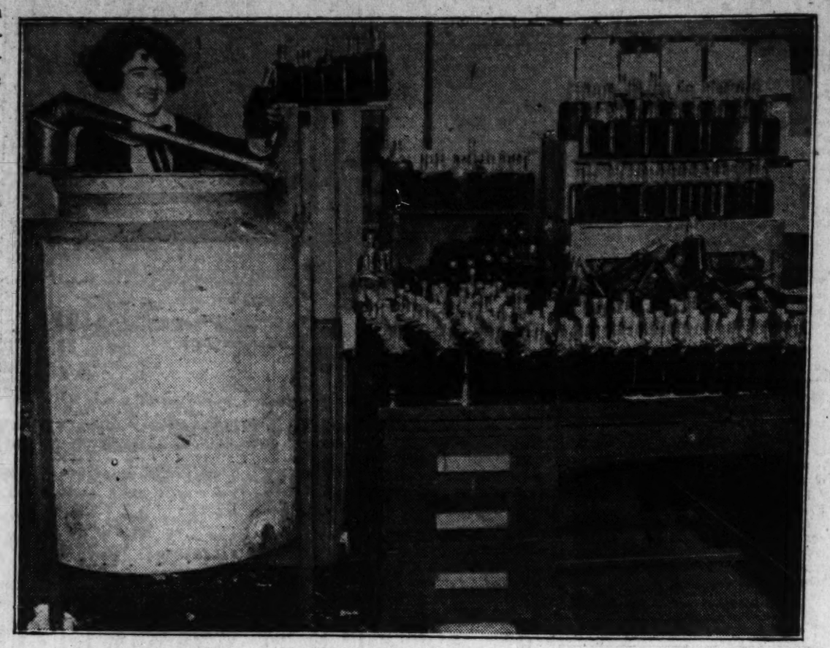
WINE BOOTLEGGERS - - - Millions in Graft but Game Has Died - - - By Edward Burns

WINE, of course, has been used for sacramental purposes since Old Testament days, and while there are many scholars who claim that not all potions called wine in Holy Writ were wine as we have known it in our generation, there is much evidence that the pious, ages ago, used port and other red wines in their religious celebrations

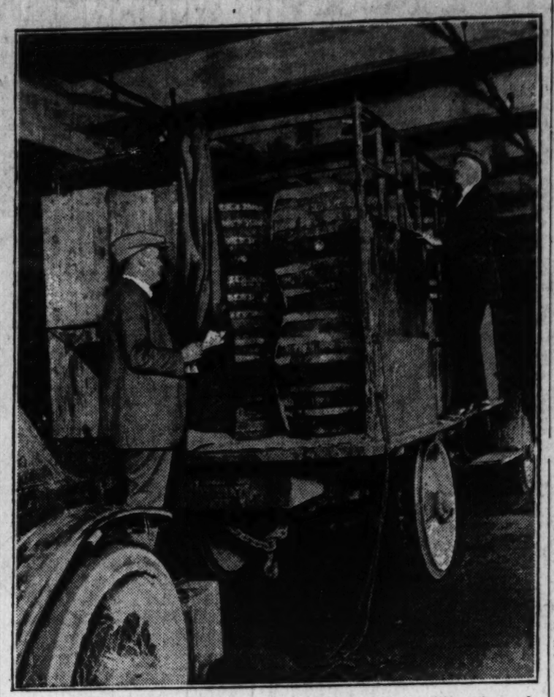
It remained for that great modern American, Volstead, to bring out the full possibilities of wine as a ritualistic necessity.

After all the saloons had been ostensibly closed, at the start of the prohibition era, certain sanctimonious gentlemen speedily appraised the great field of piety, and figured up just what could be realized on the fact that Mr. Volstead had expressly excluded sacramental wines from his lists of tabooed concoctions.

A few cautious inquiries revealed that not only would it be possible to withdraw still wines such as port, sherry, angelica, and muscatel, but that an ecclesiastical innovation was possible in that sparkling wines such as champagne and burgundy could be used in the rites if proper arrangements were made.



1,000 BOTTLES OF DEADLY MOONSHINE were seized in a raid on a North Curtis street place. Miss Mary Knox, seated in a seventy-five gallon still, is holding up a pint of poison booze that caused at least one death and perhaps more.
(TRIBUNE Photo.)



A TRUCK LOAD OF BEER seized in a liquor raid. Note how the barrels in the auto were camouflaged with boxes and tarpaulins. The trick failed to fool the dry agents, however.

UNANIMOUS FOR GIN

It was at about this time that one of the many early prohibition jokes came out—that one about the colored church committee that voted upon what the congregation should use for sacramental purposes and were unanimous for gin.

According to government statistics, Chicago reached a veritable frenzy of religious ardor during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923. In that period 1,138,507 gallons of still and sparkling wines were purchased in this city by persons who technically were forced to claim they needed the stuff in their drive to keep Satan behind them.

In the succeeding twelve months, due probably to the fact that the town was flooded during the period with good Scotch, this brand of piety dropped off to a mere 718,308 gallons of still wines, the sparkling rites having been ruled out by treasury department regulations.

While it may be sacrilegious to mention it, the merchandising of this great aid to spiritual uplift offers some illuminating statistics.

In the two years mentioned above 1,856,815 gallons of wine were released under what purported to be legal circumstances.

Port, because it requires the best grade of grapes for body and also for blending to give rich color, is the most expensive to produce (forgetting, for purposes of being conservative, the sparkling wines). Sherry is less expensive to make than port, and then comes muscatel and angelica.

MORE SPIRITUAL IN N. Y.

But the average cost of production, ranging from port at 75 cents a gallon down to angelica at 45 cents, is about 60 cents a gallon.

So it is apparent that it cost to produce the wine consumed in Chicago in these two years approximately $1,114,086.

Wine distributors in Chicago bought the wine at prices ranging from $2 to $3.25 a gallon laid down in Chicago, and were able to sell it at an average price of $6.50 a gallon, regardless of whether it was port, sherry, etc.

On this basis wine which cost $1,114,086 to produce was, in two years, sold for sacramental purposes in Chicago for $12,069,297, or at a gross profit of $10,955,208.

In the same period New York consumed about 50 per cent more wine than Chicago, so that in the first and second prohibition cities of the world paid approximately $30,000,000 for $2,750,000 worth of wine supposed to be legal.

During these times the wine rarely was cut or tampered with by distributers. The wine ran 21 per cent and was, for the most part, produced in the fine, big, clean wineries of California. A celebrant who was a good strong bourbon drinker could get about the same action on a water glass full of the wine as he could on a two ounce shot of liquor, and have the added satisfaction of believing himself well within the law.

CHEAPER THAN BOOZE

Sales in saloons came at 25 cents for a pony of good port, as compared to 75 cents for a dose of questionable red booze.

Although the Volstead act provided for withdrawals by various Christian denominations, the Jews were given the privilege of the large withdrawals. But the unusual feature of the whole thing was that a sincerely pious orthodox Jew wouldn't touch the socalled legalized sacramental wine, for the simple reason that it wasn't kosher, in that the stuff was produced and handled by persons of other faiths. At the wineries rabbis were employed to give the stuff the appearance of being kosher, but it was impossible to fool many good Jews with this routine. Most devout Jews make their own wine.

One friend of mine, who was a distributor, told me that on his list of actual customers there were only two Jews, and that both of them went to synagogue only on Yom Kuppur, and that even on that day they were so unorthodox as to ride to services just because it was raining. Men of that sort don't care whether their wine is kosher or not, my friend explained.

The wine was distributed through an illicit conspiracy for which twenty-five persons now are awaiting sentence in federal conspiracy. One of these is a former prohibition director. Another former director and a dry state senator recently were acquitted by a federal jury when the government prosecutors were unable to convince it that the pair were a part of the conspiracy.

DEAD MEN ON LISTS

Witnesses at the trial, who previously had confessed their own guilt, including two prohibition agents and a coterie of graft collectors, told how wine distributors had been forced to pay $300 and $400 graft for each 2,000 gallons of wine withdrawn under government permits.

Under the law the wine had to be taken out by an authorized distributor representing a religious congregation. It soon developed, at the outset of the scheme, that there weren't enough bona fide congregations to go around, so the wine wholesalers conceived the brilliant idea of selling fake congregation lists to prospective distributors.

In 1923, when the sacramental wine racket was at its height, there were in Chicago 200 distributors representing nonexistent congregations. Later, when these congregation lists were checked up, they were found to carry the name of nearly every Jew who had died in Chicago in thirty years. All were credited on the records with being current users of large quantities of wine for sacramental purposes.

The whole plot was, of course, thoroughly organized, with "a big three" of wholesalers in command of the situation. If a distributor got behind in his graft dues, it was discovered promptly that he was a ruthless law violator, and he could obtain no more withdrawal permits. The same technique applied to the distributor who could not resist the temptation to do a little shopping for some of his wine. He must pay the trust price, or his permit was a mere scrap of paper.

Strangely enough, there was scarcely any violence connected with the wine racket, except in clashes with hijackers who intercepted the stuff in transit. The gunman-salesman technique so largely in use in beer and whisky merchandising never was a part of the wine conspiracy.

But it was too good to last. The law relative to wine withdrawals has not been changed, but the government policy has been. Less than 10,000 gallons of sacramental wine has been withdrawn in Chicago in the last two years.

I was in a winery in California a year ago in which 500,000 gallons of wonderfully made wine was ageing in the vats. The owners of the establishment were reputable business men and had no idea of bootlegging the wine tied up by the change of policy on withdrawals.

HOME MADE WINES

There is no good wine in Chicago right now, and the wine in one vat room I visited would be if laid down in Chicago this week in the hands of bootleggers, snapped up by the retail trade at about $6,000,000, or double the price of sacramental racket days.

But there it is, getting better each hour—while the owners patiently wait for the millennium when light wines and beer return.

Chicago is not without other kinds of wine, however. Hundreds of tons of grapes were shipped into this city last year and immediately went to the presses, most of which are located on the near west and near north sides.

These wines are mostly of the sour variety, both red and white, and have, colloquially speaking, a wicked wallop. This beverage, though it is powerful and less liable than port or sherry to make the patient ill, is not particularly popular with the former sacramental wine drinkers. It is merchandized in quarts rather than gallons, a quart, on the average, bringing $2.

There has been an increase in fig wines and a falling off in the dandelion product. Housewives are said to consider fig wine the most satisfactory home beverage now that good gin alcohol is hard to get. But most experienced drinkers find it much too sweet.

It does not appear that the California rains have hurt the current grape crop.

ADDING INSULT TO INJURY.

"Halt, there! Contaminate ye, halt!" yelled Constable Sam T. Slackputter, the redoubtable sleuth of Petunia. "Consider your—bygosh!—self under arrest. You tore through here yesterday going west at the law breaking rate of a bat out of the pit of torment. And in so doing you not only insulted the peace and dignity of our progressive little city, but—"

"I never noticed any town here, and —" interrupted the offending motorist.

"Well, you'll notice it, all right, by the time Squire Ramsbottom gets through with you! And that ain't all; in addition you busted off the corner of Miss Tessie Tickle's milliner shop—"

"I thought it was a billboard, or something of the sort."

"You come with me, right now!"

Mussolini's Wife Is a Home Woman.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME.—Every leading American who visits Rome exerts all possible influence to gain entrance to Benito Mussolini's presence. Many succeed, and they leave Chigi palace with impressions that often find their way into the American press. However, it remained for an eastern woman to become curious about Mrs. Mussolini, or Donna Rachele Guidi Mussolini, as she is known here. She expected to find a leader of the feminist movement, an active, modern woman of our American club executive type, and her surprises she set down as follows:

The wife of Il Duce accords completely with her husband's belief that the place of the Fascist woman is with her children, which she holds is her mission in life. Her attitude has had a great deal to do with breaking up the last remnants of the woman suffrage movement in Italy, where the female vote now is so infrequent as to be quite ineffectual.

Donna Mussolini, like her husband, formerly taught school, and shared the hardships of his early life. She modestly adapted herself to his new position and, realizing that Sig. Mussolini could not devote as much time to his family as other fathers, she is spending all her time educating Edda, 16; Vittorio, 10, and Bruno, 7. She has kept herself and the children out of official and social life. Each evening father calls from his office to their modest home in the country, and every so often takes a flying trip to see his family. The premier's leadership, like the well known charity, appears to begin at home, and everybody is happy.

"Phone Fright" Troubles Tourists

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Parting words at the ship's gang plank before the trans-Atlantic liners sail from New York for Europe now are, "Call me up when you get to London," but many Americans who attempt to carry out this request are troubled by "phone fright." It seems that the idea of talking over the ocean affects the party the first time the service is used, and he usually stutters a few inane hellos and realizes his $75 is spent. Those who have tried it liken the effect to that of the stage fright one would experience upon facing a large audience for the first time.

Little Tales of Big Heads

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

Still at It.

Arnold was putting himself through college by reading gas meters. He was quite a gifted orator, and was well aware of the fact. At the big oratorical contest of the year, for which all the other competitors had been preparing for months, he was so self-confident that he made an extemporaneous speech.

Now, twenty-five years later, he is still reading gas meters. R. G. M.

He Knew Why.

Every one wondered why the minister appointed such a lackadaisical person as Mr. T. as head usher of the church. Rumors must have reached him that people wondered about him, so one day he said, "The Rev. Jones appointed me head usher because I would lend dignity to the scene."
L. P.

Satisfied.

Brother preened before the mirror, visibly pleased with the reflection. When I brought the fresh shirt he'd asked for, he coolly observed, "Gee, Sis, you're good to me. Why don't THE TRIBUNE hold a male Peaches contest, so I could pay you up?"

STORIES of GIRLS

By Margaret Orr

The author of this series, Mrs. Margaret Orr, had intimate opportunity to gather the material which is the basis of these "Stories of Girls." Mrs. Orr worked with police detectives for three years, investigated Massachusetts girls' parole department three years, and studied causes of youthful crime, both in Paris and Madrid. Mrs. Orr is in her early thirties, so can catch the viewpoint and feeling of delinquent girls while applying adult experience.

For the sake of the girls themselves fictitious names are given in all cases, but the incidents are based on truth.

A Joke on Pretty Rose.

ROSE was the kind of a girl who, when she lifted the covers from the perfume counter in the morning, wondered if Prince Charming would pass by or buy that day.

And he was the kind of a boy that came in for Jasmine but went out with Rose.

To take out a sweeter, lovelier, or more spontaneous girl would have been impossible.

In the dimly lighted booth where his imagination and vocabularly had been somewhat released by the flask that cheered he described her as a "wild rose by some road of Heaven," whose dainty petals hid a heart of gold. Old stuff, but it goes big.

His mother called Rose by one of those "any other names" which was supposed to be as sweet but fell down on the job. His mother could get away with it because she was referred to in the society columns as the "widow of the wealthy Battenberg Bat."

Their only son had been educated in excellent schools whose discipline was promptly destroyed by his mother's indulgence.

And such was the gilded youth that this Rose child fascinated.

MOTHER WORRIES

He liked her because she was different from the other girls he knew. She was so sincere, sympathetic, and had such a glorious sense of humor. Besides her people were not like his. And he got a lot of kick out of hearing what she and the gang did up at the lake last summer.

Paul loved. His mother worried. Rose planned.

When she was rich, she'd do something swell for the old folks. Give her father a new T. D. pipe and her mother a Spanish shawl like Paul's mother's.

One night when both described themselves as a "wee bit squiffy," they decided to get married. Paul had already taken out the license five days before. Why be engaged? The Mater wouldn't stand for it. Old fashioned, the mater. Back helping Cheops build the pyramids most of the time, the old girl was. Tonight. Wnut say? Was it a go?

So something close to 3 o'clock in the morning they circled from the roadhouse into Paul's roadster and went shooting irregularly out toward the dawn.

AN UNEXPECTED TURN

By ten they reached a village where they called upon the justice of peace who was waiting for them. So was the sheriff.

For Paul's mother had been interviewed by various reporters concerning the marriage license of her son. She said nothing about it to Paul. But, as he was only 17, his mother felt justified in hiring detectives to trail and spy and intercept.

Paul tried to "laff it off" and so did Rose. But it wasn't easy.

Especially for her. For this meant back to the perfume counter. Back to the bitter taunts of the other girls. To the court of law after the court of prince charming!

Yet something like three weeks later Rose was able to smile faintly again. Because she was healthy. Because she had a glorious sense of humor. And because she thought: "If I'd married him it would have been a good joke on me. I could get dad the T. D. all right. But mother'd look fierce in a Spanish shawl."

A Judge Hears the Immigrant's Side.

THE judge looked at the woman.

Her eyes were dull. Her heavy body was misshapen by flesh that bulged and rolled and would not melt. Her dress was black calico with worms on it—or maybe they were twigs. Not a pleasant person at all. A stolid peasant who did not know our speech, who came here too late to know our ways, and who had a place out on Runaway road where she manufactured liquor. It would lick any one who licked it. Do them in. Completely.

The judge had little patience with this.

Through the interpreter he scored the woman for coming to this country, taking advantage of our institutions, and then persisting to ignore our laws.

The woman's lusterless eyes remained dreamy. She gave no indication that she even heard the interpreter. The pudgy hands lay heavily in her lap.

But the young girl by her side patted the clumsy things lovingly. The young girl was keen. She had been listening while the tint in her cheeks deepened and the sparkle in her eyes grew brighter. When the judge ended she jumped up.

"You are right," she said. "My mother is mean like you say. But you cannot see back of her.

FROM A WILD COUNTRY

"We come from a country where the mountains go down steep into the sea. There are desolate miles where you can only see the hut of the national police who guard these lonely roads from bandits. Near one of these we lived in a small, chalky, shell-like cabin with a handkerchief garden walled in to keep it from falling into the sea.

"We came to know the guards in the hut because they were so near.

"All of them came some time during each day for a glass of wine with my father. They spent long hours playing a game with dice. They clinked money. Sometimes they quarreled.

"Among them was Pedro. He came more often than the others because he liked my mother's hot soup. One night he brought with him a man who was a desperado and had been hiding in the mountains. Another national police in a distant city had offered Pedro big money for this man. So Pedro begged my mother to hide him in our loft all night. He did not want his companions to know about this. They would kill Pedro for the money and say it happened in a fight with bandits.

"Pedro gave my mother money for this and other favors. How else could we come to America? On a few cauliflowers and cabbages? I'll tell the world, no.

DIFFERENT HERE

"These things were nothing. They happened everywhere.

"Yet Pedro, my mother, and everybody knew there was a severe penalty for a national police who took food at a house or gambled. And there was a special severe penalty for concealing and helping to escape those bandits for whom they went to search. Yet Pedro did all these things. He boasted of it in our cabins. And so did the others.

"Naturally, when we came to America my mother did not understand the words here. But she understood the money. My father, too. Yes, two brothers have court records also. My parents could not tell them about the law. They thought nobody paid any more attention to it here than we did at home.

"So you can say those things about my mother and you are right. But if all her life she saw at home the law made a laugh, how could she know that things were different in America?"

Brief Biographies of Movie Folk— Clara Bow

CLARA BOW was born in Brooklyn and lived there when, in her junior year at Bay Ridge High school, she won a magazine beauty contest which entitled her to a screen test. This test resulted in a small part in "Beyond the Rainbow," featuring Billie Dove.

Clara didn't know how to put on makeup, and when her chance to act came she was told to cry and the tears made a complete mess of her face. When the scene was shown on the screen, Director Christy Cabanne cut Clara out of the picture.

This caused Clara to forsake motion picture plans and she entered a business school. Three month later Director Elmer Clifton telephoned her, said he was about to make a picture, and offered her $50 a week if she would play in it.

She fitted so well into "Down to the Sea in Ships" that, following this part, she played the lead opposite Glen Hunter in "Grit." Since then she has played in more than a score of pictures, including "Maytime," "Black Oxen," "The Plastic Age," "Dancing Mothers," "Mantrap," "Kid Boots," and "It."

Clara is a good athlete, but not an expert. She likes horseback riding, swimming, and dancing. She has auburn hair and brown eyes, and weighs 109 pounds without dieting.

Colleen Moore

COLLEEN MOORE was born in Port Huron, Mich., but spent most of her childhood in Tampa, Fla., where she became interested in theatricals, organizing an impromptu neighborhood stock company, playing principal roles from heroine to villain and acting as property man. Her family wanted her to become a concert pianist, but a course in a musical conservatory failed to swerve her love for histrionics.

Colleen's movie career began with the old Essanay company eight years ago. She sat on an extra bench there for six months before she was given any work at all. Finally the chance came—three days on the set at $3.50 a day. After that she managed to get bits without a great deal of trouble. Then D. W. Griffith chanced to meet her and immediately he saw possibilities in her and told her to go to Hollywood.

She played small, unimportant rôles there for a long time before a First National contract came along. "Flaming Youth" brought her stardom. Since then she has made "So Big," "Irene," "Twinkletoes," and "Orchids and Ermine."

Colleen is married to John McCormick, First National film executive. They have a beautiful home in Hollywood.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

This one concerns a certain Scottish professor named Kerr. One day when he was out with a friend in the country a bird flew in front of them and the friend queried the species.

The professor said it was a woodcock. The friend doubted it and said: "O that's not my idea of a woodcock."

"No!" said Kerr, "but it's God's idea of a woodcock!"—Liverpool Post.

WHEN AMERICANS GO ABROAD

Yanks Astound Lonely Islanders

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa.—A party of American tourists recently returned here after having visited the world's loneliest island, where they proved more of a novelty to the inhabitants than the inhabitants did to them. For the first time in their lives the 137 people on the island of Tristan de Cunha, a desolate volcanic mass in the south Atlantic, heard jazz music, saw furs, and ate ice cream.

The boat stopped for only four hours, but in that time civilization on this little spot moved ahead many hundred years. The Yankee passengers showered the islanders with gifts and were kept busy answering naive questions put to them by these people, who scarcely see a strange face for two years at a time.

One American woman took off her fur coat and handed it to one of the men for his wife, who had never seen a fur coat. Another passenger gave the surprised islanders $250 worth of the ship's provisions.

Then the ship's jazz band played the newest selections for the fascinated folk. But their biggest thrill was a treat of American ice cream. They were amazed and delighted with the confection.

This island is out of communication with the rest of the world at least eighteen months at a time; then a small steamer leaves provisions. Radio is impossible, for there is no way to charge the batteries or replace the parts. Electricity, and even gas and such necessities of our world, are unknown.

The inhabitants of the island are descendants of William Glass, a member of a company of soldiers sent there when Napoleon was exiled at St. Helena, to prevent the French leader from using the island to make an escape, with the aid of would be rescuers. Glass and his wife remained there.

Cabbies Thrive on Arguments

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—Many Americans here get their most vivid impressions of French fervor from the taxicab drivers. The Parisian cabbies thrive on argument and even seem to encourage it. They appear to expect a complaint, and when the passenger takes exception to the bill, which he will do if he has been properly advised, the cabby's countenance lights up and a stream of vituperative language bursts forth, while his face assumes in turn expressions of amazement, disgust, incredulity, and amusement.

It is like a well rehearsed scene, and when the American wears out his few most scathing verbs the Frenchman's arms gesticulate wildly and he storms, entreats, and is sarcastic all in the same breath. Then the bill is paid and peace reigns until the next fare.

A favorite expression among the pedestrians is "Assassin!" which they hiss at the Paris chauffeurs who just miss them. The chauffeurs, regardless of their limited English, all seem to know the words "pig," "old package," "kind of a thief," "sort of dirt," and "fathead," which they scream into the ears of startled persons who are not alert enough in getting out of their way.

REALISTIC TEETH.

Customer—You made a set of false teeth for me some days ago.

Dentist—Yes, I remember.

Customer—Well, they are hurting me horribly.

Dentist—But I told you they would be exactly like real teeth, sir.—Pasquino, Turin.

STRONG BOY.

Employer—I advertised for a strong boy. Do you think you'd do?

Boy—Well, I just finished licking nineteen other applicants out in the street.—Answers.

CHAPERON

MISS EUNICE HUNT has the role of the safety-valve girl in "Cradle-Snatchers." The purpose of her part in the riotous farce is to chaperon the three matrons who hire as many lusty college-boys to serve as escorts.

JUMPING TO CONCLUSIONS.

Sir John Simon, K. C., the eminent advocate, was once addressing a group of young legal students, and among other things he warned them always to sift carefully all evidence, and never on any account to allow themselves to jump to conclusions.

"Now," he continued, "a friend of mine who has just returned from a hunting expedition in central Africa told me of a most remarkable occurrence. He and his party were trekking through a heavily wooded region when the cries of a number of birds attracted him to a bit of overgrown jungle. Fearing within, he beheld a trunkless body."

"But, Sir John," interrupted one of his hearers, "surely you mean a headless body?"

"My dear fellow," retorted the smiling K. C., "didn't I warn you not to jump to conclusions? The body was that of an elephant."—The Argonaut.

POLITE.

"Now then, what should a polite little boy say to a lady who has given him a penny for carrying her parcels?"

"I am too polite to say it, madam."—Table Talk, Melbourne.

1½ Blocks West of South Shore Country Club

The great response given the 7 Seas Cafe by enthusiastic Chicagoans assures its success. But more than this are we grateful for the words of praise voiced by people who have visited practically every outstanding cafe in the city and pronounce this Chicago's greatest innovation!

What a refreshing change in the marine atmosphere of the 7 Seas Cafe—as suggestive of curling ocean breakers as its name! Environment such as this lifts one head and shoulders above the humdrum cares of life, stimulates the appetite, soothes the nerves.

Science has combed the Seven Seas to give zest and variety to our menu. Here you will find dishes such as you never even dreamed of, "done to a turn," under the expert supervision of M. Honore, who acquired fame with the Union League Club, Chicago Auto Club, and Blackstone Hotel. We are using filtered water for cooking, coffee and drinking.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

By Sara Moore

TRY AND DO IT.

The ad men speak with a mighty shout
To make us "conscious" of sauerkraut;
They count and list little calories
In macaroni or milk or cheese;
They say tomatoes and tangerines
Are full of the jiggers called vitamines,
And some insist we are underfed
Without bananas and whole wheat bread.
Huh!
Wanted, an advertising man
To write out a food promotion plan.
One needs professional help to sell
Milk or spinach to Arabel.

STANDARDIZED.

One looks ahead. The die is cast,
This way it has to be—
A matinee, a bridge, some golf,
A dinner, dance, and tea.

The things girls do are so alike
We should be thankful that
Our friends can still distinguish us
By gown—or shoes—or hat.

THE GIRL HE LEFT BEHIND HIM.

I took my share of the sleet and mud;
Waded in gauze and drugs and blood;
I'd sneak him a light and a cigaret
(Were I not there then he'd be there yet).
He's back in Paris, my soldier fair—
And here I sit in the beaucoup air.

I carried his heavy bedside tray
Day after drizzling, murky day;
I eased up his bandage, wiped his nose,
And sat on his head when his fever rose;
Now off to Paris the Legions wind——
And I am the girl that he leaves behind.

Well, let him go play on his jamboree,
Leaving the world, of course, to me.
All by himself! Do you get my tone?
Next war—he can go off and fight alone!

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Tribune.

NAVY blue or one of the tan shades in crêpe satin will make an attractive dress, using pattern No. 709 for its development. The skirt is cut in two parts, and while there is some fullness at the top, it is not too full and gores out towards the bottom, getting the necessary width there without being too full at the opposite end.

The waist opens in the center front, and as you can easily see, it is cut in a deep square opening, this being filled in by an attached vest. The fullness on the shoulders on the front is followed by fullness at the underarm seams on the front, the front being slashed in there, the lower edges gathered and sewed to the upper slashed edges.

There is a narrow belt of the dress material, and the sleeves are in one piece, with the lower edges gathered into a six inch cuff. These deep cuffs could be made of the reverse side of the satin, as could the vest also, using a binding or piping of the same side of the satin to finish the neck.

Cut the vest double, having a fold of the material across the top and seam it together down the sides. Where it sets into the right side of the front, it should be tacked in place under the binding or facing. Then at three-quarter inch intervals set small sized snaps down the left edge, fastening it to the dress. Below the vest the waist buttons together, a much more agreeable way of getting into and out of a dress than slipping it on over the head.

Where waist and skirt join there could be a wrong side seam, overcasting both edges together, laying up towards the waist and then stitching twice from the outside, once close to the seam, and the second row one quarter inch above.

Pattern No. 710 is for a long waisted dress having a short circular skirt. A prettily shaped collar finishes the neck and the slashed opening in the front is finished with a binding. The full length one piece sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands.

Why not make this a "composé" dress—only be careful that the two or three shades of the same color blend perfectly. The shops show so many shades in all the colors that it should be easy choosing. Bind the neck opening and bottom of the dress with a shade contrasting with the dress and make the collar and wrist bands of a third shade. Cut the binding strips on a true bias and measure accurately, making them one and a half or one and three-quarters of an inch wide. Then run the binding on by hand and before turning in the opposite edge to hem down baste the binding close to the seam on the right side so it will stay in place when you make the turning. Of course the skirt should be allowed to hang several days before finishing—evening it off where it has stretched.

Pattern No. 711 is suitable for many different materials and among them one of the washable crêpe de chines would be a wise choice. This comes in the loveliest colors and is a good weight. The front of the underblouse could be made of a printed crêpe and to this under part the front of the two piece skirt is joined. Then the real front of the waist comes over this under part and is held in place by a single button. The sleeves are quite large at the bottom and there is an inset there of the printed material. They are gathered into narrow bands at the wrists made from the dress material.

Another combination of colors would be black satin made up either with white or with a printed material. Black and white is shown in many of the New York shops made into charming dresses for young women as well as older ones.

709—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

710—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

711—Woman's and misses' dress. Size 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 40 inch material, with ⅛ yard of printed material.

BEAUTY ANSWERS by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MOLLY: WHERE THE LIPS ARE wrinkled and chapped there is often a condition of inward fever. I would suggest that you look well into the condition of your digestive tract and see it is kept in proper order. Soften the lips with cold cream or spirits of camphor.

K. B. D.: AS THE COLD WINter winds cause a dryness of the skin of the face and chapping, it is well to apply cold cream before going out. After massaging the cold cream into the skin, powder with a good face powder, which acts as a further protection. I have a formula for a good cold cream, which you may have for a stamped addressed envelope.

MISS G.: MILD CASES OF EXCESsive perspiration are benefited by bathing the affected parts with hot water to which either boric acid or alum has been added. Too much cannot be said about the need of frequent changing of clothing. After each wearing a dress should be hung up to air before an open window. When possible let the sun get at the dress that is being aired.

J. R. E.: WARTS ARE DUE TO INfection of the skin. The warts on the face may be removed without leaving a scar, when the work is done by a reputable physician.

H. Z. T.: TO REDUCE THE SIZE of the pores, I would suggest the ice treatment. At night cleanse the face with cold cream, then wash with soap and warm water, and rinse in cold water. Take a small piece of ice and put it in a piece of cheesecloth and rub over the affected parts for several minutes.

N. S. C.: AFTER A PERSON HAS attained full growth it would be necessary to resort to an operation to change the shape of the legs, that is, where the bone structure is at fault. If their shapelessness is due to excess weight, send along a stamped addressed envelope and I'll give you some exercises and diets which will do much to improve their appearance, if adhered to faithfully.

MOTHER: THE MOST SATISFACtory work in the straightening of teeth is done when the child is between the sixth and twelfth years. Done later, the work must be done slowly to avoid too much absorption of the bone, or the teeth will not again become tight. You may help the dentist by making sure the child brushes her teeth regularly. He will do the rest.

MISS Q.: SKIN WHICH PEELS and chaps constantly is in need of oil. It is excessively dry. Cleanse the face with cold cream instead of water, or if you use water, let it be at night, and after it massage a little cream into the skin. You may leave some on over night. Before going out massage a little cream into the skin and dust with powder, as a protection against the wind and cold.

H. M. H.: WHEN THE FLESH under the chin begins to sag it is necessary to start exercising. I have some neck exercises I shall be glad to send you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope. Always hold the head up. After doing the exercises, massage with a good cold cream, followed by an ice rub. If impossible to obtain ice, use a cloth wrung out of cold water.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Getting a Suit Free.

The cheekiest person I know came into a store one Saturday afternoon in summer and after looking through the pile of bathing suits asked if she could take one home on approval to see if it fit. She took a suit and a pair of bathing slippers.

Monday morning she came in, laid a package on the counter, and simply said she didn't want the suit. Then she left.

On opening the package, it was found she had worn both the suit and slippers in bathing. D. H.

A Selfish Giver.

The cheekiest person I ever knew was a girl friend of mine. About a week before Christmas she asked me if I was going to give her a present. "Because," said she, "if you give me a present I'll give you one."

I replied in the negative. On Christmas, when I gave her a present she did not say thanks, but said: "I'll have to go out and buy you something."

Isn't that cheek? A. D. B.

Solid Brass.

Merely to be accommodating I lent a new dress to a friend. She wore it several times and after she had had it two weeks I asked her to return it so I might wear it to a bridge party.

She said, "O, I'm going to wear it there myself. Can't you wear some other one?" E. R.

Cash and Carry.

Our neighbor kept boarders and one day, when her pantry was bare, she sent her flapper daughter to my house to borrow some money to buy groceries. I couldn't spare the money so told her I would let her charge the groceries she needed on my account at the store. She said, "Would you please go and get them for me? I do so hate to carry packages."

Well, so do I, for any one is cheeky. J. C. R.

And Walked Off.

I have a friend who calls quite often. One evening just as she was ready to go home, she saw we had two decks of cards. Picking up the newest deck she said, "We haven't any cards at home, so I'll take one of yours." E. L.

Worrying Over a Penny.

After a short visit I was taking a friend to the train. Two blocks from home he said he had left a penny box of matches on the living room table. I kept driving. He said it was a new box, and he had only used three matches out of it.

Finally, I offered him a penny for another box. To my surprise he took it and was greatly relieved of his worry. P. S. C.

Letting George Do It.

The cheekiest person I know is an employer who, when he is in need of help, waits until his competitor next door puts an ad in the paper and then stands near his competitor's door to hire the applicants. J. D. VAN B.

During an Intermission.

While at the theater, my girl friend and I left our seats during the intermission. When we returned, we found them occupied by two women and our wraps thrown on seats from which the stage view was poo.

How's that for cheek? M. K.

LOOK PLEASANT, PLEASE

These Tips Will Prove Useful on Your Next Trip to the Photographer.

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—In the interests of birthday conservation, let the German women give a subtle tip. In a Berlin woman's magazine warnings about the style of dress and coiffure that "date" a woman are given. "Never have your full figure photographed, lest the fashion of your dress give away your age at some future date.

"For the same reason never have your hair dressed in any characteristic or conspicuous style, and, if wearing a hat, select one that might be appropriate for almost any fashion."

The first suggestion may be applied more advantageously for future reference, we think, than the second, relative to hat and coiffure. The hat can be eliminated as a future give-away by the simple process of leaving it in the photographer's dressing room, where it really belongs when one is having a photograph made. A hat unquestionably is the current year's trademark which you can't laugh off three, five or ten years hence. I don't suppose if you have old family daguerreotypes in your possession you can see how the coiffure survives generations, though a hat will scarcely outlive a season. Simple coiffures they are, always. The huge pompadours, of course, have dated many a poor darling daughter into hurried explanations that they were being worn when her hair first went up, which was along about her fourteenth birthday.

Looked Like Her Own Daughter.

One of the metropolitan dailies ran a series of photographs of personages of twenty years ago. An up to date photograph appeared along with the "old timers" in a number of cases. With one internationally known actress, particularly, her present day photograph made her appear as the debby daughter of herself twenty years ago.

If you go through the files of any photographic library, picking out women's photographs at random, you will see this identical rejuvenation principle. Men do not suffer so markedly by comparison of intervening years. If we return to long hair, the present day bobbed headed photographs can hardly escape being dated. But, of course, the alibi that "I was one of the first to have it done" may be brought into service. With persons of sharp memories this alibi will not serve, because in its ten or twelve years of life the bob has gone through its own evolution process from the bushy floor mop to the 1927 sleek outline of head.

For Steady Wearing Qualities.

For steady wearing qualities photographers tell me the picture that best survives the years shows a simple coiffure and hands that fall gracefully into the lap, if the hands are shown at all. It is conceded best to reveal just the upper part of the body. Evening dress, since time permits no great latitude in its neck line, or, dress along classic Greek lines, and a face pleasant, but without a wide dentifrice display, are items that make for a photograph which will not "date."

One of the great temptations revealed to me by photographic operators hinges on woman's inherent belief that, given a stage or a camera, she can act. And in order to prove herself an actress she believes she has first to dispossess herself of her own personality and assume a foreign one.

I have sat in as judge on a good many beauty contests in which photographs were submitted and if there is any one thing that will send a contestant's picture into the discard quickly it is the artificial pose. Unaffected simplicity is the telling feature of prize winning pictures.

Feel natural, act natural, and be natural when you are being photographed. No borrowed pose will make one better looking.

The Berlin authority offers valuable advice in this: "Avoid assuming the much mooted romantic upward look and the frequently seen ingénue expression, both of which are apt to appear ridiculous in a picture."

Fatigue Always Registers.

Another point to observe is a restful night preceding the day of registering before the camera. Fatigue about the eyes is caught by the lens. Or, if one feels indisposed at all, it is better to postpone the engagement until one is in tip-top shape.

Making up for the camera requires skilled hands. If one is not sure of her mastery of the cosmetic art, she had better leave makeup off entirely. Rouge should never be used on the cheeks, because red photographs black and there is danger of making the cheeks look like sunken areas. Heavily rouged lips will blacken and coarsen them, but a thin coating of a light shade to define the lips is permissible.

Powder has to be dusted on smoothly. Eyebrows may be touched up if they are indefinitely curved. They should be trimmed and shaped before the photograph is made, as the scraggly hairs spoil the picture. Eye makeup, particularly, must be done skillfully. If there is any "spotting," the effect is damaging. A little hand whitener will keep the hands from looking dark.

Solid colors in dress are better than patterned ones, for patterns of certain colors stand out stronger than others and the frock may emerge hard and ugly. Light blue and light yellow photograph white. Pink will look darker. Red, brown, navy, dark green, and purple will be dark in the picture. Light colors add a little more bulk to the figure.

RED PEPPER HEAT STOPS BACKACHE

The heat of red peppers takes the "ouch" from a sore, lame back. It cannot hurt you, and it certainly ends the torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub, and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers.

Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

The Whitehall Pharmacal Co., New York, N. Y.

IMMEDIATELY END GRAY HAIR

In five minutes tint your hair at home to any beautiful shade you desire. No fuss—no mixing—guaranteed harmless—BROWNATONE is immediately effective. Penetrates all the hair—one application only required. Buy BROWNATONE at drug and toilet counters, 50c. and $1.50. Any shade from two colors. For trial first, send 10c. The Kenton Pharmacal Co., 1506 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky.

For safety or best effects, visit the Brownatone Shop, 1520 Stevens Bldg.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

The GOSSARD Line of Beauty

Above, a charming combination forming a complete undercostume. The figure garment is of satin tricot, finished with a brassiere and pantie frill of Georgette crepe. Gossard Tedetite 6606, $10.

Model 6607, designed of the miraculous, pliant, triple-wear Charmosette elastic, which is found only in Gossard figure garments, is shown here. Charmosette step-ins are unbelievably soft, supporting and durable. $10.

In the Smart World of Sport GOSSARD SILHOUETTES meet every challenge

Your corsetiere will be glad to show you a selection of new Gossards, designed to meet the needs of your figure and various costumes.

The critical eyes of the observing gallery—growing steadily keener as women's athletic prowess increases—concern themselves as much with appearance as with skill. She whose figure lines are naturally, softly supported is assured of a lithe, graceful silhouette. She attends her game undistracted because every movement is in harmony with her costume, and her costume in complete harmony with the fine, important lines of fashion. Her appearance brings joy to observers, assurance to her game.

Gossard Foundations are Scientifically Smart

Gossard garments of each variation—step-ins, combinations, girdles, front-lacing corsets, are scientifically designed to support the muscles of the figure, to free them from fatigue—and to bring the smartest lines of the natural figure to the fashionable world of sport.

A LOVE OF THE TRUTH

by Doris Blake

Child Expert Stresses the Importance of Teaching Boys and Girls Honesty and Accuracy.

ONE of the problems faced by conscientious parents is how to establish standards of truth in their children. What is called "lying" is very general in childhood. And the lies of children differ greatly in kind and in degree. Some parents dismiss the problem with an indifferent shrug and the excuse that it is simply childish imagination out of which the youngsters will grow eventually.

In order to inculcate right habits and right thinking, since civilized life or any kind of community life is possible only if people are dependable—that is, if truth is in them—these early manifestations of falsehood in children should be met with a sympathetic understanding by every parent and the ideal of truthfulness should be implanted as early as possible in the young mind.

The Child Study Association of America, in one of its pamphlets issued for parents and teachers interested in the development and education of children, treats the subject of truth and falsehood in the young, and stresses the importance of inculcating the principles of honesty and truthfulness early in life.

Sidonie M. Gruenberg, author of this particular study, realizes the limitations of the childish mind and its inability to grasp the adult understanding of truth.

An Expert's Ideas.

"All who have to deal with children realize that truthfulness is attained slowly," she says. "We must not condemn the child for every false statement he makes, but rather use each occasion as an opportunity for enlarging his understanding and increasing his appreciation of truth."

While the child is learning to talk and for some time thereafter there is not sufficient development to distinguish between the creations of fancy, memories, dreams, on the one hand, and actual occurrences on the other. He is unable to differentiate the fleeting images aroused by his wishes from actual situations. Under these circumstances Miss Gruenberg believes it worse than useless to reprove the child for saying that he saw a flower fly off the bush like a butterfly, or that the cat spoke to him. He may have misinterpreted what he saw—or his wish may have been father to the thought. What he sees is certainly not true, but he is not "lying," for everything he tells you has a proper place in his own mind and he is not concerned beyond that. Discrediting his inventions will not cure him of lying, in Miss Gruenberg's opinion, since he has not realized his "lie," but our ill considered reproof may discourage his efforts at putting into words what does come into his mind and destroy his confidence in our sympathy and understanding.

However, our child training authority warns that the child cannot go on forever confusing the imagined with the real. Parents can help him bridge this period by showing him patiently that some thoughts do correspond to the tangible world outside, whereas others exist only within his mind. Playing with him in his make believe games is recommended as the measure to lead him gradually to distinguish between one class of experience and the other.

Inventing Excuses.

"Often children invent excuses or justification for their acts, or give reasons which we feel are not altogether genuine," says this child authority. "In fact, the more numerous the reasons are which a child gives in urging the granting of his desires, the more likely it is that his real reason is withheld."

Parents must show children all along the line that to be honest with one's self requires scrupulous investigation of one's own motives.

Another type of problem Miss Gruenberg calls attention to as met frequently by parents is that of the child learning to get what he wants by word or act which an adult may classify as "untrue." The child who, after being put to bed calls for water because in this way he gets his mother's company, is not conscious of the fact that he is lying. He does not begin with a conscious desire to deceive, but simply uses the word or gesture which he has found effective.

"To the child it is not a question of truth or falsehood, or right or wrong; it is only a question of getting what he wants—and he learns that some methods work," says Miss Gruenberg. "Or it may be a question of avoiding something disagreeable and again he learns that certain methods bring the desired result."

Anxious for Attention.

It is not always a seeking of some material satisfaction which induces the child to lie, Miss Gruenberg observes. Just to cause a sensation he may brag of having done something which he really did not do, or tell a story that will astonish or mystify. He sees other people draw attention, even admiration, by the telling of wonderful tales. So he is tempted to tell a good one himself.

Here again, says the child educator, there is in the child's mind no question of truth or falsehood—there is only the wish to produce an effect. His creativeness is challenged and he does his best.

Dealing with all kinds of "lies" in the same way is not the solution. Parents should know whether the child lies because he is too timid and too weak, or because he lies to show off. In the latter case he can be encouraged to make up a story as a story and have it receive due recognition on its merits and he can be supplied legitimate ways of expressing himself and of receiving the favorable attention which, at this period, the child really needs. Removing the temptation to improvise is part of the parents' job.

The commonest lies among children, Miss Gruenberg further observes, are those designed to save them from punishment.

"Certainly the lies that are prompted by fear of punishment will not be eradicated by more punishment or by giving the child more reason to fear," she argues. "It is necessary to help him realize that lying is an unworthy and weak evasion; it is necessary to help him feel that it is in every way better and more satisfactory to face the consequences of wrongdoing. A challenge to self-respect will be more constructive than an appeal to fear."

Voice Is Important.

The manner of approaching a situation and the tone of voice the parent uses may frighten or challenge a child into making false statements. With proper handling he might have spoken confidingly and truthfully.

A large factor in a child's normal development, the author of this child study treatise declares to be the confidence which he is made to feel in his own ability to do what is right, to overcome temptations, and to outgrow childish faults. Looking for the causes instead of stressing results will help parents to remove the childish temptations to resort to falsehood.

No miracle of sudden reformation or conversion should be expected from the child, the educator concludes. But the ideal of truthfulness should be before the child and before parents as something toward which to strive.

A Small Social Drama

In Which Mrs. Harry Uncovers a Petty Bit of Deceit That Good Form Considers Out of Bounds

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.

SOME months ago Mrs. Harry was invited to a tea given for a woman from Philadelphia. The visitor was the house guest of a friend of one of Mrs. Harry's dearest friends, and Mrs. Harry was naturally asked to pour. Also she was bidden to stay and Harry asked to come later and a very informal supper was eaten and then there was bridge. So naturally, also, Mrs. Harry had a chance to talk to the Philadelphian.

Philadelphia had been the home of Mrs. Harry's mother, too, before she married Mrs. Harry's father and some of her family still live there. But these things Mrs. Harry didn't mention, because they did not seem interesting as conversational offerings to a stranger. But in the course of talk the visitor, whom we shall call Margaret Brown, mentioned the name of a certain woman of national prominence who lives in Philadelphia. She didn't actually say she knew her as Mrs. Harry afterward remembered, but implied it, and Mrs. Harry, who had inherited her friendship from her mother, said: "Mrs. Blank is a charming person, isn't she? I remember my first meeting with her when I was a child. She came to see my mother on one of her visits here and though she hadn't seen her for several years, not since my mother's marriage, she remembered that, as a girl, mother had been fond of jasmine, so she came to surprise her carrying an armful of white blossoms. She was most beautiful then, and I remember hanging onto mother's skirts and adoring this beautiful creature, who dumped all the flowers in my mother's lap."

As Beautiful as Ever.

"She is still as beautiful as ever," Mrs. Harry continued, "and I think she has one of the finest voices in the world, don't you?"

Margaret Brown said yes, that she thought so, too. Then they talked of other things. But when Mrs. Harry was leaving she bade Miss Brown good-night and said: "If you see Mrs. Blank before I do, please give her my best love and Harry's, too, won't you?"

Margaret Brown said: "O, I shall probably see her next week when I go back to Philadelphia."

It happened that Mrs. Blank decided to go to California and was passing through Mrs. Harry's city, so she wired saying: "If you are not already engaged save Tuesday and Wednesday for me."

Mrs. Harry was delighted. Mrs. Blank never stayed at Mrs. Harry's house because Mrs. Harry had the good taste not to ask her. She knows that Mrs. Blank travels with a maid and a secretary and that a six room apartment is no place for three extra women. But she always has Mrs. Blank to dinner—as well as to breakfast and luncheon, and sometimes to tea.

Mrs. Blank liked meeting some of the Harrys' friends and so Mrs. Harry planned a little tea for her—just ten or twelve chosen spirits, young women who one way or another are accomplishing something. Then she remembered Margaret Brown, so she invited her, and, of course, the latter's hostess. It was to the hostess she spoke over the phone, saying: "Will you and Miss Brown come to tea next Wednesday? I'm so glad you can. By the way, tell Miss Brown I am having a friend of her's."

A Surprise Indeed.

So they came—into Mrs. Harry's charming little drawing room, more charming than ever with its bright spring flowers and the several pretty young women gathered about a dignified and beautiful elderly woman who seemed to be making them all laugh. Mrs. Harry drew them into the group. "Mrs. Blank," she said, "this is Mrs. Harrison and here is my little surprise for you——"

Mrs. Harry would never have known that anything was wrong by looking at Mrs. Blank, but Margaret Brown gave herself away. She blushed and stammered painfully. Mrs. Blank came to the rescue.

"How nice," she said. "I'm awfully glad to see you," then smiled very sweetly at her a moment before she turned away to continue what she had been saying when they came in.

After her guests had all gone and she and Mrs. Blank sat waiting for Harry to come home, Mrs. Harry told Mrs. Blank the story of Margaret Brown and how she had given her to understand that she knew Mrs. Blank well.

She ended the story by saying: "And you were so wonderful, Aunt Lally. I don't think a soul there knew you'd never seen her before — I wouldn't have known it if I hadn't been looking at her face, instead of yours. She didn't deserve it, you know. I shouldn't have minded if you'd snubbed her in my house. I think it was most annoying!"

Mrs. Blank only laughed, her laugh that seemed so young, that was always infectious. "My dear," she said, "when one gets to be as old as I am one learns to be amused, instead of annoyed!" That was all.

Then Harry came in and after a lovely dinner, just the three of them, they took Mrs. Blank to her California train where her maid and her secretary and several friends were awaiting her.

Talking It Over.

On the way home Mrs. Harry told Harry all about it. When she finished the story she said: "That horrid little snob, Margaret Brown, committed one of the unpardonable social sins—claiming acquaintanceship with some one she didn't know because that person is influential and prominent, and all she got for it was a charming smile, because Aunt Lally wouldn't insult her in my house!"

"O, no," said Harry, "you're wrong this time, my dear. She got something much worse. She was punished by having the lie discovered by you and by Aunt Lally. She got coals of fire heaped upon her head. She knows you both scorned to expose her and she has learned something about human nature. What she has learned is a bitter lesson, namely that a person can be so big that some people look too small for them to bother to despise.

"Besides, a woman like Mrs. Blank meets lots of Margaret Browns, of course. I venture to say that there are probably a hundred unidentified women claiming some sort of acquaintanceship with her everywhere she goes. She has just learned to jangle their nerves instead of letting them jangle hers."

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Following her 45 mile hike from Providence to Boston recently, Miss Eleanor Sears, society leader, without revealing any signs of fatigue, entertained a group of friends at a dinner in her home.

Besides being president of the Fairmount bank at Fairmount, Ga., Mrs. Edna Tate finds time to look after her 2,500 acre farm.

Victoria Drummond, first woman to be granted a seagoing engineer's license by the British board of trade, is a goddaughter of the late Queen Victoria.

Though it is alleged that Kensington palace in London is haunted, it did not deter Queen Victoria of Spain from observing her thirty-ninth birthday in the palace.

All the leech doctors of Austria now are women, who go about with their leeches, kept in moist earth, to draw blood from those who have faith in that sort of treatment.

In an effort to diminish the number of accidents due to careless driving, Turkey has passed a law forbidding women under age to drive automobiles in Constantinople.

At the age of 18 years Miss Irma Ward of Los Angeles, Cal., so far outclasses in feats of strength all others of her sex that she is claiming to be the strongest woman in the world.

For financial wizardry, Anne Nichols, who produced her own play, "Abie's Irish Rose," has beaten the record of any man for money making in the theater, having become a millionaire through one play.

Mrs. Ella Bushnell-Hamlin, independent candidate for congress from Davenport, Ia., favors the elimination of all sex lines and abolishing women's clubs.

Patient receiving treatment on the cheek.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Geometry Plays a Leading Role in Solving the Problem Play and Varying the Appearance of the Straight-Line Silhouette.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris fashions are more than ever mathematical. They are problems, the correct answer to which, individually solved, is chic. Spring styles have graduated out of the simplicities of addition and subtraction, because most of the lines of the silhouette remain as they were last season, or several seasons ago. Skirt lengths have neither been added to, nor subtracted from, and the same thing can be said about the other linear items that make up what we call the smart silhouette. This is probably because, no matter how much Paris added or subtracted to slender lines, the answer that women gave to this was always the same, so the city of styles had to work out something that would be more interesting to us all.

So, this spring, couturiers are going in for the higher mathematics of geometry, which isn't nearly so involved as it sounds. Take the square, for instance, or the oblong, and introduce curved corners instead of the rigid angles that characterize these two geometric figures, and you have one of the important points of spring styles. As you know, the straight line silhouette is nothing but a rectangle in cloth. Well, by curving the corners, and at times one or two edges, Paris produces variations in this popular line that are extremely pleasing.

I think most of us are fed up with the straight long coat, and yet we don't know how to better it without going in for some other kind of lines that aren't nearly so youthful or so slender. Paris gives us the change we are craving and still leaves us our straight lines, by this curving process. In tailoring terms it is called a "cutaway" effect, but the way it is done this spring is scarcely recognizable under this familiar name.

The first model sketched is the best kind of illustration of how, by rounding corners, you come upon chic. You don't have to be a learned student of styles to recognize this Premet coat as the simple straight line coat, but for all of that it has an air of novelty, given by its cutaway edges, which are accentuated by borders of kid printed in an old rose spotted calf design, and by an inner border of plain old rose crepella set against the rose and white mixed friska of the coat proper. Also the wide revers and the rolling collar are different. Collar and cuffs are edged with calf printed kid, and a small cluster of cherries hangs from the edge of the collar, replacing the usual single flower.

By using curved edges on the jumper waist of this ensemble, Premet has given us something new in the two piece sports dress, and something which is vastly more graceful than the straight around lower edge. Analyzed, this is a straight jumper overblouse, with its lower edge cut to the normal waist line at the center front and emphasized by the addition of a curved two inch tuck. Above this Premet places a narrow band of spotted kid, in a series of curves, and the kid also outlines the round neck.

In order to keep the lines of this dress quite straight, Premet stitches the box plaited skirt down from its normal waist line commencement to the hips. The waist of this frock, to the kid band, is rose crepella and below that is friska, while the skirt is of friska, that very thin mixed woolen that looks something like the old time etamine.

Not so very hard to understand, this new mathematics of chic, is it? It consists of using any of the geometric figures that are the basis of geometry or of children's building blocks in breaking up the oblong line of the regulation silhouette.

One of the easiest and most attractive ways of creating this kind of cachet is shown in our second model, which is a tennis or general summer sports dress from Jane Regny. This frock is made of white crêpe de chine, combined with white crêpe georgette by means of star pointed pieces. The straight waist has a yoke of white georgette, and the waist body of white crêpe de chine is joined to this yoke by irregular star point triangles that are stitched flat, extending around both front and back. This relieves the straight outlines, and so does the irregular waist line that curves up in front above the wide plaits of the skirt.

Without changing in the slightest way the regulation silhouette lines, this Premet afternoon frock which varies the straight line silhouette by means of triangles that make panels. The material of this gown is one of the season's novelties, being a thin wool voile printed with tiny pink flowers. Premet makes the waist rather blousy, gathering it in front and back from the square neck, and the sleeves, too, are rather full. Pink crêpe de chine bands finish the neck line and the cuffs, making the little bows at the wrists. The big voile scarf on the left shoulder is also banded with pink crepe.

A draped girdle of voile makes a fitted hip line, and ties in a bow at the center front. The lower edge of the jumper waist forms a supple yoke at the top of the skirt, and triangular crêpe edged floating panels hang from the girdle at the center front and the sides. The skirt is itself rather narrow and edged in pink crêpe de chine at the hem line.

Introducing curves into the borders of the straight line coat and jumper give novelty to this Premet ensemble in old rose crepella trimmed with printed kid, sketched at the extreme left.

A yoke of white georgette is joined to a straight blouse of white crepe de chine by star pointed edges. The crepe de chine skirt is plaited in front only. Second from the left.

Next, pink flowered wool voile makes this afternoon frock from Premet, with its triangular panels and pink crepe de chine band trimmings.

This blue jersey sports dress from Jane Regny, sketched last, presents a new kind of chic in big patches of self colored crepe de chine.

Probably an Old Line.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a boy in another city who, when he comes to see me, makes violent love to me, but refuses to keep company with me because he says he doesn't want any special girl friend.

"BRIGHT EYES."

Pay no attention to his love making. It's probably the line he hands every girl, Bright Eyes.

Unreliable.

"Dear Miss Blake: I met a girl and we made a date. She did not keep it. Should I call her up? LONESOME."

You'd subject yourself to similar disappointments were you to phone her. She's too unreliable.

Loves Only One.

"Dear Miss Blake: We both love a fellow whose initials are A. W. K. He told us he loves one of us and regards the other as a friend.

"ROSE AND HELEN."

The invitations and special attentions will naturally go to the favored one—the other must accept the situation.

Let Him Call You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a fellow who cares for me. He asked me to call him up. Is it proper?

"BLUE EYES."

It's unwise to make a practice of calling boys, Blue Eyes, even though they may suggest it. They'll ask for your telepone number and use it if they're in earnest.

One Out of Three.

"Dear Miss Blake: I invite a girl out every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday. She only accepts for Saturday. Is she going with some one else on the other nights? G. P. H."

There's some one else or she does not get sufficient enjoyment out of the time spent with you, either of which is good reason for eliminating further invitations, don't you think?

Eight Years' Difference.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl eight years older than I. She likes me. What shall I do? CURLY."

Watch your step, Curly. Eight years is quite a difference when the woman is the older. Compare her with the younger girls and see how she measures up.

Lonesome.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16. I have no girl and never went out with one yet. How can I get a girl?

"HANDSOME."

Aren't there some nice girls at school who would qualify and who would be glad to go out with a handsome young chap like you? Ask your pals to present you to some of their friends.

Foolish to Consider It Now.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping company for two years and love the girl dearly. I am only making $32 a week, which I know we cannot live on.

"She is 18 and I am 20, but she does not want to wait any longer, if I don't give her the engagement ring by the 1st of next year. BLUE."

You're not yet in a position to consider engagement rings and marriage, Blue. Don't let her scare you into it, either. Use your own good judgment and, wait until you can well assume such responsibilities.

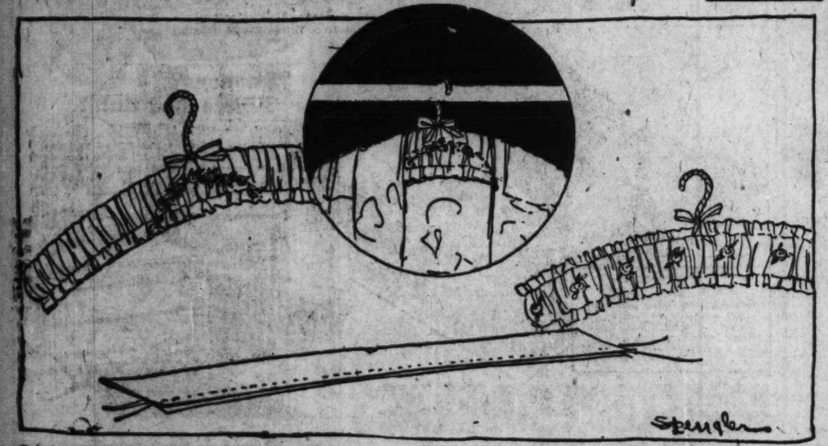
HE Makes No Returns.

"Dear Miss Blake: My fellow comes to see me once a week, but never takes me out. I love him. Do you think he cares for me?

"ELIZABETH."

He's imposing when he accepts your hospitality and makes no return, Elizabeth. Let him spend his evenings elsewhere when he is so unappreciative.

Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Clothes Hangers Make Pretty Gifts When Padded and Covered with Satin Ribbon

"What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

A SET of clothes hangers, covered with different colored satin ribbon, makes a most acceptable gift. The hanger hook should be tightly wound with matching narrow ribbon, and securely fastened. Then for one of the prettiest kind I have seen, five or six inch wide ribbon was used and one yard and a is folded through the center on its length, and shirred one-half inch from the edges on both sides. A tiny hole is made in the center of the length on this fold to slip the hook through; then the ribbon is turned in at each end and the gathered places drawn up to the right length and sewed carefully together, through the gathers.

At the bottom of the hook part, the ribbon used to wind the hook with is tied in a small bow. And in the center of the hanger a half wreath of tiny silk flowers is sewed.

Another pretty hanger was made of ribbon half the width of the one just described and two strips or pieces of ribbon, each one the length of the first quarter of three-eighths was used to cover with.

The hanger was well padded first with cotton wadding, then the ribbon one described. These strips are shirred one-half inch from each edge — the hanger covered with the wadding and then the shirred ribbon set in place. Instead of flowers to trim this one there are large French knots through the center at intervals of about two inches.

Sachet powders should be used inside the wadding and the ribbon bow tied at the bottom of the hook like the other one.

Drawn, Tired Complexions Instantly Refreshed

As a tired body relaxes and freshens after a warm bath at night, so drawn, "tired" faces freshen and relax after a Calonite bath. But that is not all . . . They glow with healthy color and utter cleanliness. For lack of these, faces grow dull, oily, sallow, "tired," burdened with blackheads; slightly old-looking. Soaps and creams cannot stimulate them sufficiently. Calonite can and will—instantly. Calonite is a pure white powder that you apply with a damp cloth. Instantly you feel the drawn facial tissues relax, freshen. You feel the hidden oils and powder that clog the pores, that resist other cleansing methods, bubblingly dissolve. You feel the warm, reviving, youthful'ing blood come tingling to the surface.

How clear and clean, and new your skin looks then! How fresh and young it feels! And how it responds to nightcreams and rest! From the very first time you use Calonite you look and feel a new person. Because your skin is clean as it never was before, and healthfully stimulated with nature's own beautifier.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it—this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness, exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

A New Skin — Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

YOU CAN FILL CHILD'S HEART WITH JOY.

LAST week, among the offers I printed was that of a talking doll, and it brought me a deluge of requests that came all week—all asking that they be considered for the one doll offered. Just a few of these letters will give you an idea of the depth and intensity of this longing for playthings among children deprived of them:

"Dear Miss Brown: When I saw your offer of a doll I immediately thought how wonderful it would be to give to a little child who met with an automobile accident recently and has been in the hospital. She has no mother and it would make her so happy to get it.—M. G."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I know of a little girl who is sick. She broke her doll and just grieves about it all the time. Her mother cannot afford to buy her one and I know she'd love to have the one you are offering.—Mrs. B."

"Dear Sally: I have two little orphan girls I got through the Juvenile court. They are two little sisters. One is 6 and the other is 3. Couldn't you see fit to give me the doll for them?—Mrs. A. G."

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: My little girl's birthday is the 28th of this month and her father has been out of work for months. She will be 5 and wants a doll and I can't afford to buy one for her. Dear Miss Brown, would you please make my little girl happy on her birthday?—Mrs. W. J."

Now, can't we do something about all these children who were so keenly disappointed? If we have girls and boys in the family, how many dolls, toys, games, and other playthings are lying about because the children have lost interest and grown tired of these particular toys. And how much happiness these discarded playthings would give if they were presented to girls and boys who haven't any and whose parents cannot afford to buy them.

The young owners will be glad, once they know how others will be made happy by their generosity, to part with them—and think what joy we'll bring into the lives of these children and all the other little applicants!

Nurse's Uniform Needed.

"I am a widow and I have been in the hospital for some time. I am able to work again and have obtained employment in a sanitarium, but I need a nurse's uniform, size 40. I would like a black coat, size 38 or 40, also. Do you think one of your readers might have these things to give me?

"Mrs. M. M."

There must be a nurse, somewhere, with a uniform she is about to discard. I can think of no better way to put it to use than this.

Cripple Asks Help.

"I am a cripple and must make my living by selling articles on the street. I need a small satchel, a camp chair, and a suit of clothes, size 42. I am 33 and have no friends. If you could get these things for me, I would appreciate it greatly. J. M. L."

Have you any of the articles this poor fellow needs in his struggle for a livelihood?

A Worthy Case.

"Would some one be interested in giving Mrs. L. some furniture for her living room? She has only one broken chair. Mrs. L. is a frail little woman with three tiny youngsters and a husband who has a crippled leg and who is not able to support his family as he wishes. She needs especially two comfortable chairs, a libary table and a rug. H. J. A."

Spring cleaning and moving usually finds us with a lot of surplus furniture on our hands. This request may solve your problem of disposing of such articles and enable you to make a poor family extremely happy and comfortable.

Ex-Service Man Needs Help.

"I am married with two children, 5 and 2. My husband is a disabled ex-service man, living with his family because he can't afford a home for us. We are living in a charitable institution. He is without a job and could probably get one as salesman if he had presentable clothing. You might be in a position to find some one who has a suit, size 38, and a spring overcoat for him. Mrs. J. S."

Can you resist this plea from the wife of an ex-service man? Surely, a bit of clothing is small compensation for what he has sacrificed.

Boy Wants Microscope.

"I wonder if someone among your readers has a microscope they no longer want and would give to me. I am a boy, 12, and have wanted one for a long time. R. C. M."

You will make this boy immensely happy if you have the microscope he has been wanting for such a long time.

Day Bed Needed.

"I wonder if you could help me to obtain a day bed for my husband. He has tuberculosis and will not be able to get in the hospital for about three months. The doctor says he must sleep alone and I don't earn enough money to buy an extra bed. "Mrs. J. H."

Can you befriend this family in the misfortune which has befallen them? A day bed—they cannot use one of larger dimensions—would help enormously.

Ambitious to Earn More.

"I am the sole support of my mother and myself, and I am going to try to earn a few more dollars by teaching French at home. For this reason I should like to have our room looking more like a living room and will need two bed coverings of dark material and a leather couch. Do you think your readers have some they might no longer want. Mrs J. V."

Truly, this ambitious woman is deserving of any assistance we may be able to give her. If you have the coverings she needs, or a couch of some kind, she will be most appreciative for them.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to have the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Haram-Scarum.

The strangest wedding I ever saw, man't! The groom was a serious-minded, devout young college professor, handsome and intellectual. The bride was a small town flapper vamp, about 18. The ceremony was to be performed in the office of a magistrate in a neighboring town. The bride was so much amused at the whole affair that she kept delaying it with laughing, and during each spasm that had to be called for her "to get her face straight" she kept up a rapid fire flirtation with the magistrate, who, we had learned, was a widower.

At last, on pretense that he had forgotten the lines of his ceremony, he went into the hall, she following. Then we called to them after a few minutes they had disappeared. Inquiring on the street we found they had gone away in his car—where no one knew.

It later developed that the magistrate and the other man's bride drove to the nearest city and were married within two hours after they left us. W. B.

His Customary Expense.

In one of our Kentucky mining camps a minister friend of mine was called to perform a wedding ceremony at 8 o'clock in the evening. His religious scruples forbade his marrying couples if either party had been divorced. This time he hurriedly overlooked the matter when he consented to go. At the appointed hour he was there.

Briefly, noting the license certificate as discovered they had both been divorced, but resolved it was too late to speak of it then.

At the close of the ceremony the elderly gentleman awkwardly asked: "Well, how much do I owe you?" to which the preacher replied: "Well, that's just with you. We do not make any charges. Just whatever you care to give me."

The man paused, looked at his blushing bride of some 45 years, then presented a greenback, saying: "Well, I've been a-payin' a dollar."

B. H. K.

Masterful Bride.

The bride, a foreign born woman of rather forceful mind, lived in a small town but desired to be married and spend her honeymoon in a big city, so several weeks previous to the wedding she came into the city and purchased the wedding ring, her wedding outfit, inquired about the license, engaged the minister, hired a taxi to take her to the church on the wedding day, and, in fact, made all arrangements for the eventful day.

The happy couple were to have their wedding breakfast at the home of a friend, so flowers for the bride, also ordered by that lady, were delivered there on the previous day. The wedding day dawned clear and cold, so cold that the bride's flowers were frozen stiff, and to make matters worse the taxi had been ordered too soon by the farseeing lady and we arrived at the big church an hour too early and had to wait through services for a deceased man with the only other occupant of the church the man's widow, heavily decked in mourning weeds.

Never will I forget the long walk down the aisle of that church with the accompanying music as the four of us were all the wedding party, guests and all.

The hotel selected as the domicile for the honeymoon was a carefully guarded secret until, unfortunately, the place was raided and the poor elderly couple were haled to the police court.

I believe that cured the bride of "officiating," as her husband afterward called it, and now she lets him do some of the planning, deeming it the better thing to do. H. S.

Mock Wedding, Legal.

There was a bashful couple in our town who had been going together for several years, so one night when they were both going to a Valentine party, a mock wedding was arranged. One man went to the license bureau and got the wedding license, and the person who filled it being in on the joke, and, having a sense of humor, filled it out properly, together with a certificate. At the party a young man was selected to perform the ceremony. All were masked so there was no telling who the young man was. He went through the ceremony, and after the blessing the masks were removed.

Imagine the surprise when the young couple saw that it was a minister. The wedding was legal, and the task of proposing being off the bashful young man's hands, he decided to let matters stand, and they are now a happy married couple. L. H. O.

After the Ancient Greeks.

There's a family in this town who attempt to live like the ancient Greeks. Their house is a large temple set in a eucalyptus grove, and consists of ceiling and floor connected by pillars. There are no walls; they simply pull down heavy canvas curtains in rainy or cold weather.

One of the daughters announced her engagement just before the Berkeley fire, about three years ago. The temple was badly damaged, the roof being completely burned, and only a few of the pillars remaining. Undaunted by this catastrophe, the "would-be Greeks" decided to hold the ceremony in the charred ruins. So some of us ordinary mortals wandered through the grove that night, to see what we could see. And we surely got an eyeful.

An altar had been erected in the ruined temple with a painting of the Madonna above it. Sacrificial fires burned in braziers, while the wedding march consisted of music made by clashing cymbals and wind instruments—"the pipes of Pan!"

The minister wore an Oxford gown, while the bride and bridesmaids were garbed in flowing Greek draperies, with bare legs and sandals. The bridesmaids, moreover, carried flaming torches instead of conventional bouquets, and danced to and from the altar. After the ceremony they and the bride favored the audience with more "esthetic" dancing.

Only the bridegroom and his best man were "out of the picture," as they were in black evening dress. Being "rising young business men," I suppose they refused to take part in the masquerade, even to make a Grecian holiday.

The wedding supper, I was told later, consisted of honey, unleavened bread, and milk, a la an Athenian repast. A. K.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial clinch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Let Him Suffer.

Wifey—John, there is some one in the pantry and I've just made a pie.

John—Well, it's all right with me as long as he doesn't die in the house. E. G.

Her Hair Was Red.

Red Headed Wife—Gee, old man, you're getting so bald I can use your head for a looking glass.

Hubby—The reason I am bald is this: When they passed around the hair in our family, the only color left was red, and I had rather be bald than take it. Mrs. O. S.

Now It's Blankety-Blank.

Husband—Jones calls a spade a spade, you know.

Wife—Well, you used to before you used to dig up the garden. F. H. K.

Right Back at Him.

Husband [sourly, after his wife had spilled a cup of coffee on the breakfast table]—"I've seen men shot for less than that!"

Wife [sweetly]—"Yes, and I've seen men half shot do worse than that." H. A. B.

The Reason Why.

I was returning from a trip to Chicago. A nice looking young man sat down beside me. As I was beyond the flirting age, I let him talk to me. He told me of the important position he held.

On reaching home I repeated the conversation to my husband.

"Just think," I said, "he had 400 men under him."

"Humph!" replied my husband, "I suppose he works in a cemetery." Mrs. J. G.

Funny Ideas.

Hubby—You've certainly got funny ideas of what's funny and what isn't!

Wife—Well, have you ever heard of any one having serious ideas of what's funny? Mrs. B. T.

Doubts Him.

Wife—George, I don't believe you put the cat out.

Hubby—Well, if you think I'd lie about a little thing liko that go and put her out yourself. F. H. K.

I do my own wash

—yet my hands stay soft, white

I USED to hate Monday, for my week's wash was always very heavy. But washday is now so easy for me.

I just use Rinso. It's great in our water—makes wonderfully thick, lasting suds.

I soak the whole wash in these suds for about two hours—then rinse. The dirt soaks right out and everything becomes spotless without a bit of hard rubbing. And oh, so much whiter than ever before. Sterilized, too!

And with Rinso my hands never get red and parboiled any more. They stay white and soft.

Why not try Rinso next washday? You'll see why the makers of 30 leading washers endorse it.

Straight lines, perhaps broken by a belt or relieved by an unusual pocket, in every instance fulfill the demands of fashion. The sports mode is at its best in these attractive models.

Tweeds, homespuns, plaids and striped materials are the fabrics of the moment used, and very effectively, too. They come in all the new colors with many dashing black and white combinations included.

Many of them are trimmed with such furs as fluffy mouffion, fox, and twin beaver (dyed rabbit). If you favor the sports mode this season you will be wise to come in and see our version of it. The styles are more attractive than ever as are the colors and materials. Splendid workmanship is employed and the price is very low for coats of such quality.

Women's Dress Coats

Beautiful kashas, satins, poiret sheens, poiret twills and Luela cloth are made into some of the smartest coats we have ever offered. Right up to the minute in every respect.

Pin tucks are used profusely in every possible manner and rich embroidery in intricate designs worked in colorful threads also enhances many of these models. An attractive bow on the shoulder is another distinctive feature of some of them.

These coats are also trimmed in fur in many instances—such as American broadtail, pieced squirrel and twin beaver (dyed rabbit). You will like the clever usages of imitation lizard for trimming, too. Linings are of plain or fancy crepe and often taffeta. Every coat is finely finished and a real value at this low sale price.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

A Reasoned Out Beverage Regimen Is More Vital to Our Well Being than a Financial Budget

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

WATER that is hot, water that is cold, man must have his daily half gallon whether young or old. And we would like to be a jolly hydromancer, warning people constantly of what will surely happen to them if they do not watch out and get that half gallon. A hydromancer, by the way, is one who tells the future by means of water, and we are telling you, giving our own twist to the word—a physiological one which we admit it did not originally have.

Now, we are not advising that you become a hydromaniac, that is, have a craze for water, but only a near craze, because real craziness over anything is something to be avoided. To go that far is not pleasant. Indeed, it is a mighty serious thing.

And then there is hydrotherapy, or water doctoring. It has been in vogue 2,000 years or more, and never quite out. Systems of this sort have occupied thousands of printed pages, and with it have gone hydrotherapeutic cook books, etc. The geography of the world is dotted over with places where people seek waters for their health. Around them has flourished a life unique in the way it has dominated and entertained humanity—with doctors and gaming casinos, baths and scenery, food and play.

At this season "watering places" the world over begin to fill up with folk who want rest or "treatment" for their ills, ills so often due in large part to a scant water regimen. So people go to them to be washed and rinsed out, to bathe, etc., when, if these things had been adequately attended to every single day in the year, those people would not now be having to combine disagreeableness with agreeableness. The promoters of these waters see to it that there is much of the latter to balance the former.

It is a strange thing, is it not, that man with his marvelous aqueducts and piping of water even to the top of skyscrapers, and with bottles and thermos carafes to keep water agreeable, should, like the beasts, need to get to a watering trough and fairly swill this liquid? Age after age has preached against this folly, and even the Bible beatifies water. You may read Isaiah—55:11 and elsewhere—and get the idea that a spring of water is a noble institution. And we have a perfect right, in fact, we believe it highly reasonable to do so, to put a physiological interpretation on the biblical expressions which exalt and glorify water, not only as a cleanser externally, but internally. If we believe greatly in a water salvation other than that of holy baptism, we may wish we were Isaiahs trying to turn erring humanity from its careless, indifferent ways as regards its water needs.

Water Service.

A waitress places a glass of water before you as you sit down to table, and she does well. It is not a mere convention. The wise mother provides her bairns and her beloved with a glass of cool and fresh water as soon as they are out of bed, and again when they retire. It does for their bodies what sunlight may do for their spirits, and more. Being a wise mother, she knows that these glasses of cold water—or sometimes it may be hot—are more needed for the health, beauty and happiness of her flock than any other single or simple thing she can do for them. (As an aside, let us say that we know she can largely keep away old age wrinkles from herself if she provides in this way for her own beverage needs, while she dashes cold water on her face and chest every morning of her life—as a beauty, health and energy measure.) One-fourth the daily requirement having been secured by the morning and evening glass, almost any human being who will reasonably attend to the call of thirst will get the other three-fourths through the hours of the day, since a considerable proportion comes in the foods we eat.

Good digestion is nearly assured and elimination certain without a laxative when a human being will give definite thought to maintaining his water balance. He has but to do a little common sense reasoning to know what that is. The many kinds of work water does in a man's body are so vital, and imperative, that racial common sense is always combating some individual's folly in going against the deep rooted reasoning of humanity. There are classic instances of it. A cup of cold water is an ideal of true charity.

The learned author of a cook book printed by Harper & Bros. in 1865 quotes a famous doctor in her chapter "On Selecting Food and Drinks," whose words sound extremely pedantic—his span of life was from 1803-1853—but he was a great medical authority in his day and was perhaps sound for all time on the water question.

He said: "Water is probably the natural drink of all adults. It serves several important purposes in the animal economy. Firstly, it repairs the loss of the aqueous part of the blood, caused by evaporation, and the action of the secreting and exhaling organs; secondly, it is a solvent of various alimentary substances, and, therefore, assists the stomach in digestion." In short, we lose water with every breath and in quantity in other physiological acts; therefore we must definitely, systematically, and all the time repair the loss.

Our Specific Water Requirement.

It is terribly monotonous, and so often fails to make the slightest impression on an individual, this repetition of the fact that we need every day eight glasses, which is four pints, or two quarts, or one-half gallon. It is on honest records that human beings who have evaded systematic water drinking have gone to springs or spas, and for several weeks under presumably medical supervision or some domination have taken seven quarts a day, or fifty-six glasses. What a flood! And what folly to think they can get their water drinking for the year done up in three or four weeks. Because they got on with half their real water requirements now they go through the actual punishment of making oceans of themselves.

We need pure water even to keep our bones clean, as well as to keep our skin from shrinking and to hinder many an internal struggle wholly due to its lack, which shows itself in pain and sometimes even more spectacularly.

Hot Water.

Turning from cold water to hot we find the cook at our elbow. We get our hot water in soups, in gravies, and sauces, in hot fruit compotes and in nutritive or merely stimulating and comforting beverages. It is cooking to prepare these and even to boil water requires some intelligence. Tepid water is an emetic, and if we are taking plain heated water we need to remember that.

Perhaps you have heard people complain of the meals at a given place as being "so dry," no soups, no gravies, no delicious fruit compotes, and being served with only poor or wretched teas and coffee. Man not only needs but craves the food liquids. Waters flavored in various ways approximate nature's best in liquids, the fruits, which are from eighty to ninety-five per cent water, but water that is aromatic, mineralized, filtered, and sterilized. They are great and agreeable agents in this business of keeping the body cisterns filled. And we must not forget that the tomato and cucumber carry the same water load, wonderfully flavored.

Boiling Water.

Boiling water need not be a mere prosaic task, and it is cooking in a real sense. In fiction, where tea has figured so greatly, there are no end of pictures of boiling water, the chief, perhaps, in "The Cricket on the Hearth," by Charles Dickens. To complete the cheerfulness of an open fire there must be a teakettle on the hob and in action. Devices have even been employed to make the sound of the boiling a pleasant one, by using an iron kettle with pieces of iron so arranged in the bottom "as to produce a peculiar melody in which one may hear the echo of cataracts muffled by clouds, of a distant sea breaking among the rocks, a rainstorm sweeping through a bamboo forest, or of the soughing of pines on some faraway hill."

People isolated from the world have devised entertainment like this for themselves, or for their soul's salvation. The cook who can get glorious entertainment from her cooking will cook, compelled or not. And people of a more laboratory mind have found interest in boiling water, watching the bubbles form and break.

Liquid Diets.

A liquid diet and a copious one is the greatest means of getting the necessary water. This is because people are but careless water drinkers and then some persons actually suffer extreme discomfort from drinking more than a quart of plain water a day. Think what the water drinking punishment of old times would have been to them, the horrible agony of it so often resulting in death. But that is no reason for going to the opposite extreme.

Though there was some folly connected with it, the best results I ever saw in the case of some one "reducing," came from a diet consisting almost exclusively of tomatoes and watermelon, each of which are 95 per cent water, or average that. The woman did this without anybody's advice and so risked injury to herself, but since science tells us that hunger sensations come because the walls of an empty stomach contracting hit or knock and cause pain she avoided that ache by eating the bulky watermelon. And the liquid of these two things helped her in more ways than she could guess in her summer martyrizing of herself.

Ices.

Of course one bent on getting a sufficiently liquid diet, though the heavens fall, may easily go to extremes, but that is a danger that is ever betraying humanity in every path of action. The ices, if taken in moderation, and eaten slowly or almost sipped, are worth while in a meal planned according to the ideas we have been exploiting. As to the sipping, there are those who beleive we get the best results and the most desirable alimentary action if we sip all liquids, and thus prolong the exercise the total digestive canal gets when we eat or drink. In other words, we keep our muscles in shape by directly and consciously exercising them. When it is our body proper we may do this with dumb bells, by bending, etc. When it is our digestive canal—an extremely vital muscle—we must apply reasonable methods of exercising it, or refine our methods of getting up action in it.

Pineapple Ice.

Many years ago a fascinating writer of the interesting things of life said that a pineapple ice was a combination of the pine and the palm, of ice and tropical luxury—in other words, of equator and pole, so excellent for our imagination which, with most people, needs more exercise than it gets, and in too many cases none at all is given to food.

For two people, make a pineapple ice or sherbert as follows: Shred or cut up enough of a juicy pineapple to make one-fourth cup. Cook one-half cup of sugar with one-fourth cup of water until it spins a thread, or to 238 degrees. Pour this over the pineapple and let stand till cool. Add to it a little lemon juice to strengthen the flavor, being careful not to use enough to make the whole lack sweetness. Beat the white of one egg till stiff and fold the pineapple and sugar mixture into it. To the fruit may be added a pinch of salt to strengthen the flavor, but adding it to the egg makes its complete fluffing difficult—it may be wet underneath. This may be frozen in a freezer and another egg white added when it is partly frozen, or it may be packed like a mousse and served when it is but half frozen, which makes it a true sherbet.

Lemon Granites.

The Italian granites are often nothing but flavored water half frozen. A little lemon juice in a great deal of water and without any sugar when so treated may be an agreeable thing to sip.

Water Argument.

No more wonderful water argument is to be found in print than that about saving a sick baby, by the means of water, to be found in an article entitled "The Gay Adventure," by Woods Hutchinson, in the Saturday Evening Post, July 29, 1922. The baby had lost water by cups or quarts and with diarrhea which was being restored by spoonfuls only. It is a story to wring the hardest heart, that of the poor baby literally wilting and melting away as a lettuce leaf might from loss and from lack of water, even his skin beginning to hang in folds. Then with water treatment he began to flush, to take up the lack of the wrinkles, and "in twenty-four hours he had swelled up like a tick, and in forty he was well."

If you are an almost violent advocate of water drinking in order to live well, and even for life-saving, this article will be meat to you.

One of our leading dietitians, Flora Rose, has devoted one of her "Easy Lessons in Nutrition" to "The Truth About Water," mentioning the fact that "for some disorders, such as types of heart trouble and high blood pressure, it is necessary to cut down water at all times," but there are certainly doctors who disagree on this.

STRANGE WEDDINGS

My Most Embarrassing Moment

Disappointed.

Four of us girls (all teachers) rent a furnished apartment and keep house. A week ago my brother phoned he was duck hunting down here and was coming up with a mess of canvas backs that day for dinner. We had all the dinner fixed except the ducks, which the four of us were going to clean and dress in a hurry, and cream, so we invited three hungry chaps to dinner.

My brother arrived just in time for dinner, with all stores closed, and with one puny mudhen which scarcely made a satisfying meal for the family cat. Embarrassed? O! M. K.

The Man in Gray.

My sister-in-law paid us a visit. As she was about to go, I urged her to stay and dine with us, expecting my husband's arrival any moment. While waiting for him we gathered some flowers.

Then impatiently looking down the street, we saw a man in gray and waved at him in a very familiar way, which he acknowledged. We then rushed in to serve dinner, but no John arrived. We dined alone.

When he came we asked why the delay. Suddenly I recalled he had changed his suit to a brown one that morning. Now, then, who was the other man?

Later in the evening, when sprinkling the lawn, four doors away I saw the man in gray, which makes it most embarrassing, because we are not on speaking terms. MRS. J. S.

Next to a Loud Speaker.

Having a considerable distance to travel to school I had acquired the habit of reading my French assignment on the elevated cars. One morning the entire chapter was difficult and required more concentration than was usual.

I regret that a voluble woman and a quiet well mannered man took seats next to me. The woman became more voluble and agitated as she related the details of a trial at which she had appeared in some capacity.

Needless to say, she attracted the attention of several persons close by, as well as my own, which caused me a deal of irritation. Several times I forced myself to reread the passage I had begun, but it seemed impossible to understand with a perpetual "loud speaker" at my side.

In a desperate attempt to grasp the meaning, I inhaled a deep breath and read aloud with a determined voice: "Monsieur Carot a prit un jour de congé," etc.

Almost at the same instant I was aware of my faux pas, as well as the general amusement of the jostling passengers. Even the long suffering man smiled wryly, which added to my embarrassment. B. E. W.

Why He Remained Aloof.

One night at a dance I was introduced to a stranger. He did not speak, but bowed very low and then withdrew. All evening he seemed to stay aloof from the crowd. The girls thought him "stuck up." When ladies' choice came, the girls dared me to ask him to dance. I tripped up to him and with a roguish twinkle in my eye, stammered, "M-m-m-ay I have the p-p-p-leasure of this d-d-d-ance?

He answered, "The p-p-p-leasure is all m-m-m-mine."

Instantly I recognized his stammering as a natural affliction. You may be sure that I did not enjoy that polka. 'Tis years! But that moment of awful embarrassment to this day sends red floods of shame into my cheeks. L. P.

When Child Doesn't Laugh and Play,—Look at Tongue

Hurry, Mother! Give "California Fig Syrup" at once. It can't harm children and they love it

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Dance with Joy!

HAPPY FEET in 3 minutes

TENDER FEET. Aching burning, swollen, shoe-chafed feet. The minute you put your feet into a "Tiz" bath you feel pain being drawn out and comfort just soaking in. "Tiz" draws out the poisons and acids that cause foot misery. It is almost magical.

"Tiz" takes all the soreness out of corns and callouses. Get a box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet comfortable.

"TIZ" for tired aching feet

Eat your fill . . . and Sleep like a top

HUNGRY . . . all tired out? A good healthy feeling. But it's also nature's warning that energy is running low; that you must be careful what you eat.

A fully ripe banana—whether you're two, twenty-two, or twenty times two—will both relieve that hungry feeling and permit you to drop off into a sound, dreamless sleep. Why?

Because the thoroughly ripened banana is packed with rich sugars—energy elements that hungry, tired bodies can easily assimilate.

How can you tell when this all-food fruit is ripe? That's easy. When the skin is a golden yellow generously flecked with brown, then the banana is so easy to digest that it actually melts in your mouth.

The next time you feel hungry and tired, try a fully ripe banana. In the meantime, we shall be glad to send you a most unusual recipe book that tells of over eighty different ways of serving this nourishing fruit from the tropics. Just fill out and mail the coupon below for a copy.

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

Crafty Fox Thinks He's a Bird.

I MET Zip Coon yesterday and he was laughing all over the place. He told me this story of something that had just happened:

"Golly me! O, golly my! If I had wings, how I could fly.
I'd fly so high I'd bump the sky. Golly me! O, golly my!"

Crafty Fox sang this song as he came skipping down the road one day last week.

Turkey Buzzard heard him from the top of the dead oak and squawked back at him:

Crafty Tries Flying.

"Golly me! O, golly my! I'll bet a nickle you can't fly. Just take my wings, let's see you try. Golly me! O, golly my!"

Crafty Fox stopped short and sniffed.

"Gracious me," he grinned. "I smell music and if it isn't my old friend Turkey Buzzard's beautiful voice."

Turkey Buzzard couldn't sing a note, but he was so tickled at what Crafty said about him that he flopped down from the tree and bowed several times.

"Come to think of it, Crafty," said he, "I don't see why you shouldn't be able to fly. You are light and graceful and you have such a nice bushy tail to steer with. I'll get an old pair of wings of mine that I don't use any more and strap them on your back and give you a few lessons."

Crafty was delighted. He jumped around and clapped his paws and sang again:

"Golly me! O, golly my! I'll soon have wings and then I'll fly.
I'll fly so high I'll bump the sky. Golly me! O, golly my!"

TURKEY BUZZARD laughed and winked his old red eye as he strapped the wings on Crafty's back. He knew that Crafty would never fly to amount to anything, but he wanted to have some fun with the old sinner, so he just urged him on.

"Now, then, watch me," he squawked as he stood on a stump and spread his wings. "A little jump and—see—how easy it is?"

"Who couldn't do that?" grinned Crafty as he climbed on the Wings Spread Out and Head Still Wabbling.

stump and spread his wings. Then he gave a little jump, turned three or four somersaults, and landed on his left ear.

Just at that moment Benny Bunny came hopping along.

"What was that pretty little song you were singing, Crafty, about bumping the sky? Won't you sing it again for me, please?"

My, but Crafty was mad as he gathered himself together after the wreck. "Never mind," he snapped, "I'm going to learn and when I do fly you won't think it's so funny. Remember that funny Bunny."

Benny blew a kiss to Crafty, winked at Turkey Buzzard, and skipped along down the road. As soon as he was out of sight Crafty called to Turkey Buzzard: "When I learn to fly I'm going to catch him the first thing and give him the worst spanking he ever had. I am that."

CRAFTY kept at it, however, and soon he could rise quite a few feet in the air.

"Now I'm ready, old friend Buzzard," he shouted. "Call Benny Bunny." But Benny did not need to be called. He was hiding in the nearby thicket and saw all that was going on. Out he hopped just as if he had not heard a single word.

Crafty went scooting up in the air. Benny ran around in a circle. Then Crafty flew in a circle. Benny made the circle smaller. Crafty did the same. Around and around they went until poor old Crafty's head began to wobble. He was getting dizzy.

Poor Old Crafty Bumped a Tree.

"Now catch me," squeaked Benny as he scampered for a clump of little trees and darted beneath them. Crafty, with his wings spread out and his head still wobbling, sailed between the branches and hung there, making his old legs go as if he were riding a bicycle. Turkey Buzzard finally had to help him down.

Benny Bunny saw him the next day hobbling around with a cane. His best clothes were full of rips and tears.

"Golly my! O, golly me!" laughed Benny. "Poor old Crafty bumped a tree."

Crafty Fox just stood still and shook all over, he was so mad.

My next story will tell how Judge Bear gets hunk with Crafty Fox.

Yours truly, BUDDY FUDGE.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

Children's Rooms May Have as Much Originality and Charm Nowadays as Grownups'.

CHILDREN'S rooms of the present day involve a great deal more than mere sanitation. Not so long ago practicality and cleanliness were the only factors taken into consideration. Modern mothers, however, realize the importance of color and artistic surroundings, in addition to these fundamental requirements. They know the development of the child's growing personality may be greatly aided or hindered by environment. From a sanitary point of view it is no longer necessary that the playroom or nursery resemble a hospital ward. All sorts of fascinating and interesting fabrics, furnishings, and decoration are procurable nowadays in styles well suited and adaptable to use in the child's room. Bright color schemes, decorative but washable fabrics, and furnishings of simple, sturdy lines are the best choice.

Shown in today's illustration is a section of an unusually attractive room which has been especially planned for a little girl. Cream colored walls are decorated with many colored circles, cut out from paper and glued on. The whole surface is then proptected with a coat of washable shellac. On the metal shelf is an amusing set of figures imported from France. They are cut out in wood and enameled black and white. The two central figures hold a clock, by which the little girl has learned to tell time. The pair of end figures are electrically wired and fitted inside the lamps with small bulbs. The mantel is black and white marble.

Two little arm chairs at each side of the fireplace are upholstered, one in tiny flowered calico on a turquoise blue ground, the other in glazed chintz, showing clusters of flowers on a cream ground. Long, straight hanging window curtains are of turquoise blue sunfast, lined with cream colored sateen. They are arranged with pulley cords so they may be drawn together at night. A small four post bed, a bureau, and a pair of ladder back chairs are made of maple.

The bed cover is of the same material which hangs at the windows. A lamp on a little table beside the bed is made of a china Dutch girl holding an umbrella shade over the electric light bulb. Cupboards for books and toys are built into two corners. The rug is a deep peacock blue, with a border in two tones of the same color.

Dotted Swiss, delightfully fresh and crisp and so well suited, is used in another little girl's room. Casement windows have curtains of rose colored dotted Swiss, ruffled at the edges and caught back just above the sill with cuffs of the same. They are topped by ruffled valanaces. A cover on the bed is made of the same material, with deep full side flounces finished with a double row of narrow ruffles. An under cover is made of rose colored cotton rep. Runners on the dressing table, bureau, chiffonier, and bedside table are of the dotted Swiss simply hemmed. Deep mulberry, wool chenille rugs are used on the floor. The walls are done in a white paper sprinkled all over with tiny pink rosebuds. Woodwork and built-in shelves are painted white.

Flowered cretonne makes another child's room gay. Recessed windows are fitted with built-in seats, beneath which there is ample storage space for many youthful treasures. The windows are curtained with a peach colored, sunfast voile topped by cretonne valanaces, showing floral motifs on an ivory ground. The curtains are bound with two inch bands of the cretonne and are caught back with cuffs of the same. Boxed cushions, made to fit the window seats, are covered with cretonne. These cushions may be dragged onto the floor easily, where they may serve as magic carpets, or ships at sea, or whatever vehicle young fancy may convert them into.

Checked or plaid ginghams are particularly good in a boy's room. One small boy has a bright, sunny room, with sash curtains at the windows of gay blue and yellow sunfast gingham. The walls are painted clear corn yellow and the woodwork blue to match the color in the gingham. A boxed cover on the bed is made of the same gingham, finished with narrow blue upholsterer's fringe, all washable. Sturdy wooden benches, painted blue, may be put to innumerable uses. A deep midnight blue wool rug almost completely covers the floor.

Another little boy's room has white walls, spangled with many gold stars of various sizes. Woodwork is painted white, with depressions done in vermilion. At the windows are ruffled white organdy curtains, with fine vermilion bindings. All of the furniture is painted brilliant blue. Three wide, low benches are fitted with boxed cushions—army mattresses in disguise. These mattresses are covered with rep, one green, one blue, and one red. The covers fasten along one edge with snaps, so that they may be removed for laundering. The upper parts of built-in corner cupboards are filled with open shelves and the lower parts are concealed behind doors, so that things may be kept in order. A bed cover is made of sapphire blue rep piped with emerald green. The floor is covered with deep blue and white linoleum in large, alternating squares.

Striped sunfast in sage green, copper color, old gold and black, makes the window hangings in an older boy's room. Glass curtains are of old gold theatrical gauze. Panels in the walls are filled with decorative and vividly colorful ship posters. Built-in, open shelves hold the boy's tools, books, and his rapidly growing collection of ship models. A recessed windowed niche at one end of the room makes a happy setting for his work table and bench. The bed cover is made of striped sunfast, matching the window draperies. A comfortable armchair near one window is upholstered in copper colored wool rep, piped with black. Beside it stands a wrought iron reading lamp with parchment shade. A similar lamp

An attractive room for the little girl.

Twin beds in the room have deep flounced covers of the flowered cretonne. On a small table between the beds is a lamp with a parchment shade decorated to match the flowers in the cretonne. Two little low armchairs are upholstered in deep green diaper patterned denim. A squatty low table set between these chairs holds a sturdy tea set, so that the young hostess may serve afternoon tea of the cambric variety to her favored guests. A warm, pleasing glow is spread over the room by means of peach colored walls, finished with a washable paint. Two toned, green braided rugs are used on the floor.

linoleum on the floor is supplemented by two black fur rugs.

Now you know the quality

The service-quality of the corset depends entirely upon the service-quality of the elastic with which it is made. In America's finest corsets, supreme service-quality in knitted elastic is identified by a wavy blue line, which appears inside the corset, at top and bottom. 'Tis the distinguishing mark of genuine Kenlastic!

Kill the Chill of Spring

with a Gas Radiantfire and a "Unified" Range

THIS is the hardest time of year to control a furnace fire. The sun shines brightly, the house gets uncomfortably hot—so you let the fire die—then, at evening, it's uncomfortably cool.

There's a far better way. Have us install a Radiantfire in your fireplace and a "Unified" Gas Range in your kitchen. Then you'll be comfortable day and evening—never too warm, never too cool. Just turn on these gas-fired servants when needed—shut them off when warm enough. Clean, odorless, economical.

You won't need a furnace fire at all. Save yourself that bother—know that spring is really here!

Better than Soda for Stomach Gas

PEOPLE who use soda or magnesia for gas on the stomach, sour stomach and indigestion know that these give but very temporary relief. The gas and sourness may be removed for a short time, but soon returns because the cause still remains. Recent discoveries made by medical specialists show that gas and sour stomach are nearly always due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis.

Intestinal Stasis

THIS insidious disease, specialists tell us, is caused by faulty diet and lack of proper exercise, and afflicts three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. By remaining too long in the bowels, this matter ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of gas bloating and pains, sour stomach, dyspepsia, dizzy spells and nervousness.

Even if the bowels move daily, enough old matter may be left to ferment, cause stomach gas, and poison the system. Only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing of both upper and lower bowel can lasting relief be secured.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, perfected and first used the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. Adlerika is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other gas-expelling and detergent elements. Unlike other medicines, it acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Relieves Gas Quickly

RELIEF from stomach gas, gas pains and bloating, is felt almost instantly after Adlerika is taken, unless due to malformations or other deep-seated causes. ONE spoonful often brings out an amazing amount of old poisonous matter which you never thought was in your system, and which may have been the hidden cause of gas, indigestion, nervousness or sleeplessness.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika frequently brings out an astonishing amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Adlerika is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for Intestinal Stasis and stomach gas, or whenever a thorough bowel cleansing is needed. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

"In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."—Dr. James Weaver.

"I suffered with intestinal stasis and gas. Soda or magnesia helped me very little. I got relief from the first dose of Adlerika, and since taking it, I eat almost anything, sleep well and gained weight."—Mrs. Chas. Rhodes, Yakima, Wash.

"Both my wife and myself suffered a great deal from indigestion and gas. Soda would give some relief, but Adlerika has done us more good than anything we have tried."—Charles Slaven, Terre Haute, Ind.

ISN'T IT ODD
By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the fly, which has five eyes and is so hard to catch, should be able to see a distance of not more than two or three feet!

These eyes of the fly, tiny as they are, are not nearly so simple as are those of man. They are likewise nowhere near as useful. The fly, like all the insects, depends on smell to find its way in the world much more than it does on eyes.

Two of the fly's eyes are called compound eyes. They are the big round fellows that sit up on the front of its head and seem to look out so wonderingly. If man's eyes were as big in proportion to his size as are those of the fly they would stand out like grapefruit.

These fly eyes have no lids on them and so are always open. They cannot be turned from side to side. It is because of this that they must be made "compound." Man's eyes have a single lens like a camera. That lens must be pointed at the thing at which the eye is looking. Man can do this by turning his eye. The eye of the fly has 4,000 lenses, each pointing in a different direction. In this way the fly does not need to turn its head. It does not need to turn its head. So it can see any enemy that would try to catch it. It cannot see it, however, until it is within two or three feet and so must be quick to dodge.

Besides these two big, round eyes the fly has three tiny ones on top of its head. These are little more than skylights looking up. It is the big eyes that do most of the business.

The fly can see better than most insects. The ant, for instance, has but 50 lenses in its eyes and sees very little. Bees and wasps have average eyes and can see two feet. Certain butterflies have the best of insect eyes and can see as much as six feet. The eye of the dragon fly is among the most complicated and has 20,000 lenses. There is, however, a moth which has 27,000 lenses in its eye. These lenses are all packed together and, under the microscope, look like honeycomb. It is by measuring them that scientists can find out where they focus and so can tell how far the insect can see.

Billy was the only boy in the family with four older sisters. A caller at the house asked him how he ever managed to get along with so many girls. Billy hesitated a moment, and then, walking over to the caller, said very quietly, "I just simply fights 'em."

J. W.

Mary, 3½ years old, had been given permission to stay for lunch at a neighbor's. She stayed all afternoon and while auntie was preparing dinner, she said, "Auntie, your lunch was so good, I guess I will stay for dinner."

V. E. B.

David and Bobby, both 4, were great pals but often had fights which ended in tears. One morning David came in from play looking rather downcast, and being asked whether he and Bobby had been fighting again, he answered, "Well, no, we haven't been fighting, but we sure had a lot of conversation about somethin'"

Too Ambitious.

When small children, my brother and I were constantly vieing with each other to be our father's pet. We were both of a jealous disposition and were really angered if father paid more attention to one than the other.

One day my father bought a pony for brother, which I could not ride because I was too small. Seeing him ride before my father's admiring eyes was too much, so I decided to gain father's admiration by learning to ride, too.

Father forbade this, so one day I went to the stable unobserved and took the pony. I finally mounted, gave the horse a cut with the whip, but when he started running I fell off, breaking my shoulder blade. I still have an ugly protusion on that bone to remind me of the folly of jealousy.

A. J.

Spoiling the Fun.

I was going to a grand party, where every one dressed wonderfully.

My girl friend and I went up to get new shoes. Imagine my dismay when arriving home to find mine were too small.

She offered to take them back for me. Knowing my clothes were much nicer than hers, she got my shoes a size too large this time.

Being time to go, I had to wear my old shoes, and my whole evening was spoiled on account of a jealous heart.

The Cheekiest Person I Ever Met

Women the World Over

Night work for women is gradually being done away with by law in Japan.

Changing about of women from job to job in industry is now easy, since most of the factory work done by women today requires little skill or experience.

The Missouri State Board of League of Women Voters has begun a campaign to have that state join the 22 other states which have jury service for women.

By husking more than 1,500 bushels of corn in 23 days, Miss Mary Franzen of Kingsley, Ia., set what is believed to be a new record. Her daily average was 68⅔ bushels.

Mrs. L. M. Foster Welch, J. P., recently appointed sheriff of the county of the town of Southampton, is England's first sheriff since the creation of the office in 1477.

In Atlantic City recently a circuit court suit was tried by an entirely female jury, the first time in the history of the state that a jury entirely of women had heard a case.

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

This was Never Suspected
A BEAUTY parlor may have one of seventeen imitations of Nestle permanent wave machines. But few women suspect that many of these have been given away gratis or sold at cheap prices simply to obtain a footing. Sometimes the hair treated is of good quality and a satisfactory wave results. But more often, the patron is not so fortunate. More often, the results are unsatisfactory and she gives up the thought of having a second wave when the time comes.
With the new Nestle Circuline method, your hair is tested in advance to assure perfect results in the end, either by the Nestle Text-o-meter or by sample waves on the back of your head.

Mandel Brothers

Novelty silk gloves, 1.65

Fine Milanese silk, developed in new styles. Colors to harmonize with every costume. Finger tips re-enforced. First floor.

Mid-season sale—new silks for Easter

Youth dominates the mode in the Olympia Sportswear Shops

17.50

Two-tone jersey and washable silk crepe interpret spring sport styles in striking color combinations. Jauntily tailored — these swagger frocks are equally smart on fairway or shopping trip—campus or office.

They are unusual values at this price. Fourth floor.

The golf set sketched represents saving of one-half, 4.95

Brassie, midiron, mashie, putter—all in steel stay canvas bag with aluminum top. Fourth floor.

Arch-Aid shoes bring zest to spring activities

11.50

Patent leathers—calfskins—and satin—for daytime and evening wear.

They are smart—so very smart that you would never guess that they have the secret of shoe comfort! They are built on combination lasts, two widths narrower at the heel than through the ball, so that they support the arch perfectly, and impart a youthful buoyancy to the step. Fifth floor.

Fox scarfs: A smart note in costumes this spring

$40

Softly flattering and very smart, the fox neckpiece has become an integral part of spring costumes.

Natural red, pointed, or dyed Hudson Bay blue fox may be chosen in a large assortment. All the pelts are silky and well marked. A decided value at this price. Fifth floor.

"Famous for silks"—we just repeat it—our customers said it first many years ago and do today; for you will find here the loveliest silks of the new season. The prices? Well—assortment, quality and low price are the predominant trio in this pre-Easter sale.

Featuring a most remarkable offering of 12,000 yards 39-inch all-silk "suede" crepe, 1.78

Fifty shades suited for sports, lingerie, formal or informal use, in this firm, souple silk of brilliant sheen. A color for every occasion, a quality to please the most exacting, and a price that invites instant action.

54-inch printed chiffon and georgette, 1.98

Sheer, supple silks printed in border or all-over patterns. A wide choice in color and design, the 54-inch width permitting the assembling of a complete frock from only 2 to 2½ yards, the width making the length.

32-inch all-silk fast color "tub crepes," 1.95 and 2.45

A washable sport silk that comes in stripe, check, or plaid patterns, in shades suitable for frocks, pajamas, blouses, and men's shirts. Its firm weave and fast coloring will withstand many washings.

40-inch all-silk mellow canton crepe, 2.90

Extra weight silk, in black, white, pastel, sport and street shades. Only 1800 yards at this price.

40-inch all-silk satin crepe—washable, 1.98

Pure silk, pure dye, and washable glove finish, for high colors, medium and dark shades. Black and white included. Especially suited for lingerie and frocks as it preserves a firm luster and pliable texture after many washings.

36 and 40-inch black silk coatings, 3.95 yard

Soft and pliable silks in a weight especially adapted to the new spring coats.

The Superba cutting and fitting service will cut, pin, and fit any coat or dress for $3 and up from materials purchased here.

40-inch semi-rough crepe pongee, 1.95. All-silk and washable. Black, white, and a broad variety of favored shades.

Mannequins will promenade in dresses fashioned from silks in this sale.

"Famous for Silks"—Second floor.

Notably priced—54-inch lightweight all-wool flannel, of quality yarns, ideal for spring costumes, 1.85 yard

So soft, so lustrous—and exactly the right weight for your new ensemble, or the coat or frock you are planning for spring. It drapes beautifully, and is obtainable in such a variety of shades that you will find colors suitable for every occasion and garment.

White	Cedar	Golf red	Dark monkeyskin	Jungle green	Copenhagen
Gray	Wheat	Cadet blue	Light monkeyskin	Sistine blue	Black
Orchid	Delft blue	Old rose	Miami sand	Gooseberry	Ivory white
Nectar	Powder blue	March rose	Juniper green	Light navy blue	Second floor.

Fur-collared kashmir coats and trim tailleurs further promote the success of the strictly tailored outline

The coats, $85

Straight and undeviating is the line decreed by the new mode for frock and coat alike. Soft cashmere, that readily lends supple folds to tucks or pleats, comprises this entirely new and exclusive collection of coats.

At left—a model fashioned of jorella weave, body of the coat being tucked diagonally and a tuxedo of squirrel forming an unusual note.

Center—a model of kasha weave with tuckings is trimmed with the flat American broadtail (sheared dyed lamb) much in demand.

At right—a coat of soft kashmir has a deep shawl collar of monkey fur, again sponsored by Paris as most chic. Fourth floor.

Tailleurs, $50

Like the first harbinger of spring the tailleur reappears and meets an enthusiastic greeting, true tribute to its unfailing success. The newest suits combine a plain hip length jacket with striped or matching skirt as the model sketched.

In the Lady Joan Shop hats are youthful—head sizes large

15

And crochet viscas—perle viscas—novelty straws, felts and fabric combinations present an alluring choice—in all the lovely tints and tones favored by the smartly dressed for immediate wear.

Black, of course, is included in this chic collection.

All models developed in 23½-inch to 25-inch head sizes. Fifth floor.

Coolie coats of Japanese crepe—brightly printed

2.25

A new importation from the orient remarkably low priced

This new shipment of novel little coats is more colorful than ever. Bright colorings and striking figures or designs are printed with gay abandon on Japanese crepe. Suited for innumerable uses both in and out of the house. Third floor.

His Majesty surveys spring from his Lloyd loom woven carriage

24.95

Pullman style body of woven reed, corduroy lined and draft curtain. Adjustable hood and back, with reversible gear, wooden artillery wheels with balloon tires, and windshield.

In brown, caramel, gray, buff, and dark blue.

Stroller, 22.95

Large and roomy, with corduroy lining and windshield. Adjustable hood, back and foot rests. Artillery wood wheels with balloon tires. Blue, cafe, faun or gray. Tenth floor.

Pianos and Players.

USED PIANOS.

At prices that should sell them all in the next twenty-four hours. These are almost inconceivably low in price, and a trip to our factory office should well repay you. Remember we have many more in used uprights and players to be sold "as is" or repaired.

Some are ready now for delivery to your home. Others need to be polished, tuned, or regulated. We are glad to furnish an estimate on all necessary repairs and make them at the lowest possible charge.

Better look into these before buying elsewhere. It costs you nothing to inspect them, and the trip would be well worth your while.

Executives and Managers.

ADVERTISING
TYPOGRAPHER.

The first requisite for this position is the ability to sense the important sales element of an advertising story and cover them with terse, meaty headings; a knowledge of type usage from the standpoint of salesmanship is far more desirable than a pure mechanical familiarity with type faces and sizes.

The man we want has perhaps at some time worked on a similar assignment in a good sized agency. All replies will be treated in strict confidence. Address L F 425, Tribune.

SALES MANAGER,
thoroughly familiar with oil and grease industry, capable of securing, training, and building up a sales organization. Only thoroughly experienced in this line considered. Replies confidential.
The North American Fibre Products Co.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

ARE YOU THE MANAGER OF A RETAIL STORE?

One of the foremost chain institutions operating men's and women's apparel stores throughout the country is desirous of obtaining the services of several topnotch men who are thoroughly experienced in the retail business and know how to manage stores of big volume.

The men we seek are probably now employed and, having reached the limit of growth in their present connection, would appreciate the extraordinary opportunity this organization offers. This is an opportunity that seldom finds its way into a want ad, and the men who secure it will be above the average in ability and in record of performance. Reply in confidence and in detail. Address G P 573, Tribune.

A MANAGER.

CHICAGO'S BEST SELLING ORGANIZATION HAS A FEW MORE MEN WHO CAN SUCCESSFULLY DEVELOP AND MANAGE A LARGE CREW. THE MAN WE WANT HAS HAD EXPERIENCE IN SUBDIVISION WORK AND IS LOOKING FOR A REAL CONNECTION. THAT MEANS JUST MORE THAN A PLACE TO SELL. THE RIGHT SELECTED FELLA HAS A POSITION THAT SHOULD NET HIM BETWEEN $7,500 AND $10,000 YEARLY FROM THE START. IF YOU THINK YOU CAN QUALIFY SEE ME IMMEDIATELY.
ASK FOR MR. HOLMES.

A MASTER SPECIALTY SELLING PROPOSITION.

If you are a top notch Specialty Salesman, 35 to 45 years of age, I have a Master Specialty Selling proposition for you.

I can use two Specialty Salesmen who have demonstrated their ability. Will only consider those who are accustomed to earn $5,000 or better per year.

We are the leaders in our line—fifteen years as a national organization—and we renew eighty per cent of our accounts from year to year.

Salesman is assigned a territory of one or more states and he is given credit for all business coming from his territory.

Phone Superior 1966 for appointment. Ask for Mr. Grace, 155 E. Superior-st., Chicago.

A GENUINE SALESMAN

who has spent at least three years in a Michigan territory covering the smaller towns, who has been real enough to have gained the respect and confidence of his customers in that time, who has ambitions to provide the finer things for himself and family, and realizes that hard work is the only medium to do so, is offered the opportunity of a lifetime. He will be required to do no direct selling, but purely introductory work for which he will be well paid. Our offering is the finest of its kind in the United States; give full details as to territory covered, etc. For personal interview in strictest confidence, address postoffice box 188, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Salespeople.

A LOOP BANK.

About 6 months ago a loop bank opened a new department and advertised for five saleswomen. It was thought that a force of five would be able to cope with the apparent prospects. A few months ago it was necessary to advertise for five additional saleswomen. The sales force was then considered sufficiently large. The proposition, however, meets with such favor that it is necessary to have ten additional saleswomen of ability and personality, properly to handle the work. This is the last time this method of increasing the sales force will be employed. Inter

THE SECURING OF A LICENSE Or a Position Is Not All There Is to Beauty Culture

It is in qualifying for more than bread and butter. It is in being able to conduct your own business. To use exclusively our many money making features of our own creation. TO LEARN WHERE FAILURE IS UNKNOWN.

We invite you to our 3 o'clock talks by "Miss Chicago," winner of the 1926 beauty contest, who is now completing her training at this us. She will tell you why after her experience and investigations, she chose MOLER, the original and largest institution of its kind in the world, as you will see if you investigate.

Tune in on WCBW [Marigold Gardens] every Tuesday evening, 8:30 to 9, for our scholarship contest.

Call, write or phone for catalog and Miss Chicago's story.

The Cornelia Apartments
(Northwest cor. Cornelia and Sheridan-rd.)
6, 7, 8, AND 10 ROOMS
WITH 3 AND 5 BATHS.
$350 TO $775
The Cornelia apartments, which have recently been completed, are now open daily for inspection and our representative on the premises will be pleased to have you call at any time. The spaciousness of the rooms, the unobstructed view of the lake, and the finish and appointments of these apartments cannot be surpassed. An early selection will give you a better choice and enable you to select your own color scheme.
This is a COLLINS, MURPHY & JACKSON, INC., building, and their past success in apartments of similar type—THE BARRY—assures the prospective tenants of the type of high grade service they will receive.
We invite you to inspect the model furnished apartment which is one of the artistic achievements of WATSON & BOALER, interior decorators.

"AN APARTMENT BUILDING OF ARTISTIC MERIT."

On Your Sunday Stroll

through Lincoln Park visit the latest contribution to Chicago's fine apartment buildings. A furnished apartment may be seen.

2130 LINCOLN PARK WEST

100% Co-operative.

These apartments have the added attraction of being reasonable in cost. A sum of $187.57 a month pays the total requirements, including amortization, of a spacious 6 room, 3 bath apartment.

Separate elevators to each tier of apartments, no halls, electrical refrigeration, cedar closets, white ranges, electric ventilators, cellarettes, wall safes, and a host of similar features.

The cost of ownership is far below neighboring rentals. Our modern purchase plan is most economical and permits the purchase of an apartment with no greater expenditure than that necessary on a long term lease.

Acceptable business and social references required.

A representative at the building will be pleased to escort you on a tour of inspection. Phone at the building. Diversey 6244.

AQUITANIA

ANNOUNCES TO

those persons unacquainted in Chicago that they will find THE AQUITANIA represents the finest in fireproof apartment construction. The building is 15 stories high and is located right on the shores of Lake Michigan; no expense has been spared to make it ideal in every respect.

You will find rooms of unusual size, huge closets, beautiful interior finish and an unsurpassed view from the apartments.

The clientele is select; references are required; prices reasonable for what we offer.

Your inspection is invited for immediate or future occupancy.

ELECTRICITY, GAS, REFRIGERATION INCLUDED IN RENTAL. MAID SERVICE OPTIONAL.

3740 SHERIDAN-RD.

Two 16 story bldgs. of 6 and 7 rooms, 3 bath apts., 2 apts. on each floor; 100 car garage with sodded roof garden.

This is an unusual opportunity to purchase a co-operative apt. at a price based on the valuation of 1923.

Equities as low as $7,800 for 6 rms. and 3 baths and $11,450 for 7 rooms and 5 baths. With these apts. you get a proportionate share of the garage property.

This bldg. is the highest type of modern construction. The size of the rooms will exceed your expectations, and the floor plan is similar to that of a spacious house. These apts. are open today for inspection. Our agents will be on the premises.

SECOND MORTGAGES.

Adapting Mrs. Snyder's candy slogan, "I can't make all the candy in the world, so I only make the best, we might say:

We don't attempt to make all the second mortgages in Cook, Lake and Du Page counties, so we make what we make on the most liberal terms and at the lowest rates.

By the way, you know our commissions are 4%-7%-10% for 1-2-3 years, and our payments are by the month—as low as 2%, that is $20.00 and interest on a $1,000 loan.

We have unlimited funds for this purpose; we invite home owners to consider doing their second mortgage financing through us.

STUTZ Coupe, 1924 D. H. Series. Cost new $4,250. Has only been driven 6,749 miles. Thousands of satisfactory miles of service for only a fraction of its real worth. New tow-tone Biege finish, 6 wire wheels, 6 almost new tires, trunk, heater, shock absorbers, etc. $850

CHRYSLER Imperial Sedan, 5-pass. Original Tan finish. Excellent mechanically, spotless interior. 2 theaters, bumpers, snubbers. Pings winter front, etc. Cost new $2,450. Price $900

STUTZ Bearcat, D. H. Series, 1924. One of the best values we have ever been able to offer in this model. New Spanish Carmine finish, 6 wire wheels, bumpers, trunk, 6 tires, tire covers, etc. The low mileage it has received has left it in that desirable state of "motor limberness" that the mechanical expert so highly recommends $950

PAIGE Brougham, 5-pass. Cost over $3,000 new. Beautiful Green Duco finish, 5 almost brand new balloon tires, bumpers, trunk at rear, shock absorbers, disc wheels, heater, etc. Noiseless, powerful and smooth in operation. Worth $400 more than we ask $1,100

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE Roadster, 8 cyl., 4-pass. Rumble seat. Late model. Without question, the most attractive Wills in town. Finished in two-tone Ivory Cream and Green, presenting a picture impossible to describe. Has disc wheels, 4 wheel hydraulic brakes, balloon tires, Lorraine driving light, windfront, etc. Has had remarkable care and operates with the smoothness and quietness of a brand new car. Cost over $3,000 new $1,350

STUTZ Bearcat, D. H. Series, 1924. One of the best values we have ever been able to offer in this model. New Spanish Carmine finish: 6 wire wheels, bumpers, trunk, 6 tires, tire covers, etc. The low mileage it has received has left it in that desirable state of "motor limberness" that the mechanical expert so highly recommends $2,600

PEERLESS

Ask for a Copy of Our Used Car Bulletin.

PEERLESS 1925 4 PASS. COUPE. 8 CYLINDER. This type of Victoria Coupe was one of the most popular selling cars in the Peerless line of that year. This particular car is truly exceptional in its condition; it stands upon our floor with a light Robin's Egg Blue lacquered finish and it really looks and operates like a brand new automobile, yet this is the way the original owner turned in the car to us. This fact, coupled with a demonstration of the car, will readily convince any customer that they are buying a car which had received exceptional care and which is now in an exceptional condition. For this sale, $800 down, balance monthly.

JORDAN LATE MODEL 6 CYL. BROUGHAM, 4 DR. Fully reconditioned mechanically. Refinished beautiful apple green, with black running gear and top; tires excellent; $310 down, balance to suit.

PEERLESS '26 6-80 SEDAN, 5 PASS. Finished in dark blue duco; mohair interior; tires like brand new; this current model can be bought at a saving of $800; $450 down, balance monthly payments.

HUPMOBILE TOURING. Mechanical, coach and tires excellent; $275.

These and many other cars will be found listed in our Used Car Bulletin, which contains a complete description of every car in our stock together with prices. This bulletin will be mailed free to your home immediately upon receipt of request.

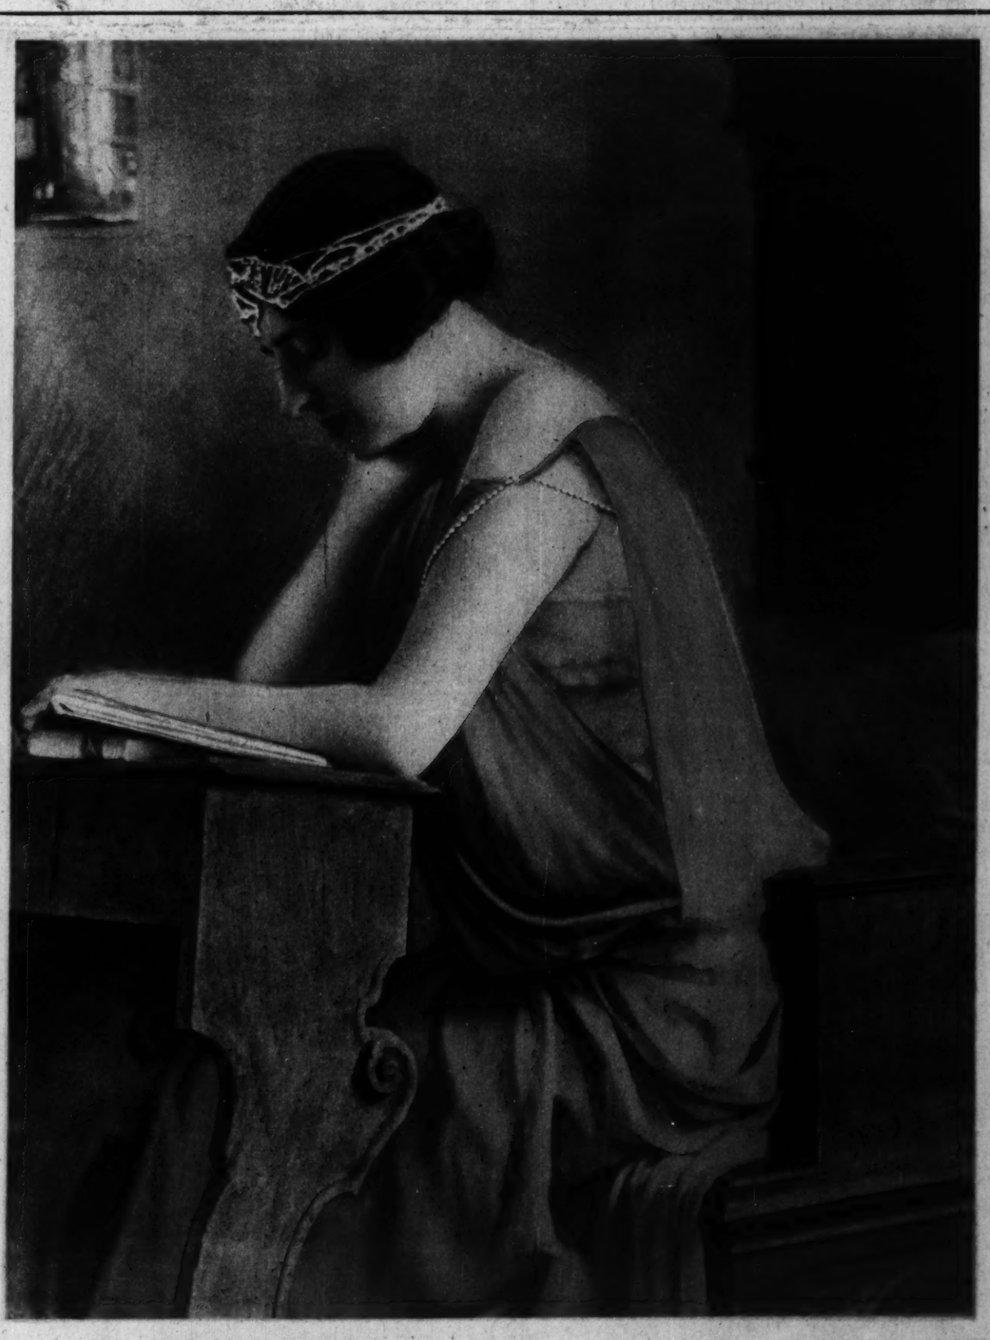
Beauties of Rome

PRINCESS YOLANDA OF SAVOY, oldest daughter of the king, is the wife of Count Calvi di Bergolo. She is 26 years old. Her country is proud that she married an Italian officer of good family, but not of royal blood, rather than wed one of the royal swains who sought her hand.

PRINCESS MARIA OF SAVOY is the king's youngest daughter. Born during the war in 1914, she will not make her debut until three years hence. She has been brought up in the simplest manner, under an English nurse. She speaks English fluently, and is perhaps the favorite daughter of the royal house.

PRINCESS JEANNE COLONNA is an American, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Elsworth Perkins of New York. She is the wife of Prince Fabrizio Colonna, scion of a famous Roman house. Princess Jeanne's husband has upset tradition by entering business.

THE BEAUTY OF ROME is Countess Piccolomini, we are told. She is an ardent Fascista, one of the first society women of Italy to be photographed in the Fascista black cap. Gifted with a great talent for decoration, she has converted an old farm on the outskirts of Rome into a marvelous home.



THE DUCHESS OF SERMONETA, Vittoria Colonna, is a lady-in-waiting to the Queen of Italy. Her family is one of the oldest in Rome, dating back to the year 900. Another Vittoria Colonna, whom the present duchess is said to resemble, was a noted poetess who was loved by Michelangelo.

(Above) NEW BEAUTY VIA modern dentist's help. Now smiles are given new and gleaming brilliance by proper film removal. Helene Goehbels and Evelyne Humes are told to get the special film-removing dentifrice, called Pepsodent, for daily use at home.

Now They've Discovered

Cloudy Teeth Are Not Naturally "Off Color"

—simply dulled with a dingy film that invites gum troubles

THAT many of the commoner tooth and gum troubles, and most cases of so-called "off-color" teeth, are due to a film that forms on teeth which ordinary brushing does not successfully combat, is today's dental opinion.

Send for 10-day Free Tube

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel this film—a slippery sort of coating. Film absorbs discolorations and thus makes teeth look dull and dingy. It breeds germs and bacteria and invites tartar, decay and pyorrhea. It is a menace to tooth and gum health.

Thus dental authorities now seriously urge that film be removed at least twice every day—in the morning and at bedtime. To do so, obtain Pepsodent—a special, film-removing dentifrice most dentists favor. It curdles the film, then removes it and polishes the teeth to high lustre in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay. It acts, too, to firm and harden the gums; thus meeting the requirements of modern findings.

Old-time dentifrices did not adequately fight film. That is why this modern protective way, as a twice a day habit, and at least twice a year calls on your dentist, are being so widely advised.

Accept this test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage Pepsodent into the gums to firm and harden them.

SMILES ARE DAZZLING WHITE when film is gone. Teeth sparkle like polished jewels. Gums firm to healthy coral tint. Thus this new scientific way of dental care becomes one of the greatest beauty treatments of the day, and, with its unique therapeutic and prophylactic qualities, a great aid in oral hygiene.*

Side curtains didn't keep the cough out

Icy cold weather is better for yeast than for a yeast salesman, especially when he is driving around in an open car. Mr. Anton Kaspar of 2358 S. St. Louis Ave., Chicago, will verify that. Last Winter he got a bad cough from hustling in and out of warm stores into icy weather outside. Then he tried REM, and, as he puts it, the cough just "seemed to disappear:"

"I'm driving an open car all day long," says Mr. Kaspar, "and though I keep the curtains closed, it doesn't keep out the draft. I'm in and out of warm stores and bakeries all the time, and it's a mighty sudden change to the cold outside.

"Last Winter I had such a tough cough it had me stumped for a while. Nothing did it any good till I finally got a bottle of REM from Mr. Kapoun, the druggist at 24th & Clifton Park Ave. It loosened the phlegm and the cough just seemed to disappear. I've used it several other times since then and so has my little boy. It's always worked just like that."

Few of us here escape the usual bad-weather coughs. But though we can't avoid them, we can relieve them. A bottle of REM has quickly quieted many a cough.

A special ingredient in REM—effective, harmless—is not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM spreads a soothing, healing film over the inflamed and irritated membranes.

No Opiates in REM. And it is pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM—the dark blue package with the large orange circle. And you can have your money back if you want it — but you won't!

Woman's Greatest Hygienic Handicap

As Your Daughter's Doctor Views It

Because of the utter security this new way provides, it is widely urged by physicians — ABSOLUTE SECURITY, plus freedom forever from the embarrassing problem of disposal

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND, Registered Nurse

SIXTY per cent of many of the commoner ailments of women, according to some medical authorities, are due to the use of unsanitary, makeshift ways in meeting woman's most distressing hygienic problem.

For that reason, this new way is widely urged today. Especially in the important days of adolescence. On medical advice, thousands thus started first to employ it. Then found, besides, protection, security and peace-of-mind unknown before. Modern mothers thus advise their daughters — for health's sake and immaculacy.

KOTEX—What it does

Unknown a few years ago, 8 in every 10 women in the better walks of life have discarded the insecure "sanitary pads" of yesterday and adopted Kotex.

Filled with Cellucotton wadding, the world's super-absorbent, Kotex absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture. It is 5 times as absorbent as the ordinary cotton pad.

It discards easily as tissue. No laundry—no embarrassment of disposal.

It also thoroughly deodorizes, and thus ends all fear of offending.

You obtain it at any drug or department store, without hesitancy, simply by saying "Kotex."

Only Kotex is "like" Kotex

See that you get the genuine Kotex. It is the only sanitary napkin embodying the super-absorbent Cellucotton wadding. It is the only napkin made by this company. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

You can obtain Kotex at better drug and department stores everywhere. Comes in sanitary sealed packages of 12 in two sizes, the Regular and Kotex-Super. Supplied also through vending cabinets in rest-rooms by West Disinfecting Co.

Kotex Company, 180 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

No laundry—discards as easily as a piece of tissue

① No laundry. As easy to dispose of as a piece of tissue—thus ending the trying problem of disposal.

Easy Disposal
and 2 other important factors

② Utter protection — Kotex absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture; 5 times that of cotton, and it deodorizes, thus assuring double protection.

③ Easy to buy anywhere. Many stores keep them ready-wrapped in plain paper — simply help yourself, pay the clerk, that is all.

Where you must reach the important Mouth Glands

ALL the charm of lovely teeth depends on the tiny glands at six hidden points inside your mouth.

Day and night they should produce healthy fluids to counteract food acids. But the mouth glands are not exercised by the easily-chewed foods we eat. That is why decay so soon begins.

To correct this there is an important ingredient in Pebeco. As you brush your teeth, you can taste the slightly salty tang that renews the youthful vigor of the mouth glands. Your whole mouth is bathed by refreshing fluids from the reawakened mouth glands.

Made by Pebeco, Inc. A Division of Lehn & Fink Products Company. Sole distributors, Lehn & Fink, Inc., Bloomfield, N. J.

At the taste of Pebeco's slightly salty main ingredient, the mouth glands waken.

JUST TWO CREAMS—fragrant, cool, delicate—to cleanse your skin and protect it. A Cold Cream, velvety smooth and fragrant as rose leaves, that thoroughly cleanses your tired, dusty skin with gentle touch. A Vanishing Cream, light as the mists of dawn, that protects your skin and gives it a delicate smoothness and finish.

The finest materials have been chosen and blended with greatest care in these Two Creams, so that together they make a perfect method of caring for your skin to keep it always fresh and smooth and unlined.

Women of beauty and distinction everywhere esteem them, find them delightful to use and effective in their action. This is the method they follow in caring for their skin with these Two Creams, made by Pond's:

Every night before retiring, and frequently during the day, apply Pond's Cold Cream generously to your skin. In a few minutes its fine oils penetrate the pores and lift out all dust and powder. Wipe off, and repeat. Finish with a dash of cold water.

After the bedtime cleansing, a little fresh cream left overnight keeps a dry skin supple and free from lines.

Pond's Vanishing Cream follows every daytime cleansing. It gives your skin a special delicate texture, holds your powder evenly and long, and protects it from the irritations of cold, wind and dust.

You, too, will find satisfaction in the improvement in your skin which comes from the daily use of these Two Creams, so highly esteemed by distinguished and beautiful women in all countries.

The GUESSER!

[NOTES FROM A GUESSER'S DIARY]

March 17—Ran over a dog last nite . . . couldn't see him . . . very unpleasant.

March 21—Moved over for someone to pass Thursday evening . . . stayed in a ditch three hours for my trouble.

March 26—I'm getting good. Took the door post out of the garage last night backing up. No way to see behind . . . the next car, I'll buy from a dealer with interest enough in me to furnish a driving light.

If night-driving doesn't get you in hot water, either you're lucky at guessing . . . or your car carries the one driving light equal to the test of present day traffic!

Not merely a driving light . . . but the only one that combines convenience, range of illumination and quality in keeping with the up-to-the-minute car.

Night driving is taken most seriously by the best drivers! Take a tip from chauffeurs . . . the more experienced ones who man the cars parked at prominent clubs like the Chicago Athletic.

Nine out of ten will point to Lorraine on their machines and tell you it's the only driving light that's precision built . . . that's built for a unique standard of performance.

Any driving light is better than none . . . but if you are proud of your car . . . if you'd as leave be remarked for your taste . . . then you will insist on Lorraine.

For motor car dealers who cater to buyers of discrimination, equip new cars with this driving light. Where a dealer does not display Lorraine on the cars in his show room, he is putting other considerations above your satisfaction.

(The mechanism of Lorraine costs three times, nearly four, as much as other lights of about the same price.)

Too many driving lights are only ornaments. Unfortunately, most of them can never be more. For the basic features that make a driving light practical belong exclusively to Lorraine.

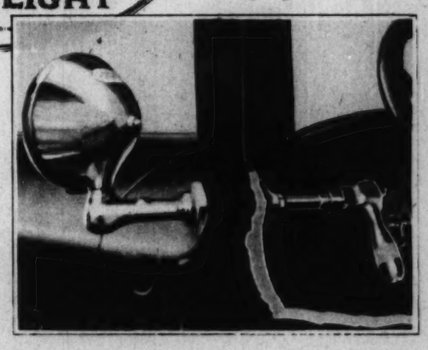
If you seek the bizarre, there are driving lights which give most excellent day-time effects. Gaudy eye catchers . . . dripping with fancy chains, knobs and other machinery.

Lorraine CONTROLLABLE DRIVING LIGHT PATENTED OTHER PATENTS PENDING

But if you want a driving light that blends with the personality of your car . . . built to outlast your car . . . designed and installed so that you may direct its compact beam as easily and naturally as you direct the vision of your own eyes . . . then Lorraine must be your choice.

Try to buy for the full retail price any Lorraine now in use. Try to get it for twice the price if its owner knew he could never get another.

There are tens of thousands of Lorraine owners who had the same chance you have to equip with a cheap driving light.



But there has always been but one light that finds house numbers no matter how obscure . . . anticipates curves whole seconds ahead . . . gives perfect illumination front, side, rear at any angle . . . manipulates with all the flexibility of a flash-light in your hand.

You don't have to be a guesser. It's not only an inconvenient role to play, but mighty unsafe!

Phone any of these Lorraine Stations without delay. Act now. Bring your car up-to-date. Give it, and you, the best chance to live out a natural life.

One Aim .. One Claim to CLEAN

To clean teeth and clean them perfectly—that is what Colgate's is made to do

THE Colgate idea of a dentifrice is the same that dentists have—something made to clean teeth.

Because Colgate's is made only to clean, it does that one thing superlatively well.

Modern mouth hygiene calls for a cleansing, washing action. Colgate's works on this principle. The moment it is brushed on your teeth, two things happen:

1. It expands into a sparkling foam. In this remarkable foam is calcium carbonate—a finely ground powder that safely scrubs off all harmful foreign matter, polishing each tooth to dazzling cleanness.

2. Then, in a detergent-washing wave, this foam sweeps through the entire mouth, washing away all impurities and leaving it cleansed. Thus, the very causes of tooth decay are removed.

If you think you need more than cleanness, if you fear disease of teeth or gums—better go to a dentist. Rely on a dentist to cure. Rely on Colgate's to clean.

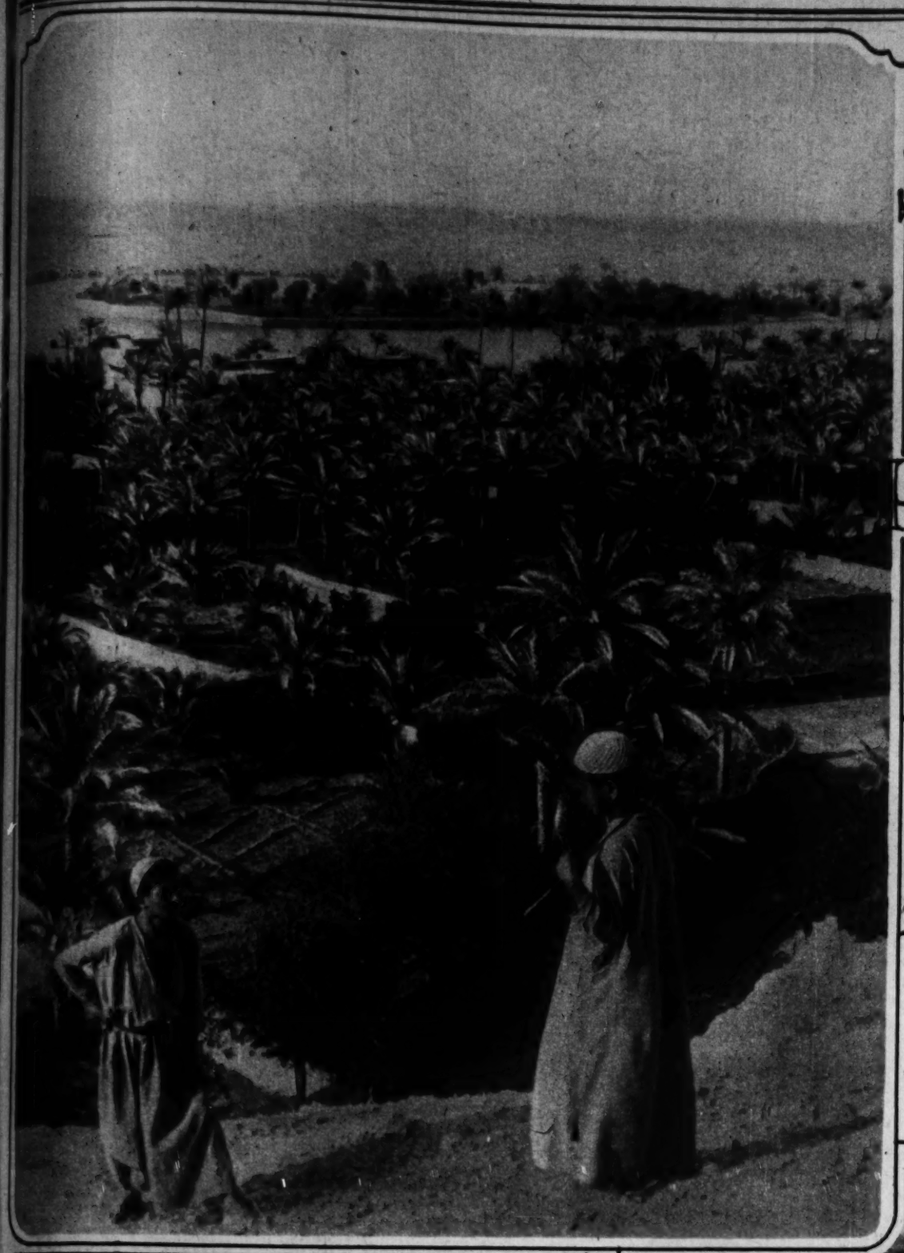
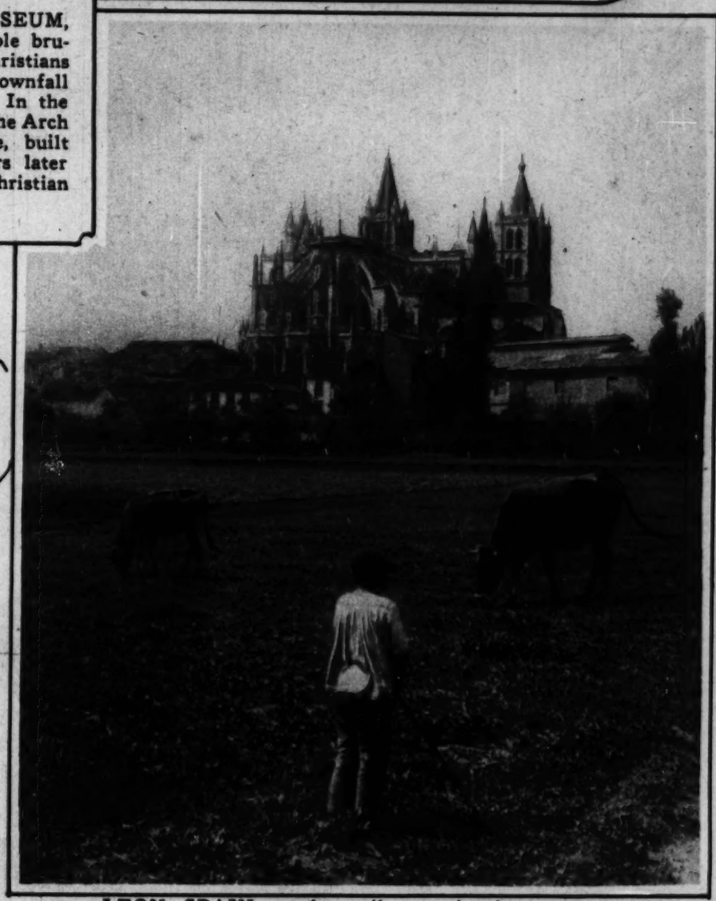
The STORY of MAN in PICTURES

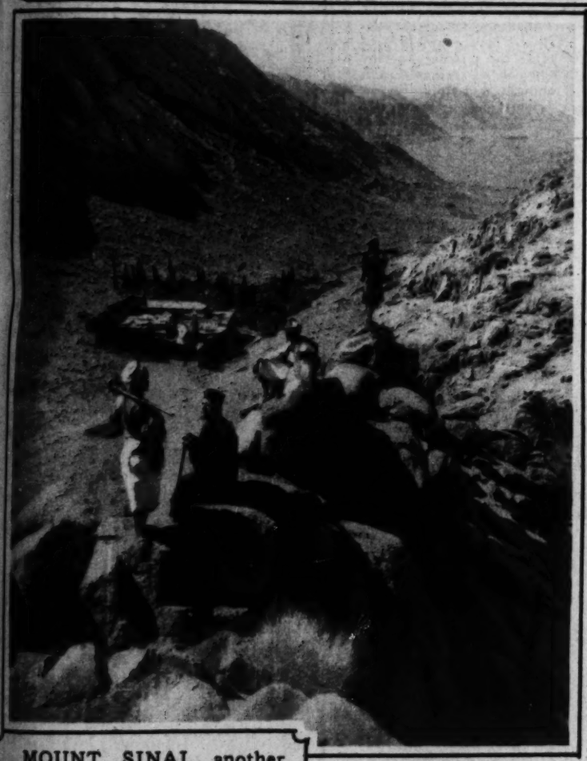


THE GARDEN OF EDEN in Mesopotamia, where, the Bible tells us, God planted a garden wherein he put the man whom he had formed.

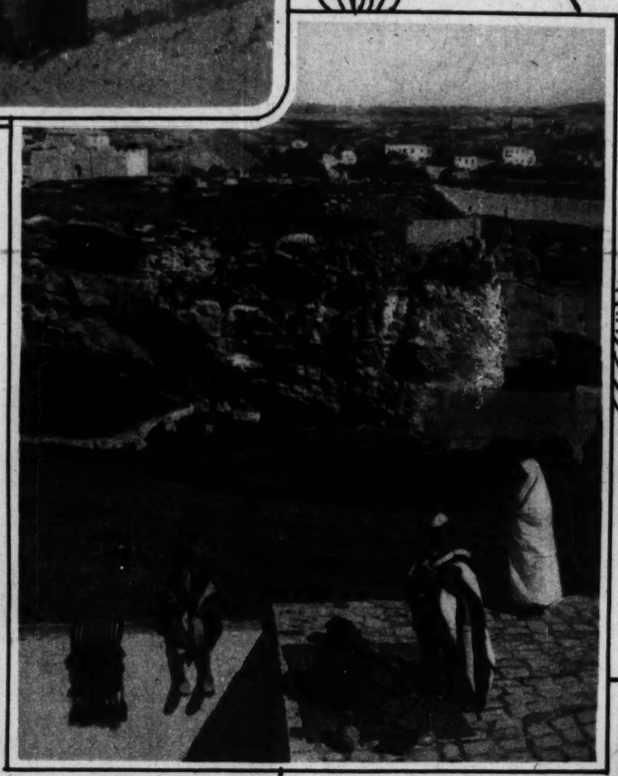
THE COLOSSEUM, scene of terrible brutalities to Christians following the downfall of Jerusalem. In the foreground is the Arch of Constantine, built about 200 years later by the first Christian emperor.



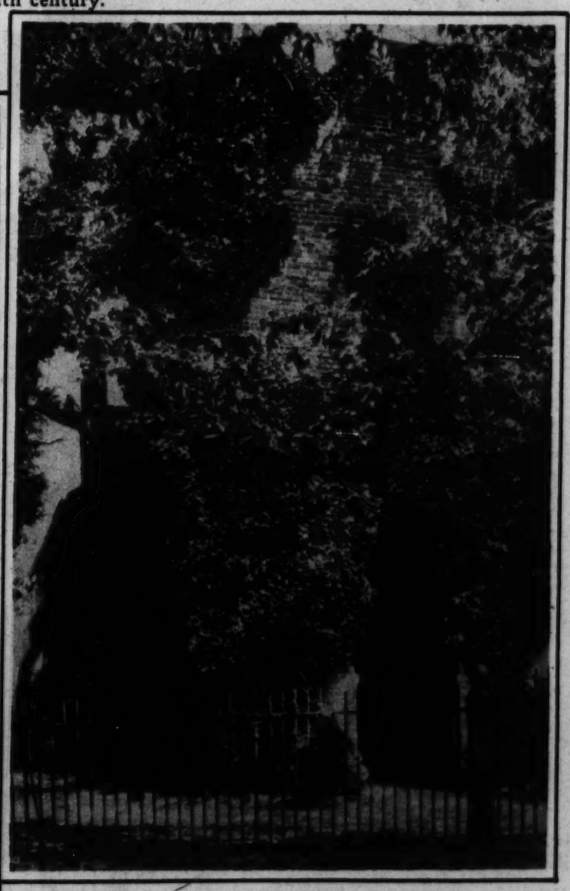
LEON, SPAIN, another milestone in the story of the world. Captured by the Gothic king, Leovigild, about 540 A. D., it was retaken by the Spaniards. The cathedral pictured here was started in 1199 and completed near the close of the fourteenth century.



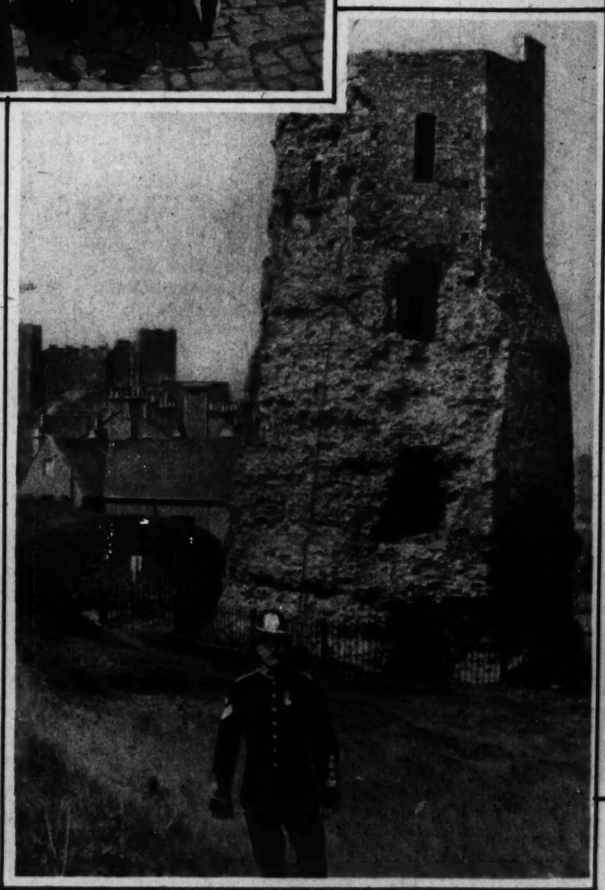
MOUNT SINAI, another milestone in man's journey. It was on this commanding spot that Moses received the Ten Commandments for the children of Israel. In the picture can be seen the monastery built by the monks under Justinian in 527 A. D.



HILL OF CALVARY—Recent discoveries indicate that this is the mount upon which Christ was crucified. It is situated outside the Damascus gate, north of Jerusalem.



AND NOW THE NEW WORLD—This vine-covered church tower and a few gravestones are the only visible remains of the first English settlement in America, founded at Jamestown, Va., in 1607.



ENGLAND BECOMES A PORT in man's journey. This old tower, built about the fourth century, is one of the landmarks left in Dover, recalling Roman occupancy of what is now the British Isles.

MODERN JERUSALEM—Mentioned as early as 1400 B. C., Jerusalem became, about 400 years later, the capital of the Hebrew kingdom. Destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, it was rebuilt by the Jews, only to be destroyed again by the Romans. The picture shows the Dome of Rock, marking the site of Solomon's altar.

HE MIGHT HAVE BEEN ENGLAND'S KING instead of a poorly paid farm hand, according to an English pastor, who claims unquestionable proof of his lineage. The man is Thomas W. Speaking of Waves

THE WAVES ACROSS THE SEA ARE EUGÈNE WAVES

That is—nine-tenths of them are—for London and Paris learned long ago that the Eugène technique alone achieves the perfect permanent. . . There are reasons, of course—very clear and logical reasons. . . . . .

—There's the Eugène Automatic Curler that permits the hair to be wound dry, smooth and perfectly flat, tightening it gently, without undue pulling and stretching.

—There's the patented Eugèneol Perforated Sachet which concentrates its myriad pressure-jets of clean, white steam, just where their persuasive power is needed.

—There's the Eugène Two-Sectional doubly-controlled Steamer, waving every length of hair precisely the right length of time. . . Scientific things to be sure, but highly important to you in their perfect results.

The Eugène Method is totally unlike the old methods that drench the hair with liquid chemicals, that wind it wet and bake it dry—often affecting its strength, its color and its true natural lustre.

The Eugène Method's dry winding and its steaming through the Eugèneol Perforated Sachet (illustrated) produce the graceful, undulating waves of the mode.

May we send you our booklet "The Eugène Method"?... It explains why the Eugène waver asks a higher price—and tells why his work is worth it. . . . . The names of nearby Eugène Wavers are included upon request.

"For three years I dragged along -half sick"

"DAILY HEADACHES—tiredness that I could not seem to throw off. Then a breaking out all over my body. I dragged along—with cathartics—until I was many pounds underweight.

"I had read often of the wonderful results others had obtained with Fleischmann's Yeast but for a long time I did not think of Yeast in connection with myself.

"Finally I decided to make the trial. It turned out to be very easy and simple. Today I am a strong robust man. My ailments have disappeared. I weigh 186 pounds of pure bone and muscle and feel a picture of health and happiness."

A. L. Dixon, Dallas, Texas

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST—a food, not a medicine—keeps the whole digestive and intestinal tract clean. The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake remove the poisons of chronic constipation, and restore the muscles of elimination to their normal strength. Your skin clears, your digestion becomes normal, your old listlessness vanishes. You are really well again.

Fleischmann's Yeast is the simple, natural way to counteract intestinal poisoning. Eat it regularly. You can get it at any grocer's. Buy two or three days' supply at a time and keep in a cool dry place. Start today to eat Fleischmann's Yeast.

"MY BUSINESS sometimes obliges me to undergo periods of intensive work without a proper amount of rest, exercise and fresh air . . . From my study of food chemistry I had, of course, become familiar with the fact that fresh Yeast has nutritive and therapeutic properties. But, curiously enough, it had never occurred to me to eat it myself until a physician suggested it at a time when I was much run down, and looking even more wretched than I felt. It proved so efficacious in correcting the extreme fatigue and nervousness brought on by loss of appetite that I have ever since taken it regularly when work began to make especially heavy draughts on my vitality. Through aiding the processes of digestion Yeast creates a healthy desire for food."

Sarah Field Splint, New York City.

"GIRLS AVOIDED ME because of the unsightly pimples on my face and I was subjected to many embarrassing remarks. It was with great difficulty that I could shave. All this unpleasantness contributed to making me feel very grouchy and unhappy. In good faith I tried many suggested remedies but with no results. I was urged finally to try Fleischmann's Yeast by an old friend who had used it long before it became a national remedy. Accordingly, I purchased a cake the following day. The next day I bought two cakes. After three months I was entirely free of skin trouble just by eating two cakes of Yeast each day. Now my face is no longer disagreeably oily. My skin is clear and smooth and easy to shave. And I have a much better disposition."

Wesley J. Pierce, Richmond, Va.

This Easy, Natural Way to have your rightful, vigorous health

Eat three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly every day, one cake before each meal. Eat it on crackers, in fruit juice, water or milk, or just plain in small pieces. For constipation physicians say it is best to dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and before going to bed. (Be sure that a regular time for evacuation is made habitual.) Dangerous cathartics will gradually become unnecessary. Start eating Fleischmann's Yeast today.

VISITORS' HOURS

by CARL CLAUSEN

Youth seeking escape from the leaden sordidness of the East river via cheap dance halls.

ILLUSTRATED BY LORENZ BREDEWEG.

The Story of a Woman Who, Cheated by Fate, Fought On and Won a Recompense.

AWAY downtown, below old Washington square, and not far from Greenwich village, that multi-colored side show conducted for the benefit of visitors from Philadelphia and points south and west, and which no true New Yorker attends except at the point of a pistol, stands an old hospital.

The elevated roars by its second and third story windows. Beneath it the subway trains rumble and grind their couplings. A crosstown surface car rushes by its smoke begrimed porte cochere, with clanging bell and whining brakes. Hordes of taxis hurrying from the Hudson docks to the palatial uptown hotels with important fares hoot and screech defiant challenges to the claxon howls of coal trucks and furniture vans.

Suddenly a shrill falsetto note stabs the saturnalia of noise—the traffic cop's whistle, before which the demoniacal claxon becomes as the bleat of a lamb, and at which the largest ten ton truck, full of excavation sand, lies down and purrs like a kitten. For one brief moment there is silence, not a peaceful cessation of sound but an ominous pause, as in the death battle of clamorous prehistoric monsters. Then the stream of vehicles moves the other way, between two walls of suspended traffic, like hurrying Israelites between the stemmed waters of the Red sea.

One wonders if the site of the hospital had been picked by design to inflict punishment upon the patients for their transgressions against the code, for the hospital is of the variety known as maternity, which in this case was a polite way of admitting that the state of motherhood was attainable without the aid of Christian Science, immaculation, or benefit of clergy. It had been endowed by an old maid, the last of a long line of porcine Knickerbockers, whose great-great-grandfather had run a cauliflower plantation within a stone's throw of where the Woolworth building now stands, a charming lady with a cabbage patch full of skyscrapers, a wart on the left side of her Flemish nose, and a burning desire to perpetuate her name, since spinsterhood had denied her perpetuation of personality.

The architecture of the hospital is a combination of Mansard and the early Renaissance, and the material used is said to be red brick. Indeed, there lives an aged bricklayer in Weehawken, N. J., who claims to have laid bricks there during its construction, but the soot of half a million soft coal furnaces has given it an inch thick coat of black, as if it had gone into mourning for the sins of its patients.

Within it is highly sanitary. White woodwork, white uniformed nurses, white walls and ceilings, blue and white linoleum on the floor, white cots, and white faces against the white pillow-slips. Serious, white garbed internes and an inaccessible, highly starched individual known officially as Miss Crabtree, the matron, and unofficially as Crabby.

Miss Crabtree was an institution within an institution. She had seen interne after interne abandon medicine for the light and lucrative occupation of removing appendixes at from five hundred to five thousand per removal, while she herself stuck to the ship and superintended the bringing into the world of future material. She had seen the board of trustees change from patriarchal whiskered gentlemen with van in front of their names to smooth faced business men with vits at the end. She had been with the hospital in the capacity of nurse, assistant matron, and chief matron beyond the memory of the oldest employé. Still she was hardly ancient; forty-odd, perhaps, certainly no more. She was extremely thin and angular. Her shoulders, between which her head with its great mass of yellowish hair seemed to rest precariously upon the thin, scrawny neck, were sharp and square. Her complexion was sallow, except at the point of her somewhat prominent cheekbones, where there were two faintly pink spots the size of a silver quarter, as if the bones had become highly incensed by their futile efforts at breaking through the tightly drawn skin. Her eyes, which were of a clear, penetrating gray, might in any other face have been considered handsome. In Miss Crabtree's they were merely clear and penetrating.

She was a silent, efficient woman, as devoid of sentiment as a cafeteria cashier and as disillusioned as a Manhattan taxicab driver. She despised her own sex for the weaklings they were, and hated men with hatred that was abysmal, terrible. She was a martinet. The board of trustees called her a fine disciplinarian; the nurses, a thirty minute egg.

She had a flat in the Bronx with a taupe rug, overstuffed set, stand lamp, "Dawn" by Maxfield Parrish, built-in refrigerator, and Dr. Cheviot's six foot shelf of tabloid brain exhilarator. Between this flat and her small, spotless office at the hospital she commuted morning and night. With the exception of her short summer vacation, spent on the north of Long Island, she never went anywhere. She had no friends. She was a cold, austere woman who seemed to have distilled from the suffering of the abandoned and betrayed a cup bitterer a thousand fold than theirs.

It happened that there was brought to this hospital a small, terrified bit of youth from the east side tenements near the Delancy street bridge, a golden haired slip of a girl with cornflower blue eyes and the bloom of the Hungarian uplands in her cheeks.

It was the same old story of youth seeking escape from the leaden sordidness of the East river via cheap dance halls, with the same inevitable result. The boy—he was hardly a man—a youth with more time than was good for him, had fled in fear of the consequences.

MISS CRABTREE, coming into the ward the day after the baby, a boy, was born, looked at the newcomer and, in that brief moment, conceived a deep and terrible hatred of this latest addition to the frailer members of her frail sex. As the matron looked down at the girl her mind went back over the decades, and there was mirrored upon her brain a picture of herself lying thus, in this very ward, twenty-five years ago. She had been like this girl, young and desirable, and her baby had been a boy, too. They had advised her to give it up. She had agreed, too dazed to protest. A home had been found for it, a good home, they told her. The people who had adopted him and whose name she must never know, in fairness to them and to the child, were a middle aged, childless couple in comfortable circumstances. They were going to call the boy James, after his adopted father, she was told.

Upon the advice of the hospital authorities she had taken up training there. For weeks and months she had gone about her—regeneration, they called it—dazedly, like a sleep walker, with the name James—Jim, ringing in her ears out of a great emptiness. Then she had pulled herself up with a start, and had set her face, resolutely and doggedly, for the immolation.

She had gone on wearily at first, then sternly and with unswerving purpose until today she held in the hollow of her thin hand the power of an emperor; and now, as she looked down upon the face of this girl so like what she herself had been, that power seemed a pitifully futile thing beside youth and motherhood. She knew herself at that moment to be thrice abandoned, and she hated the girl for the memories she had evoked.

She noted from the card hanging on the foot of the bed that the girl's first name was Ann. Her last name was unpronounceable. Miss Crabtree noted, also, the frightened look in the cornflower blue eyes when the nurse took the baby from the girl and returned it to the nursery. The mother's eyes followed the nurse hungrily until she passed out of sight through the door at the end of the ward.

Miss Crabtree walked back to her office and looked up the patient's history and antecedents. It was typical—almost stereotyped. The daughter of immigant parents, the mother a janitress working early and late, and the father a night watchman on the docks. The girl, a department store worker with one of the cheaper retail firms that infest old Fourteenth street, west of Union square.

Miss Crabtree returned the card to the file with a stealthy, catlike movement of her bony hand. It lay within her power to make this girl suffer as she herself had suffered. Arising, she walked down to the nursery and looked at the child. She asked the nurse in charge a few sharp questions, after which she called a telephone number in Brooklyn.

"This is Miss Crabtree speaking," she said in reply to the voice that answered the operator's ring. "I think we have a child that'll suit you, Mrs. Amberley. Can you and your husband come down tomorrow afternoon at, say, three o'clock?"

"Yes, Miss Crabtree."

"Very well, Mrs. Amberley, I shall expect you at three, then," she replied, and rang off.

Middle aged worthy couples on the quest of that which nature in a moment of grim sport has denied them and lavished upon the unworthy Anns of the world are legion, and the Amberleys were almost fictionally true to type.

Mrs. Amberley was a large, comfortable looking woman in rustling black silk, through the folds of which her ample form seemed to spill, wheat sack fashion, as she sat on her chair, hands folded, and listened to Miss Crabtree extolling the virtues of the infant. Mr. Amberley, seated a little behind his wife, was small, nervous, and enormously ill at ease, as if realizing that this visit was an indictment of his palpably deficient virility. A fringe of sparse, wispy hair encircled his temples, a pair of fawn colored congress gaiters his ankles, and his thin, bloodless hands clutched the head of a silver mounted Malacca cane, like a mariner's clutching a half submerged spar.

The three of them adjourned to the nursery, Mr. Amberley trotting behind the two women as if led to slaughter by some invisible cord. He exhibited a tentative interest in the infant by remarking apologetically that it seemed unusually red of complexion, and suggesting that some hidden strain of Indian blood might be coursing, unsuspected, in its veins. Miss Crabtree and Mrs. Amberley exchanged pitying glances at this exhibition of male ignorance, and the matron explained, curtly, that such complexion was universal in infants of three days. At this information Mr. Amberley lapsed into embarrassed silence, while Miss Crabtree extolled the physical perfections of Ann's illicit contribution to Manhattan's seven million.

The Amberleys left, and Miss Crabtree repaired to the ward and informed Ann in her crisp, businesslike voice that, pending certain legal formali-

MONDAY MAGIC

It is a wonder that any washing machine has been able to wash clothes without this amazing new feature—the Bakelite Impeller.

Now it is clear why never before has this wash-day magic been possible.

Anybody can understand.

The more water motion produced the better and faster clothes are cleaned.

Now science, with the Bakelite Impeller, has produced the greatest water motion ever seen in any machine—bar none!

There's magic . . . . Monday magic in the Meadows.

Three to seven minutes to wash a great big oversized tubful of clothes! Washed superbly and completely clean!

Yet as gently as you could do it by hand. For the smooth, glossy Bakelite Impeller protects clothes . . . . to the filmiest thing. And watch this wonder-washer work its way through a basket of overalls, rag rugs and grimy work shirts.

Try to find something it won't launder completely without a nickel's worth of help from you on the scrubbing board.

Ask any washing machine salesman to demonstrate his machine alongside the Meadows. You'll be amazed at the lack of volunteers.

The new Meadows with the Bakelite Impeller and the biggest tub capacity on record simply performs magic . . . not only the finest laundering but the quickest.

THE OTHER DAY

Ship Concert for Newlyweds

By Donald Ogden Stewart

READERS of these weekly articles will remember that when we last saw Mr. Pennypacker he was under my table at lunch. For readers who don't remember, however, and for the other 117,850,493 people in the United States (1920 census) I must explain that Mr. Pennypacker is not a dog or chipmunk and this is not a Bedtime Story. Mr. Pennypacker is a young man with steel rimmed spectacles and the reason he was under my table at lunch was that he was trying to escape from an older man named Arnold whom he found to be his roommate on board ship. These two men are apt to figure pretty consistently in these articles from now on, in more or less of an allegorical manner—Pennypacker representing, as he does, the spirit of a young man with steel rimmed spectacles, whereas Arnold typifies the older and, perhaps, fatter powers of Govern. The other characters in the allegory are the Humane—the Woman and the Man (my wife and myself) are on our honeymoon and it is the second evening on board ship and we are sitting in our deck chairs wondering whether or not we ought to go in and listen to the concert.

The Woman (my wife)—I wonder whether or not we ought to go in and listen to the concert?

The Man (myself)—No.

At this point Mr. Arnold comes along the deck and stops at our chairs. He is dressed in a Tuxedo, with a gray cap, and he is smoking a cigar.

"Toot, toot," says Mr. Arnold. "All aboard for the concert."

I smile—a little feebly.

"Special concert for newlyweds," calls Mr. Arnold. "All aboard!"

My wife smiles feebly.

"Come on," urges Mr. Arnold.

There is a moment of hesitation. I look at my wife and she looks at me.

"I think we'll just sit here for awhile," she says.

"What's the matter?" asks Mr. Arnold.

There doesn't seem to be any answer to that.

"Come along—come along—come along," says Mr. Arnold, cheerily. "Newlyweds ought to hear lots of music."

My wife gets slowly up and I follow. Mr. Arnold takes us both by the arm in a friendly manner and we go along the deck.

"Tomorrow night," confides Mr. Arnold, "I'm getting up a dance. Lots of fun."

As we near the front of the boat we hear music, and as we enter the Social Hall the concert is in full swing. The room itself, however, is quite empty, with the exception of two or three old ladies in one corner and a single, somewhat disconsolate figure on a long couch.

"Mr. Pennypacker," says my wife.

"A fine young man," remarks Mr. Arnold. "He and I share the same stateroom."

Mr. Pennypacker rises as we approach.

"Enjoying it?" asks Mr. Arnold.

Mr. Pennypacker smiles grimly. We sit down and Mr. Arnold looks at his program.

"What number is this?" he asks.

Mr. Pennypacker does not know. Mr. Arnold gets up and goes on tiptoe over to the door and asks a question of the steward. Then he tiptoes back.

"Number two," he reports. "'Dance of the Cuckoos,' by Farley."

There doesn't seem to be anything you can answer to that, either.

At the conclusion of the number he applauds very loudly. Then he looks around.

"Special concert for newlyweds," calls Mr. Arnold.

"There ought to be more people to hear this," he says. "Will you excuse me a minute?"

He gets up and goes out.

"Can't we do something?" whispers Mr. Pennypacker, desperately.

"Did he bring you, too?" I ask.

Mr. Pennypacker nods.

"Three times," he replies. "I almost got away once."

"Is it a long concert?" asks my wife.

"Six numbers," replies Mr. Pennpacker, "including the 'Miserere' from 'Il Trovatore.'"

"Can't we hide?" I ask.

"I tried that," replied Mr. Pennypacker, mournfully. "He found me in one of the lifeboats. Lifeboat Number 12," he adds.

"Our lifeboat is Number 4," remarks my wife.

"This was Number 12," says Mr. Pennypacker.

We three deliberate gloomily.

"We might set fire to the ship," I suggest. "That would distract attention and we could steal the violin or something."

"I won't let you do that," says my wife, determinedly.

"I'll do it," offers Mr. Pennypacker. "I have no wife or little ones. Please!"

"You have a mother," I argue.

Mr. Pennypacker smiles bravely.

"She'd be very proud of me," he says. "She was related to Barbara Frietchie on her grandmother's side. You remember Barbara Frietchie?"

"I've read the poem," I say. "It begins 'Old Ironsides at anchor lay'——"

Mr. Pennypacker shakes his head.

"That's another poem," he says. "That's a poem about Old Ironsides. This one begins, 'Up from the meadows rich with corn——'"

"O, yes," I reply.

"It isn't a very good poem," says Mr. Pennypacker, regretfully.

"That's nothing against your mother," puts in my wife instantly.

"That's mighty nice of you to say that," is Mr. Pennypacker's reply.

"I CAN'T let you do this thing," insists my wife.

"Why not," demands Mr. Pennypacker. "We must get out of this terrible situation, no matter what the cost. I'm young——"

"I'm not so darned old," I interrupt, a little resentfully.

"I know it," says Mr. Pennypacker, apologetically.

"Nevertheless," says my wife, "I can't let either of you do this for us. Think of your sweetheart——"

It is Mr. Pennypacker's turn to blush.

"Give her this," he says, "after I'm gone."

He begins searching through his pockets. My wife becomes instantly interrogative.

"O, how nice," she says. "You must love her very much?"

Mr. Pennypacker interrupts his search to reply.

"I do," he says, slightly apologetic. "I hope you don't mind my saying so."

"And she loves you?" asks the Grand Inquisitor.

"I—why, yes—I think so," admits Mr. Pennypacker, putting his hand for the eighth time in his inside coat pocket.

"O, isn't that wonderful!" exclaims my wife. "What's her name—I'm sure I know her."

"It's Mrs. Dobbs," replies Mr. Pennypacker. "I don't think you know her."

My wife's eyes glow with excitement.

"And Mr. Dobbs——?"

"He's terrible," replies Mr. Pennypacker.

"And he won't divorce her?"

Mr. Pennypacker shakes his head.

"O, you poor fellow," says my wife. "You must tell me all about it."

At that moment we hear a well known voice and we look up. There is Mr. Arnold and he is accompanied by four people. We are introduced as the "Newlyweds" to Mr. and Mrs. Ivison, Mrs. Bunten, Miss Bird, and Mr. Krag.

"Now you just all sit down," says Mr. Arnold happily, "and get together. Mr. and Mrs. Ivison are from Seattle, Washington—Mrs. Bunten sings—Miss Bird is from Vassar——"

"Wellesley," corrects Miss Bird.

"Wellesley," says Mr. Arnold with a forgiving smile, "and what did you say your name was?"

"Krag," replies the gentleman addressed.

"O, yes," says Mr. Arnold. "Mr. Krag and I sit at the same table."

There is a moment of embarrassed silence.

"Now you all sit here," repeats Mr. Arnold, "and I'll go out and get a few more. It's a wonderful concert—the next number is number three—I'll get programs for everybody, too."

Mr. Arnold hustles away and we sit there. Finally Mr. Krag speaks.

"He's very energetic, isn't he?"

"What's his name?" asks Mr. Ivison.

"Arnold," replies Mr. Krag.

"He takes such an interest in everything," remarks Mrs. Bunten.

"Sh-h!" cautions Mrs. Ivison. "Here he comes."

Mr. Arnold returns with Miss Paisley and Mrs. Martin.

"Miss Paisley and Mrs. Martin are Dixie girls," he explains.

"Atlanta, Jawja," dixies Mrs. Martin.

"O, indeed!" says Mrs. Ivison.

Suddenly the music starts, with a very fast and nerve racking bit of fiddling on the part of the violinist.

"Number three," explains Mr. Arnold in a whisper. "'Gypsy Lament.'"

"He found me in one of the lifeboats."

"O, indeed," says Mrs. Ivison.

Unexpectedly Mr. Pennypacker leans over to Mr. Arnold. His face is tense and his jaw firm.

"I'm going out for a minute," he whispers.

Mr. Arnold frowns and then smiles understandingly.

"And have you got a match?" asks Mr. Pennypacker desperately.

I LOOK at my wife. She looks at Mr. Pennypacker.

Mr. Arnold feels in his pocket and hands Mr. Pennypacker a box. Mr. Pennypacker starts to leave.

"I'll just go with you," says Mr. Krag.

"So will I," says Mr. Ivison.

They tiptoe apologetically out.

Number four on the program is the "Il Trovatore" selection. Number five is "Echoes of the Sunny South." Number six is "The Storm" from "William Tell."

When we finally reach the smoking room it is a quarter after ten. Mr. Krag and Mr. Ivison are sitting in the corner, very drunk and very happy.

"Hello!" cries Mr. Ivison. "How was the concert?"

"Where's Pennypacker?" I ask.

"He just left," they reply. "He suddenly remembered he had to do something."

"Thanks," I reply.

I find Pennypacker as he is hurrying downstairs.

"O, gee!" he says; "I'm sorry. Is it too late?"

"Yes," I reply, "but that's all right."

At that moment Mr. Arnold sees us from above.

"Hello, there," he calls to the young man. "You missed it."

"Yes—I know it," answers Pennypacker.

"Well, don't forget the dance tomorrow night," cries back the other. "Eight-thirty sharp."

We answer, but Mr. Arnold does not hear us. That, perhaps, is just as well.

VISITORS' HOURS

By Carl Clausen

ion, a home had been found for her child. The effect of this information was startling. Ann, the Hungarian, rose on her elbow, her vivid blue eyes flashing.

"You dare take him away from me!" she stormed. "I'll burn this joint to the ground, d'you hear? He's all I got out of—this, and I'm going to keep him. Adopt him out! Say, how d'you get that way? Ain't I his mother?"

Miss Crabtree backed away, discreetly, from the flashing eyes.

"You call yourself a woman, you old dried up fool," the girl went on. "You bring him back to me this instant or I'll get up and fetch him myself."

Miss Crabtree fled the ward. The two pink spots on her cheeks glowed a dull salmon red. The attendant brought the child to its mother, and thus restored peace to the ward. Ann, baring her young white breast to the tiny lips, glared belligerently about the ward, a young tigress with a lone cub.

In her office Miss Crabtree sat, staring straight in front of her. In the matron's gray, penetrating eye lay a look of cold, deadly fury, which gradually was superseded by another, that of a woman who has sold her birthright for a mess—a terrible mess—of pottage.

It is rarely that men in unofficial capacity stray within the highly sanitary precincts of this hospital, but it does happen occasionally. They are usually black browed fathers and brothers come to wring confessions from unwilling lips, with scowls and approaches, and who depart mumbling vengeance. But once in a while memories of soft arms, warm lips, a touch of pity, or perhaps some vague notion of responsibility brings the other sort there.

It brought one of these now, a dark eyed youth who, after cruising back and forth before the smoke stained porte cochere for half an hour to summon courage, plunged through the revolving door, and presented himself, cap in hand, before the information desk. Blushing to the ears, he asked for the girl with the unpronounceable name.

The lady at the information desk pressed a button that rang a peremptory bell somewhere. The youth shuffled his feet, tugged at his cap, looked at the ceiling, then at his brown oxfords, stuck his hands in his pockets, pulled them out again, pursed his lips, and tried to whistle, and was then rescued by a white garbed minion who answered the peremptory bell.

He was led up a wide flight of stairs and into a large room, following, doglike, on the heels of the guide, and running the gantlet of feminine eyes that stared at him curiously, disdainfully, hopefully, each in their own way, from the double row of white beds.

Before one of the farthest cots his guide left him. The boy stood, abashed, before the girl with the unpronounceable name. He twirled his cap, shifted himself from one foot to the other, grinned sheepishly, and said, "'Lo, Ann. How's tricks?"

"Not so worse," she replied.

THEY looked at each other in silence, these two. They were too young to speculate upon the mysteries of Nature, who had used their youth to betray them. They only knew that something had come between them and their love, something more important than love itself.

"Don't you want to see 'im?" the girl finally asked, as she drew the covers aside.

"Surest thing," the boy replied valiantly. He approached on tiptoe, as if he were carrying something fragile, and he extended a not overclean digit, with which he touched the infant's wrinkled forehead gingerly.

"Gosh, ain't he small!" he said.

"He's no such thing," Ann replied indignantly. "He weighs nine pounds. Get yourself a chair an' sit down. He ain't gonna bite you." She produced a question. "Does your folks know you come to see me?"

He shook his head.

"The old man's ravin' about it yet. I hatter sneak off, an' I ain't been home for four days." He glanced at her sidewise. "I was wonderin'—the boss said he'd let me have my job back again, an'—well, I've been kinda looking around for a place." He paused, embarrassedly. "I thought maybe you'd like to get married—or something," he added, vaguely.

The girl did not reply at once. He looked down at her fearfully. She was struggling to keep tears out of her blue eyes. Manlike, he misconstrued her silence.

"Don't you like me enough to marry me, kid?" he asked, miserably. "Fred King said he'd lend me twenty-five bucks, and he'll let us pay it back to him by the week."

The girl put forth a small, dainty hand and drew his face close.

"Like you?" she whispered. "I love you, I love you."

He remarked that it seemed unusually red.

At that moment Miss Crabtree entered with a sheaf of reports in her hand.

"Visitors' hours are over," she announced crisply as she walked up the aisle between the cots like a general reviewing his troops. She glanced at the youth, who had arisen and who stood, hanging his head diffidently, at her approach. She prepared to give him her best vitriolic look. "Visitors' hours——" That was as far as she got. She paused, took a step forward, then brought herself up with a start. The sheaf of papers fluttered from her hand and dropped to the floor.

The youth retrieved them and handed them back with an awkward bow. As her thin hand closed about them convulsively her gray eyes moved over his face, and the mantle of years seemed to drop from her thin shoulders. She traced his features, hungrily, one by one. There was no mistaking them. The soft brown eyes, the wide forehead, the black, unruly hair that never would stay put, the laughing lips, and the bold sweep of his chin. It was as if her lover had stepped, phoenixlike, out of the ashes of the past.

She swayed forward and caught at the footboard of the bed for support. All the pent up emotions of her starved life clamored for articulation. Love and tragedy, joy and terror clutched at her thin breast in breathless succession. She stared at the lad's face as through a mist, and, as if from a long distance, heard the voice of the girl saying in a low tone, "Better beat it, Jimmie, before she eats you alive."

MISS CRABTREE turned slowly, and walked down the aisle.

"Visitors' hours are—over," she repeated, in a dry, hollow voice, as she stumbled out of the ward.

It was nearly dusk when she entered the nursery an hour later and sent the attendant away on an errand. When the woman was gone Miss Crabtree crossed to the crib which bore the tag of the girl with the unpronounceable name. She lifted the tiny occupant in her thin arms, and carried it to the window, searching each tiny feature, hungrily.

Before the window she dropped on her knees, hugging the child to her flat, bony breast. One little hand stole forth and caught a wisp of her dull, straw colored hair.

"Master, Master," she whispered, "can you forgive?"

Mr. Warren, the hospital's legal adviser, leaned back in his swivel chair and regarded his visitor thoughtfully.

"Certainly, Miss Crabtree—it can be done quite easily."

Under his quiet scrutiny the two pink spots on the matron's cheeks deepened perceptibly, so he dropped his eyes and tapped the desk, waiting for her to go on. Miss Crabtree took from her purse a certified check for one thousand dollars, which she laid upon the desk.

Arising, she said: "You understand, of course, that the—young couple are not under any circumstances to know wherefrom this money comes to furnish their home. You are to keep me advised about their—progress from time to time."

Mr. Warren nodded. He knew something of Miss Crabtree's history. The two had grown old in service together. He held out his hand in parting.

"The world would be a better place if there were more women like you, Miss Crabtree," he said.

"The world would not be at all if they were—like me," she replied.

THE ROMANCE OF NIKKO CHEYNE By Roland Pertwee

THE STORY RUNS THUS:

NIKKO CHEYNE, nephew and heir of Baron Cheyne of Querne, studies art in Paris. Princess Natalie, sixteen year old heir apparent to the throne of Sciriel, resides incognito at the school of Mlle. Sureame. Natalie is the only child of Prince Carelon, brother of King Raymond of Sciriel. At the Louvre she encounters Nikko. With both it is love at first sight, a love deepened in trysts by night. Baron Vilasto, chamberlain to the household of Prince Carelon, persuades the lovers they must part, and takes the princess back to Sciriel. Nikko joins the Foreign Legion. Meanwhile his uncle has died and Nikko succeeds to the title and the estate. He gives management of the estate to James K. Fladgate, American lawyer. Fladgate is father of Veronica, a former schoolmate of Natalie's, now married to Joris Howard, an Englishman. Nikko learns from Mekla, a Scirien, that bolshevists have overthrown and slain the king of Sciriel. Nikko escapes from the Legion with the help of Veronica and Howard and hastens to Natalie's aid. He makes his home with Mekla's parents and gains the confidence of Foscani, the dictator. He slips into the house where Natalie is held prisoner and they plan escape. Nikko and Foscani visit the camp of the dictator's mercenaries beneath the great dam of Sarsenova in the oasis of Issoi. Major Savarin, governor of the Plevi salt pits, promises Nikko to help Natalie's father, his prisoner, escape. Foscani orders Natalie to marry him. Nikko and four loyalists overpower a military guard and seize horses for the flight, following which Nikko conceals himself on the roof of Natalie's place of imprisonment.

INSTALLMENT XII.

At Plevi Prison.

BARON VILASTO was roused from sleep by a light touch on his hand. He blinked, stirred, and sat up. Bettany, in a white wrap, was beside his bed.

"My child, what is it?" he asked. "Are you ill?"

She shook her head.

"I am going out on to the roof," she said.

He held his watch to his ear and touched the spring.

"But it is only four o'clock."

"Is it? I didn't look at the time; but I thought I would tell you where I had gone."

"You seem strange," he said. "Give me a moment and I will come with you."

"No, Sidimir. Nikko is there."

"Cheyne! But the trap was locked. Why do you think?"

"I am sure—I felt it—he woke me—calling."

"But that was dangerous."

"No, not aloud—just a message I——"

Suddenly she seized his hand and clung to it.

"You are frightened," said he.

"I—am—rather—frightened. If he were not there it could only mean—that—but he is—must be. I'll soon——"

She ran silently from the room, lowered the trap door steps, and unlocked the padlock. Before lifting the trapdoor she hesitated, and when she stepped out on the roof it was with her eyes shut and not courage enough to open them.

"Coward, coward," she reproached herself, and pushed back the lids with her fingers.

To all appearance dead, Nikko Cheyne sprawled face downward on the roof. She ran and fell on her knees beside him. He was breathing—he was asleep. With a little cry of thankfulness she picked up his head and laid it in her lap as though he were a child. Nikko stirred, but did not wake. She pulled the bundle he had brought toward her to make a rest for her back and moved her hands over his hair. A happiness too intense for words stole through her as she held him there and looked down into his face.

He was so young asleep—so clean—such a boy. At the corners of his mouth a smile played, and the color of his eyes shone through the shut lids.

Every line she remembered—and her thoughts went back across a gulf of seven years to that tragic last meeting in the hotel at Paris, where, to fill the emptiness before her, she had stored a picture of his face to carry for all time in her heart.

The picture had not failed, and looking on him now was like holding up true memory before a mirror. Nikko moved his head and a small island of doubt gathered between his brows.

"No," she whispered and, stooping, kissed his forehead, "not that look, Nikko. There is no need, my lover."

The island vanished. He gave an easy sigh, rubbed his cheek against her hand, and settled into deeper sleep. Time stole onward—shadows shortened—the sun clambered up into the sky.

It was nine o'clock when Baron Vilasto came out upon the roof. He had brought a bowl of coffee and a roll.

Bettany shook her head and laid a finger to her lips. Vilasto nodded, set them down beside her, and retreated quietly.

Perhaps the sense of another presence startled Nikko to sudden wakefulness. He sat up and stared at Bettany wildly.

"Hush," she said. "There is no one here."

His expression relaxed.

"I was asleep—I shouldn't have been asleep. Some one—anything."

She shook her head.

"This little kingdom is still my own. We are safe here."

"How did you know?" he began.

"You called me—and I came."

"You heard?"

"I felt—and then I found you asleep."

"For how long have I——?"

"Three hours—four, perhaps. You must have been tired to sleep with your head against the roof."

"Was it?" he answered. "I—I dreamt——"

He looked down and saw the creases his head had made where it had rested in her lap. He picked up one of her hands and held it to his face.

"That couldn't have been a dream."

"Nikko, Nikko," she said. "I loved you so, lying like a child in my arms."

"I have wasted the most precious moments of my life," he answered reproachfully.

"I loved you so," she said again. "It was like when we were in Paris—together—not saying a word—but together."

He looked at her devotedly—devouringly.

"Was that enough to make you forget all else, Bettany—will it be enough?"

She gave an infinitesimal movement to stop him.

"Let us ask nothing today," she said. "Today is utterly ours, Nikko. Until tonight we two are all that matters."

"You're wonderful," said he. "When shadows wide as a country stretch between us you step through them and they are gone. A hundred things have happened, Bettany, that I am here to tell. Aren't you curious? Am I not to begin?"

"Yes, O yes, soon—we have all the day. Until tonight you are my prisoner, Nikko."

"Until tonight," he laughed. "For ever!"

She moved her shoulders.

"And I yours—I yours. It's good—it's lovely to be sure of that."

She gave a shiver of delight, passed a hand almost roughly over his face, and laughed.

"We'll have breakfast now, Nikko, our first together." And putting the coffee bowl between them, she broke the little roll into halves. "I can get more if there isn't enough."

"I was only hungry for you, Bettany."

"But you must eat. Please do."

She watched him swallow a mouthful of bread and take a gulp of coffee.

It tasted so good that he took another.

"That's better. What is that bruise on your throat, Nikko? All blue it is."

"We had a fight last night."

"We?" Interest sparkled in her eyes.

"Raoul and Jean Festubert, Max Gourod, Kressin, and myself. We were getting horses."

"Yes."

"We got them all right."

She was silent for a moment—then:

"I want to know, Nikko. It isn't away from our love—it is part of it. I want to know all that has happened to you—little—big—all. I've been a prisoner here for ten months. One almost forgets there is a world. And you must want to tell. Only women put love by itself in their hearts. With men it is one with the rest of their lives. They carry it with them into action, into their work, into everything. Tell me how you have worked and loved me since you came to Sciriel."

While he talked she sat with her chin resting on her knees, sometimes nodding—sparkling—shrinking. Once she said:

"What a broken little country," and there were tears in her eyes.

And when he spoke of Foscani:

"He was here last night. No, keep down. You would be seen from the street standing."

At the end:

"Tomorrow night. I shall be ready."

"The uniform you are to wear is in this bundle."

Bettany gave a small gesture of disgust.

"Very well. But what a finish. Nikko—to ride away wearing——"

She saw the look of pain on his face and hastened to smooth it away with an impulsive pressure of the hand.

"I should be ashamed to have said that. Forget it. Pride—just vulgar pride. Yes, go on. I am to be dressed, ready after dusk."

Nikko nodded.

"Yes, that is all. We shall decide tonight the exact method before I start for Plevi."

"I am glad you are going to Plevi," she said. "I shall feel certain that way. But, O Nikko, I wish you could be here as well."

"If you knew how I wished that," he began, then switched to, "but they are splendid fellows. You can trust them to the death."

"So there are still a few who love me?"

"Bettany!"

Her voice fell with a touch of bitterness.

"But so few that I am no longer worth while——"

A Delightful Short Story Next Sunday

The Wall

By Marion Poschman Valensi

There in the delicate, jeweled loveliness of Venice stood the radiant Countess Donzietti, the heiress of Northfield, Ohio. There with Alec Farraday, the carpenter's son—the man she loved. But around the countess stood a wall of pride, not of her building, that shut her in from happiness. . . .

From the distance came the pulsing of a drum, bugle notes, and the tramp of marching men.

"What's that?" she asked.

NIKKO listened and the sound grew. There were voices now, singing the rough new songs of the revolution:

"Freedom, freedom, God has given freedom.
Freedom, freedom, bear the banner high."

"One of Foscani's patriotic marches," said Nikko, and shrugged his shoulders. "There was an order posted in the streets yesterday bidding all who were not engaged in work to join the march."

The sound increased in volume.

Bettany rose, moved across the roof, and leaned over the parapet.

"Hundreds," she said, "hundreds of them, with his guards as sheep dogs."

Keeping low, Nikko went toward her and peered through a square rain vent into the street.

The procession, headed by its makeshift band and a squadron of the civil guard, was moving toward the house. It was a tatterdemalion company, impressed mainly from the slums of Djevo, but toward the tail end marched a hundred or more decent citizens, having, as it were, gathered themselves together in a class of their own. These better looking folk seemed to have attracted to themselves quite a number of the guard, who by voice and gesture were urging them to give evidence of patriotic fervor.

"Sing up, you fat bellied hogs," a mighty voice shouted. "Sing!"

The cadences of the foolish, vaunting song rose and fell.

Bettany drew herself up and stood erect as the procession came before the house. Some one saw her, pointed, and as though by an order common to all the sea of faces turned upward.

The song stopped, the whole procession halting in its stride. Some one laughed. A figure dressed in the filthiest rags hopped out into the roadway, danced like an ape, and made derisive gestures with his hands.

"Yow, yow, yow!" he yelled. "Yow, what does freedom taste like?"

And suddenly from among the decent burghers leaped a fat man who beat clenched fists into the leering face. In an instant two of the guards fell upon him.

Then a voice—voices rang out:

"Let the man be. Leave him. He was right to strike."

And another voice:

"Natalie! Natalie!"

And twenty throats roaring "Natalie."

A whistle blew. The mounted guard at the head of the procession wheeled their horses and spurred with sabers bared toward the center of the tumult.

Some one shrieked. A pistol barked. A fight broke out in the crowd itself. Tearings, clutchings, the thud of fists against faces.

Some one cried:

"To hell with Foscani! Down with the revolution!"

An officer with a voice like the roar of a cannon shouted:

"Clear the street! Clear, you scum, or be shot."

Madness was abroad. Many fled, but a little band in which a spark of old patriotism had suddenly flared rallied, bunched, and shouted back defiance. As if by magic a space was cleared on both sides of them.

"Break into the house! Set her free!"

"Set her free!" was their battle cry.

A shutter on a ground floor window was flung open and half a dozen rifles squibbed and squibbed again. The bullets slapped into unprotected bodies. In that close packed group of foolish martyrs the dead had no room to fall.

The mounted men rode in with their sabers, resistance crumbled—the remnant broke and scattered.

Then silence—then that voice again, herding together those who had stood aside.

"Fall in! March! Sing, hogs, sing!"

The drum throbbed, bugles blared, the procession moved on.

Bettany had not stirred. Erect as a pillar she stood, looking down upon the quiet corpses that lay in such strange shapes upon the road. At last—

"They died for me," she said. "For me, and I shall never even put a flower on their graves."

At noon a message came from Foscani to apologize to Bettany for what had taken place before the house. He trusted that she would not allow it to interfere with her peace of mind. Steps, he assured her, would be taken to prevent any recurrence of the outbreak.

Steps were taken, and during the afternoon there were fires in several parts of the city, when certain good citizens, suspected of having taken part in the riot, perished with their families in the flames.

A little before dusk an open cart came and collected the dead bodies. As the driver drove away he shouted, "Dead royalists, dead royalists," over and over again, as though he had wares to sell.

SINCE the tragic affair there had been many comings and goings to and from the house. Visits were paid by several members of the D. S. N. and the captain of the guard was complimented on the excellent shooting of his subordinates.

Fearing some one might come up to her floor, Bettany left the roof and sat miserably in her little room, while Nikko crouched on the leads behind the chimney stack and counted the hours until darkness.

A plan had developed in his mind directly arising from the morning's tragedy, and seated alone up there he worked it out in detail. Only one thing troubled him, but he did not see how it could be avoided.

"And, anyway," he said to himself, "murderers deserve to die, and Max Gourod will sleep none the worse for his part in the business."

Toward dusk Bettany stole up to the roof and gave him food and drink. For half an hour they were together. He told her the arrangements he had made and she nodded her consent.

"I shall wait now until you go." Then shivered. "It's cold for you here."

"It was not cold made me shiver," she said, then cried out, "O dear, my lover, I don't want you to leave me. I'm afraid."

"We shall succeed, Bettany."

"Not of success, but—but—Nikko, stop me saying any more—my mind is whirling with terrors that spoken of might come true."

"Bettany!"

He drew her to him and kissed her mouth, her eyes, her hair, until slowly her muscles ceased to twitch and she lay limp in his arms.

A clock struck nine.

Nikko stirred uneasily.

"You must go?"

He nodded. She clung to him.

"This day was spoiled for us by martyrs, Nikko, but we have other days."

For a long moment they held each other tight.

"God bless you, dearest, dearest."

"God bless you, lover."

He vanished like a ghost, and though she peered down into the garden she saw nothing of the path he had taken.

A little after the half hour Nikko Cheyne appeared at the House of Friends.

The four had already gathered.

"A lift on that same ration convoy," Max explained. "Else we would not have been here before tomorrow's sunrise."

"It is fixed for tomorrow night," said Nikko. "Here is the plan."

He expounded swiftly but exactly.

"I dare not trust to the tree. If the sentry below

On the Air!

"It's on the air everywhere—the marvelous results girls are getting using the exquisitely textured Black and White Face Powder," says charming Miss Eileen Rauscher, 1620 E. Fifteenth St., Brooklyn, N. Y. "I'll always be glad I 'tuned in' on the good news, because everyone notices how much more smooth, fair and silky my complexion looks, and how very becoming the natural flesh tones of this lovely powder are. Its unusual clinging quality and its delicate flower-fragrance appeal to me, too."

The soft, fluffy Black and White Face Powder, attractively packaged for 25c, is one of the most popular of the famous Black and White Beauty Creations, stamped with approval by thousands of enthusiastic users everywhere because of their supremely high quality and excellence at the low, popular prices.

"You Must Have Spent Years on Shorthand"

"NO; I Learned it in 6 WEEKS!"

HER employer laughed aloud. "Six weeks! You're joking, Miss Baker. No one could learn shorthand in six weeks."

"But I mean it, Mr. Chapman. When I came here to work for you I had only studied shorthand for six weeks."

The president of the large corporation hesitated; the girl was evidently sincere; she expected him to believe her. But six weeks!

"You're fooling, of course, Miss Baker. You have been with us not more than a month and you are by far the most competent secretary I ever had. Surely you don't expect me to believe that you gained your present speed and accuracy in only six weeks! Why,—a great many young ladies who have been here with us had studied shorthand for ten months or a year or more and still they made a great many errors."

"That wasn't their fault, Mr. Chapman. That was the fault of the system they were taught. Old fashioned shorthand requires months of hard study and practice and even when it is mastered it is difficult to read. But Speedwriting is very easy. I——"

"Speedwriting?"

"Yes. Haven't you ever seen my notes? You can almost read them yourself. See——"

The big business man took his secretary's notebook.

"Why, this is remarkable, Miss Baker. It's in simple A. B. C.s!"

"Yes, surely. That's the secret. That's how I learned it in so short a time. Anyone can learn Speedwriting. There are only a few easy rules. There are no hooks or curves; every "character" you use is a letter you already know,—one that your hand needs no special training to make."

"And it's called Speedwriting?"—Mr. Chapman was more than interested.

"Yes. Isn't it simple? Can't you read that? See—here is the first letter you ever dictated to me. Those notes are a month old, but I can read every word of them. That is another advantage Speedwriting has over all other systems,—notes never get cold. And my notes are just as plain to another Speedwriter as your handwriting is to one of the salesmen."

"Well, that's the most remarkable thing I ever heard of. I could use that myself at board meetings and a dozen other places . . . You can write it rapidly too!"

"You have never dictated too fast for me yet, and I haven't had to retype a single letter since I've been here. One boy I know who studied Speedwriting in his own home, took court testimony at the rate of 106 words a minute after only 15 hours of study."

"Miss Baker, where can I get some literature on Speedwriting? I am very greatly interested. I really believe I'll take it up myself!"

"I answered an advertisement in a magazine and Miss Dearborn sent me a booklet. I'm sure she will send you one if you want it."

"I certainly do. Will you take care of it for me?"

"Yes, sir!"

Two months later every stenographer in Mr. Chapman's organization was a Speedwriter!

were to see he would fire and—— After all, the brutes shot unarmed men for sport today."

"I was there," said Raoul; his face was white with anger. "I was there, and because of what was before us I skulked with that gutter filth while the murders were done."

"I am only afraid of the noise," said Nikko.

Max Gourod waved him down.

"I have a pair of .22 automatics," he said. "Very quiet and with a reduced charge—— It would be at close range?"

Nikko nodded.

"They have revolvers."

"Bah!" said Max Gourod. "I shoot with both hands. Besides, these others will be there, while Pierre attends to the sentry."

"Is everything understood?"

"Everything."

"You won't fail?" said Nikko earnestly. "For God's sake, don't fail!"

"Never fear," they said in chorus.

He gripped the hand of each man in turn.

"At the leech gatherer's hut, then?"

"We shall be there."

"Luck, then."

Nikko Cheyne went back to Mekla's house, where he saddled his horse, mounted, and rode down to the city gate.

"Who goes?" cried the sentry.

"Friend. Do you want to see the Liberator's signature on a pass?" and Nikko fumbled in the breast pocket of his coat.

"I have seen it often enough on every wall," said the sentry with a gruff laugh. "Pass out, friend."

Nikko spurred through the gate, turned on to the road by the place of execution, and cantered beneath the wall to the house where the horses were so queerly stabled. Here he changed into the uniform of the mounted police, buckled on the sword, and dragged a hard-bitted roan mare down the stairs to the hall, where by feel alone he saddled and bridled her.

"Thirty-five miles, my beauties, to the halfway house," he said, "and no stopping by the way. Come on, now."

Dropping a carbine into its leather bucket and bringing the mare alongside his own mount, he swung to the saddle and galloped away into the night.

The great adventure had begun.

At the halfway house, the deserted farm standing back a quarter of a mile from the road, he changed his sweating horses for two of those that had been left in the outbuildings by Max and Pierre on the preceding night. The new horses were fresh and lively and stretched to their task with fine spirit.

A few hundred yards from its starting point was a crossroad, one leading to Plesna, the other to the frontier. Nikko took the latter. From the farm to Plevi as the crow flies was something under thirty miles, but in the uncertain dark Nikko thought it safer, even though it meant an increase in distance, to keep to the road.

The hoofs clattered merrily through sleeping villages, but though dogs barked, no one looked from the windows to see who rode so hard.

Nikko came to the leech gatherer's cottage a little after two o'clock. The pond at the back with its loathsome population reflected a single star as he rode by. Two o'clock. Fifteen miles to go and still an hour and a half of darkness. He slackened rein and let the horses make their own pace along the mysterious road that wound through the forest of Svorso. It was an uncanny place—a place full of ill omen and of a silence like the grave.

A white owl flapped past him on silent wings, the wind of them stirring his hair, and twice the dismal howl of a wolf echoed among the trees.

Nikko breathed a sigh of relief when of a sudden he felt the cool of open spaces, and looking up saw the stars shining in the heavens and before him the lights of the prison of Plevi.

The barn was to the right—three hundred yards away and easy to find. A solid structure, for all that there was a hole here and there where mortar had crumbled between the blocks of rough hewn limestone. Nikko rode in and, closing the great door behind him, let the bar fall into its slot.

Loosening his horses' girths, he tethered them to the hay grid of a manger. Then, standing with his back to the prison, he struck a match and looked about him. In one corner was a litter of hay, and beside it a loaf of bread, a sausage, and a jug of water.

A clear message that Savarin meant to keep faith.

With a sigh of relief Nikko dropped down upon the hay and, closing his hand round the butt of his pistol, fell into a deep sleep.

NIKKO awoke to the sound of low, grumbling explosions. The prison gangs were blasting in one of the quarries near by. Looking through a gap in a wall, he saw columns of yellowish blue smoke rise, mushroom, and melt with the bursting of every charge. Upon an eminence half a mile away, dominating a pit the shape of an escalloped shell, stood a number of warders, their rifles held at ease. In the pit gray figures moved like maggots in a carcass.

Between the pits and the stone pile of Plevi prison was a constant coming and going of chained gangs. Nikko was too far off to see the faces of these men, but from the way they dragged their feet it was clear they were in advanced stages of exhaustion and despair. As they stumbled along he could hear the clink-clank of the chains that united them.

And these poor cowed creatures less than a year before had been the proudest gentlemen in Sciriel. Bad food, hard usage, and the indignities of prison life had brought them down to the level of scavenger hogs.

The warders who walked beside them carried revolvers and heavy whips, which they did not hesitate to use.

Degradation is never a pretty thing to watch. The whole place was a blot—a scar on the lovely landscape of Sciriel—and Nikko turned away in angry disgust.

Sitting on the hay, he attacked the loaf and the sausage, but after what he had seen of the poor starved wretches near by he felt ashamed to eat. Rising, he carried most of the bread to the two horses and fondled their warm, smooth noses and sleek necks and talked to them in low whispers of this and that.

And so an hour went by. As yet he had not looked at his watch, but when he did he was surprised to find that it was after two o'clock. He had slept much longer than he imagined, for which he was grateful. Nothing in the world is more wearing to the nerves than the hours of waiting before action.

The growl of the blasting echoed dismally among the mountains.

For want of something, of anything, to do, Nikko clambered up a broken ladder to the loft. From here, through gaps where tiles had fallen or twisted, was a panorama of the countryside. The prison, the quarries, the white road along which he had traveled the night before—the mighty forest of Svorso and beyond that the mountains of freedom.

"This little kingdom is still my own. We are safe here."

With a little imagination he could almost fix the exact spot on their steep blue sides where the road passed through the frontier post and where, with the morrow's dawn, the last fight was to take place.

And after that——

A nervousness almost pitiable—contemptible—shook Nikko Cheyne from head to foot. What if something went wrong—some accident—some failure. Suppose Raoul muddled—suppose the gallant four were shot down at the city gates. Or a pursuit—Bettany overtaken and——

Sweat poured from his forehead.

"Damn you, stop thinking," he said to himself, and beat his fists upon his thighs. "Stop thinking."

In a corner of the loft, neatly stacked, was a pyramid of long, narrow tins. Nikko picked up one of them and examined the label.

Dynamite cartridges of the kind used for blasting. Beside them was a box of electrically operated detonators, to which were attached neatly wound coils of insulated copper wires. Evidently the loft was used as an explosive dump for the nearest pit.

IN the Foreign Legion, where many jobs besides soldiering are done, Nikko had taken part in building a military road through the Atlas mountains. He had been in charge of blasting operations and was familiar with the handling of explosives. Then, however, they had used slow fuses, and the electric detonators were new to him. For something to do he occupied himself taking one of them to pieces with a penknife and fitting it together again. It was a clear cut bit of mechanism, the ends of the fuse wires in the detonating cap being connected by a fine filament of platinum embedded in a guncotton priming on top of a charge of fulminate.

Nikko had put the fuse back in the box when a fantastic idea recurred in his mind. At first he dismissed it as absurd, but the idea refused to be dismissed. Collecting six of the dynamite cartridges and as many fuses, he carried them down the ladder and packed them in the leather pockets of the police saddles.

It was five o'clock when from sheer boredom Nikko returned to the loft.

The gangs were being driven in from the pits to the walled yard. The warders had left the eminences upon which they had been standing all day and were returning toward the prison.

Above the prison roof a feather of steam appeared and a siren hooted—three. The sound echoed and re-echoed along the range of sullen hills.

"Hoo—hoo—hoo! Hoo—hoo! Hoo!"

It was followed by the yelping bark of a klaxon horn.

Nikko Cheyne spun round quickly.

At the spot where the road emerged from the forest a car appeared, followed by another and yet another. On the radiator cap of each car fluttered a little flag of black and crimson silk. The first and last car were filled with men wearing the horizon blue uniform of the civil guard, but in the middle car a tall figure dressed from head to foot in black sat alone.

It was Foscani.

Even at three hundred yards' distance there was no mistaking him. He sat motionless, his great white face lit with that curious and unfeeling smile.

Next to the chauffeur sat the huge Arnaut Serge, who had ridden up to Nikko in the square on the night he arrived in Djevo.

Foscani had kept his word and come to Plevi—a day—one day—too soon.

Fingers cold as death clutched at Nikko's heart.

The prison gates were flung open.

Foscani and his bodyguard drove through.

Neither age nor business cares ~ just Dandruff

You can have a fine head of hair—even if you've started to lose it.

But never until you have solved the dandruff question!

A preparation called Danderine completely dissolves dandruff. Removes every particle of dead scale. The hair takes on new life. And new hair has a chance to grow. That's all there is to it.

What a pity, when men and women use things to cover the effects of dandruff! Or douse their heads with something never intended to touch hair or scalp! The way to treat dandruff is to get rid of it. Use the one thing made to dissolve dandruff—and the one thing that does!

Every druggist in this country has Danderine, and knows what it will do. He knows it will do the work, and knows why. He will gladly take the time to tell you, if you ask him. And it costs 35 cents!

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK by Jane Eddington

Bright Water, the First Beverage

BROTHER BEVERAGE bolsters Brother Bread at every turn in our daily dietaries. Victuals and drink are the chief of our diet, as of that of the well known old woman. But in great and exhausting emergencies it is the drink of water that is life saving. Sir Philip Sidney's unselfish giving of a drink of water that a dying soldier might assuage his consuming thirst brought him a surer name in history than his writings or noble estate. After starving for water, men have died from drinking insatiably.

In planning a day's ration the most important item set down may be the water allowance. It takes a good deal of water power to run the human machine. A considerable fraction of the effort we give to getting adequately nourished ought to be devoted to the getting of a sufficient water supply and getting it regularly or systematically. Regularly there must, in special, be the just out of bed glass or glasses, the nightcap glass, the before meals glasses.

Thirst should always be noted and gratified at any time when we are in normal health. Also try a drink of water when uncomfortable, or restless, or sleepless. It is a first aid. Water is essential to our every chemical process, and we are as chemical as chemical can be, chemical with every breath and with every type of exercise.

Water softens the human fabric and keeps it springy and elastic and unclogged. Illiterate people are often more illiterate about water drinking than about any of the other great necessities of living. In consequence they wrinkle and tan, but their tanning comes not so much from the sun as from the leather making conditions to which they subject themselves. He who runs may read that they need depuration in order to be normal citizens.

And then there are the people who for a few weeks of the year suffer themselves to be actually uncontrolled while they make oceans of themselves, because they have indifferently remained little drying pools for the rest of the year. They have made the fortunes of the "spas."

And so let us say preachily as we can that unsystematic and infrequent drinking of water is one of the worst of habits. Like other monstrously bad habits, it is sometimes difficult to overcome—what excuses are trumped up for not doing the normal thing because abnormality rules the roost!—but comfort and health are rather supreme rewards.

One who drinks water freely can work and think faster, breathe better, run better, be better looking, and all that, than the one who drinks little, besides being so essentially cleaner. The somewhat wilted quality of a man and woman, and many and far worse disabilities, are due to the fact that they have not used plain common sense about their vital and continuous water need.

RECIPES—From The Tribune Cook Book

Lemon Sherbet

1 cup sugar
½ cup hot water
Juice of 2 lemons
2 cups cold water
2 egg whites

Cook the cup of sugar and water to a thick sirup and dilute it while hot or pour it over the strained juice of 2 lemons. When this is thoroughly cold add 2 cups of cold water and put the whole in a freezer to get well chilled, then freeze in the usual way with about 1 part salt to 4 or 5 of ice. When half frozen stir into it the stiffly beaten egg whites and test to see if it is sweet enough. If it is not, add powdered sugar enough to make it so. It is a nice task to fold in the egg whites into the partly frozen ice, but it can be done after a little practice.

VARIATIONS.—To make sherbets of other flavors and colors use fruit juices full strength or perhaps slightly diluted instead of adding cold water to the lemon sirup. If the fruit juice is quite acid, as one of pineapple would be, it is best to have a heavier sirup than this one of the lemon formula.

PINK LEMON SHERBET.—Make by adding to the lemon sherbet some strawberry or cherry juice and perhaps a little more sugar.

Frozen Custard

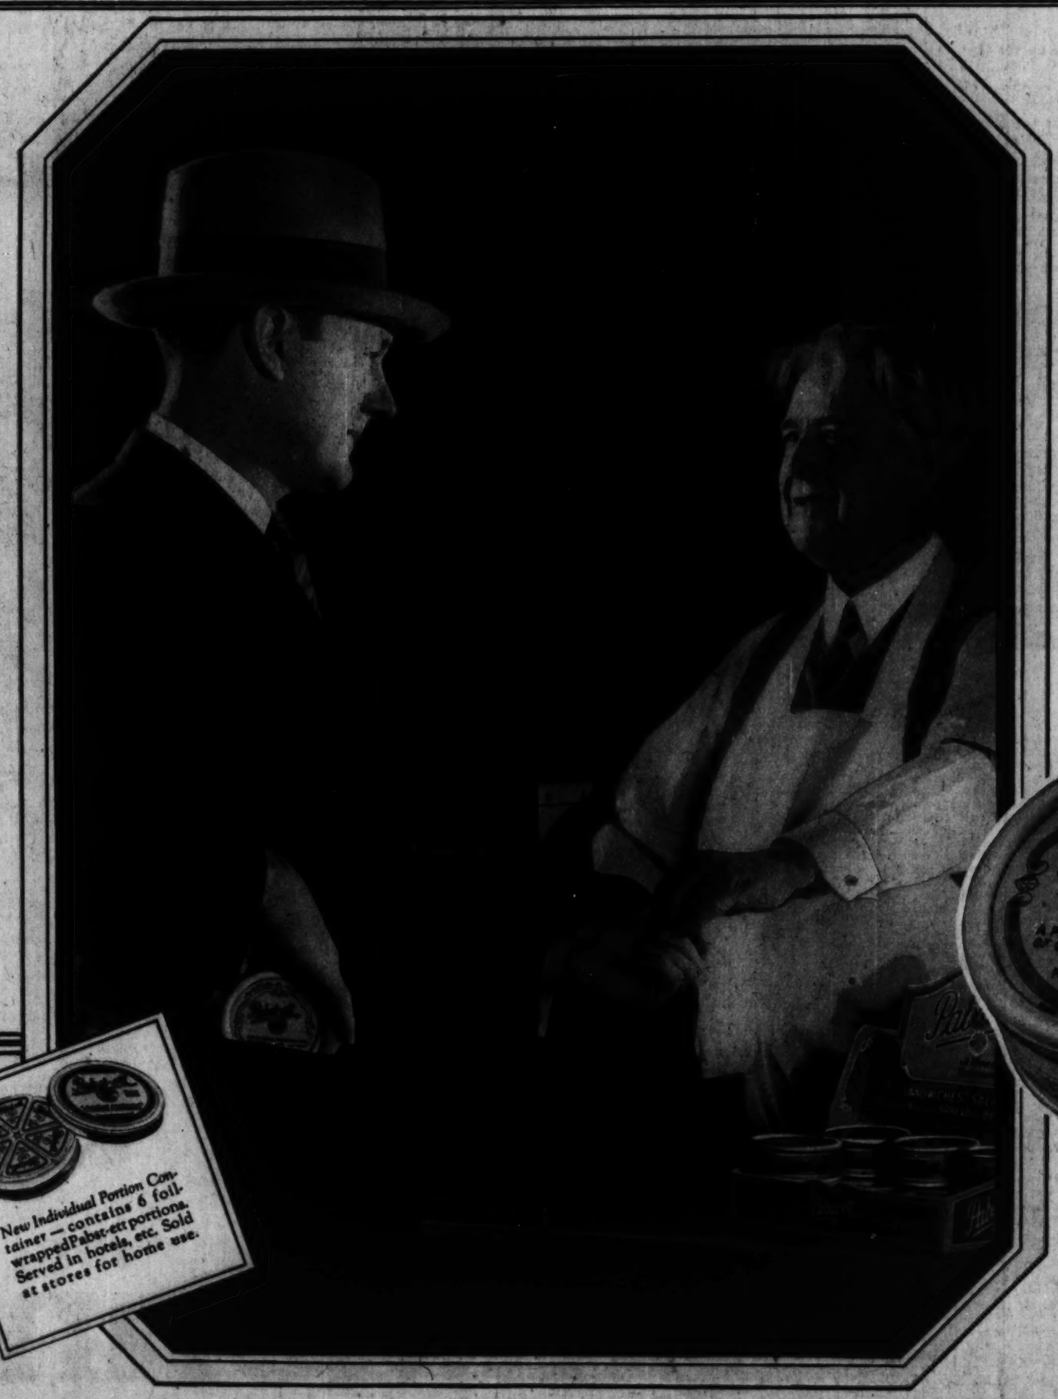
5 egg yolks
2 cups of hot milk
1 cup sugar
A bit of salt
Flavoring

A CUSTARD BASE FOR AN ICE CREAM.—Whisk the egg yolks and sugar—powdered sugar is preferred—until when the whisk is lifted the mixture falls in small ribbonlike folds. Add the boiling milk to this, slowly whisking all the time, and cook over a little fire until the mixture coats the spoon. This cooking should give body to the custard. Flavor and chill. To make an ice cream of this add 1 cup of cream and freeze. The cream can be whipped or plain. A cup of fruit purée or powdered macaroons or nuts can be used to make this ice cream superior. The custard itself can be used in many ways other than this of making ice cream. It can be poured hot over melted chocolate and made into a chocolate custard, and other flavors may be used. The recipe of this custard and a cup of cream will make enough ice cream for six or eight servings.

Raspberry Mousse

⅓ cup of raspberry juice
2 beaten egg whites
2 cups of sugar
Some whipped cream

Stir the sugar and raspberry juice together until the sugar is dissolved and cook to 238 degrees. Pour over 2 beaten egg whites with constant beating. Fold in some whipped cream—a half cup whipped will do. Pack and freeze.



New Individual Portion Container — contains 6 foil-wrapped Pabst-ett portions. Served in hotels, etc. Sold at stores for home use.

The new and finer food has won the men, too

LEADING clubs, hotels, dining cars, restaurants, cafeterias now include Pabst-ett, more than cheese, on their menus. And, grocers tell us that, more and more, men come in to buy the new and finer food.

Pabst-ett has won the men just as completely as it captured the women of America. Everywhere, it is the great favorite among cheese products.

Pabst-ett is a finer food for every purpose. It is made by a secret process which retains the nutritive value of whole milk — the milk sugar, milk proteins and body-building milk mineral elements lost in cheese making. It is as digestible, and more nourishing than milk. An aid to the digestion of other foods, a regulative food that keeps men, women, children in trim. Even those who formerly avoided cheese find they can enjoy Pabst-ett to their hearts' content.

There is no other food product like Pabst-ett. Others may imitate but they cannot duplicate Pabst-ett. Even were the formula not secret, few if any manufacturers have facilities to produce this food that's more than cheese. You can get Pabst-ett deliciousness, its smooth, creamy texture, perfect blending qualities for rarebits, macaroni, potatoes, salads only by ordering the new and finer food—Pabst-ett.

SMALL WEAR AND NOTIONS

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The other day I asked the mother of three little girls what she was doing with herself.

"What am I always doing with myself in March?" she retorted. "I'm sewing up my children's prejudices. This year it seems to be particularly hard. Doris has decided she won't wear blacks or navy blue. Louise has set her face against jackets and sweaters. As for Mary—ow, it's true she's only three—but she's an aspiring character and she simply won't lag behind her sisters in this matter of getting up a good, strong, unreasonable prejudice. So now she absolutely refuses to wear to any party that little taffeta period frock we made her when she was flower girl for my sister."

This mother was not at all unusual in her predicament. There are, in fact, many such parents—harried women who continually have to coddle their own ideas of what is becoming and practical and their small girls' objections to what is becoming and practical. As a rule, too, the compromise has to be made. There is, in fact, only one struggle more harrowing than getting 1 year old Judith into a dress that she doesn't like. It's getting your husband or brother into a dinner jacket when he says, "O, rot, when we're just going out with friends!"

Yes, indeed, the world is just full of what one mother who has borrowed from department store phraseology calls "Small Wear and Notions." It is fortunate, therefore, that this spring shows the widest variety of styles for the girl of from 4 to 10 that we have ever known. In this wide field of choice it is comparatively simple to find something that pleases both mother and daughter.

Yet it is much to be hoped that every mother may be able to steer her particular small girl from one certain prejudice. This is the animosity she may have conceived for sports wear and tailored clothes. For that this influence is the strongest innovation in children's clothes is a recognized truth among those who specialize in juvenile wear.

Now let us take the situation as it is today. For a long time past there has been one standardized mode for the girl of from 4 to 10. Put her in a simple little one piece frock hung from the shoulders and often accompanied by matching bloomers and there you'll keep her very well—that has been an honored theory with all mothers of small girls. You might, perhaps, tamper with this creed. You might indicate a waistline some place or another and you might indulge a whim for a flared skirt. But if you wanted to be perfectly safe you did one of these guileless creations in cotton, linen, or tub silk.

But today how is it? Well, thanks to the fanatical interest in sweaters and jumpers, to say nothing of the jacket idea that has swayed our adult mode, small girls who have arrived at the ripe age of 6 find themselves sharing in these same dominant style factors.

To be concrete: The other day I was wandering through the children's department of one of our most exclusive specialty shops. Immediately my attention was drawn to two types of suits. One was a beige suit designed for the girl of from 7 to 14 and it was an exact replica of the same tailleur now so much in vogue for the child's mother. That is to say, it was developed in wool jersey and the jacket opened over a square necked sweater striped in ciel blue and a warm brown. Yes, even the boutonnière echoing the tints of the sweater was present on the diminutive jacket.

One can't avoid mention of those adorable little coats of checked tweed often accompanied by flowers of self-material which fall either in straightest of tailored lines or perhaps invoke the grace of a deep shoulder cape. Nor must one overlook the hat and coat sets which are being featured by one Fifth avenue specialty shop.

Mention of this latter brings us to an interesting point. For a long time chic little French maidens have worn coat and hat of matching fabric. Here on this side, although we have not paid such profound observance to the custom, the mode is well authenticated. This spring, however, we are in for more than whole souled deference to the matching idea. And the interesting phase of the situation is that such matching hats and coats are developed in all sorts of sports fabrics—novelty woolens, silk and wool mixtures, etc., in which one often divines the hand of Rodier. In looking these over one is struck by the emphasis upon both plaids and checks.

With reference to fabrics—no, of course, one couldn't sidestep that question long. Wool crêpes! These are almost as pronounced in the juvenile province as elsewhere, and we find frocks, coats, and ensembles all testifying to this newer phase of the small girl's wear.

Let us look, for example, at our fourth sketch from the left on the page. Here is an ensemble inspired by Paris which is typical of the spirit in which wool crêpe is worked out in the miniature ensemble. It is a dress-up costume for the girl of from 6 to 10, and it makes use of a printed crêpe—a soft green on which are scattered bright yellow oranges with darker green leaves—for both the simple frock and the lining of a dark green wool crêpe coat. Notice that the little coat is one of those same simple, straight line affairs that are such a familiar phenomenon with us mature folk.

This would make an admirable solution of the "What shall I wear Easter morning?" problem so apt to vex the mind of even the young person. And it must be remembered that the ensemble idea is stressed emphatically this spring for the more formal attire of the sub-teen Miss. In this connection one must speak of various ensembles that follow Molyneux's lead by selecting not a printed crêpe but a plain one for wear with a matching coat in wool crêpe.

Another example of the wool crêpe vogue is established by our sketch at the extreme left. This model, also for the girl of from 6 to 10, is developed in ciel blue crepella and makes an interesting use of stitching in navy blue on the plaited front section of its skirt.

Possibly the smartest combination for the younger generation this season is navy blue and white. In the jacket costume second from the left we encounter this, worked out in an ensemble of navy jersey which is worn with a blouse of white tub silk with tiny appliqued bands of navy blue crêpe. One may make this same costume also in flannel or crepella or in the silk crêpes.

Altogether one is safe in saying that this year the juvenile designer is quite as full of notions as is his client. And something satisfactory to mothers ought really to come out of this ideal situation!

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

A fancy slave-chain belt is only one of the features that make our playmate of from 6 to 10 feel she's not playing Blindman's Buff with Madame Mode. A bow of self-material and a stitched and plaited skirt are additional guarantees in this original little ciel blue crepella model shown at the extreme left.

For the same age is designed a jacket ensemble in navy jersey—or flannel, or crepe—combined with blouse of white tub silk, sketched second from the left.

Either printed cotton or printed silk crepe may be utilized for the "Blindman's" attire. Here this frock of white georgette dotted in flesh pink is trimmed with tabs of flesh pink georgette and is considerably smocked about the yoke. Sketched in the center.

Fourth, a chic ensemble is construed of a dark green wool crepe coat lined with the same figured silk crepe appearing in the frock.

Last, a party frock for ages between 3 and 8 is provided by rose colored dimity or voile with appropriate plaits and hemstitching.

THE WISE WIFE — A STORY FROM REAL LIFE

She Stood Aside and Let "The Other Woman" Run Her Home for Three Weeks—and Fate Did the Rest

"BERNICE and I love each other. I want a divorce in order to marry her. We decided that the fair thing was to tell you the situation." This amazing ultimatum in nowise surprised Lydia Dane, the wife to whom it was delivered. She had been awaiting it for three months, ever since she had discovered that George Dane's mysterious business engagements centered around pretty Bernice Norton.

Something an older married woman had once said to her reappeared as a warning: "Any husband's dangerous age is five years after he is married. He'll play around then if ever, my dear." Well, she and George had had more than that — eight years of happy marriage.

When Lydia realised that the dangerous age had come at last she relied upon one hope, that George would do the fair, sportsmanlike thing. He would not elope secretly; he would come to her as he was doing now and place his cards on the table. And Lydia had made her plan; she had made it through long nights of agony and desperation.

"O Lord, show me a way to hold my husband. Help me to be wise and to win, for little Buddy's sake. Amen."

O, yes, she had a plan. Now, all she needed was cool courage. Only the slight twitching of her hands betrayed her and George was too excited himself to notice that.

"I have expected this," said Lydia, calmly.

"You mean you knew?"

"Of course. You've shown for months in a thousand little inattentions that you were in love with some one else."

"Well, I'll be——" said George helplessly. "But see here, you're going to be sensible about it, aren't you? You won't make a fuss? I relied on your being a good sport to come and tell you. Remember, we once promised each other if anything like this happened we'd tell the truth."

"Of course I intend to be a good sport." Lydia smiled sweetly. "I have thought it all out and I have a proposition to make, but I think Bernice should hear it, too."

"Bernice came with me," George admitted sheepishly. "She's outside in the car."

"Ask her to come in," said the wronged wife, graciously. "We can have a little talk."

Bernice came, flushed and embarrassed. Lydia realised with a pang of fear how lovely the girl was in a fresh, young way. Eight years ago she herself had been just as pretty, but could she fight such beauty now? Yet, for Lydia's plan, Bernice's youth was an aid.

She could read inexperience in the girl's pouting lips; petulance and high temper in those clear brown eyes. Bernice was a spoiled, pretty child; and Lydia was a wise wife.

She had lived with George eight years and she knew him thoroughly—knew his delight in a perfectly run home, in the care Lydia had given to his comfort so unnoticeably and so efficiently.

So Lydia greeted her rival with charming cordiality. "George has told me everything and you need not worry. I shall not stand in your way."

Bernice stared in wonder from George to this surprising wife. "I—I hope you're not angry at me, Mrs. Dane," she stammered. "We just couldn't help falling in love."

"Of course not," smiled Lydia. "And here is my idea. I think you two should realise what an important step this is. You must be very sure of what you are doing. I suggest that you—well, have a trial marriage."

"What?" gasped Bernice."

"See here, Lydia!" protested George.

"O, everything would be quite proper," Lydia explained hurriedly. "I can be called out of town for a few weeks, say three. There would be no scandal if Bernice came here for that time. The house needs some one to look after it. George can live at the club and come here for meals.

"After all, old Maggie, the housekeeper, is a perfect chaperon. If at the end of three weeks you are still sure you want to be married, I shall give you the divorce without a murmur. I promise you that."

George and Bernice stared at each other questioningly.

"I am absolutely convinced that this is the best plan," said Lydia. "It is the only one to which I shall consent."

"Maybe—maybe she's right," said Bernice, in a small voice.

"There, I knew you'd agree," triumphed Lydia. "And since George will probably want Buddy for at least a part of the time, I'll leave him here to get acquainted with his new stepmother. He has a perfect nurse, so he will be no trouble to you."

After they had gone Lydia went up to her son's nursery, where he was investigating the delights a toy train holds for the six year old. She pressed his eager little face to hers.

"You must be a good sport, Buddy," she whispered. "For mother's sake. Mother is going away for a little and another lady is coming here. You must be very nice to her."

"I don't want you to go away," howled Buddy.

"Sh-h." There was an impish gleam in Lydia's eyes now. "And Buddy, darling. When you get up in the morning at 8 o'clock you can roller skate in your room if you like. She won't mind, even if her room is right under yours. And if your hands and face are sticky, you may kiss her just the same."

"Don't want to kiss. Want mother."

"I'll see you in the park every morning, darling. But you mustn't tell any one that; it's our little secret," said Lydia.

Three days later Lydia telephoned from her hotel suite to her oldest and best friend, Donald Langdon.

"I hope you'll do something for me without asking any questions," she told him. "I want you to take me to dinner and to theaters and to cabarets almost every night for the next three weeks."

"Nothing," said Langdon, "could give me greater pleasure. May we begin tonight?"

"Thanks," cried Lydia. "Thanks, you old darling."

ON the twentieth day of her separation from George, Lydia sat before a dressing table adorning herself for her eighteenth dinner engagement with Donald Langdon. Her hand trembled as she wielded her lipstick, so that after a moment she laid it down. Her pallor, her bright eyes told of nervous strain.

She had thought, she had hoped, she had prayed that her plan would be successful long ere this. If she had failed, if the trial marriage had triumphed—Lydia dared not think of the wreck of her home, her happiness.

Perhaps she had underestimated Bernice; perhaps the pretty, petulant girl had managed to make George as good a housewife as Lydia had been all these years. Lydia wished she had made the test longer; after all, three weeks was no more than a honeymoon length.

A large tear trickled down on the lipstick. And then——

And then the thin hotel door was shaken by a loud knock and Lydia hastily dusted away the tear with a powder puff. She went to the door and admitted George.

He strode in, tight lipped, frowning. Lydia recognised the symptoms of a storm and her heart did a joyful flipflop. She raised her brows in haughty inquiry.

"How did you know I was here?"

"I called up Donald Langdon and told him I'd wring his neck if he didn't tell me where you were."

Lydia's polite and disdainful poise was a masterpiece; George wilted beneath it to broken pleading.

"See here, Lydia. You told me you were leaving town. What do you mean by staying here and gadding around with Donald Langdon? You've been seen with him at every cabaret in town. People are talking."

"After all, the only scandal I promised not to make was one concerned with Bernice and you," Lydia told him coolly. "And Don is one of my oldest friends."

"Are you in love with him?"

"I was engaged to him when I married you," said Lydia.

"Are you in love with him now?"

She was silent.

"I see through it all now," shouted the enraged husband. "You wanted to get rid of me for him. You wanted to break up our home. All this stuff about being a good sport was the bunk. You were glad to get rid of me."

Lydia shrugged her shoulders.

"It was you who suggested it," she said. "But I must admit I've enjoyed my liberty. With the care of the house I didn't have much time for dancing or the theater."

"You even abandoned your own child!" shouted George. "You didn't care what happened to him with a strange woman."

"What do you mean?"

"She slapped him."

"Slapped him?" cried Lydia. Instantly the veil had dropped. George and she were two maternally enraged parents. "What for?"

"He smeared jam on her evening dress."

Lydia turned her head to hide her smile.

"That," said George, "was the end." He paced the floor, dramatically.

"The end," whispered Lydia. "Why, I saw you dining together only last night. I had a side table."

"O, we've been dining out for the last week," said George, dismally.

"But that must have hurt cook's feelings. I told her to serve dinners as usual."

"The cook left."

"O, such a good cook," wailed Lydia.

"She couldn't get along with Bernice. And Maggie gave notice today that she'd go if you don't return. My God, Lydia, you don't know how miserable I've been. O, I can't blame Bernice. It wasn't her fault. But she's too young and giddy. She couldn't manage anything.

"The place is a madhouse. Buddy cries for you every night, and my suits—— Well, you know I never can remember to get them pressed. Lydia, darling, I know I've been a fool, but can't you give up this Langdon fellow? Won't you come home? Good Lord! I'd like to break every bone in his body." George ended in a shout.

Lydia began to laugh then; quietly at first—but her pentup emotions, her relief ended in hysterics and the hysterics ended in George's arms.

"Yes—yes," she cried. "I suppose I'll have to give up, if you need me so much."

"Thank God!" said George.

Lydia wanted to say, "Thank me, you silly idiot," but, being a wise wife, she said nothing.

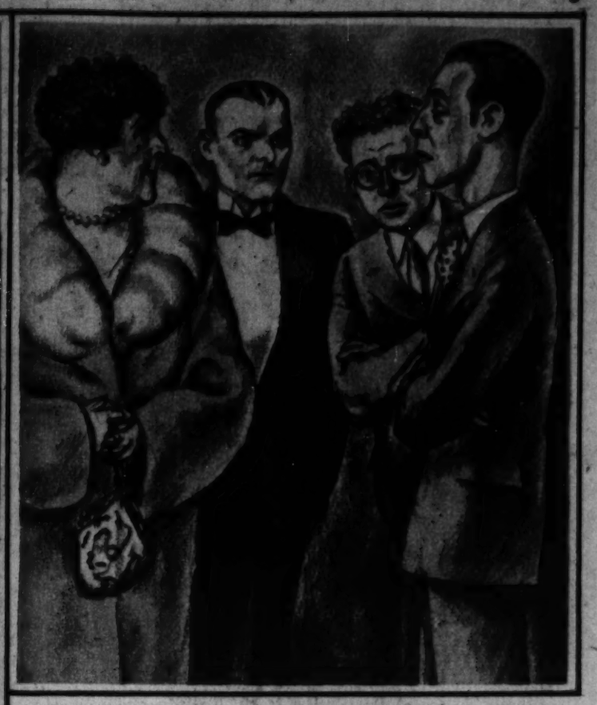
THE NEW FACE POWDER

ITALIAN TABLE D'HOTE

By W. E. Hill

Just a party of jolly bachelor girls having dinner together at Tony's on Saturday night. Kind of talked out when the demi-tasse comes on. The young lady with her hat off is trying to tell the plot of "Abie's Irish Rose."

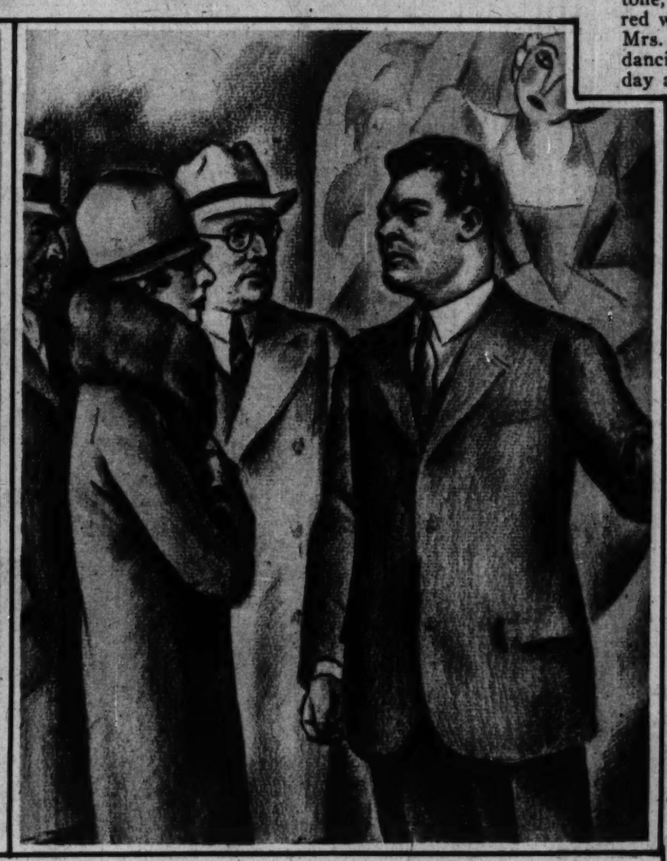
Three of the better class retail bootlegging boys talking over the crying need of disguising a slight taste of formaldehyde in otherwise flawless alcohol.



This is a crowded night at Garufaretti's table d'hote palace, and there are many waiting for tables. Among them is Mrs. Curtis Cro-Magnon Maginnis, out slumming in Bohemia with a party of boy friends, a barytone, a poet and a designer. After the spaghetti and red wine (served in cups as tribute to Mr. Volstead) Mrs. Maginnis and the boy friends will retire for dancing to "Ye Olde Vicious Owle," a tea room by day and a night club by night.

Don't think for a moment that Meta, the fluffy blonde, is behind in all the latest snappy comebacks just because she comes from a small town. Not a bit of it. When any one gets the least bit too fresh with her, some one she doesn't know, she looks him right in the eye and says, "Blondes prefer gentlemen!"

The big business man and the frail little girl have been dining table d'hote this evening. Though stern as steel among the cloaks and suits, Mr. Kleebatzer can be as gentle as a lamb out of office hours. Indeed, Miss Lilian Mitz, who is with him this evening, often calls him her little lambie right to his face. Mr. Kleebatzer is very refined when out with a lady. No rough gibes or coarse jests from him. Should a simple "damn" pass his lips he will follow it up with "Pardon my French!"



The doortender at one of those quaint little Italian eating places where you have to pretend you know somebody who's been there before in order to crash the gate. You don't have to pretend very hard. Just say, "We're friends of Joe Bounce," and Carlo, to whom the name "Joe Bounce" means as much as "Elsie Dinsmore," will let you in immediately.

Angelo Borgia, the busy waiter, about to serve some hors d'oeuvres and a bottle of grape juice into which a little denatured alcohol has been poured. It's perfectly safe, however, for, as any one who knows will tell you, three judges of the Supreme court come here for lunch every day of their lives.

No table d'hote, Italian or otherwise, is anything much until a few of the literary people begin to discover it. Tonight, lending atmosphere to Garufaretti's, is Roy Winkleby, who did that startling biography of Patrick Henry, the one the Woman's Altruistic Club of Featherstone, N. D., got so upset about because it showed that Patrick Henry was a boozer, and twelve wives, and it was nobody's business.

Two lovely ladies from Englewood, who are simply carried away by the quaintness of the place. The lady on the left thinks the radio salesman at the corner table is Theodore Dreiser. The lady on the right is going to take bicarbonate of soda as soon as she gets home to Englewood.

Howard gets wild after a glass of red wine and has to be removed forcibly. Wants to go up and shake hands with strange people and insists on introducing himself as the Prince of Wales.

MAROLD TEEN

IN TH' SPRING A YOUNG MAN'S FANCY TURNS TO THOUGHTS OF LOVE!

SO'S YER OLD MAN!

THESE POETS AND SONG WRITERS HAND ME A LAUGH - I'LL SHOW 'EM HERE'S ONE BIMBO WHAT DON'T GET SOFT HEADED THIS TIME OF TH' YEAR - I AIN'T GONNA BE ONE OF THESE SAPS THAT COME IN TH' SPRING!

I FIGGER NICE LONG HIKE INTO TH' WIDE OPEN SPACES IS WHAT A HE-MAN LIKE ME NEEDS - WIMMIN'! BAH!!!

THERE SITS A COUPLA NITWITS! IT'S SICKENING!

MMM! THIS AIR IS THE TADPOLE'S TEDDIES!

LOOK AT THEM FOOL BIRDS!

BRAINLESS BOVINES!

SILLY SHEEP NO BRAINS!

I FORGIVE 'EM! THEY DON'T KNOW ANY BETTER!

OH! WELL! SQUIRRELS ARE NUTTY ANYWAY!

??

HERE'S A APPLE FOR YAH! - AGATHA!

TISH! TISH!

DOGGONE! THAT WAS CUTE - IF I DO SAY IT MYSELF!

NEXT SUNDAY ILL BUY YOU A LOLLIPOP EVEN!

HOT DARN! IT'S IN TH' AIR - IF YOU ASK ME!

HER EYES? HER EYES WERE AZURE POOLS--??

A PRIMER IN PROSE

Moon Mullins

KEEP AWAY FROM HERE! KEEP AWAY!

I THOUGHT I TOLD YOU LAST WEEK TO GET AWAY FROM THIS HOUSE AND STAY AWAY, MR. MULLINS-

BUT MRS. JONES- THIS MAYBE IS A MATTER OF LIFE AND DEATH, KAYO, MY KID BROTHERS' GOT PTOMAINE POISON OR SOMETHING AND HE NEEDS THE DOCTOR RIGHT AWAY.

WHAT SEEMS TO BE THE MATTER WITH KAYO, MOON?

NOT A THING IN TH' WORLD, DOC I JUST WANTED SOMEBODY TO PLAY PINOCHLE WITH AND I KNEW THE ONLY WAY YOUR OLD LADY WOULD LET YOU OUT OF THE HOUSE TO-NIGHT WOULD BE ON BUSINESS.

OH - THAT POOR LITTLE CHAP - HE IS AN AWFUL PEST BUT IT BREAKS MY HEART TO THINK OF HIM LYING THERE ILL WITH NO MOTHER TO NURSE HIM - PERHAPS I CAN DO SOMETHING FOR HIM MYSELF.

THE SECOND DOOR FROM THE HEAD OF THE STAIRS YOU SAY?

GOOD NIGHT NURSE! THAT'S MY WIFE'S VOICE.

GET UP, DOC- I'VE GOTTA DITCH THESE CARDS.

Z Z Z Z Z

OH-

SHHH-

SHHHHSH

TSK TSK TSK!

SHH-HH DON'T TRY TO TALK, KAYO- HOLD THIS THERMOMETER IN YOUR MOUTH

SAY WHAT IN TH'-?

MOON- COME HOLD THIS THERMOMETER IN HIS MOUTH- KEEP HIM QUIET HE MUSTN'T TALK.

GOODNESS ME DOCTOR- DON'T LOLLYGAG AROUND WITH THAT THING- WHAT THE CHILD NEEDS IS A GOOD STIFF DOSE OF CASTOR OIL-

WULP!

DOWN WITH IT LIKE A LITTLE MAN- DOWN WITH IT- THERE- IT'S FOR YOUR OWN GOOD.

IT'S A GOOD THING I CAME HERE MR. MULLINS- HONESTLY I NEVER SAW THE DOCTOR SO BUMFUDDLED IN MY LIFE.

PSSST- HERE IS A DIME TO BUY LOLLYPOPS WITH KAYO- -NOW FORGET ALL ABOUT THIS.

HUH! DOC FORGOT HIS CASTOR OIL

I'LL GIVE IT TO HIM.

TOP!

CASTOR OIL

WHAT DID YOU WANTA GO AN' DO THAT FOR?

AW-WHAT DO YOU CARE? HE HAD TO GO HOME ANYWAY.

NOW THAT'S WHAT I CALL BEIN' A REAL PAL-

HAROLD GRAY

YESSIR, SANDY, I SURE LIKE THIS DRESS MRS FLINT HELPED ME MAKE- NOT S'PENSIVE BUT IT'S GOT SORT OF A SNAP TO IT-

COME ON- LET'S GO OUT IN TH' BACK YARD A WHILE AN' LOOK AROUND- NOTHIN' TO DO IN TH' HOUSE-

WE'D BETTER STAY ON TH' PORCH- THE GROUND'S PRETTY WET- BUT TH' SUN'S NICE AN' WARM- GEE, ISN'T IT NICE AN' QUIET IN THIS TOWN?

PEACEFUL- THAT'S WHAT IT IS- BETCHA NOTHIN' 'CITING EVER HAPPENS IN THIS PLACE-

? ? ? ?

PR-R-R R-R-R

HEY!

OW!

WHAT'S TH' MATTER WITH YOU, SANDY? RUNNIN' FROM A CAT! AREN'T YUH 'SHAMED O' YOURSELF?

MEAW?

GO ON! WALK UP TO HIM LIKE A MAN- YOU'RE FOUR TIMES HIS SIZE-

WHOOPIE! LOOK AT TH' SPARKS FLY-- THAT WON'T HURT YUH, SANDY- THAT'S JUST 'TRICITY WHEN HE KISSED YUH-

OF ALL THINGS! HE WANTS TO BE FRIENDS, SANDY- WHY DON'T YOU BE NICE TO HIM TOO?

GEE, THAT SURE IS TH' FRIENDLIEST CAT I EVER SAW-

WELL, I GUESS CATS ARE JUST 'BOUT LIKE ANY CERTAIN BREED O' PEOPLE- SOME ARE BAD, LIKE THAT YELLOW CAT O' MISS BRUSSELS'- MEAN TO EVER'BODY-

BUT JUST 'CAUSE ONE OR TWO ARE NO GOOD ISN'T ANY SIGN THEY'RE ALL BAD-

WINNIE WINKLE THE BREADWINNER

ALL RIGHT! I'LL GET UP!! I'LL GET UP!!

BAKERY

HEY! STOP!! A BOX FELL OFF YER TRUCK! HEY!

HEY! YA DROPPED A BOX!!

THUD

GOSH! THERE'S TWELVE ALARM CLOCKS IN HERE! WELL, WE YELLED LOUD ENOUGH AT TH' GUY WHO DROPPED 'EM!

SURE, 'TAIN'T OUR FAULT IF HE DIDN'T STOP!

WHERE'LL WE TAKE ALL THESE ALARM CLOCKS!

TAKE 'EM TO MY HOUSE! MY FOLKS IS ALL OUT!!

LET'S HIDE THESE CLOCKS HERE IN MY HOUSE AN' TAKE 'EM OUT ONE AT A TIME AN' SELL 'EM!!

FINE! BUT HOW YA GONNA HIDE A BIG BOX LIKE THAT?

SURE, SOME ONE WILL FIND IT!

SURE, I'LL HIDE 'EM IN TH' BED ROOMS!

WE'LL HIDE 'EM ALL OVER TH' HOUSE! TAKE SOME OF 'EM UP-STAIRS SPUD!

JIGGERS!! HERE COMES PERRY'S MA 'N PA 'N WINNIE! WE BETTER BEAT IT, QUICK!

OUT TH' BACK DOOR FOR US!

I ONLY GOT ONE MORE CLOCK LEFT! I'LL HURRY UP AN' HIDE THAT!

HERE COMES TH' FOLKS! I JUST GOT DONE IN TIME TO BEAT IT OUT TH' BACK WAY!

RING! R-RRING

THERE GOES TH' PHONE!

I'LL ANSWER IT FAWTHAW! IT'S PROBABLY FOR ME ANYWAY!!

RING R-RRING

HELLO? HELLO! HELLO? HELLO!

THERE GOES TH' DOOR BELL!

RING R-RING

RING R-RING

GOODNESS, IT'S RINGIN' UPSTAIRS! TOO!

THERE'S NO ONE HERE!

RING R-RING

IT'S THE STRANGEST THING!

G-GUESS I'D BETTER STAY D-DOWN HERE!!

R-RING RING

RING RRRING

THERE GOES ANOTHER BELL! THE HOUSE IS HAUNTED!

YES, AN' Y'CAN BET YER SWEET PATOOTIE I AIN'T GOIN' TO ANSWER IT !!

RING R-RING

WONDER WHY THEY DON'T ANSWER TH' BELL? I RANG TH' BACK DOOR BELL AN' GOT NO ANSWER TOO ??!! GOSH, I HOPE THEY DIDN'T FIND THEM ALARM CLOCKS!!

BRUMNER

WONDERFUL!

BACK HOME AGAIN OUWW OOOO

HAH!

TEXAS SLIM
STARTS UP THE LADDER OF SUCCESS

OOOO

HECK, JESSIE - I SHOULD TRY TO GET MY JOB BACK ON YOUR PAWS RANCH AS LONG AS DIRTY DALTON IS FOREMAN HERE.

DON'T BE SILLY, TEXAS - GO UP TO HIM LIKE A MAN AND I'M SURE HE WILL PUT YOU TO WORK.

THEY AINT NO USE OF ARGUIN' ABOUT IT, DIRTY - I'M GOING TO CAMP RIGHT HERE AND YOU MIGHT AS WELL MEASURE ME FOR A NEW SADDLE.

WAL- LET ME SEE -

SO, THAT'S HIS ANSWER IS IT?

I DON'T LIKE TO BE NO TATTLE TALE, MR. AKERS BUT——

WHEN TEXAS ASKED HIM FOR THE JOB MR. DALTON THREW THE OFFICE FURNITURE AT TEXAS AND SAID IF HE CAME BACK HE'D THROW THE OFFICE.

HE DID? WAL, TEXAS - YOU FETCH ME A HORSE AND I'LL TEND TO DALTON, MYSELF

YOU'LL HAVE TO LEND ME A HAND GETTIN' ON, TEXAS - MY RHEUMATISM IS BOTHERIN' ME AGAIN SOMETHING FIERCE.

OW!

WHEEE

PING!

WHOA, BECKY—! WHOA—!! WH——

SAY!

WUMP!

COME BACK HERE YOU LITTLE IMP.

HERE'S SPIKE'S SLING SHOT, MR. AKERS - I TOOK IT AWAY FROM HIM

FINE, TEXAS - GIVE IT HERE AND I'LL TALK TO SPIKE WHILE YOU CLIMB UP ON THE BARN ROOF AND PATCH THOSE LEAKY SHINGLES.

THATS MIGHTY FINE OF THE OLD GENT TO GIVE ME A JOB AFTER WHAT HAPPENED.

NOW, SPIKE - COME TO PAPA.

HURRY UP AND FETCH ME SOME MORE PEBBLES, SPIKE - I'LL LEARN THIS YAP TO PLAY HIS FUNNY JOKES ON ME.

AW, YOU GET THE PEBBLES, POP - IT'S MY TURN TO SHOOT NOW.
